Plaintiff in error (hereinafter called defendant) was convicted in the district court of the United States for the western district of Virginia under an indictment charging him with the violation of §§ 3258, 3279, 3281, and 3242 of the Revised Statutes of the United States (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 2112, 2126, 2127, 2094). He was sentenced to a fine of $100 and to be imprisoned for a period of thirty days.

The indictment contained seven counts, charging the defendant substantially as follows: That he had in his possession a still and distilling apparatus for the production of spirituous liquors without having had such still and apparatus registered (first count); that he carried on the business of a distiller of spirituous liquors without having given bond (second count); and with the intent to defraud the United States of the tax on such liquors (third count); and also carried on the business of a retail liquor dealer without having paid the special tax therefor (seventh count); that he worked in a distillery for the production of spirituous liquors upon which no "registered distillery" sign was displayed (fourth count); and that he delivered raw material, namely, meal, to (sixth count), and conveyed distilled spirits from (fifth count), such distillery.

The case comes to this court because of the alleged violation of a constitutional right, in compelling the defendant to be a witness against himself. This contention is developed in the bill of exceptions, which shows that at a preliminary hearing before a United States commissioner, after a witness for the government had testified that he had seen the defendant beating apples at a "still *place" near the home of [311 one Preston Powers, and about 4 miles from defendant's home, the defendant, without counsel, and not having been instructed by the commissioner, voluntarily, in his own behalf, testified that he had beaten apples about thirty steps from the still place; that Preston Powers had hired him for 75 cents a day, and had set him to work beating apples, but that he had no interest in the apples, the product from them, or the still, and no control of the still, and had merely been hired by the day at a fixed price; that thereupon M. P. Colly, deputy marshal, asked him if he had not worked at a distillery within two years of the warrant in this case, at another time and place, which question the defendant refused to answer until informed by the commissioner and by the deputy marshal that unless he did so, he would be committed to jail; and he then testified that "he had worked at a distillery and made some brandy last fall, near his house, and he paid Preston Powers to assist him;" that upon the trial of the case in the district court, that court, over the objection of the defendant, admitted the testimony of Colly, who repeated the proceedings before the commissioner, including the testimony of defendant, and that the court refused to strike out Colly's testimony, or to instruct the jury to disregard it, upon the motion of defendant's counsel, to all of which, at the time, counsel for defendant duly excepted.

The contentions of the defendant are that the judgment should be reversed for the following reasons:

1st. There was no venire facias summoning the grand jury which found this purported indictment.

2d. The said grand jury was not sworn, and consequently could not find an indictment.

3d. The indictment was defective, and the demurrer should have been sustained to the fourth and sixth counts.

4th. The petit jury that tried this case was not sworn nor summoned.

312] *5th. The testimony of Colly was illegal and incompetent testimony, and should have been rejected when offered, and, if received, stricken out on counsel's motion.

As to the first, that there was no venire facias summoning the grand jury, there is nothing in the record to show that this objection, if tenable at all, was taken before plea, or, indeed, at any time during the trial. Objections of this character are waived unless seasonably taken. United States v. Gale, 109 U. S. 65, 27 L. ed. 857, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; Agnew v. United States, 165 U. S. 36, 41 L. ed. 624, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 235; Rodriguez v. United States, 198 U. S. 158, 49 L. ed. 995, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 617; McInerney v. United States, 77 C. C. A. 441, 147 Fed. 183.

The same observation applies to the second assignment of error, that the grand jury is not shown by the record to have been sworn. The indictment recites that the grand jury was selected, impaneled, sworn, and charged, and that they on their oaths present, etc. At this stage of the proceedings this is enough to show the proper swearing of the grand jury. In Crain v. United States, 162 U. S. 625, 40 L. ed. 1097, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 952, cited by counsel for defendant, the record was destitute of any showing that the accused was arraigned or pleaded to the indictment. See Pointer v. United States, 151 U. S. 396, 418, 38 L. ed. 208, 217, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 410.

As to the assignment of error that there were certain defective counts in the indictment, the conviction was a general one, and, even if the counts were defective, as alleged, one good count, sufficient to sustain the sentence, is all that is required to warrant the affirmation of a judgment in error proceedings. Dunbar v. United States, 156 U. S. 185, 39 L. ed. 390, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 325.

As to the objection that the petit jury was not sworn: The record discloses that they were "called and impaneled," and, "being selected and tried in the manner prescribed by law, the truth of and upon the premises to speak, and having heard the evidence, the arguments of counsel, and charge of the judge, retired to consider their verdict, and upon their oaths do say," etc. 313] We *think that this sufficiently discloses, upon proceedings in error after conviction, that the petit jury was duly sworn.

The chief objection contended for in argument concerns the admission in the district court of the testimony of the defendant before the commissioner. The admission of this testimony is claimed to have worked a violation of the defendant's constitutional rights under the 5th Amendment to the Constitution, which protects him against self-incrimination. It appears from the bill of exceptions that the defendant voluntarily took the stand and testified in his own behalf. This he might do under the Federal statute (20 Stat. at L. 30, chap. 37, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 660), making the defendant a competent witness, "at his own request, but not otherwise." We are of the opinion that it was not essential to the admissibility of his testimony that he should first have been warned that what he said might be used against him. In Wilson v. United States, 162 U. S. 613, 40 L. ed. 1090, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 895, Wilson was charged with murder. Before a United States commissioner, upon a preliminary hearing, he made a statement which was admitted at the trial. He had no counsel, was not warned or told of his right to refuse to testify, but there was testimony tending to show that the statement was voluntary. At page 623 this court said:

"And it is laid down that it is not essential to the admissibility of a confession that it should appear that the person was warned that what he said would be used against him, but, on the contrary, if the confession was voluntary, it is sufficient, though it appear that he was not so warned. Joy, Confessions, 45, 48, and cases cited.

" . . . He [Wilson] did not testify that he did not know that he had a right to refuse to answer the questions, or that, if he had known it, he would not have answered. . . . He did not have the aid of counsel, *and he was not warned that the[314 statement might be used against him, or advised that he need not answer. These were matters which went to the weight or credibility of what he said of an incriminating character; but as he was not confessing guilt, but the contrary, we think that, under all the circumstances disclosed, they were not of themselves sufficient to require his answers to be excluded on the ground of being involuntary as matter of law."

In the present case, it does not appear that the witness claimed his privilege, or was ignorant of it, or that, if he had known of it, would not have answered,—indeed, the record shows that his testimony was entirely voluntary and understandingly given. Such testimony cannot be excluded when subsequently offered at his trial.

As to the contention that the cross-examination before the commissioner, shown in the bill of exceptions, was improperly extorted from the witness under threat of commitment, an examination of the bill of exceptions, we think, requires an answer overruling this exception. There is some difference of opinion expressed in the authorities, but the rule recognized in this court is that a defendant who voluntarily takes the stand in his own behalf, thereby waiving his privilege, may be subjected to a cross-examination concerning his statement. "Assuming the position of a witness, he is entitled to all its rights and protection, and is subject to all its criticisms and burdens;" and may be fully cross-examined as to the testimony voluntarily given. Reagan v. United States, 157 U. S. 301, 305, 39 L. ed. 709, 710, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 610. The rule is thus stated in Brown v. Walker, 161 U. S. 597, 40 L. ed. 819, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 369, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 644:

"Thus, if the witness himself elects to waive his privilege, as he may doubtless do, since the privilege is for his protection, and not for that of other parties, and discloses his criminal connections, he is not permitted to stop, but must go on and make a full disclosure. 1 Greenl. Ev. § 451; Dixon v. Vale, 1 Car. & P. 278; East v. Chapman, 2 *Car. & P. 570, Moody & M. 46; State v. K—, 4 N. H. 562; Low v. Mitchell, 18 Me. 372; Coburn v. Odell, 30 N. H. 540; Norfolk v. Gaylord, 28 Conn. 309; Austin v. Prince, 1 Sim. 348; Com. v. Pratt, 126 Mass. 462; Chamberlain v. Willson, 12 Vt. 491, 36 Am. Dec. 356; Lockett v. State, 63 Ala. 5; People v. Freshour, 55 Cal. 375.

"So, under modern statutes permitting accused persons to take the stand in their own behalf, they may be subjected to cross-examination upon their statements. State v. Wentworth, 65 Me. 234, 20 Am. Rep. 688; State v. Witham, 72 Me. 531; State v. Ober, 52 N. H. 462, 13 Am. Rep. 88; Com. v. Bonner, 97 Mass. 587; Com. v. Morgan, 107 Mass. 199; Com. v. Mullen, 97 Mass. 545; Connors v. People, 50 N. Y. 240; People v. Casey, 72 N. Y. 393."

But it is contended by the defendant that the bill of exceptions shows that the alleged cross-examination was entirely irrelevant and improper, and not a legitimate cross-examination of the defendant's testimony in his own behalf. It appears that Powers testified, being charged with illegal conduct concerning the distillation of spirits, as already stated, that he was at a place about thirty steps from the still, beating apples, as testified by the government's witness; that Preston Powers had hired him to work for him at the price of 75 cents a day, and that he put him to beating apples; that the witness had no interest in the apples or the product thereof, and no interest in the still, but was merely hired to work by the day at the price of 75 cents. Having taken the stand in his own behalf, and given the testimony above recited, tending to show that he was not guilty of the offense charged, he was required to submit to cross-examination, as any other witness in the case would be, concerning matter pertinent to the examination in chief. The cross-examination, in the answer elicited, tended to *show that[316 defendant had worked at a distillery the fall before with Preston Powers, the man he alleged he was working for at beating apples on the occasion when the government witness saw him near the still, and had made brandy near his house, and had paid Preston Powers to assist him. This, we think, might be regarded as having some relevancy to the defendant's claim as to the innocent character of his occupation at the time charged. It had a tendency to show that defendant knew the character of the occupation in which he was then engaged, having worked before with Preston Powers at a distillery and made brandy with him, and did not exceed the limits of a proper cross-examination of the witness. As to the suggestion that § 860 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 661) prevented the introduction of the testimony given by defendant before the commissioner, that section, providing that no pleading, nor any discovery or evidence obtained from a party by means of a judicial proceeding shall be used in evidence against him in a criminal proceeding, can have no bearing where, as in the present case, the accused voluntarily testified in his own behalf in the course of the same proceeding, thereby himself opening the door to legitimate cross-examination. See Tucker v. United States, 151 U. S. 164, 168, 38 L. ed. 112, 114, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 299.

Judgment affirmed.

*SALVATORE L. ROCCA, Plff. in[317 Err.,
v.

GEORGE F. THOMPSON.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 317-334.)

Diplomatic and consular officers — right to administer estate.

The most-favored-nation clause in the Italian treaty of May 8, 1878 (20 Stat. at L. 732), does not give an Italian consul general the right to administer the estate of an Italian citizen dying intestate in one of the United States, to the exclusion of the one authorized by the local law to administer the estate, because of the privilege conferred by the Argentine treaty of July 27, 1853 (10 Stat. at L. 1009), art. 9, upon the consular officers of the respective countries as to citizens dying intestate, "to intervene in the possession, administration, and judicial liquidation of the estate of the deceased, conformably with the laws of the country, for the benefit of the creditors and legal heirs," since this provision, if applicable, cannot be construed as intended to supersede the local law as to the administration of such estates.

NOTE.—On the jurisdiction and powers of consul generally—see note to Telefsen v. Fee, 45 L.R.A. 481.

On the jurisdiction and power of consuls to administer on estates—see note to Re Ghio, 37 L.R.A.(N.S.) 549.

[Jurisdiction and powers of consul, see Diplomatic and Consular Officers, I., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 292.]

Argued January 17 and 18, 1912. Decided February 19, 1912.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of California to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the District Court of Appeals in the Third District in that state, affirming an order of the Superior Court of San Joaquin County, granting letters of administration upon the estate of an Italian citizen to the public administrator. Affirmed.

See same case below, 157 Cal. 552, 37 L.R.A. (N.S.) 549, 137 Am. St. Rep. 145, 108 Pac. 516.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Frederic R. Coudert argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Paul Fuller, Ambrose Gherini, Howard Thayer Kingsbury, and Charles Cheyney Hyde, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The treaty clauses in question, conferring the right of administration of the estates of deceased nationals upon the respective consuls, became part of the municipal law of California without further legislation, and superseded any state statute not consistent therewith.

Head Money Cases (Edye v. Robertson) 112 U. S. 598, 599, 28 L. ed. 803, 804, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 247; United States v. 43 Gallons of Whiskey (United States v. Lariviere) 93 U. S. 197, 198, 23 L. ed. 847, 848; Ware v. Hylton, 3 Dall. 235, 1 L. ed. 583; Re Wyman, 191 Mass. 276, 114 Am. St. Rep. 601, 77 N. E. 379; People ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Gerke, 5 Cal. 383; Forbes v. Scannell, 13 Cal. 243.

Treaties must be construed in the most liberal fashion, and treaty rights are always paramount to state legislation.

Shanks v. Dupont, 3 Pet. 249, 7 L. ed. 669; Geofroy v. Riggs, 133 U. S. 267, 33 L. ed. 645, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 295; Hauenstein v. Lynham, 100 U. S. 488-490, 25 L. ed. 630, 631.

It is the general practice under the law of nations for consuls, upon the death of one of their nationals, to take part in caring for the property left by him, especially in case of intestacy, and seeing that it reaches its destination. This is one of the usual and normal functions of the consuls of all civilized nations, and as such is generally recognized by usage, by statute, and by formal executive regulations in the United States and in European countries.

1 de Clercq & de Vallat, Guide Pratique des Consuls, p. 522; 5 Moore, International Law Dig. pp. 117, 118; United States Consular Regulations, pp. 30, 161, 162.

The weight of authority, as far as there are precedents aside from the decision at bar, is wholly in favor of the rights of the consul here contended for.

Re Wyman, 191 Mass. 276, 114 Am. St. Rep. 601, 77 N. E. 379; Re Fattosini, 33 Misc. 18, 67 N. Y. Supp. 1119; Re Tartaglio, 12 Misc. 245, 33 N. Y. Supp. 1121; Re Lobrasciano, 38 Misc. 415, 77 N. Y. Supp. 1040; Re Logiorato, 34 Misc. 31, 69 N. Y. Supp. 507; Aspinwall v. Queen's Proctor, 2 Curt. Eccl. Rep. 241; Thompson's Succession, 9 La. Ann. 96; Carpigiani v. Hall, — Ala. —, 55 So. 248; Re Scutella, 145 App. Div. 156, 129 N. Y. Supp. 21; Devlin, Treaty Making Power, § 202.

Whenever an apparent exception has been made to the operation of the most-favored-nation clause, it will be found to rest upon concessions which cannot be duplicated and the equivalent of which cannot be fairly measured or given. This objection does not hold in the case at bar.

Hay & Hill, Foreign Relations, 1901, pp. 278, 279; 5 Moore, International Law Dig. pp. 260, 262, 268-270; 14 Ops. Atty. Gen. 468-470; 11 Ops. Atty. Gen. 508; Bartram v. Robertson, 122 U. S. 121, 30 L. ed. 1121, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1115; Whitney v. Robertson, 124 U. S. 190, 31 L. ed. 386, 8 Sup. Ct. 456.

Mr. T. W. Hickey argued the cause, and, with Mr. Eustace Cullinan, filed a brief for defendant in error:

The argument of the plaintiff in error rest almost exclusively on the authority of Re Wyman, 191 Mass. 276, 114 Am. St. Rep. 601, 77 N. E. 379, and on two decisions of the surrogate's court of Westchester county, New York, viz.: Re Fattosini, 33 Misc. 18, 67 N. Y. Supp. 1119; Re Lobrasciano, 38 Misc. 415, 77 N. Y. Supp. 1040.

In these cases, which appear to have been inadequately argued on the public administrator's side, and in which many of the points raised in the case at bar were not discussed by the courts in their several opinions, letters were issued to a consul in preference to a public administrator. Flatly at variance with these authorities are the cases of Lanfear v. Ritchie, 9 La. Ann. 96, and Re Logiorato, 34 Misc. 31, 69 N. Y. Supp. 507.

The word "intervene" has a clearly defined meaning in both the English and the civil law, which is the law of the Argentine Republic. Indeed, the word was imported from the civil into the English law. The use of "intervene" presupposes an administration in progress: that is, an administrator previously appointed.

Anderson's Law Dict. title, "Intervention;" English Law Dict. title, "Intervene;" English Law Dict.; Bouvier's Law Dict.; 8 Ops. Atty. Gen. 99.

It must be assumed that the word "intervene" was not ignorantly or carelessly used in the treaty.

The Neck, 138 Fed. 144.

The reason of the law or of the treaty, that is to say, the motive which led to the making of it, and the object in contemplation at the time, is the most certain clue to lead us to the discovery of its true meaning; and great attention should be paid to this circumstance whenever there is a question either of explaining an obscure, ambiguous, indeterminate passage in a law or treaty, or of applying it to a particular case. When once we certainly know the reason which alone has determined the will of the person speaking, we ought to interpret and apply his words in a manner suitable to that reason alone, otherwise he will be made to speak and act contrary to his intention, and in opposition to his own views.

Vattel, Nations, bk. 2, chap. 17, § 287.

The opinions of the political department are weighty authorities on the interpretation of treaties.

5 Moore, International Law Dig. p. 241, § 761; Castro v. De Uriarte, 16 Fed. 98.

Long practical construction of a statute (and in its aspect as the supreme law of the land, as distinct from an international contract, a treaty is a statute) will be accepted by the courts.

United States v. Hill, 120 U. S. 169, 30 L. ed. 627, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 510; State v. Davis, 62 W. Va. 500, 14 L.R.A. (N.S.) 1142, 60 S. E. 588; State v. Harden, 62 W. Va. 313, 58 S. E. 715, 60 S. E. 394; Fullington v. Williams, 98 Ga. 807, 27 S. E. 184; Holmes v. Hunt, 122 Mass. 505, 23 Am. Rep. 385; State ex rel. Horne v. Holcomb, 46 Neb. 88, 64 N. W. 437; Atwell v. Parker, 93 Minn. 462, 101 N. W. 946; Continental Improv. Co. v. Phelps, 47 Mich. 299, 11 N. W. 167; Detroit City R. Co. v. Mills, 85 Mich. 634, 48 N. W. 1007.

The "most-favored-nation" clause in the 56 L. ed.

treaty with Italy does not entitle the Italian consular officers to demand whatever privileges may be accorded to Argentine consular officers under the treaty with the Argentine Republic.

6 Ops. Atty. Gen. 148; Whitney v. Robertson, 124 U. S. 190, 31 L. ed. 386, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 456; Bartram v. Robertson, 122 U. S. 116, 30 L. ed. 1118, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1115; 5 Moore, International Law Dig. pp. 257-319; Foster v. Neilson, 2 Pet. 314, 7 L. ed. 435; 2 Rose's Notes (U. S.) 837-841; Taylor v. Morton, 2 Curt. C. C. 463, Fed. Cas. No. 13,799.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a writ of error to the supreme court of the state of California to review a judgment in which that court held that the public administrator was entitled to letters of administration upon the estate of an Italian citizen, dying and leaving an estate in California, in preference to the consul general of the Kingdom of Italy.

The facts are briefly these: Giuseppe Ghio, a subject of the Kingdom of Italy, died intestate on the 27th day of April, 1908, in San Joaquin county, California, leaving a personal estate. Ghio resided in the state of California. His widow and heirs at law, being minor children, resided in Italy. Plaintiff in error, Salvatore L. Rocca, was the consul general of the Kingdom of Italy for California, Nevada, Washington, and Alaska territory.

Upon the death of Ghio, Consul General Rocca made application to the superior court of California for letters of administration upon Ghio's estate. The defendant in error, Thompson, as public administrator, made application for administration upon the same estate under the laws of California. The superior court held that the *public administrator was entitled to [325 administer the estate. The same view was taken in the supreme court of California. 157 Cal. 552, 37 L.R.A. (N.S.) 549, 137 Am. St. Rep. 145, 108 Pac. 516. From the latter decision a writ of error was granted, which brings the case here.

The consul general bases his claim to administer the estate upon certain provisions of the treaty of May 8, 1878, between Italy and the United States. Articles 16 and 17 read as follows:

"Article 16. In case of the death of a citizen of the United States in Italy, or of an Italian citizen in the United States, who has no known heir, or testamentary executor designated by him, the competent local authorities shall give notice of the fact to the consuls of consular agents of the nation to which the deceased belongs, to the and that information may be at once transmitted to the parties interested.

"Article 17. The respective consuls general, consuls, vice consuls, and consular agents, as likewise the consular chancellors, secretaries, clerks or attachés, shall enjoy in both countries, all the rights, prerogatives, immunities, and privileges which are or may hereafter be granted to the officers of the same grade of the most favored nation." 20 Stat. at L. p. 732.

While article 16 only requires notice to the Italian consul or consular agent of the death of an Italian citizen in the United States, article 17 gives to consuls and similar officers of the Italian nation the rights, prerogatives, immunities, and privileges which are or may be hereafter granted to an officer of the same grade of the most favored nation. It is the contention of the plaintiff in error that this favored-nation clause in the Italian treaty gives him the right to administer estates of Italian citizens dying in this country, because of the privilege conferred upon consuls of the Argentine Republic by the treaty between that country and the United States, of July 27, 1853, art. 9 of which provides: 326] "If any citizen of either of the two contracting parties shall die without will or testament, in any of the territories of the other, the consul general or consul of the nation to which the deceased belonged, or the representative of such consul general or consul, in his absence, shall have the right to intervene in the possession, administration, and judicial liquidation of the estate of the deceased, conformably with the laws of the country, for the benefit of the creditors and legal heirs." 10 Stat. at L. p. 1009.

From this statement of the case it is apparent that the question at the foundation of the determination of the rights of the parties is found in the proper interpretation of the clause of the Argentine treaty just quoted. The question is: Does that treaty give to consuls of the Argentine Republic the right to administer the estate of citizens of that Republic, dying in the United States, and a like privilege to consuls of the United States as to citizens of this country, dying in the Argentine Republic? The question has been the subject of considerable litigation, and has been diversely determined in the courts of this country which have had it under consideration.

The surrogate of Westchester county, New York, in two cases, Re Fattosini, 33 Misc. 18, 67 N. Y. Supp. 1119, and Re Lobrasciano, 38 Misc. 415, 77 N. Y. Supp. 1040, has held that the treaty of Italy of 1878, in the most-favored-nation clause, carried the benefit of the Argentine treaty to the consuls of Italy, and that the Argentine treaty conferred the right of administration upon the consuls of that country. In Re Wyman, 191 Mass. 276, 77 N. E. 379, the supreme judicial court of that state, as to Russian consuls, under the most-favored-nation clause in the Russian treaty, followed the surrogate courts of Westchester county, observing that the cases were well considered and covered the entire ground. The supreme court of Alabama, in Carpigiani v. Hall, — Ala. —, 55 So. 248, *followed the decisions in New[327 York and Massachusetts, just referred to, and in Re Scutella, 129 N. Y. Supp. 20, the appellate division of the supreme court of New York pursued the same course.

A contrary view was expressed by the surrogate court of New York county in Re Logiorato, 34 Misc. 31, 69 N. Y. Supp. 507, and by the supreme court of Louisiana in Lanfear v. Ritchie, 9 La. Ann. 96.

An examination of the cases which have held in favor of the right of a consul general to administer the estate, to the exclusion of the public administrator, makes it apparent that the Lobrasciano Case, which is the fullest upon the subject, is the one that has been followed without independent reasoning upon the part of the courts adopting it.

In that case the right of a consul to administer the estates of deceased citizens of his country is based not only upon the interpretation of the treaties involved, but as well upon the law of nations giving the right to consuls to administer such estates. In the opinion, some citations are made from early instructions of Secretaries of State, emphasizing the right and duty of consuls to administer upon the effects of citizens of the United States, dying in foreign lands.

But these instructions must be read in the light of the statute of the United States, § 1709, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1179,† which, *while it recognizes[328 the right of consuls and vice consuls to take possession of the personal estate left by any citizen of the United States who shall die within their consulates, leaving there no legal representative, partner, or trust-†"Sec. 1709. It shall be the duty of consuls and vice consuls, where the laws of the country permit:

"First. To take possession of the personal estate left by any citizen of the United States, other than seamen belonging to any vessel, who shall die within their consulate, leaving there no legal representative, partner in trade, or trustee by him appointed to take care of his effects.

"Second. To inventory the same with the assistance of two merchants of the United tee, to inventory the same, and to collect debts, provides in the fifth paragraph of the section that if, at any time before the transmission to the United States Treasury of the balance of the estate, the legal representative appears and demands his effects in the hands of the consul, they shall be delivered up, and he shall cease further proceedings, and the duties imposed are where "the laws of the country permit."

The consular regulations of the United States tersely express the duty of a consul as to the conservation of the property of deceased countrymen, and declare that he has no right, as consular officer, apart from the provisions of treaty, local law, or usage, to administer the estate, or, in that character, to aid any other person in so administering it, without judicial authorization. Section 409 of the Consular Regulations is as follows:

"A consular officer is, by the law of nations and by statute, the provisional conservator of the property within his district, belonging to his countrymen deceased therein. He has no right, as a consular officer, apart from the provisions of treaty, local law, or usage, to administer on the 329]estate, *or in that character to aid any other person in so administering it, without judicial authorization. His duties are restricted to guarding and collecting the efforts, and to transmitting them to the United States, or to aid others in so guarding, collecting, and transmitting them, to be disposed of pursuant to the law of the decedent's estate. 7 Ops. Atty. Gen. 274. It is, however, generally conceded that a consular officer may intervene by way of observing the proceedings, and that he may be present on the making of the inventory."

In Moore's International Law Digest, vol. 5, p. 123, a letter of Mr. Hay, Secretary of State, under date of February 3, 1900, is quoted to the effect that the right of a United States consular officer to intervene by way of observing proceedings in relation to the property of deceased Americans leaving no representatives in foreign countries is not understood to involve any interference with the functions of a public administrator.

In this country the right to administer

States, or, for want of them, of any others, at their choice.

"Third. To collect the debts due the deceased in the country where he died, and pay the debts due from his estate which he shall have there contracted.

"Fourth. To sell at auction, after reasonable public notice, such part of the estate as shall be of a perishable nature, and such further part, if any, as shall be necessary for the payment of his debts, and, 56 L. ed.

property left by a foreigner within the jurisdiction of a state is primarily committed to state law. It seems to be so regulated in the state of California, by giving the administration of such property to the public administrator. There is, of course, no Federal law of probate or of the administration of estates, and, assuming for this purpose that it is within the power of the national government to provide by treaty for the administration of property of foreigners dying within the jurisdiction of the states, and to commit such administration to the consular officers of the nations to which the deceased owed allegiance, we will proceed to examine the treaties in question with a view to determining whether such a right has been given in the present instance.

This determination depends, primarily, upon the construction of § 9 of the Argentine treaty of 1853, giving to the consular officers of the respective countries, as to citizens dying intestate, the right "to intervene in the *possession, administra-[330 tion, and judicial liquidation of the estate of the deceased, conformably with the laws of the country, for the benefit of the creditors and legal heirs." It will be observed that, whether in the possession, the administration or the judicial liquidation of the estate, the sole right conferred is that of intervention, and that conformably with the laws of the country. Does this mean the right to administer the property of such decedent, and to supersede the local laws as to the administration of such estate? The right to intervene at once suggests the privilege to enter into a proceeding already begun, rather than the right to take and administer the property.

Literally, to intervene means, as the derivation of the word indicates [inter, between, and venire, come], to come between. Such is the primary definition of the word given in Webster's Dictionary and in the Century Dictionary. When the term is used in reference to legal proceedings, it covers the right of one to interpose in, or become a party to, a proceeding already instituted, as a creditor may intervene in a foreclosure suit to enforce a lien upon property or some right in connection therewith; at the expiration of one year from his decease, the residue.

"Fifth. To transmit the balance of the estate to the Treasury of the United States, to be holden in trust for the legal claimant; except that if, at any time before such transmission, the legal representative of the deceased shall appear and demand his effects in their hands, they shall deliver them up, being paid their fees, and shall cease their proceedings."

a stockholder may sometimes intervene in a suit brought by a corporation; the government is sometimes allowed to intervene in suits between private parties to protect a public interest; and whether we look to the English ecclesiastical law, the civil law, from which the Argentine law is derived, or the common law, the meaning is the same.

"In English ecclesiastical law.—The proceeding of a third person, who, not being originally a party to the suit or proceeding, but claiming an interest in the subject-matter in dispute, in order the better to protect such interest, interposes his claim. 2 Chitty, Pr. 492; 3 Chitty, Commercial Law, 633; Dalrymple v. Dalrymple, 2 Hagg. Consist. Rep. 137, 17 Eng. Rul. Cas. 11; Donegal v. Donegal, 3 Phillim. Eccl. Rep. 586.

"In the civil law.—The act by which a third party demands to be received as a party in a suit pending between other persons.

331] *"The intervention is made either for the purpose of being joined to the plaintiff, and to claim the same thing he does, or some other thing connected with it; or to join the defendant, and with him to oppose the claim of the plaintiff, which it is his interest to defeat. Poth. Proc. Civile, pt. 1, c. 2, § 7, no. 3.

"In practice.—A proceeding in a suit or action by which a third person is permitted by the court to make himself a party, either joining the plaintiff in claiming what is sought by the complaint, or uniting with the defendant in resisting the claims of the plaintiff or demanding something adversely to both of them. Logan v. Greenlaw (C. C.) 12 Fed. 16; Fischer v. Hanna, 8 Colo. App. 471, 47 Pac. 303; Gale v. Frazier, 4 Dak. 196, 30 N. W. 138; Reay v. Butler, — Cal. —, 7 Pac. 671." Black's Law Dict. p. 651.

Emphasis is laid upon the right under the Argentine treaty to intervene in possession, as well as administration and judicial liquidation; but this term can only have reference to the universally recognized right of a consul to temporarily possess the estate of citizens of his nation for the purpose of protecting and conserving the rights of those interested before it comes under the jurisdiction of the laws of the country for its administration. The right to intervene in administration and judicial liquidation is for the same general purpose, and presupposes an administration or judicial liquidation instituted otherwise than by the consul, who is authorized to intervene.

So, looking at the terms of the treaty, we cannot perceive an intention to give the original administration of an estate to the consul general, to the exclusion of one authorized by local law to administer the estate.

But it is urged that treaties are to be liberally construed. Like other contracts, they are to be read in the light of the conditions and circumstances existing at the time they were entered into, with a view to effecting the objects *and purposes of [332 the states thereby contracting. Re Ross, 140 U. S. 453, 475, 35 L. ed. 581, 589, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 897.

It is further to be observed that treaties are the subject of careful consideration before they are entered into, and are drawn by persons competent to express their meaning, and to choose apt words in which to embody the purposes of the high contracting parties. Had it been the intention to commit the administration of estates of citizens of one country, dying in another, exclusively to the consul of the foreign nation, it would have been very easy to have declared that purpose in unmistakable terms. For instance, where that was the purpose, as in the treaty made with Peru in 1887, it was declared in article 33, as follows:

"Until the conclusion of a consular convention, which the high contracting parties agree to form as soon as may be mutually convenient, it is stipulated that, in the absence of the legal heirs or representatives, the consuls or vice consuls of either party shall be ex-officio the executors or administrators of the citizens of their nation who may die within their consular jurisdictions, and of their countrymen dying at sea, whose property may be brought within their district." [25 Stat. at L. 146.]

And in the convention between the United States and Sweden, proclaimed March 20, 1911, it is provided:

"In the event of any citizens of either of the two contracting parties dying without will or testament, in the territory of the other contracting party, the consul general, consul, vice consul general, or vice consul of the nation to which the deceased may belong, or, in his absence, the representative of such consul general, consul, vice consul general, or vice consul, shall, so far as the laws of each country will permit, and pending the appointment of an administrator, and until letters of administration have been granted, take charge of the property left by the deceased, for the benefit of his lawful heirs and *credit-[333 ors, and, moreover, have the right to be appointed as administrator of such estate."

The Argentine treaty was made in 1853, and the Italian treaty in 1878. In 1894, correspondence between Baron Fava, the then Italian Ambassador, and Mr. Uhl, Acting Secretary of State, shows that the Italian Ambassador proposed that Italian consuls in the United States be authorized, as were the American consuls in Italy, to settle the estates of deceased countrymen. It was the view of the Department of State of the United States, then expressed, that, as the administration of estates in the United States was under the control of the respective states, the proposed international agreement should not be made. The Acting Secretary of State adverted to the practical difficulties of giving such administration to consular officers, often remotely located from the place where the estate was situated. See 5 Moore's International Law Digest, p. 122.

The learned counsel for the plaintiff in error, in his supplemental brief, has referred to a statement of the law of the Argentine Confederation of 1865, English translation published in vol. 58, British and Foreign State Papers, p. 455, in which it is said that a foreigner dying intestate, without leaving a wife or lawful heirs in the Argentine Republic, or where he dies leaving a will, the heirs being foreigners, absent from the country, and the executor being also absent, the consul of the deceased foreigner's nation is given the right to intervene in the arrangement of his affairs. In articles 3 and 4 it is declared:

"3. Consular intervention shall be confined to—1st. Sealing up the goods, furniture, and papers of the deceased, after giving due notice to the local authorities, provided always that the death has taken place within the consular district. 2d. Appointing executors.

"4. The consuls shall at once communicate to the testamentary judge the appointment of such executors."

334] *It is contended that the right secured to a foreign consul to appoint an executor under this act of 1865 is evidence of the fact that the Argentine Republic is carrying out the treaty in the sense contended for by the plaintiff in error; but in this law certainly no right of administration is given to the consul of a foreign country. It is true, he may appoint an executor, which appointment it is provided is to be at once communicated to the testamentary judge.

In article 8 the same law provides that executors shall perform their charge in accordance with the laws of the country. Article 13 declares that the rights granted by the law shall be only in favor of the nations which cede equal privileges to Argentine consuls and citizens.

Our conclusion, then, is that, if it should be conceded for this purpose that the most-favored-nation clause in the Italian treaty carries the provisions of the Argentine treaty to the consuls of the Italian government in the respect contended for (a question unnecessary to decide in this case), yet there was no purpose in the Argentine treaty to take away from the states the right of local administration provided by their laws, upon the estates of deceased citizens of a foreign country, and to commit the same to the consuls of such foreign nation, to the exclusion of those entitled to administer as provided by the local laws of the state within which such foreigner resides and leaves property at the time of decease.
56 L. ed.

We find no error in the judgment of the Supreme Court of the State of California, and the same is affirmed.

*UNITED STATES EXPRESS COM- [335
PANY, Plff. in Err.,

v.

STATE OF MINNESOTA.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 335-348.)

Taxation of nonresident express company — commerce — due process of law.

1. The earnings of a nonresident express company in carrying goods between two points within the state over a route incidentally traversing a portion of another state, so far as they are derived from the carriage within the state, may be included in the gross receipts, upon which the tax imposed by Minn. Rev. Laws 1905, chap. 11, is based, without unconstitutionally burdening interstate commerce, or denying due process of law.

[For other cases, see Commerce, 227-241, 264-272; Constitutional Law, 528-540, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Error to state court — scope of review — statutory construction.

2. The construction given by the supreme court of Minnesota to Minn. Rev. Laws

NOTE.—On corporate taxation and the commerce clause—see note to Sandford v. Poe, 60 L.R.A. 641.

On what questions the Federal Supreme Court will consider in reviewing the judgments of state courts—see note to Missouri ex rel. Hill v. Dockery, 63 L.R.A. 571.

State licenses or taxes as affecting commerce—see notes to Rothermel v. Meyerle, 9 L.R.A. 366; American Fertilizing Co. v. Board of Agriculture, 11 L.R.A. 179; Gibbons v. Ogden, 6 L. ed. U. S. 23; Brown v. Maryland, 6 L. ed. U. S. 678; Ratterman v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 32 L. ed. U. S. 229; Harmon v. Chicago, 37 L. ed. U. S. 217; Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Backus, 38 L. ed. U. S. 1041; Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Adams, 39 L. ed. U. S. 311; and Pittsburg & S. Coal Co. v. Bates, 39 L. ed. U. S. 538.

1905, chap. 11, taxing nonresident express companies, as including in the gross receipts upon which the tax is based the earnings from interstate shipments, where the transportation while in the hands of the companies taxed was performed wholly within the state, is binding upon the Federal Supreme Court on writ of error to the state court.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 2124-2151, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Commerce — taxation of gross receipts of nonresident express company.

3. Including in the gross receipts of a nonresident express company, upon the basis of which a tax is imposed by Minn. Rev. Laws 1905, chap. 11, "in lieu of all taxes on its property," the earnings from interstate shipments, where the transportation while in the company's hands was performed wholly within the state, does not unconstitutionally burden interstate commerce, but is an exercise of the state's power to measure a legitimate property tax by receipts which in part come from interstate commerce, which could not in itself be taxed.

[For other cases, see Commerce, 227-241, 264-272, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 708.]

Argued January 16 and 17, 1912. Decided February 19, 1912.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Minnesota to review a judgment which modified, and, as modified, affirmed, a judgment of the District Court of Ramsey County, in that state, sustaining a tax upon the gross receipts of a nonresident express company. Affirmed.

See same case below, 114 Minn. 346, 37 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1127, 131 N. W. 489.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Robert E. Olds and Frank B. Kellogg argued the cause, and, with Mr. C. A. Severance, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

That the earnings from interstate transfer business constitute receipts derived from interstate commerce is a proposition fully established by the decisions of this court. The circumstance that the plaintiff in error operated a line wholly within the state is immaterial, so long as the function which it performed was a part of a continuous journey from one state to another, under a single, continuous contract of carriage. Whether carried on by one or by two or more express companies, the commerce involved is itself interstate, and no part of it can be divested of its interstate character by the accidental circumstance that it may be carried on by one of the companies wholly within state lines.

Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 114 U. S. 196, 29 L. ed. 158, 1 Inters. Com. Rep.

382, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 826; Fargo v. Michigan (Fargo v. Stevens) 121 U. S. 230, 30 L. ed. 888, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 51, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 857; Philadelphia & S. Mail S. S. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 122 U. S. 326, 343, 344, 30 L. ed. 1200, 1204, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 308, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1118; Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 136 U. S. 114, 119, 34 L. ed. 394, 397, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 178, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 958; New York ex rel. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Knight, 192 U. S. 21, 48 L. ed. 325, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 202; Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v. Texas, 210 U. S. 217, 52 L. ed. 1031, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 638; Southern P. Terminal Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 219 U. S. 498, 55 L. ed. 310, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 279; People ex rel. Connecting Terminal R. Co. v. Miller, 178 N. Y. 194, 70 N. E. 472.

The tax upon the receipts from interstate transfer business is invalid, as an attempt by the state to impose a direct burden upon interstate commerce.

State Freight Tax Case, 15 Wall. 232, 21 L. ed. 146; State Tax on Railway Gross Receipts, 15 Wall. 284, 21 L. ed. 164; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Maryland, 21 Wall. 456, 22 L. ed. 678; Peik v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 94 U. S. 164, 24 L. ed. 97; Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. v. Illinois, 118 U. S. 557, 30 L. ed. 244, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 31, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 4; Fargo v. Michigan (Fargo v. Stevens) 121 U. S. 230, 30 L. ed. 888, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 51, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 857; Philadelphia & S. Mail S. S. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 122 U. S. 326, 30 L. ed. 1200, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 308, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1118; Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 114 U. S. 196, 29 L. ed. 158, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 382, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 826; Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v. Texas, 210 U. S. 217, 52 L. ed. 1031, 1036, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 638; Ratterman v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 127 U. S. 411, 32 L. ed. 229, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 59, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1127; Leloup v. Mobile, 127 U. S. 640, 32 L. ed. 311, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 134, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1380; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 128 U. S. 39, 32 L. ed. 345, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 241, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 6; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Alabama Bd. of Assessment (Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Seay) 132 U. S. 472, 33 L. ed. 409, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 726, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 161; Lyng v. Michigan, 135 U. S. 161, 34 L. ed. 150, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 143, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 725; Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 136 U. S. 114, 118, 34 L. ed. 394, 396, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 178, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 958; Crutcher v. Kentucky, 141 U. S. 47, 35 L. ed. 649, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 851; Pacific Exp. Co. v. Seibert, 142 U. S. 339, 349, 35 L. ed. 1035, 1038, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 810, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 250; Maine v.

Grand Trunk R. Co. 142 U. S. 217, 35 L. ed. 994, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 807, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 163; Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Adams, 155 U. S. 688, 39 L. ed. 311, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 1, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 268, 360; New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 158 U. S. 431, 39 L. ed. 1043, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 896; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 161 U. S. 677, 40 L. ed. 849, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 714.

The contention that the tax may be sustained as one upon property brings us to the consideration of a line of cases which runs along pari passu with the gross earnings cases already discussed. Throughout the debate on the taxing power of the states in the light of the commerce clause of the Constitution, this court has recognized an important reservation in favor of the state. While the right to burden interstate commerce or the receipts therefrom directly with taxation has been denied, the right to tax the instrumentalities or the property used in carrying on such commerce has been conceded. This was laid down as a general proposition, even in the earlier cases on the subject.

Delaware Railroad Tax, 18 Wall. 206, 232, 21 L. ed. 888, 896; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Texas, 105 U. S. 460, 464, 26 L. ed. 1067, 1068; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Atty. Gen. 125 U. S. 530, 31 L. ed. 790, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 961; Marye v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 127 U. S. 117, 123, 124, 32 L. ed. 94, 96, 97, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1037; Pullman's Palace Car. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 141 U. S. 18, 35 L. ed. 613, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 595, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 876.

The power thus conceded to the states was soon found to be one of far-reaching importance. It was not long before the power came to be extended beyond the mere right to tax at its ordinary value the tangible property within the state of corporations engaged in interstate commerce. The state was not content to tax the poles and wires of a telegraph company located within its borders at their value as so many poles and wires, but claimed the right, in valuing such property, to take into account their use as part of a system of poles and wires extending far beyond the borders of the state. And this court, not without much debate in the first instance, went to the desired limit and agreed that the property of companies engaged in interstate commerce may be taxed, as Mr. Justice Holmes has expressed it, "at its value as it is in its organic relations, and not merely as a congeries of unrelated items." This involved, of course, an augmentation of value by reason of the commerce in which the property is employed.

Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Pennsylvania, 141 U. S. 18, 35 L. ed. 613, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 595, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 876; Adams Exp. Co. v. Ohio State Auditor, 165 U. S. 194, 41 L. ed. 683, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 305; Adams Exp. Co. v. Kentucky, 166 U. S. 171, 41 L. ed. 960, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 527; Fargo v. Hart, 193 U. S. 490, 499, 48 L. ed. 761, 765, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 498.
56 L. ed.

But when it appeared, as it did in Fargo v. Hart, 193 U. S. 490, 48 L. ed. 761, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 498, that the assumption of uniform value for the entire system was false, and that the total valuation used in making the apportionment on a mileage basis was made up largely from real and personal property of an express company, not necessarily used in its express business, and permanently located in the state of its incorporation, which was different from that of the taxing sovereignty, the court did not hesitate to declare the tax void.

If upon the property-tax theory, the validity of such a tax may be worked out, the conclusion arrived at is, as a practical matter, directly in conflict with the line of gross earnings tax cases running from Fargo v. Michigan (Fargo v. Stevens) 121 U. S. 230, 30 L. ed. 888, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 51, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 857, and Philadelphia & S. Mail S. S. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 122 U. S. 326, 30 L. ed. 1200, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 308, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1118, to Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v. Texas, 210 U. S. 217, 52 L. ed. 1031, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 638.

The principles for which we contend were laid down with great emphasis in Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Kansas, 216 U. S. 1, 54 L. ed. 355, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 190, and Pullman Co. v. Kansas, 216 U. S. 56, 54 L. ed. 378, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 232.

Mr. Lyndon A. Smith, Attorney General of Minnesota, and Mr. William J. Stevenson, Assistant Attorney General, argued the cause, and, with Mr. George T. Simpson, filed a brief for defendant in error:

These taxes are taxes upon the property of the plaintiff in error, and are simply measured by the amount of certain gross earnings of defendant; this method of levying a tax upon the property of the defendant is pursuant not only to the Constitution and laws of the state of Minnesota, but also to a system of taxation which has been in vogue to a greater or less extent in the state throughout its entire existence, which system has been approved by the decisions of Minnesota, and as far as the taxation of railroads in this manner is concerned, recognized, at least by this court, as a legitimate method of taxation.

Stearns v. Minnesota, 179 U. S. 233, 45

L. ed. 162, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 73; Great Northern R. Co. v. Minnesota, 216 U. S. 206, 233, 54 L. ed. 446, 460, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 344; Chicago G. W. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 216 U. S. 234, 54 L. ed. 460, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 353; Jaggard, Tax. pp. 72, 73; Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Koerner, 85 Minn. 150, 88 N. W. 430; State v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 96 Minn. 13, 104 N. W. 567; State v. Northwestern Teleph. Exch. Co. 107 Minn. 399, 120 N. W. 534; McHenry v. Alford, 168 U. S. 651, 671, 42 L. ed. 614, 621, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 242.

Minnesota's system of taxing express companies is only a property tax, and is not an interference with interstate commerce within the holdings of this court.

Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Atty. Gen. 125 U. S. 530, 31 L. ed. 790, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 961; Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Pennsylvania, 141 U. S. 18, 35 L. ed. 613, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 595, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 876; Atty. Gen. v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 141 U. S. 40, 35 L. ed. 628, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 889; Maine v. Grand Trunk R. Co. 142 U. S. 217, 35 L. ed. 994, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 807, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 163; Lehigh Valley R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 145 U. S. 192-201, 36 L. ed. 672-675, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 87, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 806; Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Adams, 155 U. S. 688, 39 L. ed. 311, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 1, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 268, 360; Pittsburgh, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Backus, 154 U. S. 421, 38 L. ed. 1031, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1114; Pacific Exp. Co. v. Seibert, 142 U. S. 339, 353, 354, 36 L. ed. 1035, 1039, 1040, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 810, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 250; Adams Exp. Co. v. Ohio State Auditor, 165 U. S. 194, 41 L. ed. 683, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 305; Sanford v. Poe, 60 L.R.A. 641, 16 C. C. A. 305, 37 U. S. App. 395, 69 Fed. 546; Adams Exp. Co. v. Ohio State Auditor, 166 U. S. 185, 41 L. ed. 965, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 604; Adams Exp. Co. v. Kentucky, 166 U. S. 171, 41 L. ed. 960, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 527; Wisconsin & M. R. Co. v. Powers, 191 U. S. 379, 48 L. ed. 229, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 107; Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v. Texas, 210 U. S. 217, 52 L. ed. 1031, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 638.

Nothing in the Federal Constitution prevents a state from separating a particular class of property and subjecting it to an assessment and taxation in a mode and by a rate different from that imposed on other property, and applying the proceeds to state rather than local purposes.

Michigan C. R. Co. v. Powers, 201 U. S. 245, 50 L. ed. 744, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 459.

The fact that it might be possible for Minnesota to use this system of taxation to the extent of imposing too large a tax or too heavy a burden upon the transportation company does not especially at this time, make a Federal question.

Providence Bank v. Billings, 4 Pet. 514, 563, 7 L. ed. 939, 956; Michigan C. R. Co. v. Powers, 201 U. S. 296, 50 L. ed. 762, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 459.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a writ of error to the supreme court of the state of Minnesota, bringing in review a judgment of that court sustaining a tax assessed against the United States Express Company. 114 Minn. 346, 37 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1127, 131 N. W. 489.

The express company is an unincorporated association, with its principal office in the state of New York, engaged in the express business in the United States. The business is carried on under contracts between the company and railroads for the transportation by the railroad companies of goods forwarded by the express company, upon the payment by the express company, as compensation for such service, of a certain percentage of the gross receipts of the express company, derived from the business carried over the lines of the railroads. Under such contracts the company is engaged in carrying on express business over many lines of railroads in the United States, amounting in the aggregate to some 30,000 miles of road. It carries on express business in this manner in the state of Minnesota upon the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway, Duluth & Iron Range Railroad, and, for a time, the Chicago, Milwaukee, & St. Paul Railway. The company has offices in many states, the District of Columbia and Canada, and in various European countries. It has about fifty offices in the state of Minnesota.

The law in question (Revised Laws of Minnesota 1905, chapter 11) provides for the taxation of express companies. Section 1013 of the act requires every express company doing business in the state, [339 between January 1 and February 1, to file with the state auditor, in such form as he may prescribe, a statement, duly verified, showing the entire receipts, including all sums earned or charged, whether received or not, for business done within the state, including its proportion of gross receipts for business done in the state by such company in connection with other companies. The statement must further show the amount actually paid by such express company to the railroads within the state for the transportation of its freight for the year, giving the amount paid to each railroad company; and also show the entire receipts of the company for business done within the state, including its proportion of gross receipts for business done within the state in connection with other companies, after deducting the amounts paid for transportation to railroads within the state. Section 1015 provides that the auditor shall annually, between March 1 and April 1, ascertain the gross receipts of such company by deducting the sums thus annually paid by it for the transportation of freight within the state from its entire receipts for business done in the state, including its proportion for business done within the state in connection with other companies.

Section 1019 provides that annually, on or before March 15, the auditor shall assess upon each company a tax of 6 per cent upon its gross receipts for business done in the state for the preceding calendar year, as determined by the auditor, which shall be in lieu of all taxes upon its property, and shall deliver to the state treasurer for collection a draft upon the company for such sum.

The action was brought by the state of Minnesota to recover certain items which it was claimed were omitted from the returns of the express company, and which were properly the subject of taxation under the statute. Under the stipulated facts these items, embraced in paragraph 3 of complaint, schedule No. 1, consist of:

340] *"Earnings of $54,209.19, constituting earnings on express business for the years 1899 to 1908, inclusive, which express business was made up entirely of shipments delivered by the shipper to an express company in the state of Minnesota, consigned to an ultimate consignee at a second point in the state of Minnesota, which shipments were forwarded by express between the point of origin and point of destination over lines of railroad, which lines were partly within and partly without the state of Minnesota. That is to say, all of these shipments necessarily passed out of the state of Minnesota in transit. Said amount, namely, $54,209.19, is based upon the total earnings on said shipments, and is not that part of said earnings apportionable to the transportation, which was performed within the state of Minnesota. In arriving at said amount, the total earnings received by the express company upon said shipments have been taken, regardless of what proportion of the through carry was performed within the state of Minnesota. About 91 per cent of the mileage under this item is within Minnesota."

Alleged omitted earnings on which back taxes were claimed under paragraph 3 of complaint, schedule No. 2, such omitted earnings amounting to $9,702.89, on which back taxes were claimed of $504.47, were made up as follows:

"Earnings derived by the company from the following express shipments: (a) Shipments received by an express company from a shipper at a point of origin outside of the state of Minnesota, addressed to and destined to a consignee within the state of Minnesota; or (b) shipments delivered to an express company by a shipper in the state of Minnesota and addressed to and destined to a consignee without the state of Minnesota; or (c) shipments delivered to an express company by a shipper without the state of Minnesota and addressed to and destined to a consignee without the state of Minnesota, passing through the *state of Minnesota in transit, as to all[341 of which said shipments, either in class a, class b, or class c, the defendant received said shipments at a point in the state of Minnesota and forwarded them over its lines to a second point within the state of Minnesota, the transportation while in the hands of the defendant being performed wholly within the state of Minnesota. The transportation in connection with such shipments outside of the state of Minnesota was performed by connecting companies other than the defendant. Each of said shipments which constituted said amount of $9,702.89 in schedule No. 2 of paragraph 3 of complaint was made upon a through rate and a through waybill and bill of lading, showing the origin and ultimate destination thereof, and consisted of a single transportation transaction, commencing with the delivery by the shipper to an express company, and continuing until and not ending before, the delivery of the shipment to the consignee at the point of ultimate destination to which the shipment was addressed."

Taxes are not claimed or collected upon shipments of express matter in the classes named where the same express company performs the transportation service both within and without the state of Minnesota.

A question was also made as to the constitutional validity of the tax upon money orders issued by the express company, but that objection has not been pressed in argument here.

The plaintiff in error contends that the assessment of the tax upon its earnings from shipments by a consignor in the state of Minnesota to an ultimate consignee within the state, which shipments were forwarded by express between the points of origin and destination, over railroads partly within and partly without the state of Minnesota (paragraph 3, schedule No. 1), is an unconstitutional exaction, in that it is an attempt of the state to regulate interstate commerce, and is without due process of law. *As to such shipments, the[342 supreme court held that 9 per cent of the taxes claimed on this class of earnings should be deducted from the amount of the recovery allowed in the court of original jurisdiction, since it was disclosed that only 91 per cent of the mileage was within the state. For this part of the decision the Minnesota court relied upon Lehigh Valley R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 145 U. S. 192, 36 L. ed. 672, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 87, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 806. An examination of that case shows that it is decisive of the present one on this point, and we need not further discuss this feature of the case.

As to the transportation described in paragraph 3, schedule No. 2, from points within the state to points without the state, from points without the state to points within the state, and from points without the state to points without the state, passing through the state, the transportation outside of the state being performed by connecting companies, the supreme court of Minnesota held that it was the intention of the legislature, in the statute under consideration, to include the earnings from these classes within the state in the gross receipts upon which the tax is based. This construction of the statute is binding upon us.

The transportation was made upon a through rate and through bill of lading, and, it is stipulated, consisted of a single transportation transaction, commencing with the delivery by the shipper to the express company, and continuing until the delivery of the shipment to the consignee at the ultimate destination. This was clearly interstate commerce, and the Federal question made in this connection is: Is this tax a burden upon interstate commerce, and therefore an infraction of the exclusive power of Congress, under the Constitution, to regulate commerce among the states?

It is thoroughly well settled in this court that state laws may not burden interstate commerce. As one form of burden may exist in taxing the conduct of interstate commerce, such taxation has been uniformly condemned. Examples of cases of that character may be found in Fargo v. Michigan (Fargo v. Stevens) 121 U. S. 230, 30 L. ed. 888, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 51, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 857; Philadelphia & S. Mail S. S. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 122 U. S. 326, 30 L. ed. 1200, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 308, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1118; Ratterman v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 127 U. S. 411, 32 L. ed. 229, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 59, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1127; Leloup v. Mobile, 127 U. S. 640, 32 L. ed. 311, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 134, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1380; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 128 U. S. 39, 32 L. ed.

345, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 241, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 6; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Alabama Bd. of Assessment (Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Seay) 132 U. S. 472, 33 L. ed. 409, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 726, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 161; Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v. Texas, 210 U. S. 217, 52 L. ed. 1031, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 638.

While we have no disposition to detract from the authority of these decisions, this court has had also to consider and determine the effect of statutes which undertake to measure a tax within the legitimate power of the state by receipts which came in part from business of an interstate character. In that class of cases a distinction was drawn between laws burdening interstate commerce, and laws where the measure of a legitimate tax consists in part of the avails or income from the conduct of such commerce.

In Maine v. Grand Trunk R. Co. 142 U. S. 217, 35 L. ed. 994, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 121, 163, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 807, this court sustained a tax which required every railroad operated within the state to pay an annual tax for the privilege of exercising its franchises therein, determined upon a proportion of gross transportation receipts, which in that case were shown to be those of a railroad partly within and partly without the state, such gross receipts being derived from its entire business, state and interstate. The resort to the gross receipts, in the opinion of the court, was merely a means of ascertaining the business done by the corporation, and thus measuring the tax, which was held to be within the power of the state.

In Wisconsin & M. R. Co. v. Powers, 191 U. S. 379, 48 L. ed. 229, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 107, a tax was sustained which made the income of the railway company within the state, including interstate earnings, the prima facie measure of the value of the property within the state for the purpose of taxation. In the course of the opinion this court said:

"In form the tax is a tax on 'the[344 property and business of such railroad corporation operated within the state,' computed upon certain percentages of gross income. The prima facie measure of the plaintiff's gross income is substantially that which was approved in Maine v. Grand Trunk R. Co. 142 U. S. 217, 228, 35 L. ed. 994, 995, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 121, 163, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 807."

A question in principle not unlike the one here presented, came before this court in Flint v. Stone Tracy Co. 220 U. S. 107, 55 L. ed. 389, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 342. In that case it was contended that the income of the corporations sought to be taxed under the Federal law included, as to some of the companies, large investments in municipal bonds and other securities beyond the Federal power of taxation. It was held, after a review of some of the previous cases in this court, that, where the tax was within the legitimate authority of the Federal government, it might be measured, in part, by the income from property not in itself taxable, and the distinction was undertaken to be pointed out between an attempt to tax property beyond the reach of the taxing power, and to measure a legitimate tax by income derived, in part, at least, from the use of such property. Flint v. Stone Tracy Co. supra, 162-165.

The right of the state to tax property, although it is used in interstate commerce, is thoroughly well settled. Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Adams, 155 U. S. 688, 39 L. ed. 311, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 1, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 268, 360; Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Pennsylvania, 141 U. S. 18, 35 L. ed. 613, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 595, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 876; Ficklen v. Taxing Dist. 145 U. S. 1, 22, 36 L. ed. 601, 606, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 79, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 810. The difficulty has been, and is, to distinguish between legitimate attempts to exert the taxing power of the state and those laws which, though in the guise of taxation, impose real burdens upon interstate commerce as such. This difficulty was recognized in Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v. Texas, 210 U. S. 217, 52 L. ed. 1031, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 638, wherein the possible differences between the decisions in Philadelphia, & S. Mail S. S. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 122 U. S. 326, 30 L. ed. 1200, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 308, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1118, and Maine v. Grand Trunk R. Co. supra, were commented upon and explained. *Mr. Justice Holmes, speaking for the court, said:

"By whatever name the exaction may be called, if it amounts to no more than the ordinary tax upon property, or a just equivalent therefor, ascertained by reference thereto, it is not open to attack as inconsistent with the Constitution." Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Adams, 155 U. S. 688, 697, 39 L. ed. 311, 316, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 1, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 268, 360. See New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 158 U. S. 431, 438, 439, 39 L. ed. 1043, 1045, 1046, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 896. The question is whether this is such a tax. It appears sufficiently, perhaps, from what has been said, that we are to look for a practical rather than a logical or philosophical distinction. The state must be allowed to tax the property, and to tax it at its actual value as a going concern. On the other hand, the state cannot tax the interstate business. The two necessities hardly admit of an absolute logical reconciliation. Yet the distinction is not without sense. When a legislature is trying simply to value property, it is less likely to attempt to or effect injurious regulation than when it is aiming directly at the receipts from interstate commerce. A practical line can be drawn by taking the whole scheme of taxation into account. That must be done by this court as best it can."

In that case the statute of Texas was condemned, because it appeared to the court to be an attempt to reach the receipts from interstate commerce by a tax of 1 per cent, or what was equal to the same thing, on gross receipts arising from such commerce, when it appeared from the judgment of the state court and the argument on behalf of the state that another tax on the property had already been levied, covering its full value as a going concern. The tax under consideration was held to be merely an effort to reach the gross receipts, not disguised by the name of an occupation tax, or in any way helped by the words "equal to."

Upon like reasoning the statute of Oklahoma was condemned *in the case of [346 Meyer v. Wells, F. & Co. decided to-day. [223 U. S. 298, ante, 445, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 218.]

Appreciating the difficulty emphasized in the Galveston Case of drawing the line between taxes that burden interstate commerce and those whereby the legislature is simply undertaking to impose a property tax within its legitimate power, measured in part by the income from interstate commerce transactions, how does the present case stand? The supreme court of Minnesota construed the tax to be a property tax, measured by the gross earnings within the state, which, under their construction of the tax, included the earnings here in question. That court held that the statute was part of a system long in force in Minnesota, passed under the authority of the state Constitution, and was intended to afford a means of valuing the property of express companies within the state. While the determination that the tax is a property tax measured by gross receipts is not binding upon this court, we are not prepared to say that this conclusion is not well founded, in view of the provisions and purposes of the law.

The statute itself provides that the assessments under it "shall be in lieu of all taxes upon its property." In other words, this is the only mode prescribed in Minnesota for exercising the recognized authority of the state to tax the property of express companies as going concerns within its jurisdiction. If not taxed by this method, the property is not taxed at all. In this connection, the language of Mr. Justice Peckham in McHenry v. Alford, 168 U. S. 651, 42 L. ed. 614, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 242, while it was not necessary to the decision of the case, is nevertheless opposite:

"When it is said, as it is in this act, that the tax collected by this method shall be in lieu of all other taxes whatever, it would seem that it might be claimed with great plausibility that a tax levied under such circumstances and by such methods [347] was not in reality a tax upon *the gross earnings, but was a tax upon the lands and other property of the company, and that the method adopted of arriving at the sum which the company should pay as taxes upon its property was by taking a percentage of its gross earnings."

The tax in the present case is not like those held invalid in the Galveston Case and the Oklahoma Case, being in addition to other state taxation reaching the property of all kinds of the express company. The tax to be collected in part from the earnings of interstate commerce was part of a scheme of taxation seeking to reach the value of the property of such companies in the state, measured by the receipts from business done within the state. The statute was not aimed exclusively at the avails of interstate commerce (Philadelphia & S. Mail S. S. Co. v. Pennsylvania, supra), but, as in the Maine Case, was an attempt to measure the amount of tax within the admitted power of the state by income derived, in part, from the conduct of interstate commerce. The property of express companies, being much of it of an intangible character, is difficult to reach and properly assess for taxation. This difficulty led this court in Adams Exp. Co. v. Ohio State Auditor, 165 U. S. 194, 41 L. ed. 683, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 305, s. c. 166 U. S. 185, 41 L. ed. 965, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 604, to sustain a tax upon the property of an express company, which property was considered a part of one money-earning organization extending through many states.

As this court said in Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Adams, 155 U. S. 688-696, 697, 39 L. ed. 311-315, 316, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 1, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 268, 360:

"Doubtless no state could add to the taxation of property according to the rule of ordinary property taxation, the burden of a license or other tax on the privilege of using, constructing, or operating an instrumentality of interstate or international commerce, or for the carrying on of such commerce; but the value of property results from the use to which it is put, and varies with the profitableness of that use; and by whatever name the exaction *may be called, if it amounts to no[348] more than the ordinary tax upon property, or a just equivalent therefor, ascertained by reference thereto, it is not open to attack as inconsistent with the Constitution."

466

We think the tax here in question comes within this principle. There is no suggestion in the present record, as was shown in Fargo v. Hart, 193 U. S. 490, 48 L. ed. 761, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 498, that the amount of the tax is unduly great, having reference to the real value of the property of the company within the state and the assessment made. The statute embraces receipts from all the business done within the state, including much which is purely local.

Upon the whole, we think the statute falls within that class where there has been an exercise in good faith of a legitimate taxing power, the measure of which taxation is in part the proceeds of interstate commerce, which could not, in itself, be taxed, and does not fall within that class of statutes uniformly condemned in this court, which show a manifest attempt to burden the conduct of interstate commerce, such power, of course, being beyond the authority of the state.

We find no error in the judgment of the Supreme Court of the State of Minnesota, and it is affirmed.

*LINCOLN GAS & ELECTRIC [349] LIGHT COMPANY, Appt.,
v.

CITY OF LINCOLN et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 349-365.)

Appeal — remanding for insufficient findings — reference to master.

The absence of specific findings of fact by the trial court to which specific objection could be made requires that a decree dismissing the bill of a lighting company which assails as confiscatory the rates for gas fixed by municipal ordinance be reversed, with instructions to refer the case to some competent master, to report fully his findings upon all of the questions raised by either party, separately, with leave to both parties to take additional evidence within a time to be fixed by the court, which shall, upon such report, proceed as equity shall require.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 5407, 5408, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 83.]

Argued December 6 and 7, 1911. Decided February 19, 1912.

223 U. S.

A PPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Nebraska to review a decree dismissing the bill of a lighting company, which assails as confiscatory the rates for gas fixed by municipal ordinance. Reversed and remanded for reference to a master.

See same case below, 182 Fed. 926.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Halleck F. Rose argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Charles A. Frueauff, Edmund C. Strode, and John F. Stout, filed a brief for appellant:

Any deprivation of the right of a public utility company to a reasonable return upon the value of its property devoted to the public service, accomplished by legislative adoption of inadequate rates, is a deprivation of property without due process of law, and a confiscation thereof to the public use without just compensation, and a denial of the equal protection of the laws, in violation of the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 134 U. S. 418, 33 L. ed. 970, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 209, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 462, 702; Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 362, 38 L. ed. 1014, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047; Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 42 L. ed. 819, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; San Diego Land & Town Co. v. National City, 174 U. S. 739, 43 L. ed. 1154, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 804; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Tompkins, 176 U. S. 167, 44 L. ed. 417, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 336; Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 186 U. S. 257, 46 L. ed. 1151, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 900; Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. North Carolina Corp. Commission, 206 U. S. 1, 51 L. ed. 933, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585, 11 Ann. Cas. 398.

Appellant's case, as made by the proofs, ought not to be prejudiced by the circumstance that it sought injunctive relief in the first instance, without submitting to the confiscatory rates.

Willcox v. Consolidated Gas Co. 212 U. S. 40, 42, 53 L. ed. 394, 395, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192, 15 Ann. Cas. 1034.

The inviolability of property, under the rule of the Constitution, prohibits the establishment of gas rates in Lincoln, Nebraska, at a rate so low as to deprive the capital employed in that service of a small rate of earning than 8 per cent.

Willcox v. Consolidated Gas Co. 212 U. S. 51, 53 L. ed. 399, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192, 15 Ann. Cas. 1034; State Journal Printing Co. v. Madison Gas & E. Co. 4 Wis. R. Com. pp. 644, 645; Des Moines Water Co. v. Des Moines, 192 Fed. 193; Havelock v. Lincoln Traction Co. Neb. St. R. Com. for 56 L. ed.

1911; Brymer v. Butler Water Co. 179 Pa. 251, 36 L.R.A. 260, 36 Atl. 249; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Philadelphia County, 220 Pa. 115, 15 L.R.A. (N.S.) 108, 68 Atl. 676; Chicago Union Traction Co. v. State Bd. of Equalization, 114 Fed. 561; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Brown, 123 Fed. 151; Central R. Co. v. Railroad Commission, 161 Fed. 925; Milwaukee Electric R. & Light Co. v. Milwaukee, 87 Fed. 585; Southern P. Co. v. Railroad Comrs. 78 Fed. 261; People ex rel. Jamaica Water Supply Co. v. State Tax Comrs. 128 App. Div. 13, 112 N. Y. Supp. 392; Spring Valley Waterworks v. San Francisco, 124 Fed. 598.

Depreciation from use, of the properties employed in the service, is an essential part of the cost of the service.

Knoxville v. Knoxville Water Co. 212 U. S. 13, 14, 53 L. ed. 380, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 148.

Interest on invested capital during construction is a legitimate element of replacement value.

Brunswick & T. Water Dist. v. Maine Water Co. 99 Me. 371, 59 Atl. 542; Shepard v. Northern P. R. Co. 184 Fed. 809.

Some substantial sum should be allowed as a capital investment for franchise rights, or "going value," or both.

Monongahela Nav. Co. v. United States, 148 U. S. 312-345, 37 L. ed. 463-474, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 622; National Waterworks Co. v. Kansas City, 27 L.R.A. 827, 10 C. C. A. 653, 27 U. S. App. 165, 62 Fed. 853; Omaha v. Omaha Water Co. 218 U. S. 202, 203, 54 L. ed. 1000, 1001, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 615.

Messrs. Fred C. Foster and William M. Morning argued the cause and filed a brief for appellees:

The fixing of rates to be charged by public-service corporations is a legislative act, whether the rate is fixed by direct act of the legislature, or by a subordinate body or board exercising delegated authority.

Knoxville v. Knoxville Water Co. 212 U. S. 1, 53 L. ed. 371, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 148; McChord v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 183 U. S. 483, 46 L. ed. 289, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 165; Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 42 L. ed. 819, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. North Carolina Corp. Commission, 206 U. S. 1, 51 L. ed. 933, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585, 11 Ann. Cas. 398; Saratoga Springs v. Saratoga Gas E. L. & P. Co. 191 N. Y. 123, 18 L.R.A. (N.S.) 713, 83 N. E. 693, 14 Ann. Cas. 606.

The city council having acted under express legislative authority, and the act being legislative, and not judicial, the court will not concern itself with the motives back of the action, nor pause to inquire whether an adequate investigation was made before acting, nor whether or not the council acted upon a fair and reasonable knowledge of the company's condition. Good faith and adequate information will be presumed; and this court will, we think, confine its inquiry to the sole question as to whether this record presents a clear case of confiscation. We think this a fair statement of the rule as established by the most recent decisions of this court.

Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 362-395, 38 L. ed. 1014-1022, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047; Knoxville v. Knoxville Water Co. 212 U. S. 1, 53 L. ed. 371, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 148; Willcox v. Consolidated Gas Co. 212 U. S. 19, 53 L. ed. 382, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192, 15 Ann. Cas. 1034.

The rate fixed by this ordinance not having been put to a practical test, but having been suspended by this injunction, the ordinance will be upheld unless the case is one leaving no just or fair doubt that the rate, if enforced, would be confiscatory.

Willcox v. Consolidated Gas Co. 212 U. S. 19, 53 L. ed. 382, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192, 15 Ann. Cas. 1034; Knoxville v. Knoxville Water Co. 212 U. S. 1, 53 L. ed. 371, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 148; San Diego Land & Town Co. v. National City, 174 U. S. 739, 43 L. ed. 1154, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 804; San Diego Land & Town Co. v. Jasper, 189 U. S. 439, 47 L. ed. 892, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 571.

In an investigation of the legality of maximum rates fixed by law, to be charged by public-service corporations, two principal questions are to be considered:

1. The present reasonable value of the property or plant devoted by the corporation to the public service.

2. The net earnings of the corporation which would probably arise from the operation of its business under the new rate, after deducting necessary and reasonable charges and expenses.

Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 42 L. ed. 819, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; San Diego Land & Town Co. v. National City, 174 U. S. 739, 43 L. ed. 1154, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 804; San Diego Land & Town Co. v. National City, 74 Fed. 88; Grain Shippers' Assn. v. Illinois C. R. Co. 8 Inters. Com. Rep. 158; Steenerson v. Great Northern R. Co. 69 Minn. 353, 72 N. W. 713; San Diego Land & Town Co. v. Jasper, 189 U. S. 439, 443, 47 L. ed. 892, 895, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 571; Danville v. Southern R. Co. 8 Inters. Com. Rep. 409; Redlands L. & C. Domestic Water Co. v. Redlands, 121 Cal. 365, 53 Pac. 843; American Asphalt Assn. v. Uintah R. Co. 13 Inters. Com. Rep. 207.

It is the duty of a public-service corporation to provide a reconstruction fund to take care of new construction and all permanent improvements, and these should not be charged to operating expenses.

Illinois C. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 206 U. S. 441, 51 L. ed. 1128, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 700; Wyman, Public Service Corp. § 1163.

Where items of this character have been paid for from current receipts and charged to operating expense, they should be excluded from consideration in estimating the value of the property upon which the company is entitled to earn dividends, or excluded from the operating expenses of a single year.

San Diego Water Co. v. San Diego, 118 Cal. 574, 38 L.R.A. 460, 62 Am. St. Rep. 261, 50 Pac. 633; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 206 U. S. 441, 51 L. ed. 1128, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 700.

No part of a depreciation fund, accumulated by a public-service corporation from its receipts, can be added to the capital upon which it is entitled to earn dividends, and where this has been done the burden is on the company to show to what extent it has been done, in order that it may be segregated in a rate investigation.

Railroad Commission v. Cumberland Teleph. & Teleg. Co. 212 U. S. 414, 53 L. ed. 577, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357.

It is to be assumed that a corporation has its own money ready before starting construction, and whether it has or not, it is to be treated as if it had.

San Diego Water Co. v. San Diego, 118 Cal. 556, 38 L.R.A. 460, 62 Am. St. Rep. 261, 50 Pac. 633; Redlands L. & C. Domestic Water Co. v. Redlands, 121 Cal. 365, 53 Pac. 843.

Capitalization affords no guide to the present value of the tangible property of a waterworks company which is objecting to the rates fixed by municipal ordinance as confiscatory, where substantially all the common and preferred stock was issued under construction contracts entered into with persons who controlled the corporate action, and was greatly in excess of the true value of the property furnished under the contracts.

Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 42 L. ed. 819, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Knoxville v. Knoxville Water Co. 212 U. S. 1, 53 L. ed. 371, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 148.

A public-service corporation, regardless of the amount of its stocks and bonds, is only entitled to a fair return on the value of the property at the time used for the convenience of the public. When this return has been received by the corporation, it becomes the property of the corporation, to be applied to interest upon bonds, and the balance distributed in dividends. If the net income is not sufficient to pay the interest on bonds, it is the misfortune of the bondholders, and not of the public. If there is only enough of a net income to pay interest on bonds, and nothing is left for dividends, this is a misfortune of the stockholders.

San Diego Water Co. v. San Diego, 118 Cal. 556, 38 L.R.A. 460, 62 Am. St. Rep. 261, 50 Pac. 633.

Neither the fair value of stocks and bonds, the cost of construction, nor the cost of reproducing the plant, is absolutely controlling, but each should be regarded as a fact tending to show fair value.

Southern P. Co. v. Bartine, 170 Fed. 725; San Diego Land & Town Co. v. Jasper, 189 U. S. 439, 47 L. ed. 892, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 571.

The income of the year succeeding the passage of the ordinance was proper to be considered, even though the ordinance was not put into effect.

Knoxville v. Knoxville Water Co. 212 U. S. 1, 14, 53 L. ed. 371, 380, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 148.

The fact that the city may have included in the tax list for 1907 an item of $60,000, or any other sum, as the value of the franchise, would not tend to prove the value of the franchise, or furnish any argument in favor of including such value as an item in the list of complainant's property upon which it is entitled to dividends, because whatever taxes are paid by the complainant are charged by it to operating expenses and in the last analysis, are borne by the public.

Willcox v. Consolidated Gas Co. 212 U. S. 19, 53 L. ed. 382, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192, 15 Ann. Cas. 1034.

The appellant cannot be heard to complain because a segregated part of its business will not show a fair profit under a given rate. Before it can successfully attack such rates as confiscatory, it must show that the effect of its operation will so reduce the earnings from its entire business as to deprive it of a reasonable return upon the value of its entire property used in the public service.

St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Gill, 156 U. S. 649, 39 L. ed. 567, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 484; People ex rel. Cantrell v. St. Louis, A. & T. H. R. Co. 176 Ill. 512, 35 L.R.A. 656, 52 N. E. 292; Delaware State Grange v. New York, P. & N. R. Co. 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 554; Wilkes-Barre v. Spring Brook Water Supply Co. 4 Lack. Leg. News, 367; Steenerson v. Great Northern R. Co. 69 Minn. 353, 72 N. W. 713; Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 186 U. S. 257, 46 L. ed. 1151, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 900; St. John v. Erie R. Co. 22 Wall. 136, 22 L. ed. 56 L. ed.

743; Southern P. Co. v. Railroad Comrs. 78 Fed. 236; Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. North Carolina Corp. Commission, 206 U. S. 1, 51 L. ed. 933, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585, 11 Ann. Cas. 398.

The burden of proof rests upon the company to show proper apportionment.

Steenerson v. Great Northern R. Co. 69 Minn. 353, 72 N. W. 713; Chicago & G. T. R. Co. v. Wellman, 143 U. S. 339, 345, 36 L. ed. 176, 179, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 400; State v. Adams Exp. Co. 85 Neb. 25, — L.R.A. (N.S.) —, 122 N. W. 691.

Rates may be unreasonable and yet not confiscatory.

Railroad Commission v. Cumberland Teleph. & Teleg. Co. 212 U. S. 414, 420, 53 L. ed. 577, 580, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357; San Diego Land & Town Co. v. Jasper, 189 U. S. 439, 47 L. ed. 892, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 571; Southern P. Co. v. Bartine, 170 Fed. 727.

This court will not concern itself with the matter of alleged discrimination between customers, nor as to whether the new rate might operate to require some customers to be carried at a loss, so long as the rate will yield a reasonable rate of return on the entire business.

Willcox v. Consolidated Gas Co. 212 U. S. 19, 53 L. ed. 382, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192, 15 Ann. Cas. 1034; Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 186 U. S. 257, 46 L. ed. 1151, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 900; Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. North Carolina Corp. Commission, 206 U. S. 1, 51 L. ed. 933, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585, 11 Ann. Cas. 398; Northern P. R. Co. v. North Dakota, 216 U. S. 579, 54 L. ed. 624, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 423; St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Gill, 156 U. S. 649, 39 L. ed. 567, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 484; People ex rel. Cantrell v. St. Louis, A. & T. H. R. Co. 176 Ill. 512, 35 L.R.A. 656, 52 N. E. 292; Delaware State Grange v. New York P. & N. R. Co. 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 554; Steenerson v. Great Northern R. Co. 69 Minn. 353, 72 N. W. 713

Mr. Justice Lurton delivered the opinion of the court:

This case involves the validity of an ordinance regulating the appellant's charges for gas furnished to consumers, and forbidding a charge in excess of $1 per thousand feet. The bill assailed the rate as confiscatory, and therefore a taking of property without compensation. The ordinance rests upon legislative power to regulate the charges of such public-service companies.

*The sufficiency of the price prescribed to produce a fair profit upon the value of the property employed in the business is to be strongly presumed. The burden of showing its confiscatory character rests, therefore, upon the complaining company.

The court below, upon a final hearing, held that the appellant had not made out its case, and dismissed the bill, with leave to renew the litigation if, upon actual operation under the ordinance, the returns upon its business should not prove reasonably remunerative. The ordinance was never put in force. Within a few days after it went into effect this bill was filed and an injunction, pendente lite, granted, which was continued in force down to the final decree, and when this appeal was allowed, was, by order of the court allowing it, continued pending the appeal, under a bond conditioned to account for all overcharges if the ordinance should be sustained.

The case was not referred to a master, as is the usual course in such cases, although there was a great mass of conflicting evidence relating to the value of the plant, cost of operation, and gross and net income. Neither did the court make specific findings of fact to which specific objection could be made. Such facts as may be said to constitute "findings of fact" appear in the way of large conclusions in the course of the opinion found in the record.

In this, as in every other legislative rate case, there are presented three questions of prime importance: First, the present reasonable value of the company's plant engaged in the regulated business; second, what will be the probable effect of the reduced rate upon the future net income from the property engaged in serving the public; and, third, in ascertaining the probable net income under the reduced rates prescribed, what deduction, if any, should be made from the gross receipts as a fund to preserve the property from future depreciation.

358] *The valuation fixed by the court is the main point of attack. That the company is entitled to a fair return upon the value of the property at the time of the inquiry is the rule. San Diego Land & Town Co. v. Jasper, 189 U. S. 442, 47 L. ed. 894, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 571.

The court, as one means of finding the present value of the gas-making plant, found that the present cost of replacing it would be $566,073.59. The items which enter into this valuation, and the reason for reaching this result, as stated in the opinion, are shown by the paragraphs here set out:

"In determining for what amount the plant could be reconstructed, I have accepted in the main the testimony of complainant's witnesses as being the most satisfactory, and I find that the plant could be reconstructed for the following sums:

Coal gas apparatus	$ 80,605.00
Water gas apparatus	29,278.00
Mains in dirt streets	90,578.00
Mains in paved streets	130,027.00
Gas services, etc.	107,106.82
Gas meters in use	36,282.90
Meter connections	6,304.00
Piping for gas ranges	16,500.00

	$496,681.72
Engineering expenses (2½ per cent)	12,417.04
Real estate	4,000.00
Present value of buildings.....	24,643.00
Contingent expenses in construction	25,000.00
Cost of organizing company....	3,000.00
	$565,741.76

"While the evidence as to the depreciation is somewhat vague and indefinite, I think, upon the items aggregating *said $496,681.72, there should be deducted for depreciation 10 per cent, amounting to the sum of $49,688.17, making the total present valuation of the plant $516,073.59; but it is apparent that, for the successful and economical operation of the plant, a certain amount of working capital is required. This amount I find to be $50,000, making the total value of complainant's investment, upon which it is entitled to a reasonable return, $566,073.59.

"While it is true that the testimony shows that the complainant has not such working capital, but has purchased upon credit the supplies necessary to operate, yet I think that, in determining what is a reasonable compensation, a working capital should be considered." [182 Fed. 927.]

But the appellant does not accept the valuation thus fixed. It contends that there should be added to that the following:

Steam boiler for water gas	$ 2,225.00
Underestimate of present value of buildings	10,000.00
Underestimate of working capital	10,000.00
Underestimate of meter connections	6,102.00
Underestimate contingent expenses of construction	37,500.00
Interest on idle capital during construction	40,000.00
Promotion of business, or going value and franchise, as elements in replacing value....	$10,000.00

	205,852.00
Add court's valuation	566,073.59
	$771,925.59

223 U. S.

The appellee, on the other hand, in sup-360]port of the general *decree dismissing the bill, joins issue upon each of these items, and insists that if the court shall see fit to go into the evidence, it will find that the plant has been greatly overvalued. It particularly objects to the large item of $107,000 for gas service, and to the item of $50,000 added to the value of the property as "working capital," and says that the incorrectness of this is seen in the admission that the appellant has in fact no such working capital engaged in the business. Appellee further contends that the "expense of operation" in 1907 includes reconstruction or replacement work, and that such items enlarge the operating expenses of that year unduly and correspondingly reduce the net income. If the expense of operating the plant for that year is to be accepted as the standard by which the operating expenses of future years are to be estimated, the objection is serious if the facts are as claimed.

The appellant further claims that the sum of $8,000 deducted from the net income, as a permanent protection against future depreciation in the value of the plant, is too small, and should be much larger. Upon this there was conflicting expert testimony. Upon all of these questions of valuation and of operating expense there is much evidence, and much of it conflicting. The findings of the court, as before stated, are of too comprehensive a character to be of much help in dealing with the details which are embraced.

But it is urged that even upon the valuation fixed by the court, the estimated future net income will be little over 5 per cent, and, in consideration of the character of the property and the high average interest rate prevailing in Nebraska, this is not a reasonable or fair return, and demonstrates the confiscatory character of the ordinance. But if the $8,000 first deducted from the receipts, and laid aside as a permanent fund to meet future depreciation, be taken into account, the estimated future 361]*net income with the rate in force will exceed 6 per cent.

Nor did the circuit court hold that a net profit of 5 $\frac{1}{10}$ per cent would be a fair and reasonable return upon the value of the property employed. What the court found was, in substance, that at least an income of that amount was certain, aside from the amount reserved for a permanent preservation fund. What the court said was this:

"While complainant, I think, is entitled to at least 6 per cent upon the money invested, it does not appear that the reduced rate would not yield that sum. It is quite 56 L. ed.

probable that the reduced rate would considerably increase the consumption of gas, and thus increase the complainant's net profits.

"The record shows that in June, 1904, complainant voluntarily reduced its rates from approximately $1.50 per thousand to $1.20, and the amount of gas consumed, and net profits resulting, considerably increased. The inquiry in cases of this character is not alone what has complainant theretofore earned, but it is what will be the effect of the ordinance reducing the rate upon the future net earnings of the company; and it devolves upon complainant to show, not that the past rates have not produced a reasonable return, but that the rate prescribed by the ordinance will not in the future produce a reasonable return."

This case is full of difficult and grave questions. Such conclusions as to facts as are found in the court's opinion are not helpful when, as here, errors are assigned which open up substantially the whole case.
 The cause should have gone at the beginning to a skilled master, upon whose report specific errors could have been assigned and a ruling from the court obtained.

In the case of *Chicago, M. & St. P. R.
 Co. v. Tompkins*, 176 U. S. 167, 179, 44
 L. ed. 417, 422, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 336, this court was called upon to review *a[362 decree upholding a state-made railroad rate which had been unsuccessfully attacked as confiscatory. In that case, as in this, the matter had not been referred to a master, but had been decided by the circuit court upon the whole of the evidence. It came to this court upon such a variety of questions of fact and law as to practically open up the whole case. Impressed with the seriousness of the questions involved, this court remanded the case for a reference and report by a skilled master. As to this practice, this court said:

"The question then arises, What disposition of the case shall this court make?
 Ought we to examine the testimony, find the facts, and from those facts deduce the proper conclusion?

"It would doubtless be within the competency of this court on an appeal in equity to do this, but we are constrained to think that it would not (particularly in a case like the present) be the proper course to pursue. This is an appellate court, and parties have a right to a determination of the facts in the first instance by the trial court. Doubtless, if such determination is challenged on appeal, it becomes our duty to examine the testimony and see if it sustains the findings; but if the facts found are not challenged by either party, then this court need not go beyond its ordinary appellate duty of considering whether such facts justified the decree. We think this is one of those cases in which it is especially important that there should be a full and clear finding of the facts by the trial court. The questions are difficult, the interests are vast, and therefore the aid of the trial court should be had. . . . We are all of opinion that a better practice is to refer the testimony to some competent master, to make all needed computations, and find fully the facts. It is hardly necessary to observe that, in view of the difficulties and importance of such a case, it is imperative that the most competent and reliable master, general *or special, should be selected, for it is not a light matter to interfere with the legislation of a state in respect to the prescribing of rates, nor a light matter to permit such legislation to wreck large property interests."

The question as to what sum, if any, upon the facts of this case, should be annually deducted from the net income as a permanent maintenance or replacement fund, is novel and presents a grave problem.

Conflicting expert evidence has been introduced presenting radically different theories as to the necessity, character, and amount of such a fund, and as to how it should be created, preserved, and expended. Some of this evidence puts the sum to be annually deducted and set aside as a permanent fund at 5 per cent upon the value of the plant at the time of deduction. It is obvious that if this view is sound, there will be little or nothing of the net income left for distribution among shareholders, and no basis for legislative rate reduction now, and none likely until such time as the income from the permanent fund will keep up the plant. The work of reconstructing and replacing old parts by new in a plant of this kind must, in the very nature of things, be going on constantly. Heretofore it seems to have been so well and continuously done that the value of the plant as a whole has suffered less than 1 per cent per annum if the total depreciation be distributed through the more than thirty years of operation. So far as can be now seen, reconstruction and replacement charges have, up to the present time, been borne by current revenue, with the result that the revenue remaining in the single year of 1907 showed a net surplus of $73,851.83,—a sum large enough, if distributed to shareholders upon the basis of the value of property engaged in the business as claimed by appellant, to have paid a dividend of 10 per cent, and about 15 per cent upon the valuation settled by the circuit court.

There is no finding as to the extent of the application *of the revenue of 1907 to [364] reconstruction or replacement, as distinguished from current repairs and operating expenses. It is, however, plainly inferable that the revenue of that year was used to the extent necessary. If, in the past, reconstruction and replacement charges have been met out of current expenses, the fact must be taken into consideration, both when we come to estimating future net income and in determining what sum shall be annually set aside to guard against future depreciation. This doubtless influenced the court below in settling upon the amount of $8,000 as a sufficient annual appropriation of income as insurance against future depreciation. But if the constantly recurring necessity to do reconstruction or replacement work was in 1907 met out of the current income of that year, thereby diminishing the net income, the fact should be given weight in estimating future net income; otherwise there will be a double deduction on that account, first, by paying such charges as they occur, and thereafter by a contribution out of the remaining income for the same object.

The facts found are not full enough to at all justify this court in dealing with this problem of a replacement fund.

There should be a full report upon past depreciation, past expense for reconstruction or replacement, and past operating expenses, including current repairs. We should be advised as to the gross receipts for recent years, and just how these receipts have been expended. Then the amount to be set aside for future depreciation will depend upon the character and probable life of the property and the method adopted in the past to preserve the property. It can be readily seen that the amount to be annually set aside may be such as to forbid rate reductions because of the requirement of such a fund. The matter is one first for a skilled master, who should make a full report upon the value of the property, the receipts and the expenses of operation, and the sums paid out on reconstruction *and replacements, and in [365] dividends in recent years.

For the reasons indicated, we direct that the decree be reversed, and the cause remanded to the district court to refer the case to a competent and skilled master, to report fully his findings upon all of the questions raised by either party, separately, and with leave to both parties to take any additional evidence they may wish within a time to be fixed by the court, and that that court, upon such report, proceed as equity shall require.

It is further ordered for the protection of all parties that the injunction granted in the court below continue in force until final decree there, upon condition that the appellant enter into a new bond, with sureties satisfactory to the court below, to account for all overcharges to consumers since the original restraining order, in the event the ordinance shall be sustained, and that, if such bond be not made within twenty days after the filing of the mandate, that the injunction stand dissolved.

METROPOLITAN REDWOOD LUMBER COMPANY, Claimant of the Steamer San Pedro, Appt.,

v.

CHARLES P. DOE, Owner of the American Steamer George W. Elder, et al.†

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 365-376.)

Abatement — pendency of action — salvage — limitation of shipowners' liability.

All further proceedings on a libel instituted by salvage claimants who towed to port a vessel disabled in a collision must stop upon pleading the pendency in the same court of a separate proceeding by the owners of the vessel, claiming the benefits of the limited liability provisions of U. S. Rev. Stat. §§ 4283-4285, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 2943, 2944, as amended by the act of June 26, 1884 (23 Stat. at L. 57, chap. 121, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2945), § 18, in which, conformably to admiralty rule 54, there has been an appraisalment of the vessel and her pending freight, and a stipulation entered into for the payment of the appraised value into court, and a monition duly issued, requiring all persons to present their claims and make proof.

[For other cases, see Abatement and Revival, II. e, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 155.]

Submitted December 22, 1911. Decided February 19, 1912.

APPEAL from the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of California to review a decree for salvage, rendered after the pendency of a suit for the limitation of the shipowner's liability was pleaded. Reversed and remanded, with directions to dismiss the libel.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

†This case is reported by the Official Reporter under the title of "The San Pedro."

NOTE.—As to abatement because of another suit pending—see note to Cook v. Burnley, 20 L. ed. U. S. 29.
56 L. ed.

Mr. William Denman submitted the cause for appellant:

The liability for salving the San Pedro is a "damage" to the Metropolitan Redwood Lumber Company arising from the collision.

The Charles C. Lister, 174 Fed. 288; The Cepheus, 24 Fed. 507; Marsden, Collisions, 6th ed. p. 110.

The liabilities of the owners of vessels arising from a collision are to be litigated in a limitation proceeding just as any other liabilities inflicted on the owner of a vessel which has suffered injury.

Norwich & N. Y. Transp. Co. v. Wright, 13 Wall. 104, 20 L. ed. 585.

As a damage from collision, to be adjudicated in the limitation proceeding, the jurisdiction of the district court of the libel filed herein ceased as soon as the stipulation for value required by rule 54 was filed in the limitation proceeding.

Providence & N. Y. S. S. Co. v. Hill Mfg. Co. 109 U. S. 578, 600, 27 L. ed. 1038, 1046, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 379, 617; Butler v. Boston & S. S. S. Co. 130 U. S. 527, 550, 32 L. ed. 1017, 1022, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 612; The H. F. Dimock, 52 Fed. 598; Re Morrison, 147 U. S. 14, 37 L. ed. 60, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 246.

Mr. Charles Page also submitted the cause for appellant.

Messrs. Aldis B. Browne, Alexander Britton, and Evans Browne submitted the cause for appellees. Messrs. F. A. Cutler, F. R. Sweasey, and J. N. Gillett were on the brief:

The issuance of an injunction as an essential step in the enforcement of the provisions of the statute has been recognized in numerous cases, including:

The Lotta, 150 Fed. 219; Delaware River Ferry Co. v. Amos, 179 Fed. 756; Re Morrison, 147 U. S. 14-35, 37 L. ed. 60-68, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 246; Moran v. Sturges, 154 U. S. 256-270, 38 L. ed. 981-985, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1019; Re Providence & N. Y. S. S. Co. 6 Ben. 124, Fed. Cas. No. 11,451; The H. F. Dimock, 52 Fed. 598; Norwich & N. Y. Transp. Co. v. Wright, 13 Wall. 104, 20 L. ed. 585; Re Long Island N. S. Pass & Freight Transp. Co. 5 Fed. 629.

The "damage" arising from the collision, referred to in U. S. Rev. Stat. § 4283, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2943, includes solely damages to other vessels and their cargoes.

Norwich & N. Y. Transp. Co. v. Wright, 13 Wall. 104, 20 L. ed. 585.

The liability for salving the San Pedro as a "damage" to the Metropolitan Redwood Lumber Company, arising from the collision, in the sense in which such term is used in the cases cited by appellant, is of no other or different nature or character than the liability for repairs made to such vessel as a "damage" to appellant, arising from the collision. It is, however, perfectly clear that repairs are not a "damage" within the contemplation of this section of the Revised Statutes, nor are they an element to be considered in fixing the stipulation for value.

The Doris Eckhoff, 30 Fed. 140.

The provisions of § 4284 are not only limited in effect to losses suffered by others than the one petitioning for limitation of liability, but deal solely with losses subject to a pro rata payment from the sum for which such owner may be liable.

The Catskill, 95 Fed. 702.

The appraisement is to be made and the owner's liability fixed as of the time of the termination of the voyage.

Gokey v. Fort, 44 Fed. 364; The Abbie C. Stubbs, 28 Fed. 719; The City of Norwich (Place v. Norwich & N. Y. Transp. Co.) 118 U. S. 468, 30 L. ed. 134, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1150; The Pine Forest, 64 C. C. A. 228, 129 Fed. 700; The Giles Loring, 48 Fed. 463; The Rose Culkin, 52 Fed. 328; The Doris Eckhoff, 30 Fed. 140; The Great Western, 118 U. S. 520, 30 L. ed. 156, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1172.

Voyage is terminated by abandonment at sea.

Carver, Carr. §§ 307, 308; Spencer, Marine Collisions, § 220.

The stipulation should be in an amount equal to the value of the ship at the time her voyage was terminated, and is to be estimated by deducting from the value at the port of safety the value of the salvage services.

Pacific Coast Co. v. Reynolds, 52 C. C. A. 497, 114 Fed. 877; The Abbie C. Stubbs, 28 Fed. 719; The Pine Forest, 64 C. C. A. 228, 129 Fed. 705; The Anna, 47 Fed. 525; Benedict, Admiralty, 4th ed. § 371.

The district court having, at the institution of appellant, adopted a point of time immediately after the collision as the termination of the voyage, which fact is therefore determined for this appeal, that is the point of time at which the value of the vessel and freight pending is to be fixed, and also the point of time when the liability to be limited must be ascertained.

The City of Norwich (Place v. Norwich & N. Y. Transp. Co.) 118 U. S. 468, 490, 30 L. ed. 134, 142, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1150; The Great Western, 118 U. S. 520, 30 L. ed. 156, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1172; The Doris Eckhoff, 30 Fed. 140; The Giles Loring, 48 Fed. 468; Re Meyer, 74 Fed. 881.

As the subsequent history of the wreck can only furnish evidence of its value at that point of time, — The City of Norwich (Place v. Norwich & N. Y. Transp. Co.) 118 U. S. 468, 30 L. ed. 134, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1150,—it unquestionably follows that the claim for salvage services rendered subsequent to this point of time is entirely without the contemplation of the provisions of U. S. Rev. Stat. §§ 4283, 4285, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 2943, 2944.

Mr. Justice Lurton delivered the opinion of the court:

In an independent libel proceeding instituted in the *district court by the [371 owner of the steamer George W. Elder, against the Metropolitan Lumber Company, the claimant of the steamer San Pedro, the libellant recovered a decree for services rendered in towing her to port after she had been injured in a collision with the steamer Columbia, off the coast of California. This decree was rendered at a time when there was pending in the same court a separate proceeding for limitation of liability, brought by the Metropolitan Lumber Company, as owner of the San Pedro.

Before coming to the substantial questions, we may notice certain objections to any judgment which shall operate to set aside the decree in favor of the appellees. It is said that the appellant does not assail the decree in respect to its merits or the amount of the allowance; that nothing but further delay, expense, and inconvenience will result if appellees are required to present and again prove the claim in the liability cause; and, finally, it is said that the pendency of the other suit was not pleaded until the case was about to be heard upon immaterial objections to the commissioner's report.

Conceding all that can be said about the expense, delay, and inconvenience which will result if the salvage claimants are to be required to present their claim in the limited-liability case, yet far greater confusion must result if such objections are enough to defeat the manifest object of the fifty-fourth rule. This court, in furtherance of the apparent purpose of Congress to limit the liability of vessel owners (Revised Statutes, §§ 4283-4285, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 2943, 2944), has, by that rule, prescribed how an owner may avail himself of the benefit of the statute. The very nature of the proceeding is such that it must be exclusive of any separate suit against an owner on account of the ship. The monition which issues when the vessel has been surrendered, and a stipulation entered into to pay the value into court, requires every person to assert his claim in that case.

*The appellant, owner of the San [372 Pedro, appears to have proceeded strictly in compliance with the fifty-fourth admiralty rule. There was a due appraisal of the San Pedro and her pending freight, and a stipulation entered into, with sureties, for the value so appraised, and monition duly issued, requiring all persons to present their claims and make proof. In that situation, the jurisdiction of the court to hear and determine every claim in that proceeding became exclusive. It was then the duty of every other court, Federal or state, to stop all further proceedings in separate suits upon claims to which the limited-liability act applied.

Nor is the issuance of an injunction necessary to stop proceedings in separate or independent suits upon such claims. Power to grant an injunction exists under § 4285, Revised Statutes, when necessary to maintain the exclusiveness of the jurisdiction; but when the procedure provided by rule 54 has been followed and a monition has issued "against all persons claiming damages . . . citing them to appear before said court and make proof of their respective claims," etc., it is the duty of every other court, when the pendency of such a liability petition is pleaded, to stop. The very nature of the proceeding and the monition has the effect of a statutory injunction. Indeed, that is the express declaration of the statute.

The view we take of the statutory injunction declared by § 4285, Revised Statutes, and of its application to cases where the vessel has been surrendered and a stipulation entered into, as provided by admiralty rule 54, as a proceeding tantamount to a "transfer" of the ship, as authorized by § 4285, Revised Statutes, is fully supported by the leading case of Providence & N. Y. S. S. Co. v. Hill Mfg. Co. 109 U. S. 578, 594, 599, 600 and 601, 27 L. ed. 1038, 1044, 1046, 1047, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 379, 617. That was a suit in a state court against the owner of a steamship to recover for goods lost by the burning of a steamer. While the suit was pending, the owner filed his petition *in the proper district court for the benefit of the limited-liability statute. The proceedings seem to have been conducted in accordance with admiralty rule 54, but, in addition, the petitioners made application, as permitted by that rule, for an order restraining the prosecution of "all and any suits" against the owner in respect of claims subject to the provisions of the act. The owner and defendant in the suit pending in the state court thereupon, by plea, set up the limited-liability suit as a reason why the state court should proceed no further. This was overruled. Later the defendant therein pleaded the final decree in the liability suit as a bar to any decree in the state court against him, as owner. This, too, was disregarded, and a decree rendered against the owner for the claim for damages caused by the burning of the steamer and the plaintiff's goods. This was affirmed in the supreme judicial court of Massachusetts, and brought here upon writ of error. After a consideration of the meaning and purpose of the limited-liability act of 1851 [9 Stat. at L. 635, chap. 43, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 2943, 2944], §§ 4283, 4284, and 4285, Revised Statutes, and of admiralty rule 54, the court said:
56 L. ed.

"We have deemed it proper to examine thus fully the foundation on which the rules adopted in December term, 1871, were based, because, if those rules are valid and binding (as we deem them to be), it is hardly possible to read them in connection with the act of 1851 without perceiving that after proceedings have been commenced in the proper district court in pursuance thereof, the prosecution pari passu of distinct suits in different courts, or even in the same court by separate claimants, against the shipowners, is, and must necessarily be, utterly repugnant to such proceedings, and subversive of their object and purpose."

Later, the court added:

"Proceedings under the act having been duly instituted in this court, it acquired full jurisdiction of the subject-*mat-[374 ter; and having taken such jurisdiction, and procured control of the vessel and freight (or their value), constituting the fund to be distributed, and issued its monition to all parties to appear and present their claims, it became the duty of all courts before which any of such claims were prosecuted, upon being properly certified of the proceedings, to suspend further action upon said claims."

"The operation of the act, in this behalf, cannot be regarded as confined to cases of actual 'transfer' (which is merely allowed as a sufficient compliance with the law), but must be regarded, when we consider its reason and equity and the whole scope of its provisions, as extending to cases in which what is required and done is tantamount to such transfer; as where the value of the owners' interest is paid into court, or secured by stipulation and placed under its control, for the benefit of the parties interested."

It was urged in that case that by virtue of § 720, Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 581), the district court had no authority to issue an injunction. But as to this, the court said:

"This view of the statutory injunction, and of its effect upon separate actions and proceedings, renders it unnecessary to determine the question as to the legality of the writ of injunction issued by the district court. Although we have little doubt of its legality, the question can only be properly raised on an application for an attachment for disobeying it. As the writ was issued prior to the adoption of the Revised Statutes, the power to issue it was not affected by any supposed change of the law introduced into the revision, by the 720th section of which the prohibition of the act of 1793 [1 Stat. at L. 334, chap. 22, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 581], in regard to injunctions against proceedings in state courts, has this exception appended to it: 'Except in cases where such injunction may be authorized by any law relating to proceedings in bankruptcy.' Under the rule of expressio unius this express exception may be urged as having the effect of excluding 375]*any other exception; though it is observable that the injunction clause in the act of 1851 is preserved without change in § 4285 of the Revised Statutes, and will probably be construed as having its original effect, due to its chronological relation to the act of 1793."

But after an intimation that § 720 did not apply, the court added:

"But, as before indicated, the legality of the writ of injunction is not involved in this case. In our opinion, the state court, in overruling the plea of the defendants, which set up the proceedings pending in the district court, and in ordering the cause to stand for trial, and again, on the trial, in overruling as a defense the proceedings and decree of the district court, as set up in the amended answer, disregarded the due effect, as well as the express provisions, of the act of 1851, and therein committed error. It was the duty of the court, as well when the proceedings pending in the district court were pleaded and verified by profert of the record as when the decree of said court was pleaded and proved, to have obeyed the injunction of the act of Congress, which declared that 'all claims and proceedings shall cease.'"

But it is contended that a salvage claim, such as the one here involved, is not a claim for "damages or injury by collision," within the meaning of § 4283, Revised Statutes, and therefore not one to which the limited-liability act applies; that the damages there referred to are damages by collision to other vessels and their cargo, and that the expense of being towed to port is a claim like one for repairs. It is also said that even if the vessel owners may be able to include what they must pay for such a service in the damages recoverable from the guilty vessel, it is, notwithstanding, not a damage arising from collision, within the meaning of that section.

But we need not consider whether the claim is one against the owner of the character described either in *§ 4283 or [376 the succeeding section, 4284. Those sections have been amended by the 18th section of the act of June 26, 1884 [23 Stat. at L. 57, chap. 121, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2945], so as to include "any or all debts and liabilities" of the owner, incurred on account of the ship, without his privity or fault. Richardson v. Harmon, 222 U. S. 96, ante, 110, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 27.

The service was rendered to the res, benefiting alike owner and creditors. The claim is therefore of a highly meritorious character. But the question of preference in payment out of the fund is one to be determined in the limited-liability case. We therefore express no opinion as to whether such a claim may be preferred or must share pro rata with others.

The court below erred in proceeding to render a decree after the pendency of the suit for a limitation of liability was pleaded.

Decree reversed and remanded with directions to dismiss the libel.

IRENE CUEBAS Y ARREDONDO, Appt.,
v.

FELIPE CUEBAS Y ARREDONDO.†

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 376-390.)

Courts — jurisdiction of Porto Rico district court — citizenship.

1. The jurisdiction of the district court of the United States for Porto Rico which, under the act of March 2, 1901 (31 Stat. at L. 953, chap. 812), § 3, extends to controversies where the parties or either of them are citizens of the United States, or citizens or subjects of a foreign state, does not embrace a suit to foreclose a mortgage in which one of the three defendants is a citizen of the United States, while the other

†Death of Felipe Cuebas y Arredondo suggested January 12, 1912. and appearance of Felipe R. Cuebas y Padilla et al., constituting the succession of Felipe Cuebas y Arredondo, as the parties appellee in this cause, filed and entered.

NOTE.—As to entry of judgment nunc pro tunc—see note to O'Sullivan v. People, 20 L.R.A. 143.

As to the right to enter judgment nunc pro tunc as of the date of rendition, so as to affect intervening rights of third persons—see note to Clark & L. Invest. Co. v. Rich, 15 L.R.A.(N.S.) 682.

two are citizens of Porto Rico, as is also the claimant.

[For other cases, see Courts, III. c, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Judgment — pro confesso — final decree.

2. An order taking pro confesso the bill in a foreclosure suit cannot serve as the basis of a final decree, where the bill shows on its face that the court was without jurisdiction when the pro confesso was taken.

[For other cases, see Judgment, 53-59, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Judgment — pro confesso — amendment of bill — final decree.

3. The subsequent amendment of a bill to foreclose a mortgage, taken pro confesso, so as to create a jurisdiction which had not theretofore existed, by dismissing the bill as to all but one of the defaulting defendants, and by striking out the prayer that any and every claim, interest, or encumbrance be forever barred and cut off, will not justify a final decree against the remaining defendant as of a date before his death, based upon the order pro confesso, but upon such amendment the court should set aside the default and give time to defend.

[For other cases, see Judgment, 53-59, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Judgment — nunc pro tunc.

4. A final decree nunc pro tunc cannot be entered in a foreclosure suit on a pro confesso order where there is no claim that a final decree in pursuance of the allegations of the bill had ever been directed, and, through inadvertence of court or counsel, omitted from entry.

[For other cases, see Judgment, 38-42, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Dismissal — when proper — revivor.

5. The bill in a foreclosure suit is properly dismissed where the complainant, after her claim to a final decree nunc pro tunc has been rightfully denied, makes no effort to revive the cause, though the defendant has been dead for some years.

[For other cases, see Dismissal and Discontinuance, II., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 159.]

Submitted January 24, 1912. Decided February 19, 1912.

A PPEAL from the District Court of the United States for Porto Rico to review a decree dismissing a bill to foreclose a mortgage. Affirmed.

See same case below, 5 Porto Rico Fed. Rep. 120.

Statement by Mr. Justice Lurton:

The appellant, asserting herself to be a citizen of the island of Porto Rico, filed this bill to foreclose a mortgage upon a plantation on the island, called "Carmelita." The defendants to the bill were three in number, namely, Cuebas y Arredondo, alleged to be a citizen of the United States, residing in Porto Rico, Francisco Antongiorgi, described as a citizen of and residing in Porto Rico, and El Banco Territorial y Agrícola, alleged to be a corporation organized under the laws of Spain, and a citizen thereof, doing business in the island of Porto Rico, with its principal place of business in the city of San Juan.

The averments as to the title and encumbrances upon the said plantation, [378 and the interests asserted by way of lien, or mortgage, by the defendants Antongiorgi and El Blanco Territorial, etc., hereafter referred to as the bank, are complex, and for the purposes of this case, upon the question now for decision, need not be stated otherwise than to say that the bill alleged that they "have or claim some interest in said mortgaged premises, or in some part thereof, as purchasers, mortgagees, or otherwise, the exact nature and extent of which interests are unknown to your orator, if any at all they have, but the same are inferior and subsequent to the lien of the mortgage of your orator and subject thereto."

Aside from the usual prayer for a decree declaring and enforcing the lien of the mortgage asserted by a sale, etc., the bill asked that "the defendants and all persons claiming under them subsequent to the commencement of this suit, and all other persons, although not parties to this suit, who have any liens or claims thereon by or under any such subsequent judgment or decree, either as purchaser, encumbrancer, or otherwise, may be barred and foreclosed of all equity of redemption in the said premises, and that your orator may have such other and further relief as the nature of the case may require, and as to this court may seem meet and agreeable to equity and good conscience."

The bill was filed April 6, 1904, in the district court of the United States for Porto Rico. On July 11, 1904, the three named defendants, though duly summoned to appear by a rule day named, and make their defense, made default, and the bill was on that day taken for confessed under equity rule 19 et seq.

In March, 1905, the bank was permitted to file its answer, in which it denied the equities of the bill, and asserted its own superior right under mortgages, judicial sale, and by estoppel.

In October, 1906, it was permitted to withdraw its answer, and file a plea to the jurisdiction. That plea was in these words, omitting the formal parts and conclusion:

"That this court ought not to further

"That this court ought not to further

"That this court ought not to further

take cognizance of the said bill of complaint, because this defendant says that at the time of the filing of the same the complainant herein was and still is a citizen of the island of Porto Rico, and resident of the same, and this defendant was and is a corporation organized and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of said island of Porto Rico, and was and is a citizen of the same, and each and all of the other defendants herein are citizens and residents of the said island of Porto Rico, and that therefore this is a suit by and between citizens and residents of the said island of Porto Rico, of which this court has no jurisdiction.

"That, as shown by the said bill of complaint, the jurisdiction of this court over and of this suit is sought to be maintained, not by reason of any Federal question being involved herein, but solely and only by reason of the alleged diverse citizenship of the parties herein and hereto, and that, as shown by the allegation of the said bill of complaint, the defendant is alleged to be a citizen of Spain, and another of the defendants, to wit, Felipe Cuebas y Arredondo, is alleged to be a citizen of the United States of America, and another of said defendants, to wit, Francisco Antongiorgi, is alleged to be a citizen of Porto Rico, and that therefore it affirmatively appears by the allegations of the said bill, if the same are true as therein alleged, that this is a case of which this court has not jurisdiction."

After first overruling this plea, for reasons set out in an opinion (5 Porto Rico Fed. Rep. 120), a rehearing was allowed and the plea sustained upon the ground that the bank was not a corporation of Spain, but one existing under the laws of Porto Rico, and a citizen of that island for jurisdictional purposes.

Prior to this action upon the plea of the 380]bank, the date *not appearing, the complainant voluntarily dismissed her bill as to Francisco Antongiorgi, whom the bill had averred to be a citizen of Porto Rico.

The judgment on the plea of the bank, above set out, was, that for lack of the requisite diversity of citizenship the bill should stand dismissed, "unless, within five days from this date, the bill can be amended so as to give the court jurisdiction."

Thereupon complainant entered an order, entitled: "Irene Cuebas y Arredondo vs. Felipe Cuebas y Arredondo et al.," which is in these words:

"Comes now the complainant above named, by her solicitors, F. L. Cornwell and N. B. K. Pettingill, and, in pursuance of the permission granted by the court in its order of the 7th day of June, 1909, conditionally dismissing said bill of complaint, hereby amend their said bill of complaint for the purpose of retaining jurisdiction in this court by dismissing the same as to said defendant El Banco Territorial y Agricola.

"And in order to make said bill of complaint conform to such dismissal, they hereby amend the same in the following particulars, to wit:

"1. By striking from the same the last four lines of the preliminary paragraph of said bill in which the parties thereto are stated.

"2. By striking out paragraph number 10 of said bill of complaint.

"3. By striking out the name of said El Banco Territorial y Agricola wherever the same appears in the prayer for relief and in the prayer for process contained in said bill.

"And said bill of complaint having been heretofore amended so as to dismiss one Francisco Antongiorgi as a defendant therein, and being now amended so as to dismiss the same as to said El Banco Territorial y Agricola, complainant hereby elects to proceed with the same as against the defendant Felipe Cuebas as sole defendant."

*Thereupon the complainant moved[381 the court for a final decree against the sole defendant Felipe Cuebas, "as of a date prior to the death of Felipe Cuebas, so as to avoid the necessity for reviving as against his succession," etc. This the court denied, and dismissed the bill.

From this decree an appeal has been prosecuted.

Messrs. N. B. K. Pettingill and Frederick L. Cornwell submitted the cause for appellant:

One foreigner or citizen of the United States as a party is sufficient to sustain jurisdiction.

One of the definitions of the word "either," given by Webster, is "one or another of any number;" and that definition is applied as its ordinary legal meaning in numerous decisions.

Lafey v. Campbell, 42 N. J. Eq. 34, 6 Atl. 300; Messer v. Jones, 88 Me. 349, 34 Atl. 177; Ft. Worth Street R. Co. v. Rosedale Street R. Co. 68 Tex. 169, 4 S. W. 534; Dew v. Barnes, 54 N. C. 149; Graham v. Graham, 23 W. Va. 43, 48 Am. Rep. 364; People ex rel. McKeever v. Willis, 6 App. Div. 231, 39 N. Y. Supp. 987.

The word "parties" is used in its sense of ordinary legal acceptation, analogous to its use in such phrases as "necessary parties," "indispensable parties," "parties litigant," etc. There is nothing to show that Congress intended to use the word in any technical or restricted sense.

As the object of the amendment was to enlarge the jurisdiction, it should be liberally construed for that purpose.

Garrozi v. Dastas, 204 U. S. 73, 51 L. ed. 376, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224.

A complainant after an order pro confesso is entitled, without the production of supporting proof, to such a decree as is warranted by the allegations of his bill.

Thomson v. Wooster, 114 U. S. 104, 29 L. ed. 105, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 788; Ohio C. R. Co. v. Central Trust Co. 133 U. S. 83, 90, 33 L. ed. 561, 563, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 235.

Upon the death of a party defendant during the progress of a cause the court may, upon request of complainant, enter its final decree nunc pro tunc as of a date prior to such death, so as to avoid the necessity of proceedings for revivor.

Mitchell v. Overman, 103 U. S. 62, 26 L. ed. 369; New Orleans v. Gaines (New Orleans v. Whitney) 138 U. S. 595, 612, 34 L. ed. 1102, 1108, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 428; Campbell v. Mesier, 4 Johns. Ch. 342, 8 Am. Dec. 570.

These decisions are particularly applicable here because an earlier application for a final decree against the one defendant who had defaulted was prevented by the continued contest with the other defendant, the bank.

Frow v. De La Vega, 15 Wall. 552, 21 L. ed. 60.

No brief was filed for appellee.

Messrs. F. Kingsbury Curtis and Henry A. Stickney, as amici curiæ, filed a brief on behalf of El Banco Territorial y Agrícola.

Mr. Justice Lurton, after stating the facts as above, delivered the opinion of the court:

The bank is not a party to this appeal. The appellant has elected to dismiss her bill, both as to it and the other Porto Rican defendant, Antongiorgi, for the express purpose of creating jurisdiction of a suit between complainant, a citizen of the island of Porto Rico, and the remaining original defendant, Felipe Cuebas, a citizen of the United States. Her bill, as amended, contains no reference to the bank, or even of its existence. It was the bill, as thus amended, which was dismissed by the court. We mention this because two of the errors assigned and argued in the brief of counsel for appellant relate to the action of the court, first, in holding that the bank was in law a citizen of Porto Rico, and, second, in holding that, that being so, the jurisdiction of the court to maintain the suit, with 56 L. ed.

citizens of Porto Rico on both sides of the case, would be defeated. The action of the court in respect to the matter first mentioned is not here for review, and the other only in so far as it may become necessary to deal with it for the purpose of determining the force and effect to be given to the decree pro confesso against Felipe Cuebas.

It was not error in the situation of this case to deny a final decree against the succession of Felipe Cuebas upon the foundation of the pro confesso order made on a rule day five years theretofore. When that pro confesso was *taken against Cuebas, [386 the suit was one of which the district court had no cognizance. The sole complainant was a citizen of Porto Rico, and Cuebas was a citizen of the United States, and therefore subject to be sued in that court by the complainant, if the citizenship of the other persons on the same side was such as not to defeat jurisdiction. But that was not the case. One of them, Francisco Antongiorgi, was alleged in the bill to be a citizen of the island of Porto Rico. The other defendant, the bank, was averred to be a corporation organized under the laws of Spain, and a citizen thereof. But later, as we have already stated, the bank's plea that it was a corporation under the laws of Porto Rico and a citizen of Porto Rico was sustained. The case was, then, one which, upon the face of the bill, showed that one of the defendants had a citizenship common with that of the complainant, and later it turned out that a second had a like citizenship.

It is not and cannot be claimed that the complainant's bill asserted any right, title, or claim arising under the laws or Constitution of the United States. If, therefore, the district court had jurisdiction, it must depend upon diversity of citizenship alone.

It is claimed that the fact that one of the three defendants was a citizen of the United States conferred jurisdiction, although the other two were Porto Ricans, with a citizenship identical with that of the complainant. That this would not have been so under the Foraker act of 1900 [31 Stat. at L. 77, chap. 191], is conceded. That act gave to the district court for Porto Rico the jurisdiction of the United States district courts, and added to that the jurisdiction of cases cognizable in circuit courts of the United States. The contention is that this extraordinary stretch of jurisdiction is conferred by the 3d section of the act of March 2, 1901, 31 Stat. at L. 953, chap. 812. That section reads as follows:

*"That the jurisdiction of the dis-[387 trict court of the United States for Porto Rico in civil cases shall, in addition to that conferred by the act of April twelfth, nineteen hundred, extend to and embrace controversies where the parties, or either of them, are citizens of the United States, or citizens or subjects of a foreign state or states, wherein the matter in dispute exceeds, exclusive of interest or costs, the sum or value of one thousand dollars."

Shortly stated, the construction placed upon this section is, that the word "parties" is not used collectively, meaning all of the litigants on the one side or the other, but is intended as if the word "litigants" had been used, and that the words "or either of them" mean "any of them," and that the jurisdiction conferred embraces all controversies in which any litigant on either side is a citizen of the United States or a subject of a foreign country.

The construction contended for is out of accord with that placed upon the act in Vallecillo Mandry v. Bertran, 2 Porto Rico Fed. Rep. 46,—a construction constantly adhered to by the court below since 1906. It is also a construction out of harmony with a long line of decisions of this court, construing the jurisdictional clauses in the various statutes dealing with the question of jurisdiction dependent upon diversity of citizenship. The first of the decisions referred to involved the meaning of the clause in the judiciary act of 1789 [1 Stat at L. 78, chap. 20], conferring jurisdiction over controversies "where an alien is a party, or the suit is between a citizen of a state where the suit is brought and a citizen of another state." The question arose in Strawbridge v. Curtiss, 3 Cranch, 267, 2 L. ed. 435, whether it was essential to jurisdiction that all of the parties on one side should have a citizenship different from that of all of the parties on the other. In that case the complainants were citizens of Massachusetts and some of the defendants were citizens of the same state. But one of the 388]defendants was a citizen *of Vermont and this fact was claimed to give jurisdiction. To this, the court, by Chief Justice Marshall, said:

"The court understands these expressions to mean that each distinct interest should be represented by persons, all of whom are entitled to sue, or may be sued, in the Federal courts. That is, that where the interest is joint, each of the persons concerned in that interest must be competent to sue, or liable to be sued, in those courts."

This construction of that clause and of like words in later statutes, concerning jurisdiction dependent upon diversity of citizenship, has been followed in many cases among them being Susquehanna & W. Valley R. & Coal Co. v. Blatchford, 11 Wall. 172, 20 L. ed. 179, and Smith v. Lyon, 133 480

U. S. 315, 33 L. ed. 635, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 303. In the case first referred to, Mr. Justice Field stated the matter in words quite as applicable here, by saying: "If there are several coplaintiffs, the intention of the act is that each plaintiff must be competent to sue, and if there are several codefendants, each defendant must be liable to be sued, or the jurisdiction cannot be entertained."

In view of these decisions we should be slow to conclude that Congress intended any other rule as to the arrangement of the parties where diversity of citizenship is the basis of jurisdiction than that laid down in construing like statutes upon the same subject. The contention that from the evident intention of Congress to enlarge the jurisdiction of the court we should infer an intent to confer jurisdiction to the extent claimed is without merit. Congress, in very plain words, did extend the jurisdiction, first, by cutting down the necessary jurisdictional amount to $1,000, and second, by dispensing with diversity of state citizenship. United States citizenship is substituted for diverse state citizenship.

We therefore conclude that the court had no jurisdiction of this cause when the pro confesso order was entered against Felipe Cuebas.

*The final decree following a pro[389 confesso order is only such a decree as would be authorized by the state of the pleadings when the order was entered. Frow v. De La Vega, 15 Wall. 552, 21 L. ed. 60; Dan. Ch. Pl. & Pr. 5th ed. pp. 525-528, and notes; Simmonds v. Palles, 2 Jones & L. 489, 8 Ir. Eq. Rep. 335; Hardwick v. Bassett, 25 Mich. 149; McDonald v. Mobile L. Ins. Co. 6 Ala. 468. If the bill was fatally defective upon its face, showing that the court had no jurisdiction, it was error to allow a pro confesso, and upon the court's attention being called to it, it should have vacated the order and allowed the defaulting defendant to defend. Nelson v. Eaton, 13 C. C. A. 523, 27 U. S. App. 677, 66 Fed. 376; Blythe v. Hineckley, 84 Fed. 228, 244; Eldred v. American Palace Car Co. 103 Fed. 209.

That the bill was subsequently amended so as to confer jurisdiction against Cuebas as a sole defendant, by dismissing the bill against the other two defendants, and striking out the prayer of the bill that any and every claim, interest, or encumbrance be forever barred and cut off, did not justify a decree based upon the order pro confesso made prior thereto. Upon such amendment being made, so completely changing the character of the bill, creating a jurisdiction which had not theretofore existed, the court should have set aside the default and given time to defend.

But the allowance of a final decree nunc

pro tunc would have been still more inadmissible. Cuebas had been then dead for, apparently, some years. There had been no revivor. If there had been, his representatives would doubtless have moved to vacate the pro confesso decree upon the ground suggested, and it would have been error to have denied that motion. The motion to enter a decree as of a day before his death would, if allowed, have been fruitless, for it would bear a date antecedent to the acquirement of jurisdiction, and therefore erroneous, if of any validity.

390] *But no decree nunc pro tunc was admissible. Such a decree presupposes a decree allowed, or ordered, but not entered, through inadvertence of the court; or a decree in a cause which is under advisement when the death of a party occurs. Mitchell v. Overman, 103 U. S. 62, 26 L. ed. 369. There is no claim that a final decree in pursuance of the allegations of the bill had ever been directed, and, through inadvertence of either court or counsel, omitted from entry. There was therefore no authority for a decree nunc pro tunc upon any known ground of equity procedure. Gray v. Brignardello, 1 Wall. 627, 17 L. ed. 693.

No effort to revive the cause against the succession of Cuebas was at any time made. The complainant stood upon her right to a final decree nunc pro tunc. When this was denied she still made no effort to revive the cause, though Cuebas had been dead a long time. It was not error in such circumstances to dismiss the bill.

Decree affirmed.

CITY OF CINCINNATI, Plff. in Err.,
v.
LOUISVILLE & NASHVILLE RAILROAD COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 390-407.)

States — admission — supersedure of ordinance of 1787.

1. The power of eminent domain possessed by the state of Ohio was not restricted in any way after its admission to the Union, by the provisions of the 2d article of the ordinance of 1787, for the government of the Northwest territory, relating to that subject.

[For other cases, see States, 373-379, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

NOTE.—As to what laws are void as impairing obligation of contracts—see notes to Franklin County Grammar School v. Bailey, 10 L.R.A. 405; Fletcher v. Peck, 3 L. ed. U. S. 162; McCanna & F. Co. v. Citizens Trust & Surety Co. 24 C. C. A. 20; and Montana Ore-Purchasing Co. v. Boston & M. Consol. Copper & S. Min. Co. 35 C. C. A. 12.

56 L. ed.

Territories — powers — eminent domain.

2. A limitation upon the general power of eminent domain assumed to exist, and not a grant of the power itself, is what was intended by the provisions of article 2 of the ordinance of 1787 for the government of the Northwest territory, that, "should the public exigencies make it necessary, for the common preservation, to take any person's property, or to demand his particular services, full compensation shall be made for the same."

[For other cases, see Territories, 26-35, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — impairing contract obligations — eminent domain.

3. The obligations of a contract by which a river front strip at Cincinnati was dedicated to the public use were not impaired by the condemnation, conformably to Ohio Rev. Stat. § 3283a, of a right of way for an elevated railroad track across such strip, even assuming that there is to be read into the contract the then-existing law of eminent domain, including the provisions of article 2 of the ordinance of 1787 for the government of the Northwest territory, that "should the public exigencies make it necessary, for the common preservation, to take any person's property, or to demand his particular service, full compensation shall be made for the same."

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 1309-1313, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 385.]

Submitted January 9, 1912. Decided February 19, 1912.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Ohio to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Circuit Court of Hamilton County, in that state, affirming a decree of the Court of Common Pleas of that county, dismissing a suit to enjoin proceedings to condemn an easement across a public landing. Affirmed.

See same case below, 82 Ohio St. 466, 92 N. E. 1111.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Edward M. Ballard and Albert Bettinger submitted the cause for plaintiff in error:

The dedication of the public landing is a contract.

The law of eminent domain only as it existed at the time of the dedication, like all other laws then existing, was read into the contract of dedication.

West River Bridge Co. v. Dix, 6 How. 507, 12 L. ed. 535; Richmond, F. & P. R. Co. v. Louisa R. Co. 13 How. 71, 82, 14 L. ed. 55, 60; Charles River Bridge v. Warren Bridge, 11 Pet. 420, 9 L. ed. 773; Long Island Water Supply Co. v. Brooklyn, 166 U. S. 685, 41 L. ed. 1165, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep.

718; Offield v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 203 U. S. 372, 51 L. ed. 231, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 72; Von Hoffman v. Quincy, 4 Wall. 535, 18 L. ed. 403; Smith v. Parsons, 1 Ohio, 240, 13 Am. Dec. 608; Goodale v. Fennell, 27 Ohio St. 426, 22 Am. Rep. 321; Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. 122, 4 L. ed. 529; Green v. Biddle, 8 Wheat. 1, 5 L. ed. 547.

Constitutional provisions, equally with legislative enactments, come within the inhibition against the impairment of contractual obligations.

Mississippi & M. R. Co. v. McClure, 10 Wall. 511, 515, 19 L. ed. 997, 998; Shreveport v. Cole, 129 U. S. 36, 42, 32 L. ed. 589, 591, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 210; Gunn v. Barry, 15 Wall. 610, 623, 21 L. ed. 212, 215; Fisk v. Jefferson, 116 U. S. 131, 135, 29 L. ed. 587, 588, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 329; Clay County v. Society for Savings, 104 U. S. 579, 26 L. ed. 856; Dodge v. Woolsey, 18 How. 331, 15 L. ed. 401; Matheny v. Golden, 5 Ohio St. 369.

The inhibition against the impairment of contractual obligations is found in all the fundamental laws of the country from the beginning, and is absolute.

Bank of Toledo v. Toledo, 1 Ohio St. 687.

Ohio, in order to be admitted on an equal footing with the original states, need not be possessed of the same power of eminent domain as each of those states.

Matheny v. Golden, 5 Ohio St. 369; Case v. Loftus, 5 L.R.A. 684, 14 Sawy. 213, 39 Fed. 732; State v. Boone, 84 Ohio St. 359, — L.R.A.(N.S.) —, 95 N. E. 924; Spooner v. McConnell, 1 McLean, 337, Fed. Cas. No. 13,245.

The state might alter or abridge the power of eminent domain by a change in the Constitution.

Bank of Toledo v. Toledo, 1 Ohio St. 623.

Any subsequent enlargement would be within the constitutional inhibition.

Dodge v. Woolsey, 18 How. 331, 15 L. ed. 401; Graham v. Folsom, 200 U. S. 248, 50 L. ed. 464, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 245.

The only power of eminent domain in the Northwest territory under the ordinance of 1787 was where the public exigencies made it necessary for the common preservation.

Luxton v. North River Bridge Co. 153 U. S. 525, 38 L. ed. 808, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 891; Chappell v. United States, 160 U. S. 499, 40 L. ed. 510, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 397; Van Brocklin v. Tennessee (Van Brocklin v. Anderson) 117 U. S. 151, 29 L. ed. 845, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 670; United States v. Gettysburg Electric R. Co. 160 U. S. 668, 40 L. ed. 576, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427.

The power of eminent domain was not conferred by the provision that "no man shall be deprived of his liberty or property but by the judgment of his peers or the law of the land."

Den ex dem. Murray v. Hoboken Land & Improv. Co. 18 How. 272, 276, 15 L. ed. 372, 374; Hagar v. Reclamation Dist. No. 108, 111 U. S. 701, 708, 28 L. ed. 569, 572, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 663; Turpin v. Lemon, 187 U. S. 51, 58, 47 L. ed. 70, 74, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 20; Hurtado v. California, 110 U. S. 516, 537, 28 L. ed. 232, 239, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111, 292; Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. 518, 581, 4 L. ed. 629, 645; Newcomb v. Smith, 1 Chand. (Wis.) 71.

The Federal government did not acquire the power of eminent domain by virtue of the 5th Amendment to the Federal Constitution.

Mississippi & R. River Boom Co. v. Patterson, 98 U. S. 403, 25 L. ed. 206; United States v. Jones, 109 U. S. 513, 27 L. ed. 1015, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 346.

Messrs. J. B. Foraker and Ellis G. Kinkead submitted the cause for defendant in error:

Under the ordinance of 1787 there was conferred upon the territorial legislature the power of eminent domain.

Giesy v. Cincinnati, W. & Z. R. Co. 4 Ohio St. 308; Willyard v. Hamilton, 7 Ohio pt. 2, p. 116, 30 Am. Dec. 195.

Whatever limitations the ordinance contained upon the exercise by the territorial legislature of the power of eminent domain, they became of no effect upon the organization and admission of the state of Ohio into the Union.

Long Island Water Supply Co. v. Brooklyn, 166 U. S. 685, 41 L. ed. 1165, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 718; Offield v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 203 U. S. 372, 382, 51 L. ed. 231, 238, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 72; Charles River Bridge v. Warren Bridge, 11 Pet. 420, 582, 9 L. ed. 773, 838; Escanaba & L. M. Transp. Co. v. Chicago, 107 U. S. 678, 27 L. ed. 442, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 185; Huse v. Glover, 119 U. S. 543, 546, 30 L. ed. 487, 489, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 313; Sands v. Manistee River Improv. Co. 123 U. S. 288, 31 L. ed. 149, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 113; Hamilton v. Vicksburg, S. & P. R. Co. 119 U. S. 280, 284, 30 L. ed. 393, 395, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 206; Cardwell v. American River Bridge Co. 113 U. S. 205, 210, 212, 28 L. ed. 959, 961, 962, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 423; Ward v. Race Horse, 163 U. S. 504, 41 L. ed. 244, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1076; Coyle v. Smith, 221 U. S. 559, 55 L. ed. 853, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 688.

Mr. Justice Lurton delivered the opinion of the court:

Under an act of the legislature of the state of Ohio of May 9, 1908, being § 3283a, and an ordinance of the city of Cincinnati in pursuance of that act, the defendant railroad company instituted, in a court of the state of Ohio, a suit to condemn a right of way for an elevated railroad track across the public landing at Cincinnati. Pending the condemnation proceeding the city of Cincinnati filed a bill in one of the common pleas courts to enjoin the railroad company from constructing its railway across said public landing, in pursuance of its agreement and contract with the city under the ordinance mentioned, and to restrain the prosecution of its pending petition for the condemnation of an easement of way across the landing. The ground upon which it was sought to stop the condemnation proceeding and prevent the company from constructing its elevated tracks across the public landing was that § 3283a, Revised Statutes of Ohio, under which alone an easement of way might be appropriated, was repugnant to article 1, § 10 of the Constitution of the United States, forbidding any state to pass any law impairing the obligation of a contract, in so far as § 3283a applied to the particular property across which an easement of way was sought to be appropriated.

That section, so far as necessary to be here stated, provides that upon compliance 399] therewith any railroad *company owning or operating a railroad wholly or partially within the state might "use and occupy for an elevated track any portion of any public ground lying within the limits of a municipality and dedicated to the public for use as a public ground, common, landing, or wharf, or for any other public purpose," excepting streets, alleys, and public roads. It is provided that before instituting a proceeding for the appropriation of the needed easement, which is to be according to a general statute referred to, such company shall submit plans for the structure, and come to an agreement with the city council of the municipality concerned, as to the terms and conditions upon which the easement shall be occupied.

The proprietors of the grant of land upon which the city of Cincinnati was originally laid out made a plan or plat of the proposed town, according to which plan a strip of ground between Front street and the Ohio river was set apart "as a common for the use and benefit of the town forever." The effect of the sale of the town lots under this plan has long since been held to constitute a dedication of the river front strip to the public use, and to have vested in the city of Cincinnati a valid title in trust for the public use in the same manner that streets were held under the same plat or plan. Cincinnati v. White, 6 Pet. 431, 8 L. ed. 452. This dedication was made in 1789, and the property has ever since been used as a public landing or wharf.

A demurrer to the petition was sustained by the court of common pleas, and the bill dismissed. This was affirmed upon appeal to the circuit court, and again affirmed upon appeal to the supreme court of the state.

That the dedication in 1789, and acceptance by the then town of Cincinnati, constitute a contract with the dedicators, obligatory upon the town and its successor, the city of Cincinnati, may be conceded. The contention is that the Ohio act of May 9, 1908, now § 3283a, *Revised[400 Statutes of Ohio, is an impairment of the contract, forbidden by the 10th section of the first article of the Constitution of the United States. But the right of every state to authorize the appropriation of every description of property for a public use is one of those inherent powers which belong to state governments, without which they could not well perform their great functions. It is a power not surrendered to the United States, and is untouched by any of the provisions of the Federal Constitution, provided there be due process of law; that is, a law authorizing it, and provision made for compensation. This power extends to tangibles and intangibles alike. A chose in action, a charter, or any kind of contract, are, along with land and movables, within the sweep of this sovereign authority.

The constitutional inhibition upon any state law impairing the obligation of contracts is not a limitation upon the power of eminent domain. The obligation of a contract is not impaired when it is appropriated to a public use and compensation made therefor. Such an exertion of power neither challenges its validity nor impairs its obligation. Both are recognized, for it is appropriated as an existing, enforceable contract. It is a taking, not an impairment of its obligation. If compensation be made, no constitutional right is violated. All of this has been so long settled as to need only the citation of some of the many cases. Charles River Bridge v. Warren Bridge, 11 Pet. 420, 9 L. ed. 773; West River Bridge Co. v. Dix, 6 How. 507, 12 L. ed. 535; New Orleans Gaslight Co. v. Louisiana Light & H. P. & Mfg. Co. 115 U. S. 650, 29 L. ed. 516, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 252; Long Island Water Supply Co. v. Brooklyn, 166 U. S. 685, 41 L. ed. 1165.

17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 718; Offield v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 203 U. S. 372, 51 L. ed. 231, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 72.

Every contract, whether between the state and an individual, or between individuals only, is subject to this general law. There enters into every engagement the unwritten condition that it is subordinate to the right of appropriation to a public use. *West River Bridge Co. v. Dix, 6 How. 507, 12 L. ed. 535; Long Island Water Supply Co. v. Brooklyn, 166 U. S. 691, 692, 41 L. ed. 1167, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 718.

These general propositions are not challenged.

But it is said that the right of appropriating private property to a public use possessed by the state of Ohio is only that which is defined and limited by the second article of the ordinance of 1787, creating a government for the Northwest territory, which embraced the territory which later became the state of Ohio. That ordinance, after providing for a territorial government, declares certain political principles to be fundamental, and that they should constitute the "basis of all laws, constitutions, and governments," thereafter organized out of that territory, and should be regarded as "articles of compact between the original states and the people and states in the said territory, and be unalterable unless by common consent." The article referred to, and claimed now to be still obligatory, is in these words:

"No man shall be deprived of his liberty or property, but by the judgment of his peers, or the law of the land; and should the public exigencies make it necessary, for the common preservation, to take any person's property, or to demand his particular services, full compensation shall be made for the same."

But the ordinance of 1787, as an instrument limiting the powers of government of the Northwest territory, and declaratory of certain fundamental principles which must find place in the organic law of states to be carved out of that territory, ceased to be, in itself, obligatory upon such states from and after their admission into the Union as states, except in so far as adopted by such states and made a part of the law thereof. This has been the view of this court, so often announced as to need no further argument. Pollard v. Hagan, 3 How. 212, 11 L. ed. 565; Permoli v. New Orleans, 3 How. 589, 11 L. ed. 739; Escanaba & L. M. Transp. Co. v. Chicago, 107 U. S. 678, 688, 27 L. ed. 442, 446, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 185.

402] In the Escanaba & L. M. Transp. Co. Case*, it was said:

"Whatever the limitation upon her powers as a government whilst in a territorial condition, whether from the ordinance of 1787 or the legislation of Congress, it ceased to have any operative force, except as voluntarily adopted by her, after she became a state of the Union. On her admission she at once became entitled to and possessed of all the rights of dominion and sovereignty which belonged to the original states. She was admitted, and could be admitted, only on the same footing with them. The language of the resolution admitting her is, 'on an equal footing with the original states, in all respects whatever.' 3 Stat. at L. 536. Equality of constitutional right and power is the condition of all the states of the Union, old and new. Illinois, therefore, as was well observed by counsel, could afterwards exercise the same power over rivers within her limits that Delaware exercised over Black Bird creek, and Pennsylvania over the Schuylkill river."

In Coyle v. Smith, 221 U. S. 559, 55 L. ed. 853, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 688, the case of Escanaba & L. M. Transp. Co. v. Chicago, and the cases cited therein, were fully reviewed and held applicable to conditions imposed by Congress in the enabling act under which Oklahoma was admitted, and all limitations in that act were held inoperative after admission, in so far as they had not been subsequently adopted by the state, and were in derogation of the equality in power of that state with the other states of the Union.

It is next contended that whether the provisions of article 2 now constitute the irrevocable fundamental law of Ohio or not, that that provision was the only law of eminent domain existing in 1789, and as such is to be regarded as read into the contract of dedication, and, therefore, is the only power of eminent domain to which that contract was subordinate. Upon this hypothesis is based the contention that any subsequent law of Ohio authorizing a taking of this property for a purpose or use not within the terms of the ordinance of 1787 is a law impairing the obligation of a contract.

But the assumption that the power of eminent domain possessed by the Northwest territory in 1787 was limited as claimed is untenable. The clause referred to assumes the existence of a general power of eminent domain in the government, and provides that when exerted there must be full compensation for the property taken or the services required. That this is so is apparent not only from the language of the clause, but from a general consideration of the purpose and object of the congressional act in which the article appears. The ordinance of 1787 was a law providing for the government of the territory of the United States northwest of the River Ohio. It provided for the appointment of a governor and secretary and for the appointment of judges and the organization of courts with common-law jurisdiction. To the governor and judges was granted legislative power to adopt and publish such laws of the original states as should seem to be adapted to the conditions, which were to be and remain in force unless disapproved by Congress. Authority to elect a legislature was conferred when there should be five thousand inhabitants.

Upon this article 2, heretofore set out, is claimed to be a contractual limitation, based upon the contract of dedication, by which this particular strip of river front is forever protected against an exercise of the power of eminent domain by the state of Ohio, except where "the public exigency makes it necessary for the common preservation." If we assume, for argument, that an affirmative limitation upon the right of appropriating property to any public purpose would so enter into any contract as to forever afterwards bind the hands of the state, no such situation is here presented. Article 2 is not a grant of power, but a limitation upon the power of eminent domain assumed to exist. It was conferred 404] upon the governor and judges *by the power to adopt and publish the laws of any original state deemed appropriate, and by the second section there was conferred upon the governor and legislature, when organized, "authority to make laws in all cases . . . not repugnant to the principles and articles in this ordinance established and declared." This legislative power, temporarily in the governor and a majority of the judges, and then in the governor and the legislature, when organized, included, by necessary implication, the general power to provide for the appropriation of private property for public purposes. If this is not the case, then the ordinance granted no power of that kind whatever, for the clause above cited is obviously a mere restriction by which compensation is required.

This right of appropriating private property to a public use is one of the powers vital to the public welfare of every self-governing community. It is a power which this court has described as an "incident to sovereignty,"—a power which "belongs to every independent government." In United States v. Jones, 109 U. S. 518, 27 L. ed. 1017, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 346, it was said:

"The provision found in the 5th Amendment to the Federal Constitution and in the Constitutions of the several states, for just 56 L. ed.

compensation for the property taken, is merely a limitation upon the use of the power. It is no part of the power itself, but a condition upon which the power may be exercised. It is undoubtedly true that the power of appropriating private property to public uses, vested in the general government,—its right of eminent domain, which Vattel defines to be the right of disposing, in case of necessity and for the public safety, of all the wealth of the country,—cannot be transferred to a state any more than its other sovereign attributes; and that, when the use to which the property taken is applied is public, the propriety or expediency of the appropriation cannot be called in question by any other authority."

That the Northwest territory was not a state, but a *mere territorial depend- [405 ency, is of no consequence. The United States was an independent sovereign, and when it created a territorial government with legislative authority subject only to the limitations of the creating act, it granted to this new dependent government this vital power unless it plainly appears that it was withheld.

The denial of such a power to this new government intended as the forerunner of a group of states west of the Ohio, or its restriction to purposes of necessary defense only, as plaintiff in error would construe the language of the article above set out, is not to be easily or lightly presumed. The power was one necessary to the work which this pioneer community was set on doing. It was a power well nigh as essential to the existence of the government as the taxing power. The language of Chief Justice Taney in the Charles River Bridge Case, 11 Pet. 421, 547, 9 L. ed. 774, 824, when speaking of a contention that the state of Massachusetts had surrendered the power, by granting a charter for the construction of a particular bridge, to appropriate that bridge so authorized, is apt and appropriate, when we are asked to construe the ordinance of 1787 as denying to the government of the Northwest territory a power so important to the welfare of its people. Upon this he said:

"But the object and end of all government is to promote the happiness and prosperity of the community by which it is established; and it can never be assumed that the government intended to diminish its power of accomplishing the end for which it was created. And in a country like ours, free, active, and enterprising, continually advancing in numbers and wealth, new channels of communication are daily found necessary, both for travel and trade, and are essential to the comfort, convenience, and prosperity of the people. A state ought never to be presumed to surrender this power, because, like the taxing power, the whole community have an interest in preserving *it undiminished. And when a corporation alleges that a state has surrendered, for seventy years, its power of improvement and public accommodation in a great and important line of travel, along which a vast number of its citizens must daily pass, the community have a right to insist, in the language of this court, above quoted, 'that its abandonment ought not to be presumed in a case in which the deliberate purpose of the state to abandon it does not appear.' The continued existence of a government would be of no great value if, by implications and presumptions, it was disarmed of the powers necessary to accomplish the ends of its creation, and the functions it was designed to perform transferred to the hands of privileged corporations. The rule of construction announced by the court was not confined to the taxing power, nor is it so limited in the opinion delivered. On the contrary, it was distinctly placed on the ground that the interests of the community were concerned in preserving, undiminished, the power then in question; and whenever any power of the state is said to be surrendered or diminished, whether it be the taxing power or any other affecting the public interest, the same principle applies and the rule of construction must be the same."

Nor should the particular language of the article above set out be given a narrow or hypercritical meaning. The plain purpose was but to limit the general right of eminent domain by the requirement that compensation should be made. A public "exigency" exists, for the "common preservation," when the legislature declares that for a bona fide public purpose there should be a right of way for a common carrier across a particular piece of property. The uses to which § 3283a authorizes a condemnation of a right of way are undeniably public, and not private, uses. When that is the case, "the propriety or expediency of the appropriation cannot be called in question by any other authority." United States v. Jones, 109 U. S. 519, 27 L. ed. 1017, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 346.

407] *It follows, then, first, that the legislative power of the state of Ohio was not restricted in any way by the provisions of the second article of the ordinance of 1787 after its admission to the Union, and it has every power of eminent domain which pertains to other states, unless limited by its own Constitution; and, second, that if the law of eminent domain as it existed at the time of the dedication is to be read into the contract, that that law, properly interpreted, was not such as to forbid an appropriation such as is here involved.

The judgment of the Supreme Court of Ohio must therefore be affirmed.

UNITED STATES, Petitioner,

v.

BERNARD CITROEN.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 407-424.)

Duties — on drilled pearls — similitude clause.

Loose drilled pearls, unset and unstrung, however carefully matched or desirable for a necklace, are dutiable at 10 per cent ad valorem under the tariff act of July 24, 1897 (30 Stat. at L. 151, 192, chap. 11, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 1626, 1676), ¶436, as "pearls in their natural state, not strung or set," and are not classifiable by similitude as jewelry, including "pearls set or strung," dutiable under ¶ 434 at 60 per cent ad valorem, because at some time, or from time to time previous to importation, such pearls had been strung temporarily for purposes of display.

[For other cases, see Duties, 84-88, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 30.]

Argued November 1, 1911. Decided February 19, 1912.

ON WRIT of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit to review a judgment which reversed a judgment of the Circuit Court for the Southern District of New York, reversing a decision of the board of general appraisers, which had sustained the importer's protest against classifying loose drilled pearls by similitude as pearls set or strung. Affirmed.

See same case below, 92 C. C. A. 365, 166 Fed. 693.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Assistant to the Attorney General Fowler argued the cause and filed a brief for petitioner:

The circuit court of appeals improperly adopted as the facts the findings of the board of general appraisers.

Apgar v. United States, 24 C. C. A. 113, 46 U. S. App. 625, 78 Fed. 332.

The decision of the circuit court of appeals conflicts with the well-recognized rule laid down in other cases for the assessment of duties upon pearls.

Tiffany v. United States, 103 Fed. 619, 105 Fed. 766; Neresheimer v. United States, 131 Fed. 977.

When an article is separated into its component parts, which parts are imported separately, they are assessable for duty as if the article were imported as a whole.

United States v. Schoverling, 146 U. S. 76, 36 L. ed. 893, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 24; United States v. Irwin, 24 C. C. A. 349, 45 U. S. App. 746, 78 Fed. 799; Isaacs v. Jonas, 148 U. S. 648, 37 L. ed. 596, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 677; Read v. Certain Merchandise, 43 C. C. A. 178, 103 Fed. 197; MacMillan Co. v. United States, 116 Fed. 1018.

The right of an importer so to manufacture his goods as to reduce the rate of duty extends only to its manufacture, and does not permit him to change its character after manufacture in order to avoid a higher rate of duty.

Merritt v. Welsh, 104 U. S. 694, 700, 701, 705, 26 L. ed. 896, 898, 899; Seeberger v. Farwell, 139 U. S. 608, 35 L. ed. 297, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 650; A. A. Vantine & Co. v. United States, 155 Fed. 149; Falk v. Robertson, 137 U. S. 225, 34 L. ed. 645, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 41; Seeberger v. Schlesinger, 152 U. S. 581, 587, 38 L. ed. 560, 562, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 729.

Mr. W. Wickham Smith argued the cause, and, with Mr. John K. Maxwell, filed a brief for respondent:

The circuit court of appeals did not pursue any improper method with regard to the findings of the board of general appraisers.

Gabriel v. United States, 59 C. C. A. 352, 123 Fed. 296; White v. United States, 18 C. C. A. 541, 38 U. S. App. 239, 72 Fed. 251; Re Van Blankensteyn, 5 C. C. A. 579, 11 U. S. App. 687, 56 Fed. 474; Re Kursheedt Mfg. Co. 49 Fed. 633; Re White, 53 Fed. 787; Marine v. Lyon, 13 C. C. A. 268, 25 U. S. App. 149, 65 Fed. 992; Re Bing, 66 Fed. 727; Mexican Onyx & Trading Co. v. United States, 66 Fed. 732; Myers v. United States, 110 Fed. 940; Leeburger v. United States, 113 Fed. 976; United States v. Jackson, 113 Fed. 1000; United States v. Riebe, 1 U. S. Ct. Customs Appeals, 19; Belcher v. United States, 91 Fed. 975.

One witness's testimony could not be allowed to upset a finding of the board, made on the testimony of a number of witnesses.

Page v. United States, 113 Fed. 1006; Bromley v. United States, 154 Fed. 399.

Every importer has a right to have his goods assessed for duty at the appropriate rate as and what they are when they come into the port and before the customs officers.

Seeberger v. Farwell, 139 U. S. 608, 35 L. ed. 297; Worthington v. Robbins, 139 U. S. 337, 35 L. ed. 181, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 56 L. ed.

581; Merritt v. Welsh, 104 U. S. 694, 26 L. ed. 896; United States v. Wotton, 3 C. C. A. 553, 5 U. S. App. 234, 53 Fed. 344; Johnson v. United States, 123 Fed. 997; Godwin v. United States, 66 Fed. 739; Paturel v. Robertson, 41 Fed. 329; Hunter v. United States, 143 Fed. 914; Stone & D. Co. v. United States, 147 Fed. 605; Mavtner v. United States, 84 Fed. 155; Re Blumenthal, 51 Fed. 76; United States v. Levitt, 1 N. Y. Leg. Obs. 92, Fed. Cas. No. 15,594; Re Schoverling, 45 Fed. 349, affirmed in 146 U. S. 76, 36 L. ed. 893, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 24.

In all cases of doubt as to the meaning of a revenue statute the decision should be in favor of the importer, who has to pay the tax, and there never was a case more strongly calling for the application of that rule than the case at bar.

United States v. Wigglesworth, 2 Story, 369, Fed. Cas. No. 16,690; Rice v. United States, 4 C. C. A. 104, 10 U. S. App. 670, 53 Fed. 910; Hartranft v. Wiegmann, 121 U. S. 609, 30 L. ed. 1012, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1240; Matheson v. United States, 18 C. C. A. 143, 38 U. S. App. 25, 71 Fed. 394; Adams v. Bancroft, 3 Sumn. 384, Fed. Cas. No. 44; McCoy v. Hedden, 38 Fed. 89; American Net & Twine Co. v. Worthington, 141 U. S. 468, 35 L. ed. 821, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 55; Hempstead v. Thomas, 122 Fed. 538; Hayes v. United States, 80 C. C. A. 17, 150 Fed. 66; United States v. Merck, 91 Fed. 639; Franklin Sugar Ref. Co. v. United States, 73 C. C. A. 476, 142 Fed. 376; Powers v. Barney, 5 Blatchf. 202, Fed. Cas. No. 11,361; United States v. Davis, 4 C. C. A. 251, 12 U. S. App. 47, 54 Fed. 147; United States v. Michelin Tire Co. 1 Ct. Customs Appeals, 518; United States v. Hatters' Fur Exch. 1 Ct. Customs Appeals, 198; United States v. Matagrín, 1 Ct. Customs Appeals, 309, 312; Woolworth v. United States, 1 Ct. Customs Appeals, 120, 122.

*Mr. Justice Hughes delivered the [413] opinion of the court:

Bernard Citroen, on June 11, 1906, imported into the United States thirty-seven drilled pearls,—unset and unstrung,—divided into five lots, separately inclosed. The collector classified them by similitude "as pearls set or strung, or jewelry," dutiable at 60 per cent ad valorem under paragraph 434 of the tariff act of 1897. 30 Stat. at L. 151, p. 192, chap. 11, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 1626, 1676. The board of general appraisers sustained the importer's protest, holding the pearls to be dutiable by similitude at 10 per cent under paragraph 436. The circuit court, on additional testimony, reversed this ruling and affirmed that of the collector, and this decision was, in turn, reversed by the circuit court of appeals, which held that the board was right. 92 C. C. A. 365, 166 Fed. 693. The case comes here on certiorari.

The paragraphs of the act of 1897 (30 Stat. at L. p. 192, chap. 11, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1676) which are in question read as follows:

"434. Articles commonly known as jewelry, and parts thereof, finished or unfinished, not specially provided for in this act, including precious stones set, pearls set or strung, and cameos in frames, 60 per centum ad valorem."

"436. Pearls in their natural state, not strung or set, 10 per centum ad valorem."

The pearls had been purchased by the importer's brother, and had been offered for sale, collectively and in lots, in Paris, London, and Berlin; and to show that the collection was a desirable one for a necklace, they had been strung from time to time on a silk cord. It appeared that Mrs. Leeds, the present owner, had seen the pearls in Paris, both loose and on a string. As she testified, they were brought to her hotel "both on the string and off the string; it was strung up at odd times, then it was taken apart and other pearls were put 414] in and others taken out, so it was strung several times." She was permitted to wear the pearls as a necklace; and finally bought them, it being agreed that they should be delivered to her in this country. They were so delivered in the condition in which they were imported, without string or clasp, and to these the purchaser subsequently added six pearls and formed the necklace she desired.

With respect to the character of the imported collection, the board of general appraisers found: "Pearls of greater dimensions than the average are comparatively rare; hence it frequently requires several years' search in order to secure a sufficient number to form a necklace, all accurately matched in the essential features of size, color, and luster. Such a collection thus assembled would, no doubt, command a higher price than the aggregate value of the separate pearls. On the other hand, a sufficient number of pearls, although of large size, required to form a necklace, matched as to size, but not otherwise, except a mere regard for comparative color, could be assembled within a short time and at a price based upon the cost of each separate pearl. In order to dispose of thirty or more pearls to one purchaser, such a collection would usually be sold at a less price than the aggregate would amount to were each pearl sold separately. The evidence shows and we find that the pearls in question belong to the latter, and not to the first, class." T. D. 28,246; G. A. 6617. And as to these facts there is nothing in the evidence introduced in the circuit court which requires a different conclusion.

The questions presented are (1) whether the pearls fall directly within the description of the paragraph (434) relating to jewelry, and (2), if not, whether they are brought within this paragraph, through similitude, by virtue of § 7. 30 Stat. at L. 205, chap. 11, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1693.

First. The rule is well established that "in order to produce uniformity in the imposition of duties, the dutiable *class[415] fication of articles imported must be ascertained by an examination of the imported article itself, in the condition in which it is imported." Worthington v. Robbins, 139 U. S. 337, 341, 35 L. ed. 181, 182, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581; Dwight v. Merritt, 140 U. S. 213, 219, 35 L. ed. 450, 452, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 768; United States v. Schoverling, 146 U. S. 76, 82, 36 L. ed. 893, 895, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 24; United States v. Irwin (C. C. A. 2d C.) 24 C. C. A. 349, 45 U. S. App. 746, 78 Fed. 799, 802. This, of course, does not mean that a prescribed rate of duty can be escaped by resort to disguise or artifice. When it is found that the article imported is in fact the article described in a particular paragraph of the tariff act, an effort to make it appear otherwise is simply a fraud on the revenue, and cannot be permitted to succeed. Falk v. Robertson, 137 U. S. 225, 232, 34 L. ed. 645, 647, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 41. But when the article imported is not the article described as dutiable at a specified rate, it does not become dutiable under the description because it has been manufactured or prepared for the express purpose of being imported at a lower rate. Merritt v. Welsh, 104 U. S. 694, 704, 26 L. ed. 896, 899; Seeberger v. Farwell, 139 U. S. 608, 611, 35 L. ed. 297, 298, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 650. "So long as no deception is practised, so long as the goods are truly invoiced and freely and honestly exposed to the officers of customs for their examination, no fraud is committed, no penalty is incurred." Merritt v. Welsh, supra. The inquiry must be—Does the article, as imported, fall within the description sought to be applied?

In the paragraph as to jewelry (434) Congress expressly defined what pearls were to be included. The paragraph reads, "including . . . pearls set or strung." It does not say pearls that can be strung, or that are assorted or matched so as to be suitable for a necklace, but pearls "set or strung." We are not concerned with the reason for the distinction; it is enough that Congress made it. Had these pearls never been strung before importation, no one would be heard to argue that they fell directly within the description of paragraph 434 because they could be strung, or had been collected for the purpose of stringing 416]*or of being worn as a necklace. Loose pearls—however valuable the collection—however carefully matched or desirable for a necklace—are not “pearls set or strung.”

Nor can it be said that pearls, imported unstrung, are brought within the description of paragraph 434 because, at some time, or from time to time, previous to importation, they have been put on a string temporarily for purposes of display. The paragraph does not use a generic definition which could be deemed to define pearls previously strung though imported unstrung, but refers—in terms which shelter no ambiguity—to their condition when imported. It is not a case of parts of a described article, separately packed to avoid the specified duty on the article as a whole. United States v. Schoverling, 146 U. S. 76, 82, 36 L. ed. 893, 895, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 24; Isaacs v. Jonas, 148 U. S. 648, 37 L. ed. 596, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 677; United States v. Irwin (C. C. A. 2d C.) 24 C. C. A. 349, 45 U. S. App. 746, 78 Fed. 799, 802. For here, the imported pearls, whether regarded separately or taken as a collection, are not within the description. It is idle to comment on the relative value of a string to hold the pearls, for this is immaterial. The statute has furnished the test, and we are not at liberty to make another.

Second. Although the pearls do not fall directly within paragraph 434, the question remains whether they are brought within it by similitude. The similitude clause (§ 7) applies to articles not enumerated in the tariff act, and hence it governs the rate in this case only if it be found that the pearls are excluded from the description of paragraph 436, which enumerates “pearls in their natural state, not strung or set.” May it fairly be said that in these two classes of pearls—those “set or strung” and those “in their natural state, not strung or set”—Congress intended to describe all pearls, or is there a sort of pearls, for example, those drilled and matched so as to be suitable for a necklace, which must be said to have been left unenumerated?

In the customs act of 1816 (3 Stat. at L. 417]310, chap. 107), a duty of 7½ *per cent ad valorem was laid on “precious stones and pearls of all kinds, set or not set.” The act of 1842 (5 Stat. at L. chap. 270) made the duty 7 per cent “on gems, pearls, or precious stones.” That of 1846 (9 Stat. at L. 45, 48, chap. 74) fixed the rate at 30 per cent for “diamonds, gems, pearls, rubies, and other precious stones, and imitations of precious stones, when set in gold, silver, or other metal,” and at 10 per cent on “diamonds, gems, pearls, rubies, and other precious stones, and imitations thereof, when not set.” In 1857 (11 Stat. at L. 193, chap. 98) and in 1861 (12 Stat. at L. 190, chap. 68), the same distinction was maintained.

In the Revised Statutes (§ 2504, p. 480) we find the following: “Precious stones and jewelry.—Diamonds, cameos, mosaics, gems, pearls, rubies, and other precious stones, when not set: 10 per centum ad valorem; when set in gold, silver, or other metal, or on imitations thereof, and all other jewelry: 25 per centum ad valorem.” In 1883 (22 Stat. at L. 513, 514, chap. 121) the rate of duty was made 25 per cent for “jewelry of all kinds” and 10 per cent for “precious stones of all kinds.” In 1890 (26 Stat. at L. 600, 601, chap. 1244) the jewelry paragraph (452), which fixed the rate at 50 per cent, embraced all articles, not elsewhere specially provided for, which were composed of precious metals or imitations thereof (including those set with pearls) and known commercially as jewelry; and the following paragraph (453) read: “Pearls, 10 per centum ad valorem.” By the act of 1894 (28 Stat. at L. 534, chap. 349), the jewelry rate was reduced to 35 per cent; the paragraph as to pearls was changed so that instead of describing pearls generally it read: “Pearls, including pearls strung, but not set, 10 per centum ad valorem;” and pearls set were placed with precious stones set, with a duty of 30 per cent.

It will thus be observed that when pearls were enumerated in the tariff acts prior to that of 1897, the enumeration *was[418 evidently intended to be comprehensive, and covered all pearls not included in the provision for jewelry. The act of 1897 placed “pearls set or strung” in the jewelry paragraph, and then provided the rate of 10 per cent for “pearls in their natural state, not strung or set.”

To complete the review of the statutes, it may be added that in 1909, when new tariff legislation was under consideration, it was proposed, in the light of the decisions to which we shall presently refer, that there should be inserted in the act a clause providing that “collections of pearls selected, matched, or graded, shall be dutiable as jewelry;” and the House bill so provided. H. R. Bill No. 1438, par. 447, 61st Cong., 1st sess., Cong. Rec. vol. 44, p. 1510. Congress not only refused to make this insertion, but instead, retaining the existing rate on unstrung and unset pearls, omitted the phrase "in their natural state," and further clarified the provision by inserting the words "drilled or undrilled," so that the clause in the act of 1909 reads: "Pearls and parts thereof, drilled or undrilled, but not set or strung, 10 per centum ad valorem." 36 Stat. at L. 68, chap. 6, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1909, p. 726.

The difficulties that beset the construction of paragraph 436 of the act of 1897 sufficiently appear in the cases which have been brought before the courts. In 1898, Tiffany & Company imported pierced pearls described in the invoices as "pearls drilled, but not strung." They were assessed for duty at 20 per cent as unenumerated articles, manufactured in whole or part, under § 6. The circuit court (Tiffany v. United States, 103 Fed. 619) held that the phrase "pearls in their natural state" was a new phrase wholly unknown to merchants; that the words, having no commercial meaning, must be interpreted in their plain, natural sense; and that a drilled pearl was not a pearl in the natural state. It was pointed out that the selection made by Congress in the use of these words, so interpreted, seemed an unfortunate one, as the effect [419] was to "attach a higher duty to the lower article. The conclusion was that Congress had not, as presumably it intended to do, covered all kinds of pearls in the various jewelry paragraphs, but had "left a kind of pearl to be covered by one of the catch-all paragraphs," and this the court could not correct. The assessment was sustained.

On a later importation of drilled pearls this decision was followed by the collector, and the ruling was affirmed by the circuit court. T. D. 22,140, G. A. 4692; Tiffany v. United States (1901) 105 Fed. 766. But, while overruling the importer's protest, the court stated that the similitude clause should operate before the general clause providing for unenumerated manufactured articles, and that the imported pearls bore a closer resemblance to strung pearls than to pearls in their natural state. This was in effect to hold that drilled pearls were dutiable under the jewelry paragraph at 60 per cent.

This decision was reversed by the circuit court of appeals. Tiffany v. United States (1901; 2d Cir.) 50 C. C. A. 419, 112 Fed. 672. It was ruled that the pearls were not covered by either of the paragraphs 434 and 436; that the similitude clause should be applied; and that the drilled pearls more closely resembled pearls in their natural state than strung pearls, and hence that the pearls in question were dutiable at 10 per cent. This was followed in T. D. 23,751, G. A. 5149.

The court, however, indicated that there would be an exception to this rule when the pearls had been so selected as to produce a collection "worth more than the aggregate values of the individual pearls composing it."

Meanwhile, Neresheimer & Company had imported two lots of drilled pearls, in March and November, 1901, respectively, one being forty-five and the other thirty-nine in number, the total value exceeding $123,000. At first they were assessed at the rate of 20 per cent; but after the decision of the court of appeals in the Tiffany Case, [420 supra, both entries were reliquidated and the articles were assessed by the collector as "pearls strung" at 60 per cent. This was sustained by the board of general appraisers (1902) T. D. 23,748, G. A. 5146. The board found that the pearls "were imported in a morocco case, with silk lining, forming a groove running lengthwise, in which the pearls were placed and by which they were held; that they were all matched and assorted as to quality, size, color, and shape, and arranged in a graduated order, the center being the largest, and gradually decreasing in size to the last pearl at each end; that the pearls were invoiced as 'drilled pearls,' and are drilled, and when the boxes were opened gave the appearance of necklaces; that they each constituted extraordinary collections of such, and were of the finest ever imported into this country; that by reason of this matching and assortment they in each case possessed a value greatly in excess of the aggregate values of the individual pearls composing the collection."

The circuit court affirmed the action of the board. Neresheimer v. United States (1903) 131 Fed. 977. But, on appeal, the decision was reversed by the circuit court of appeals (1904; 2d Cir.), 68 C. C. A. 654, 136 Fed. 86. Reviewing the conflicting testimony, the court of appeals concluded that the evidence did not warrant a finding that the pearls had been assorted so as to acquire the increased value as a collection which would bring them within the exception suggested in the Tiffany Case. It was held that they were dutiable at 10 per cent "by similitude to paragraph 436."

In 1905, Charles E. Rushmore imported eighty-five pearls which the appraiser, in a special report, stated had "been carefully selected, matched, and assorted, and, in fact, are said to have been strung, and require only to be restrung to form a necklace. They are in the same condition as those passed upon by the board in G. A. 5146 (T. D.* 23,748)." The board of [421 general appraisers, upon this report, reversed the ruling of the collector and decided that the duty was 10 per cent, on the authority of the Neresheimer Case, supra. No appeal was taken by the government from this decision; it was rendered on January 21, 1905, and was circulated by the Treasury Department for the information and guidance of officers of customs and others concerned.

It thus appears that prior to 1906, when Citroen imported the pearls now in question, unstrung pearls, though drilled and matched so that they were ready to be strung as a necklace, had been held dutiable at 10 per cent. The fact that they were reported to have been previously strung abroad had not been deemed of consequence in the Rushmore Case, and the government had acquiesced in the ruling. Further, the exception indicated by the court in the Tiffany and Neresheimer Cases was negated by the board of general appraisers, which in Citroen's case found that the pearls were not matched as to color and luster with such care as would enhance their value as a collection. T. D. 28,246, G. A. 6617. And the circuit court of appeals, reversing the circuit court, held that there was no reason to disturb these findings. "It is fair to assume," said the court of appeals, that the ruling in the Rushmore Case "actuated the appellant (Citroen) in importing and selling the pearls." And it is now asserted by his counsel at this bar that should the government succeed, Citroen would be the only person who would have paid 60 per cent duty on a collection of pearls of the sort which these have been found to be.

Later—in 1909—while the act of 1897 was still in force, Tiffany & Company imported fifty-nine pearls, divided into four packages, all loose and all drilled. It appeared from the testimony before the board of general appraisers that M. Guggenheim, 422] the ultimate purchaser, *visited the Paris establishment of Tiffany & Company for the purpose of purchasing a necklace for his wife, and finding nothing suitable in stock, he requested the salesman to get a number of pearls together to make the desired necklace. The assortment was finally completed, a sketch being made of the necklace as it would appear when finished; and an order was given for the necklace to be made by Tiffany & Company at New York from the pearls selected. While it was not shown that the pearls had been worn abroad, it was found that they may have been, "and probably were, temporarily strung in the Paris establishment one or more times to show how the string of pearls would appear as a necklace." On the authority of the decision of the circuit court of appeals in Citroen's Case, the board of general appraisers sustained the importer's protest, holding that the pearls were dutiable either directly or by similitude at 10 per cent under paragraph 436. T. D. 29,542, G. A. 6864. This was sustained by the circuit court (United States v. Tiffany & Co. 172 Fed. 300), and its decision was affirmed by the circuit court of appeals (2d Cir.) 101 C. C. A. 665, 178 Fed. 1006. Petition for writ of certiorari was denied by this court. 218 U. S. 675, 54 L. ed. 1205, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 223.

In its opinion in the present case, the court below forcibly expressed its dissatisfaction with the effort to resolve the doubt as to the meaning of the statute by a comparison "depending not upon an examination of the articles themselves, but often upon extrinsic evidence obtained long afterwards." It was a comparison, said the court, "which cannot be uniform, which imposes 10 per cent upon one aggregation of pearls and 60 per cent upon a similar aggregation, the rate depending upon the ability to obtain evidence of prior use in foreign countries; a comparison which does not admit of a fixed, definite rule, which encourages partiality, promotes injustice, and was broken down in practical *ap-[423 plication. This is illustrated by the fact that in the cases which have come to the attention of the court, the most marked contrariety of opinion has developed as to whether the respective collection was matched for a necklace, and whether a larger price could be obtained for the pearls singly or in combination." The court of appeals also stated that it would incline to the opinion, were the question an open one in that court, "that drilled pearls are not excluded from paragraph 436."

In this view we think the court was right. As was pointed out by the board of general appraisers: "Pearls just as they come from the shell are, strictly speaking, only such as are in their natural state." But the statute deals with the pearls of commerce. It appears that over 75 per cent of all large pearls when they first come into the hands of wholesale dealers are drilled, usually in a somewhat primitive manner, by the pearl fishers. It cannot be supposed that Congress contemplated such a disregard of the facts of trade, and such a radical departure from the policy of former tariff legislation, as would be involved in a construction of paragraph 436 which would exclude drilled pearls. Moreover, the language of the paragraph is "pearls in their natural state, not strung or set." This implies that the description includes pearls that can be strung or set, and pearls cannot be strung unless perforated. The words do not exclude, but embrace, pearls that have been pierced, provided they are unstrung and unset.

But if drilled pearls, when neither strung nor set, are included in paragraph 436, the fact that they have been matched or assorted so as to form a collection suitable for stringing, or of being worn strung, does not take them out of the paragraph. Its language makes no distinction of that sort. The selection, or matching, does not alter the character of the pearls.

We are of the opinion that, as in former 424] tariff acts to *which reference has been made, Congress intended to cover and did cover all pearls in the two paragraphs, and did not leave a class of pearls unenumerated. The words in paragraph 436 are to be taken as describing a condition in antithesis to that described in paragraph 434, under which, if strung or set, imported pearls are dutiable as jewelry. Such an interpretation provides a simple and workable test, permitting certainty and impartiality in administration which should preeminently characterize the operation of tariff laws, and fulfils, as we believe, the purpose of Congress.

We conclude that the similitude clause has no application, and that upon the facts shown, the pearls imported in this case were dutiable under paragraph 436 at 10 per cent.

Judgment affirmed.

RICHARD FERRIS, Plff. in Err.,

v.

CHARLES FROHMAN, Charles Haddon Chambers, and Stephano Gatti.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 424-437.)

Error to state court — Federal question — copyright.

1. A decision of a state court enforcing the exclusive common-law performing rights of the owners of an unprinted and unpublished play as against the owner of a copyrighted adaptation substantially identical with the original play, who stood upon his copyright, denies a Federal right specially

NOTE.—On the general subject of writs of error from United States Supreme Court to state courts—see notes to Martin v. Hunter, 4 L. ed. U. S. 97; Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 37 L. ed. U. S. 267; Re Buchanan, 39 L. ed. U. S. 884; and Kipley v. Illinois, 42 L. ed. U. S. 998.

On what adjudications of state courts can be brought up for review in the Supreme Court of the United States by writ of error to those courts—see note to Apex Transp. Co. v. Garbade, 62 L.R.A. 513.

492

set up and claimed, within the meaning of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 709, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 575, governing writs of error from the Federal Supreme Court to state courts. [For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 1751-1795, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Copyright — common-law rights — play — public performance.

2. The exclusive common-law performing rights of the owners of an unprinted and unpublished play are not lost by public presentation.

[For other cases, see Copyright, II. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Copyright — common-law rights in play — public performance abroad.

3. Public performance in England of an unprinted and unpublished play by English authors does not deprive the owners of their common-law right in the United States to protection against the unauthorized performance of a copyrighted adaptation substantially identical with the original play, although in England, under 5 & 6 Vict. chap. 45, § 20, the first public performance of a play is deemed equivalent to a publication, destroying all common-law rights there.

[For other cases, see Copyright, II. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 44.]

Submitted November 7, 1911. Decided February 19, 1912.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Illinois to review a decree which reversed a decree of the Appellate Court for the First District, reversing a decree of the Superior Court of Cook County, restraining the production of a piratical copy of an unprinted and unpublished play. Affirmed.

See same case below, 238 Ill. 430, — L.R.A.(N.S.) —, 128 Am. St. Rep. 135, 87 N. E. 327.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Charles H. Aldrich submitted the cause for plaintiff in error. Messrs. Charles R. Aldrich, Charles G. McRoberts, and L. E. Chipman were on the brief:

A Federal question is involved.

Erie R. Co. v. Purdy, 185 U. S. 148, 153, 46 L. ed. 847, 850, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 605; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Illinois, 200 U. S. 561, 580, 581, 50 L. ed. 596, 604, 605, 26

On how and when questions must be raised and decided in a state court in order to make a case for a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States—see note to Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 63 L.R.A. 33.

On the common-law rights of authors and others in intellectual productions—see notes to Press Pub. Co. v. Monroe, 51 L.R.A. 353, and State v. State Journal Co. 9 L.R.A. (N. S.) 174.

Sup. Ct. Rep. 341, 4 Ann. Cas. 1175; Murdock v. Memphis, 20 Wall. 635, 22 L. ed. 444; Pickering v. Lomax, 145 U. S. 310, 36 L. ed. 716, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 860; Northern P. R. Co. v. Colburn, 164 U. S. 383, 41 L. ed. 479, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 98; Green Bay & M. Canal Co. v. Patten Paper Co. 172 U. S. 58, 68, 43 L. ed. 364, 368, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 97; Dale Tile Mfg. Co. v. Hyatt, 125 U. S. 46, 31 L. ed. 683, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 756; Atherton v. Fowler, 91 U. S. 143, 23 L. ed. 265.

There could have been no decision in favor of the plaintiffs below that did not in effect deny the right claimed under the copyright laws of the United States by the defendant below. In such case there is a Federal question, whether mentioned in the opinion of the court below or not.

Erie R. Co. v. Purdy, 185 U. S. 148, 153, 46 L. ed. 847, 850, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 605; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Illinois, 200 U. S. 561, 580, 581, 50 L. ed. 596, 604, 605, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341, 4 Ann. Cas. 1175; Murray v. Charleston, 96 U. S. 432, 441, 442, 24 L. ed. 760, 761, 762.

The statute 5 and 6 Viet. chap. 45, § 20, makes public performance of a dramatic work with the author's or owner's consent equivalent to the first publication of a book.

And in England it is held that performance in the United States with the owner's consent terminates the author's playwright in England and makes the performing right publici juris.

Boucicault v. Chatterton, L. R. 5 Ch. Div. 267, 46 L. J. Ch. N. S. 305, 35 L. T. N. S. 745, 25 Week. Rep. 287; Boucicault v. Delafield, 1 Hem. & M. 597, 33 L. J. Ch. N. S. 38, 9 Jur. N. S. 1282, 9 L. T. N. S. 709, 12 Week. Rep. 101; Drone, Copyright, 583; Jefferys v. Boosey, 4 H. L. Cas. 847, 3 C. L. R. 625, 24 L. J. Exch. N. S. 81, 1 Jur. N. S. 615; Chappell v. Purday, 14 Mees. & W. 303, 9 Jur. 495, 14 L. J. Exch. N. S. 258; Boosey v. Purday, 4 Exch. 145, 18 L. J. Exch. N. S. 378, 13 Jur. 918.

The performing right or playwright had no existence at common law separate and apart from the manuscript of the author, but dates its origin from 3 & 4 Will. IV. chap. 15, and in this country from the act of Congress, August 18, 1856.

Boucicault v. Chatterton, L. R. 5 Ch. Div. 269, 46 L. J. Ch. N. S. 305, 35 L. T. N. S. 745, 25 Week. Rep. 287; Wall v. Taylor, L. R. 9 Q. B. Div. 730, 51 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 547, 47 L. T. N. S. 47, 30 Week. Rep. 948, 46 J. P. 679; Donaldsons v. Becket, 4 Burr. 2408; Jefferys v. Boosey, 4 H. L. Cas. 920, 3 C. L. R. 625, 24 L. J. Exch. N. S. 81, 1 Jur. N. S. 615.

The English act was passed to give the right of performance, and was brought about by the decision in Murray v. Elliston, 5 Barn. & Ald. 657, 1 Dowl. & R. 299, 24 Revised Rep. 519; Chappell v. Boosey, L. R. 21 Ch. Div. 241, 51 L. J. Ch. N. S. 625, 46 L. T. N. S. 854, 30 Week. Rep. 733.
56 L. ed.

The public performance of a drama is in all respects analogous to the right to multiply copies of a book. It is not a common-law right distinct from the manuscript.

Boucicault v. Chatterton, L. R. 5 Ch. Div. 269, 46 L. J. Ch. N. S. 305, 35 L. T. N. S. 745, 25 Week. Rep. 287; Wall v. Taylor, L. R. 9 Q. B. Div. 730, 51 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 547, 47 L. T. N. S. 47, 30 Week. Rep. 948, 46 J. P. 679; Donaldsons v. Becket, 4 Burr. 2408; Jefferys v. Bossey, 4 H. L. Cas. 920, 3 C. L. R. 615, 24 L. J. Exch. N. S. 81, 1 Jur. N. S. 615; Wheaton v. Peters, 8 Pet. 591, 8 L. ed. 1055; Banks v. Manchester, 128 U. S. 244, 32 L. ed. 425, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 36; Thompson v. Hubbard, 131 U. S. 123, 151, 33 L. ed. 76, 86, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 710; White-Smith Music Pub. Co. v. Apollo Co. 209 U. S. 1, 15, 52 L. ed. 655, 661, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 319, 14 Ann. Cas. 628.

There can be but one publication, and it makes no difference where this is made if with the consent of the author or proprietor.

Mikado Case, 25 Fed. 183; Drone, Copyright, pp. 293, 295; Boucicault v. Wood, 2 Biss. 34, Fed. Cas. No. 1,693; Pierce & B. Mfg. Co. v. Werckmeister, 18 C. C. A. 431, 33 U. S. App. 399, 72 Fed. 54; 7 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. 528; 25 Cyc. 1495.

It was not the intention of Congress to give to foreign citizens and composers advantages in this country which, according to the international copyright convention, were to be denied to citizens of this country abroad.

White-Smith Music Pub. Co. v. Apollo Co. 209 U. S. 1, 15, 52 L. ed. 655, 661, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 319, 14 Ann. Cas. 628.

Publication puts an end to common-law rights and all rights of the author or proprietor, unless he at the same time takes steps to initiate and secure statutory rights.

Drone, Copyright, pp. 100-104; Macgillivray, Copyright, 36-38; Jewelers' Mercantile Agency v. Jewelers Weekly Pub. Co. 155 N. Y. 241, 41 L.R.A. 846, 63 Am. St. Rep. 666, 49 N. E. 872; Miffin v. R. H. White Co. 190 U. S. 260, 47 L. ed. 1040, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 769; Mifflin v. Dutton, Rep. 771.

The rights do not coexist in the same composition.

Drone, Copyright, pp. 100-104; Bobbs-Merrill Co. v. Straus, 210 U. S. 339, 346, 347, 52 L. ed. 1086, 1091, 1092, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 722; Fraser v. Yack, 53 C. C. A. 563, 116 Fed. 285; Jewelers' Mercantile Agency v. Jewelers' Weekly Pub. Co. 155 N. Y. 241, 41 L.R.A. 846, 63 Am. St. Rep. 666, 49 N. E. 872; Tompkins v. Halleck, 133 Mass. 36, 43 Am. Rep. 480.

Mr. Levy Mayer submitted the cause for defendants in error:

This court has no jurisdiction of the present writ of error:

Appleby v. Buffalo, 221 U. S. 524, 55 L. ed. 838, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 699; Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. Texas, 212 U. S. 86, 53 L. ed. 417, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 220; Harding v. Illinois, 196 U. S. 78, 49 L. ed. 394, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 176; Howard v. Fleming, 191 U. S. 126, 48 L. ed. 121, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 49; Home for Incurables v. New York, 187 U. S. 155, 47 L. ed. 117, 63 L.R.A. 329, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 84; De Lamar's Nevada Gold Min. Co. v. Nesbitt, 177 U. S. 523, 44 L. ed. 872, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 715; Sayward v. Denny, 158 U. S. 180, 39 L. ed. 941, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 777.

The public performance in England of a manuscript play, which, under the British statutes, is made a publication, and deprives the author of his common-law right of exclusive representation, does not deprive the author of such common-law right in this country, where public performance is not deemed a publication.

Crowe v. Aiken, 2 Biss. 208, Fed. Cas. No. 3,441; Palmer v. De Witt, 2 Sweeny, 530, 40 How. Pr. 293, affirmed in 47 N. Y. 532, 7 Am. Rep. 480; Tompkins v. Halleck, 133 Mass. 32, 43 Am. Rep. 480; Drone, Copyright, pp. 118-121; Wandell, Law of the Theater, 479; 25 Cyc. 1497.

At common law and before the passage of copyright statutes an author had an exclusive property right in his manuscript.

Crowe v. Aiken, 2 Biss. 208, Fed. Cas. No. 3,441; Palmer v. Dewitt, 2 Sweeny, 530, 40 How. Pr. 293, affirmed in 47 N. Y. 532, 7 Am. Rep. 480; Tompkins v. Halleck, 133 Mass. 32, 43 Am. Rep. 480; Drone, Copyright, pp. 102, 118-121; Wandell, Law of the Theater, 479; 25 Cyc. 1497.

The public performance of a manuscript drama is not in this country a publication, but the author still retains his common-law right to its exclusive representation.

Drone, Copyright, p. 119; Tompkins v. Halleck, 133 Mass. 32, 43 Am. Rep. 480; Palmer v. De Witt, 2 Sweeny, 530, affirmed in 47 N. Y. 532, 7 Am. Rep. 480; Boucicault v. Hart, 13 Blatchf. 47, Fed. Cas. No. 1,692; Crowe v. Aiken, 2 Biss. 208, Fed. Cas. No. 3,441; Aronson v. Fleckenstein, 28 Fed. 78; 25 Cyc. 1497, and cases cited.

A different rule prevails in England by statute.

Boucicault v. Delafield, 1 Hem. & M. 597, 33 L. J. Ch. N. S. 38, 9 Jur. N. S. 1282, 9

L. T. N. S. 709, 12 Week. Rep. 101; Boucicault v. Chatterton, L. R. 5 Ch. Div. 267, 46 L. J. Ch. N. S. 305, 35 L. T. N. S. 745, 25 Week. Rep. 287; Drone, Copyright, pp. 119, 574, 605, 656; Macgillivray, Copyright, p. 126; Scrutton, Copyright, 3d ed. p. 72.

The provisions of the English statutes in regard to registration of dramatic compositions are permissive only.

Drone, Copyright, pp. 280, 603; Macgillivray, Copyright, pp. 47, 133; Scrutton, Copyright, 3d ed. p. 88; 8 Halsbury, Laws of England, p. 179; Russell v. Smith, 12 Q. B. 217, 17 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 225, 12 Jur. 723; Clark v. Bishop, 25 L. T. N. S. 908.

The lex domicilii cannot fix the status of literary property where the author seeks to enforce rights in respect thereto in a foreign country.

1 Morgan, Literature, p. 479; Drone, Copyright, p. 581; Story, Conf. L. § 550; Crowe v. Aiken, 2 Biss. 208, Fed. Cas. No. 3,441; Palmer v. De Witt, 47 N. Y. 532, 7 Am. Rep. 480; Baglin v. Cusenier Co. 221 U. S. 580, 55 L. ed. 863, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 669; Minor v. Cardwell, 37 Mo. 350, 90 Am. Dec. 390.

Mr. Justice Hughes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a writ of error to the supreme court of Illinois.

The suit was brought by Charles Frohman, Charles Haddon Chambers, and Stephano Gatti (defendants in error), to restrain the production of what was alleged to be a piratical copy of a play known as "The Fatal Card." Its authors were Charles Haddon Chambers and B. C. Stephenson, British subjects, resident in London, who composed *it there in 1894.[430 The firm of A. & S. Gatti, theatrical managers of London, of which the complainant Gatti is the surviving partner, became interested with the authors and on September 6, 1894, the play was first performed in London. It was registered under the British statutes on October 31, 1894, and again on November 8, 1894. Charles Frohman of New York, by agreement of June 13, 1894, obtained the right of production in this country for five years. On March 25, 1895, Frohman acquired all the interest of Stephenson in the play in and for the United States, and it was extensively represented under his supervision. It was not copyrighted here.

George E. McFarlane made an adaptation of this play, called it by the same name, and transferred it to the plaintiff in error, Richard Ferris, of Illinois, who copyrighted it in August, 1900, under the laws of the United States, and later caused it to be performed in various places in this country. The adapted play differed from the original in various details, but not in its essential features.

The superior court of Cook county found that the complainants were the sole owners of the original play; that it had never been published or otherwise dedicated to the public in the United States or elsewhere; and that the Ferris play was substantially identical with it. Ferris was directed to account, and was perpetually restrained from producing the adaptation which he had copyrighted. The appellate court for the first district reversed the decree (131 Ill. App. 307), but on appeal to the supreme court of Illinois this decision was reversed and the decree of the superior court was affirmed. 238 Ill. 430, — L.R.A.(N.S.) —, 128 Am. St. Rep. 135, 87 N. E. 327.

The defendants in error contest the jurisdiction of this court upon the ground that the bill was based entirely upon a common-law right of property, and insist that the upholding of this right by the state court raises no Federal question. But the complainants sued not simply to maintain their common-law right in the original play, 431] but, by virtue of it, to prevent the defendant from producing the adapted play which he had copyrighted under the laws of the United States. They challenged a right which the copyright, if sustainable, secured. Rev. Stat. § 4592, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3406. It was necessary for them to make the challenge, for they could not succeed unless this right were denied. Ferris stood upon the copyright. That it had been obtained was alleged in the bill, was averred in the answer, and was found by the court. The fact that the court reached its conclusion in favor of the complainants by a consideration, on common-law principles, of their property in the original play, does not alter the effect of the decision. By the decree Ferris was permanently enjoined "from in any manner using, . . . selling, producing, or performing . . . the said defendant's copyrighted play hereinbefore referred to for any purpose." The decision thus denied to him a Federal right specially set up and claimed, within the meaning of § 709 of the Revised Statutes of the United States (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 575). This court, therefore, has jurisdiction. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Illinois, 200 U. S. 561, 580, 581, 50 L. ed. 596, 604, 605, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341, 4 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1175; McGuire v. Massachusetts, 3 Wall. 382, 385, 18 L. ed. 164, 165; Anderson v. Carkins, 135 U. S. 483, 486, 34 L. ed. 272, 274, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 905; Shively v. Bowlby, 152 U. S. 1, 9, 38 L. ed. 331, 335, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 548; Northern P. R. Co. v. Colburn, 164 U. S. 56 L. ed.

383, 385, 386, 41 L. ed. 479, 480, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 98; Green Bay & M. Canal Co. v. Patten Paper Co. 172 U. S. 58, 67, 68, 43 L. ed. 364, 368, 369, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 97.

The substantial identity of the two plays was not disputed in the appellate courts of Illinois, and must be deemed to be established. The contention was, and is, that after the public performance of the original play in London, in 1894, the owners had no common-law right, but only the rights conferred by the British statutes; and that Frohman's interest (save the license which expired in 1899) was subsequently acquired. Hence, it is said the play, not being copyrighted in the United States, was publici juris here, and the adapter was entitled to use it as common material.

*Performing right was not within [432 the provisions of 8 Anne, chap. 19, which gave to authors the sole liberty of printing their books. Coleman v. Wathen, 5 T. R. 245. The act of 1833, known as "Bulwer-Lytton's act," conferred statutory playwright in perpetuity throughout the British dominions, in the case of dramatic pieces not printed and published; and for a stated term, if printed and published. 3 & 4 Will. IV. chap. 15. By § 20 of the copyright act of 1842, 5 & 6 Vict. chap. 45, it was provided that the sole liberty of representing any dramatic piece should be the property of the author and his assigns for the term therein specified for the duration of copyright in books. The section continued: "And the provisions hereinbefore enacted in respect of the property of such copyright, and of registering the same, shall apply to the liberty of representing or performing any dramatic piece or musical composition, as if the same were herein expressly re-enacted and applied thereto, save and except that the first public representation or performance of any dramatic piece or musical composition shall be deemed equivalent, in the construction of this act, to the first publication of any book." Mr. Scrutton, in his work on Copyright, 4th ed. p. 77, states that it is "probable, though there is no express decision to that effect, that the court, following Donaldson v. Beckett, 2 Bro. P. C. 129, would hold the common-law right destroyed by the statutory provisions after first performance in public." Compare MacGillivray, on Copyright, pp. 122, 127, 128. And it may be assumed, in this case, that after the play had been performed, the right of the owners to protection against its unauthorized production in England was only that given by the statutes.

Further, in the absence of a copyright convention, there is no playwright in England in the case of a play not printed and published, where the first public performance has taken place outside the British 433]dominions. This *results from § 19 of the act of 7 & 8 Vict. chap. 12, known as the international copyright act, which provides: "Neither the author of any book, nor the author or composer of any dramatic piece or musical composition, . . . which shall, after the passing of this act, be first published out of her Majesty's dominions, shall have any copyright therein respectively, or any exclusive right to the public representation or performance thereof, otherwise than such (if any) as he may become entitled to under this act." The provision applies to British subjects as well as to foreigners, and the words "first published" include the first performance of a play. In Boucicault v. Delafield, 1 Hem. & M. 597, 33 L. J. Ch. N. S. 38, 9 Jur. N. S. 1282, 9 L. T. N. S. 709, 12 Week. Rep. 101, the author of the play known as "The Colleen Bawn" filed a bill to restrain a piratical production. It appeared that the play had first been represented in New York, and by reason of that fact,—there being no copyright convention with the United States,—it was held that, under the statute above quoted, there was no playright in England. To the same effect is Boucicault v. Chatterton, L. R. 5 Ch. Div. 267, 46 L. J. Ch. N. S. 305, 35 L. T. N. S. 745, 25 Week. Rep. 287, where the author unsuccessfully sought to restrain an unauthorized performance of "The Shaughraun," an unprinted play which had first been represented here.

The British Parliament, in thus fixing the limits and conditions of performing rights, was dealing with rights to be exercised within British territory. It is argued that the English authors in this case, by the law of their domicile, were without common-law right and in its stead secured the protection of the British statutes, which cannot avail them here. But the British statutes did not purport to curtail any right of such authors with respect to the representation of plays outside the British dominions. They disclose no intention to destroy rights for which they provided no substitute. There is no indication of a purpose to incapacitate British citizens from holding their intellectual productions secure from interference 434]in other *jurisdictions according to the principles of the common law. Their right was not gone simpliciter, but only in a qualified sense for the purposes of the statutes, and there was no convention under which the authors' work became public property in the United States. See Saxlehner v. Eisner & M. Co. 179 U. S. 19, 36, 45 L. ed. 60, 75, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 7; Saxlehner v. Wagner, 216 U. S. 375, 381, 54 L.

ed. 525, 528, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 298. When § 20 of the act of 5 & 6 Vict. chap. 45, provided that the first public performance of a play should be deemed equivalent, in the construction of that act, to the first publication of a book, it simply defined its meaning with respect to the rights which the statutes conferred. The deprivation of the common-law right, by force of the statute, was plainly limited to the territorial bounds within which the operation of the statute was confined.

The present case is not one in which the owner of a play has printed and published it, and thus, having lost his rights at common law, must depend upon statutory copyright in this country. The play in question has not been printed and published. It is not open to dispute that the authors of "The Fatal Card" had a common-law right of property in the play until it was publicly performed. Donaldson v. Beckett, 2 Bro. P. C. 129; Prince Albert v. Strange, 1 Macn. & G. 25, 1 Hall & T. 1, 18 L. J. Ch. N. S. 120, 13 Jur. 109; Jefferys v. Boosey, 4 H. L. Cas. 815, 962, 978, 3 C. L. R. 625, 24 L. J. Exch. N. S. 81, 1 Jur. N. S. 615. And they were entitled to protection against its unauthorized use here as well as in England. Wheaton v. Peters, 8 Pet. 591, 657, 8 L. ed. 1055, 1079; Paige v. Banks, 13 Wall. 608, 614, 20 L. ed. 709, 710; Bartlett v. Crittenden, 5 McLean, 32, Fed. Cas. No. 1,076; Crowe v. Aiken, 2 Biss. 208, Fed. Cas. No. 3,441; Palmer v. DeWitt, 2 Sweeny, 530, 47 N. Y. 532, 7 Am. Rep. 480.

What effect, then, had the performance of the play in England upon the rights of the owners with respect to its use in the United States? There was no statute here by virtue of which the common-law right was lost through the performance of the unpublished play. The act of August 18, 1856 (11 Stat. at L. 138, chap. 169), related only to dramatic compositions for which copyright had been *ob-435 tained in this country; its object was to secure to the author of a copyrighted play the sole right to its performance after it had been printed. Boucicault v. Fox, 5 Blatchf. 87, 97, 98, Fed. Cas. No. 1,691. The same is true of the provisions of the copyright act of July 8, 1870 (16 Stat. at L. 198, 212, 214, chap. 230, Rev. Stat. §§ 4952, 4966, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 3406, 3415), and of those of the act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. at L. 1106, 1107, chap. 565, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 3406, 3407), which were in force when the transactions in question occurred and this suit was brought. The fact that the act of March 3, 1891, was applicable to citizens of foreign countries, permitting to our citizens the benefit of copyright on substantially the same basis as its own citizens (§ 13), and that proclamation to this effect was made by the President with respect to Great Britain (27 Stat. at L. 981), did not make the British statutes operative within the United States. Nor did that fact add to the provisions of the act of Congress so as to make the latter destructive of the common-law rights of English subjects in relation to the representation of plays in this country, which were not copyrighted under that act, and which remained unpublished. These rights, like those of our own citizens in similar case, the act of 1891 did not disturb.

The public representation of a dramatic composition, not printed and published, does not deprive the owner of his common-law right, save by operation of statute. At common law, the public performance of the play is not an abandonment of it to the public use. Macklin v. Richardson, 2 Ambl. 694, 7 Eng. Rul. Cas. 66; Morris v. Kelly, 1 Jac. & W. 481, 21 Revised Rep. 216; Boucicault v. Fox, 5 Blatchf. 87, 97, Fed. Cas. No. 1,691; Crowe v. Aiken, 2 Biss. 208, Fed. Cas. No. 3,441; Palmer v. DeWitt, 2 Sweeny, 530, 47 N. Y. 532, 7 Am. Rep. 480; Tompkins v. Halleck, 133 Mass. 32, 43 Am. Rep. 480. Story states the rule as follows: "So, where a dramatic performance has been allowed by the author to be acted at a theater, no person has a right to pirate such performance, and to publish copies of it surreptitiously; or to act it at another theater without the [436] consent of the author *or proprietor; for his permission to act it at a public theater does not amount to an abandonment of his title to it, or to a dedication of it to the public at large." 2 Story, Eq. Jur. § 950. It has been said that the owner of a play cannot complain if the piece is reproduced from memory. Keene v. Wheatley, 4 Phila. 157, Fed. Cas. No. 7,644; Keene v. Kimball, 16 Gray, 545, 77 Am. Dec. 426. But the distinction is without sound basis and has been repudiated. Tompkins v. Halleck, 133 Mass. 32, 43 Am. Rep. 480.

And, as the British statutes did not affect the common-law right of representation in this country, it is not material that the first performance of the play in question took place in England. In Crowe v. Aiken (1870), 2 Biss. 208, Fed. Cas. No. 3,441, the play "Mary Warner" had been composed by a British subject. It was transferred to the plaintiff with the exclusive right to its representation on the stage in the United States for five years from June 1, 1869. It had not been printed with the consent either of the author or of the plaintiff. It was first publicly performed in London in June, 1869, and afterwards was represented here. 56 L. ed.

The court (Drummond, J.) held that the plaintiff, by virtue of his common-law right, was entitled to an injunction restraining an unauthorized production. In Palmer v. De Witt (1872), 2 Sweeny, 530, 47 N. Y. 532, 7 Am. Rep. 480, the suit was brought to restrain the defendant from printing an unpublished drama called "Play," composed by a British citizen resident in London. The plaintiff on February 1, 1868, had purchased the exclusive right of printing and performing the play in the United States. On February 15, 1868, it was first performed in London. It was held that the common-law right had not been destroyed by the public representation, and the plaintiff had judgment. In the case last cited, and apparently in that of Crowe v. Aiken, the transfer to the plaintiff antedated the public performance, but neither decision was rested on that distinction. In Tompkins v. Halleck (1882) supra, an unpublished play called "The World" [437] had been written in England, where, after being presented, it was assigned by the author to a purchaser in New York. It was acted in that city and then transferred to the plaintiffs with the exclusive right of representation in the New England states. The plaintiffs' common-law right was sustained and an unauthorized performance was enjoined.

Our conclusion is that the complainants were the owners of the original play and exclusively entitled to produce it. Their common-law right with respect to its representation in this country had not been lost. This being so, the play of the plaintiff in error, which was substantially identical with that of the complainants, was simply a piratical composition. It was not the purpose or effect of the copyright law to render secure the fruits of piracy, and the plaintiff in error is not entitled to the protection of the statute. In other words the claim of Federal right upon which he relies is without merit.

Judgment affirmed.

CHARLES REITLER, Plff. in Err.,
v.

WILLIAM A. HARRIS.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 437-442.)

Constitutional law — due process of law — impairing contract obligations — statutory presumption.
Making the entry upon the official record of the forfeiture of school land for default in payment of the purchase price prima facie but not conclusive evidence that all the preliminary steps essential to a valid forfeiture were properly taken, and that the forfeiture was duly declared, as is done by Kan. Laws 1907, chap. 373, does not offend against either the contract or the due-process-of-law clause of the Federal Constitution, although construed as applicable to pending causes.

NOTE.—As to what constitutes due process of law—see notes to People v. O'Brien, 2 L.R.A. 255; Kuntz v. Sumption, 2 L.R.A. 655; Re Gannon, 5 L.R.A. 359; Ulman v.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 774-548, 1520, 1521, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 99.]

Submitted December 13, 1911. Decided February 19, 1912.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Kansas to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the District Court of Edwards County, in that state, in favor of defendant in an action of ejectment. Affirmed.

See same case below, 80 Kan. 148, 102 Pac. 249.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. F. Dumont Smith submitted the cause for plaintiff in error:

The attempted change "in a rule of evidence" by Kan. Laws, 1907, chap. 373, would make that evidence which never was evidence before, would validate a forfeiture concededly void prior to January 25, 1907, when the act took effect, and would destroy rights vested under the statute and decisions of the state of Kansas. The legislature may not so change the rules of evidence as to destroy such vested interest. The attempt to do so comes within the prohibition of the Federal Constitution.

Walker v. Whitehead, 16 Wall. 314, 21 L. ed. 357; Pennoyer v. McConaughy, 140 U. S. 1, 35 L. ed. 363, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 699; State ex rel. Brown v. McPeak, 31 Neb. 139, 47 N. W. 691; State ex rel. Damman v. School & University Lands Comrs. 4 Wis. 414; Fletcher v. Peck, 6 Cranch, 87, 3 L. ed. 162; Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. 122, 4 L. ed. 529; Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. 518, 4 L. ed. 629; Green v. Biddle, 8 Wheat. 1, 5 L. ed. 547; Gelpcke v. Dubuque, 1 Wall. 175, 17 L. ed. 520; Gunn v. Barry, 15 Wall. 610, 21 L. ed. 212; Davis v. Gray, 16 Wall. 203, 21 L. ed. 447; Butz v. Muscatine, 8 Wall. 575, 19 L. ed. 490; Chicago v. Sheldon, 9 Wall. 50, 19 L. ed. 594; Edwards v. Kearzey, 96

U. S. 595, 24 L. ed. 793; Memphis v. United States, 97 U. S. 293, 24 L. ed. 920; Douglass v. Pike County, 101 U. S. 677, 25 L. ed. 968; Louisiana v. New Orleans, 102 U. S. 203, 26 L. ed. 132; Wolff v. New Orleans, 103 U. S. 358, 26 L. ed. 395; Poindexter v. Greenhow, 114 U. S. 270, 29 L. ed. 185, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 903, 962; Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Texas, 177 U. S. 66, 44 L. ed. 673, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 545; Muhler v. New York & H. R. Co. 197 U. S. 544, 49 L. ed. 872, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 522.

Mr. Frederick De Courcy Faust submitted the cause for defendant in error. Messrs. A. C. Dyer and L. M. Day were on the brief:

The legislature may change a rule of evidence.

Cooley, Const. Lim. 5th ed. p. 452; 1 Elliott, Ev. § 86; State v. Beach, 147 Ind. 74, 36 L.R.A. 179, 43 N. E. 949; Morgan v. State, 117 Ind. 569, 19 N. E. 154; State v. Sattley, 131 Mo. 464, 33 S. W. 41; Howard v. Mott, 64 N. Y. 262; Holmes v. Hunt, 122 Mass. 505, 23 Am. Rep. 381; Wright v. Dunham, 13 Mich. 414; Gage v. Caraher, 125 Ill. 447, 17 N. E. 777; Robertson v. People, 20 Colo. 279, 38 Pac. 326, 9 Am. Crim. Rep. 284; Sanders v. Greenstreet, 23 Kan. 425; Harris v. Harsch, 29 Or. 562, 46 Pac. 141; Robeson v. Brown, 63 N. C. 554; Ehle v. Brown, 31 Wis. 405; Irwin v. Pierro, 44 Minn. 490, 47 N. W. 154; Northern Liberties v. St. John's Church, 13 Pa. 104; Marx v. Hanthorn, 148 U. S. 172, 37 L. ed. 410, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 508; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Haber, 169 U. S. 615, 42 L. ed. 879, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 488; Fong Yue Ting v. United States, 140 U. S. 721, 37 L. ed. 916, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1016; Li Sing v. United States, 180 U. S. 493, 45 L. ed. 637, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 449.

New rules of evidence apply to existing causes of action.

Cooley, Const. Lim. 5th ed. pp. 452, 453; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Jones, 149 Ill. 361, 24 L.R.A. 141, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 683, 41 Am. St. Rep. 278, 37 N. E. 247.

This rule will also apply to actions pending when the new law takes effect.

Fish v. Chicago, St. P. & K. C. R. Co. 82 Minn. 9, 83 Am. St. Rep. 398, 84 N. W. 458; Woodvine v. Dean, 194 Mass. 40, 79 N. E. 882; Wheelock v. Myers, 64 Kan. 47, 67 Pac. 632; Hubbard v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 70 Conn. 563, 40 Atl. 533; Campbell v.

Baltimore, 11 L.R.A. 224; Gilman v. Tucker, 13 L.R.A. 304; Pearson v. Yewdall, 24 L. ed. U. S. 436; and Wilson v. North Carolina, 42 L. ed. U. S. 865.

As to what laws are void as impairing obligation of contracts—see notes to Franklin County Grammar School v. Bailey, 10 L.R.A. 405; Fletcher v. Peck, 3 L. ed. U. S. 162; McCanna & F. Co. v. Citizens' Trust & Surety Co. 24 C. C. A. 20; and Montana Ore-Purchasing Co. v. Boston & M. Consol. Copper & S. Min. Co. 30 C. C. A. 12.

Holt, 115 U. S. 620, 29 L. ed. 483, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 209.

Mr. Justice Van Devanter delivered the opinion of the court:

This was an action in a district court of the state of Kansas to recover the possession of a quarter section of land to which the parties were asserting adverse claims under the school-land laws of the state. The plaintiff's claim originated in a contract of purchase with the state, whereby he was required annually to pay interest on the unpaid purchase price at a stipulated rate. He failed for three years to comply with that requirement, and proceedings looking to a forfeiture of his rights under the contract resulted, in 1901, in a notation of forfeiture, as hereinafter explained. The defendant claimed under a like contract, made, in 1902, upon the supposition that all rights under the prior 439]contract had been extinguished. *In 1906, while the defendant was in possession and complying with his contract, the plaintiff made payment of the purchase price and interest under his contract, and a patent was issued to him. The action was begun in 1907, when the defendant was still in possession and complying with his contract. The controversy turned upon the validity of the forfeiture proceedings. If they were valid, the plaintiff was not entitled to recover; otherwise he was.

The statute (Laws [Kan.] 1879, chap. 161, § 2) prescribing the mode of forfeiture in force since before the plaintiff's contract was made, reads as follows:

"If any purchaser of school land shall fail to pay the annual interest when the same becomes due, or the balance of the purchase money when the same becomes due, it shall be the duty of the county clerk of the county in which such land is situated, immediately to issue to the purchaser a notice in writing, notifying such purchaser of such default; and that if such purchaser fail to pay, or cause to be paid, the amount so due, together with the costs of issuing and serving such notice, within sixty days from the service thereof, the said purchaser, and all persons claiming under him, will forfeit absolutely all right and interest in and to such land under said purchase. . . . The notice above provided for shall be served by the sheriff of the county by delivering a copy thereof to such purchaser, if found in the county, also to all persons in possession of such land; and if such purchaser cannot be found, and no person is in possession of said land, then by posting the same up in a conspicuous place in the office of the county clerk. . . . Said sheriff shall serve such notice, and make due return of the time and manner of such service, within fifteen days from the time of his receipt of the same. . . . If such purchaser shall fail to pay the sum so due, and all costs incident to the issue and service of said notice, within sixty days from the time of the service or posting of such notice, as above *provided, such purchaser, 440 and all persons claiming under him, shall forfeit absolutely all rights and interest in and to such land, under and by virtue of such purchase."

Upon the trial it appeared that, while the plaintiff was in default, as before indicated, the county clerk of the county wherein the land was situate issued a notice to him in conformity with this statute; that the sheriff made a return thereon within the time prescribed, reading: "Received this notice this 13th day of July, 1901, and served the same by leaving a copy with C. C. Potter, who occupied the within premises, July 17, 1907;" that, although not so stated in his return, the sheriff duly posted the notice in the office of the county clerk; that when the notice was served the plaintiff, although not so stated in the sheriff's return, was not a resident of the state, and was absent therefrom; that he failed to pay the sum due within sixty days from the time of the service and posting of the notice; and that, upon the expiration of that period, the county clerk entered upon the school-land record of the county the notation "Land forfeited," in such connection as to refer to the plaintiff's contract. Whether or not C. C. Potter, to whom a copy of the notice was delivered, was the only person in possession of the land at the time, did not appear.

After the issuance of the patent to the plaintiff, and after the action was begun, but before it was brought to trial, the state legislature enacted a statute (Laws [Kan.] 1907, chap. 373), containing these provisions:

"Section 1. Where entries which appear upon the records of school-land sales, or of school-land-sale certificates, in the office of the county clerk of any county in this state, and purporting or shown to have been made in the usual course of the business of that office, indicate that the interest of the purchaser in the tract of land in connection with which such entries were made had been *forfeited for default in 441 the payment of money due the state on such purchase, and such land was thereafter sold to a new purchaser, such entries shall be prima facie evidence, in any action or proceeding in any court in this state, that proper notice of the purchaser's default had been issued and legal service thereof made, and that all things necessary to be done as conditions precedent to the forfeiture of the right and interest of the purchaser, and all persons claiming under him, in and to such land, had been duly and properly done and performed, and that such forfeiture had been duly declared. Any entry upon said records of the county clerk as 'canceled,' 'forfeited,' 'reverted to state,' 'state,' and the like, with or without date shall be held to be an entry indicating that the interest of the purchaser had been forfeited."

The district court ruled that this statute was applicable to pending causes; that the notation "Land forfeited" upon the school-land record in the county clerk's office was prima facie evidence of the lawful service of the forfeiture notice and of the due declaration of the forfeiture, and that this prima facie evidence was not overcome by the other facts disclosed at the trial, and so gave judgment for the defendant. The judgment was affirmed by the supreme court of the state (80 Kan. 148, 102 Pac. 249), and the plaintiff then brought the case here upon the contention, denied by that court, that the statute of 1907 impaired the obligation of his contract, and therefore was violative of the contract clause of the Constitution of the United States.

In our opinion, the contention cannot be sustained. The plaintiff's rights arising out of his contract were in no wise impaired by the statute of 1907. It did not interpose any obstacle to their assertion by him, and neither did it leave him without a suitable remedy for their ascertainment and enforcement. If the attempted forfeiture was invalid before, it continued 442] to be so thereafter. The statute dealt only with a rule of evidence, not with any substantive right. By making the entry of forfeiture upon the official record prima facie, but not conclusive, evidence that all preliminary steps essential to a valid forfeiture were properly taken, and that the forfeiture was duly declared, it but established a rebuttable presumption, which he was at liberty to overcome by other evidence. That such a statute does not offend against either the contract clause or the due process of law clause of the Constitution, even where the change is made applicable to pending causes, is now well settled. Pillow v. Roberts, 13 How. 472, 476, 14 L. ed. 228, 230; Marx v. Hanthorn, 148 U. S. 172, 181, 37 L. ed. 410, 413, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 508; Turpin v. Lemon, 187 U. S. 51, 59, 47 L. ed. 70, 74, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 20; Lindsley v. Natural Carbonic Gas Co. 220 U. S. 61, 81, 55 L. ed. 369, 378, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 337; Curtis v. Whitney, 13 Wall.

68, 20 L. ed. 513; Cooley, Const. Lim. 7th ed. 409, 524-526.

It was because the plaintiff failed to assume and carry the burden of overcoming the rebuttable presumption established by the statute that he failed in his action.

Judgment affirmed.

GABRIEL DIAZ, Plff. in Err.,

v.

UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 442-467.)

Criminal law — twice in jeopardy — same offense — assault — homicide.

1. The prosecution for homicide of a person previously convicted of an assault and battery from which the death afterwards ensued does not place the accused twice in jeopardy for the same offense, contrary to the act of July 1, 1902 (32 Stat. at L. 691, chap. 1369), § 5, enacting a Bill of Rights for the Philippine Islands,—especially where the jurisdiction of the justice of the peace before whom the assault and battery charge was tried did not extend to homicide cases. [For other cases, see Criminal Law, 64-68, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Evidence — documentary — putting whole record in evidence.

2. The record of the prior proceedings before a justice of the peace, when offered in evidence by the accused on trial for homicide, without qualification or restriction, must be treated as admitted generally, as applicable to any issue which it tends to prove, and as equally available to the government and the accused.

[For other cases, see Evidence, IV. a, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

NOTE.—On former jeopardy—see notes to Com. v. Fitzpatrick, 1 L.R.A. 451; Altenburg v. Com. 4 L.R.A. 543; Re Lange, 21 L. ed. U. S. 872; United States v. Perez, 6 L. ed. U. S. 165; and Silsby v. Foote, 14 L. ed. U. S. 394.

On homicide in the commission of an unlawful act—see note to People v. Sullivan, 63 L.R.A. 405.

As to the right to convict for several offenses growing out of the same facts—see note to Hughes v. Com. 31 L.R.A. (N.S.) 693.

As to conviction on charge of assault as bar to subsequent prosecution for homicide following death of victim—see note to Com. v. Ramunno, 14 L.R.A. (N.S.) 209.

On the right of the accused to be confronted by witnesses—see note to Morris v. United States, 80 C. C. A. 116.

As to waiver by accused of his right to be present at every stage of the trial—see notes to Lewis v. United States, 36 L. ed. U. S. 1011; and State v. Way, 14 L.R.A. (N.S.) 603.

Evidence — hearsay — admitting without objection.

3. Hearsay evidence admitted without objection is to be considered and given its natural probative effect as if it were in law admissible.

[Hearsay evidence, see Evidence, X., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Criminal law — confronting with witnesses.

4. The right "to meet the witnesses face to face," secured to one accused of crime in the Philippine Islands by the act of July 1, 1902, § 5, was not infringed by resting a judgment of conviction for homicide in part upon the testimony produced before the justice of the peace at a previous trial for the assault and battery from which the death afterwards ensued, and at a preliminary investigation of the homicide charge, where the record of these proceedings was offered in evidence by the accused without qualification or restriction, and included some testimony favorable to him.

[For other cases, see Criminal Law, 108-111, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Criminal law — personal presence of accused — waiver.

5. The voluntary absence of the accused at a time when his presence is not made indispensable by Philippine Comp. Stat. §§ 3271, 3280, 3296, coupled with an express consent that the trial go on in the presence of his counsel, is a waiver of his right under § 3270, to be present at every stage of the trial.

[For other cases, see Criminal Law, 103-107, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Criminal law — personal presence of accused — waiver.

6. One accused of an offense not capital, who is not in custody, and who was present when the trial was begun, may waive his right under the act of July 1, 1902, § 5, enacting a Bill of Rights for the Philippine Islands, to be personally present at every stage of the trial.

[For other cases, see Criminal Law, 103-107, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 384.]

Argued November 16, 1911. Decided February 19, 1912.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the Philippine Islands to review a judgment which, after increasing the punishment, affirmed a conviction of homicide not capital in the Court of First Instance of Occidental Negros. Affirmed.

See same case below, 15 Philippine, 123.

Statement by Justice Van Devant:

On May 30, 1906, at San Carlos, province of Occidental Negros, Philippine Islands, Gabriel Diaz, by blows and kicks, inflicted bodily injuries upon Cornelio Alcanzaren, and by reason thereof was the next day charged before the justice of the peace of San Carlos with assault and battery. At 56 L. ed.

the hearing upon that charge Diaz was found guilty of a misdemeanor and fined 50 pesetas and costs, which he paid. Subsequently, on the 26th of June, Alcanzaren died, and Diaz was then charged before the same justice of the peace with homicide, it being alleged that the death ensued from the bodily injuries. At the preliminary investigation of this charge, the justice concluded that there was reasonable cause to believe that it was well founded, and accordingly held the accused to await the action of the court of first instance. There was then filed in that court a complaint charging Diaz with the crime of homicide, not capital, upon which he subsequently was tried, found guilty, and sentenced to a term of imprisonment and other penalties.

When called upon to plead in the court of first instance, Diaz interposed a plea of former jeopardy, supported by a copy of the record of the proceedings before the justice of the peace upon the charge of assault and battery and at the preliminary investigation, but the plea was overruled. Then, during the trial, his counsel introduced in evidence the record of those proceedings. In doing this the counsel spoke only of "the proceedings in the case for a misdemeanor," but it otherwise appears that what was meant was the record of both proceedings. Both were embraced in a single document, authenticated by a single certificate, and it clearly is disclosed that counsel on both sides and the court treated the entire document as in evidence. It embraced the testimony produced before the justice at the hearing upon the assault and battery charge and at the preliminary investigation, including the personal statement of the accused and the report of an autopsy, *upon the body of the de-445 ceased, performed conformably to the Philippine law; and it was partly upon this testimony that the court of first instance rested its judgment of conviction.

On two occasions, covering the examination and cross-examination of two witnesses for the government, Diaz, who was at large on bail, voluntarily absented himself from the trial, but consented that it should proceed in his absence, but in the presence of his counsel, which it did.

Following his conviction, Diaz prosecuted an appeal to the supreme court of the Philippines, where, subject to a change made in the term of imprisonment (see Trono v. United States, 199 U. S. 521, 50 L. ed. 292, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 121, 4 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 773; Flemister v. United States, 207 U. S. 372, 52 L. ed. 252, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 129), the conviction was sustained (15 Philippine, 123) and the case was then brought here.

Mr. Frederic R. Coudert argued the cause, and, with Mr. Howard Thayer Kingsbury, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

This court has jurisdiction of the cause, and power to review all questions involved therein.

Penn Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Austin, 168 U. S. 685, 695, 42 L. ed. 626, 630, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 223; Giles v. Harris, 189 U. S. 475, 486, 47 L. ed. 909, 912, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 639; Hornner v. United States, 143 U. S. 570, 577, 36 L. ed. 266, 269, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 522; Burton v. United States, 196 U. S. 283, 295, 49 L. ed. 482, 485, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 243.

Defendant cannot legally consent that the trial proceed in his absence.

Thompson v. Utah, 170 U. S. 343, 354, 42 L. ed. 1061, 1068, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 620; Hopt v. Utah, 110 U. S. 574, 28 L. ed. 262, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 202, 4 Am. Crim. Rep. 417.

There is no provision in the Philippine statutes permitting a criminal trial to proceed in the absence of the defendant, or dispensing with the confrontation rule, such as was considered by this court in West v. Louisiana, 194 U. S. 258, 48 L. ed. 965, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 650.

There is no suggestion that any of the witnesses on the assault trial or the preliminary hearing were kept away by the defendant. The use of such evidence against the defendant in the homicide trial was, therefore, in itself, reversible error.

Motes v. United States, 178 U. S. 458, 44 L. ed. 1150, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 993.

The introduction of the record of the assault case upon the homicide trial was merely in support of the defendant's plea of former jeopardy, and was so recognized by the court below. Such record was merely evidence of the jeopardy. It was not, and could not be, evidence of the facts which were in issue in the former trial.

Kirby v. United States, 174 U. S. 47, 55, 43 L. ed. 890, 893, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 574, 11 Am. Crim. Rep. 330.

The defendant's plea of former jeopardy was good and should have been sustained.

Kepner v. United States, 195 U. S. 100, 49 L. ed. 114, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 797, 1 Ann. Cas. 655; Trono v. United States, 199 U. S. 521, 50 L. ed. 292, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 121, 4 Ann. Cas. 773; Gavieres v. United States, 220 U. S. 338, 55 L. ed. 489, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 421; 4 Hammond's Blackstone, 431; Burton v. United States, 202 U. S. 344, 380, 50 L. ed. 1057, 1070, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 688, 6 Ann. Cas. 362; Carter v. McClaughry, 183 U. S. 365, 395, 46 L. ed. 236, 251, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 181; Re Nielsen, 131 U. S. 176, 33 L. ed. 118, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 672; State v. Cooper, 13 N. J. L. 361, 25 Am. Dec. 490; Reg. v. Elrington, 1 Best & S. 688, 31 L. J. Mag. Cas. N. S. 14, 8 Jur. N. S. 97, 5 L. T. N. S.

284, 10 Week. Rep. 13, 9 Cox, C. C. 86; Reg. v. Miles, 17 Cox, C. C. 9, 59 L. J. Mag. Cas. N. S. 56, L. R. 24 Q. B. Div. 423, 62 L. T. N. S. 572, 38 Week. Rep. 334, 54 J. P. 549; Reg. v. Stanton, 5 Cox, C. C. 324; Wemyss v. Hopkins, L. R. 10 Q. B. 378; Reg. v. King, 18 Cox. C. C. 447, 66 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 87, [1897] 1 Q. B. 214, 75 L. T. N. S. 392, 61 J. P. 329; Blair v. State, 81 Ga. 629, 7 S. E. 855.

Even in reviewing a judgment based on the verdict of a jury, the court can always consider whether there was any evidence to sustain the conclusion reached.

Halsell v. Renfrow, 202 U. S. 287, 292, 50 L. ed. 1032, 1035, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 610, 6 Ann. Cas. 189; Lancaster v. Collins, 115 U. S. 222, 225, 29 L. ed. 373, 374, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 33.

The presumption of innocence on the part of the defendant was wholly disregarded.

Kirby v. United States, 174 U. S. 47, 55, 43 L. ed. 890, 893, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 574, 11 Am. Crim. Rep. 330; Coffin v. United States, 156 U. S. 432, 458, 39 L. ed. 481, 492, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 394.

Solicitor General Lehmann argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

The jurisdiction of this court under the writ of error is restricted to the question whether any rights of the defendant secured by the Constitution or statutes of the United States have been violated.

Ong Chang Wing v. United States, 218 U. S. 272, 54 L. ed. 1040, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 15; Dowdell v. United States, 221 U. S. 325, 55 L. ed. 753, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 590.

The conviction upon the prosecution for assault and battery was not a bar to the prosecution for the homicide resulting from the assault.

Grafton v. United States, 206 U. S. 333, 51 L. ed. 1084, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 749, 11 Ann. Cas. 640; Com. v. Roby, 12 Pick. 496; State v. Littlefield, 70 Me. 452, 35 Am. Rep. 335; Johnson v. State, 19 Tex. App. 453, 53 Am. Rep. 385; 1 Bishop, New Crim. Law, 1059.

The right of the defendant to be confronted by the witnesses against him was not violated, for the record of the preliminary investigation was in evidence by his act and with his consent, for every purpose to which it was relevant.

Hancock v. State, 14 Tex. App. 392; Rosenbaum v. State, 33 Ala. 354; State v. Fooks, 65 Iowa, 452, 21 N. W. 773; Williams v. State, 61 Wis. 281, 21 N. W. 56; Reynolds v. United States, 98 U. S. 145, 25 L. ed. 244; Ansbro v. United States, 159 U. S. 695, 40 L. ed. 310, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 187; West v. Louisiana, 194 U. S. 258, 48 L. ed.

965, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 650; Paraiso v. United States, 207 U. S. 368, 52 L. ed. 249, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 127; Weems v. United States, 217 U. S. 349, 54 L. ed. 793, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 544, 19 Ann. Cas. 705; Dowdell v. United States, 221 U. S. 325, 55 L. ed. 753, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 590.

Mr. Justice Van Devanter, after stating the case as above, delivered the opinion of the court:

The provision against double jeopardy, in the Philippine civil government act (32 Stat. at L. 691, chap. 1369, § 5), is in terms restricted to instances where the second jeopardy is "for the same offense" as was the first. Gavieres v. United States, 220 U. S. 338, 55 L. ed. 489, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 421. That was not the case here. The homicide charged against the accused in the court of first instance and the assault and battery for which he was tried before [449] the justice of the peace, although *identical in some of their elements, were distinct offenses both in law and in fact. The death of the injured person was the principal element of the homicide, but was no part of the assault and battery. At the time of the trial for the latter the death had not ensued, and not until it did ensue was the homicide committed. Then, and not before, was it possible to put the accused in jeopardy for that offense. Com. v. Roby, 12 Pick. 496; State v. Littlefield, 70 Me. 452, 35 Am. Rep. 335; Johnson v. State, 19 Tex. App. 453, 53 Am. Rep. 385. Besides, under the Philippine law, the justice of the peace, although possessed of jurisdiction to try the accused for assault and battery, was without jurisdiction to try him for homicide; and, of course, the jeopardy incident to the trial before the justice did not extend to an offense beyond his jurisdiction. All that could be claimed for that jeopardy was that it protected the accused from being again prosecuted for the assault and battery, and therefore required that the latter be not treated as included, as a lesser offense, in the charge of homicide, as otherwise might have been done under Philippine Comp. Stat. § 3284. State v. Littlefield, supra. It follows that the plea of former jeopardy disclosed no obstacle to the prosecution for homicide.

It is objected that the accused was deprived of the right, secured to him by § 5 of the Philippine civil government act, supra, "to meet the witnesses face to face," in that the judgment of conviction for homicide was rested in part upon the testimony produced before the justice of the peace at the trial for assault and battery and at the preliminary investigation. But this objection overlooks the circumstances in which the record wherein that testimony was set forth was received in evidence. It was not offered by the government, but by the accused, and was offered without qualification or restriction. And it is otherwise manifest that the offer included the testimony embodied in the record as well as the recitals of what *was done by the jus-[450] tice. It was all received just as it was offered, no objection being interposed by the government. In some respects the testimony was favorable to the accused and in others favorable to the government. It included a statement by the accused, who refrained from testifying in the court of first instance, and also the report of an autopsy which was favorable to him. In these circumstances the testimony was rightly treated as admitted generally, as applicable to any issue which it tended to prove, and as equally available to the government and the accused. Scars v. Starbird, 78 Cal. 225, 230, 20 Pac. 547; Diversy v. Kellogg, 44 Ill. 114, 121, 92 Am. Dec. 154. True, the testimony could not have been admitted without the consent of the accused, first, because it was within the rule against hearsay, and, second, because the accused was entitled to meet the witnesses face to face. But it was not admitted without his consent, but at his request, for it was he who offered it in evidence. So, of the fact that it was hearsay, it suffices to observe that when evidence of that character is admitted without objection, it is to be considered and given its natural probative effect as if it were in law admissible. Damon v. Carrol, 163 Mass. 404, 408, 40 N. E. 185; Sherwood v. Sissa, 5 Nev. 349, 355; United States v. McCoy, 193 U. S. 593, 598, 48 L. ed. 805, 807, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 528; Schlemmer v. Buffalo, R. & P. R. Co. 205 U. S. 1, 9, 51 L. ed. 681, 685, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 407; Neal v. Delaware, 103 U. S. 370, 396, 26 L. ed. 567, 573; Foster v. United States, 101 C. C. A. 485, 178 Fed. 165, 176. And of the fact that it came from witnesses who were not present at the trial, it is to be observed that the right of confrontation secured by the Philippine civil government act is in the nature of a privilege extended to the accused, rather than a restriction upon him (State v. McNeil, 33 La. Ann. 1332, 1335), and that he is free to assert it or to waive it, as to him may seem advantageous. That this is so is a necessary conclusion from the adjudged cases relating to the like right secured by the Constitutions of the several states and the Constitution of the United States. Thus, it is [451] held that the right is waived where, by the consent of the accused, the prosecution is permitted to read in evidence the testimony of an absent witness, given in some prior proceeding (Hancock v. State, 14 Tex. App. 392; Rosenbaum v. State, 33 Ala. 354; Williams v. State, 61 Wis. 281, 21 N. W. 56; State v. Polson, 29 Iowa, 133); or a statement of what such a witness would testify, if present, as embodied in an agreement made to avoid a continuance or to dispense with the presence of the witness (State v. Wagner, 78 Mo. 644, 648, 47 Am. Rep. 131; State v. Fooks, 65 Iowa, 452, 21 N. W. 773; State v. Mortensen, 26 Utah, 312, 73 Pac. 562, 633; State v. Lewis, 31 Wash. 75, 88, 71 Pac. 778); or the deposition of such a witness, taken within or without the jurisdiction (Butler v. State, 97 Ind. 378; State v. Vanella, 40 Mont. 326, 106 Pac. 364, 20 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 398; Wightman v. People, 67 Barb. 44; People v. Guidici, 100 N. Y. 503, 508, 3 N. E. 493, 5 Am. Crim. Rep. 455; People v. Murray, 52 Mich. 288, 17 N. W. 843). In the last case, which involved a conviction for murder in the second degree, the question presented and the ruling thereon were stated by Judge Cooley as follows:

"A chief ground of error relied upon is that the prosecution was allowed to put in evidence certain depositions taken out of court of witnesses not present at the trial. The facts seem to be that the attorneys for the respective parties stipulated to put in certain depositions on both sides, and they were put in accordingly. This, it is said, was in violation of the respondent's constitutional right to be confronted with his witnesses. But the court made no ruling in the matter; what was done was voluntarily done by the parties; the defendant had the benefit of the stipulation, and, for aught we can know, it may have been made chiefly in his interest. . . . The defendant undoubtedly had a constitutional right to be confronted with his witnesses. He waived that right in this case, apparently for his own supposed advantage and to obtain evidence on his own behalf. It would have been a mere impertinence for the court 452] to have interfered and precluded *this stipulation being acted upon. But it would have been more than an impertinence; it would have been gross error. And it would be palpable usurpation of power for us now to set aside a judgment for a neglect of the court not at the time complained of, but in respect to something where any other course would have been plain error. Under the view taken by the respondent it would seem that when the evidence had been obtained under his stipulation, the court was put in position where it was impossible to avoid error; for if the evidence was received, he might complain, as he does now, that his constitutional right was violated:

and if the court refused to receive it when he was consenting, the respondent would be entitled to have the conviction set aside for that error."

The view that this right may be waived also was recognized by this court in Reynolds v. United States, 98 U. S. 145, 158, 25 L. ed. 244, 247, where testimony given on a first trial was held admissible on a second, even against a timely objection, because the witness was absent by the wrongful act of the accused. In that case it was said:

"The Constitution gives the accused the right to a trial at which he should be confronted with the witnesses against him; but if a witness is absent by his own wrongful procurement, he cannot complain if competent evidence is admitted to supply the place of that which he has kept away. The Constitution does not guarantee an accused person against the legitimate consequences of his own wrongful acts. It grants him the privilege of being confronted with the witnesses against him; but if he voluntarily keeps the witnesses away, he cannot insist on his privilege. If, therefore, when absent by his procurement, their evidence is supplied in some lawful way, he is in no condition to assert that his constitutional rights have been violated."

As here the accused, by his voluntary act, placed in evidence the testimony disclosed by the record in question, *and[453] thereby sought to obtain an advantage from it, he waived his right of confrontation as to that testimony, and cannot now complain of its consideration.

It also is objected that the accused was wrongly convicted in that the trial proceeded in part in his absence. The facts in this connection are these: The accused was represented and heard by counsel at every stage of the proceedings. He also was present in person at all the proceedings preliminary to the trial and at the time it was begun and during the major part of it. But on two occasions, in the latter part of the trial, he voluntarily absented himself, and sent to the court a message expressly consenting that the trial proceed in his absence, which was done. On these occasions two witnesses for the government were both examined and cross-examined. No complaint grounded upon his absence was made in the trial court or in the supreme court of the Philippines; and the objection now made is not that he did not voluntarily waive his right to be present, if he could waive it, but that it could not be waived, and that the court was therefore without power to proceed in his absence.

The Philippine laws, Comp. Stat. 1907, contain the following provisions, bearing upon the presence of the accused at the proceedings upon a charge for felony:

"Sec. 3270. In all criminal prosecutions the defendant shall be entitled (a) to appear and defend in person and by counsel at every stage of the proceedings. . . .

"Sec. 3271. . . . If the charge is for felony (delito), the defendant must be personally present at the arraignment; . . .

"Sec. 3280. A plea of guilty can be put in only by the defendant himself in open court. . . .

"Sec. 3296. The defendant must be personally present at the time of pronouncing judgment, if the conviction is for a felony;

454] *Not only is there such a difference in the terms of these sections as naturally implies a difference in meaning, but it is evident that unless the first means something less than that the accused must be present at every stage of the proceedings, there was no occasion for the provisions quoted from the others, and also that if the terms used in the others were deemed essential to express the thought that the accused must be present at particular stages of the proceedings, like terms would have been employed in the first had it been intended to make his presence equally requisite at other stages. It therefore is evident that the effect of these sections, when their differing terms are considered, is to make the presence of the accused indispensable at the arraignment, at the time the plea is taken, if it be one of guilt, and when judgment is pronounced, and to entitle him to be present at all other stages of the proceedings, but not to make his presence thereat indispensable. As here it does not appear, and is not claimed, that the accused was absent at any of the times when his presence was thus made indispensable, and as his absence during the latter part of the trial was not only voluntary, but coupled with an express consent that it should proceed in the presence of his counsel, as was done, it is plain that there was no infraction of the Philippine laws in that regard.

We are thus brought to the question whether the provision in § 5 of the Philippine civil government act, securing to the accused in all criminal prosecutions "the right to be heard by himself and counsel," makes his presence indispensable at every stage of the trial, or invests him with a right which he is always free to assert, but which he also may waive by his voluntary act. Of course, if that provision makes his presence thus indispensable, it is of no moment that the Philippine laws do not go so far, for they cannot lessen its force or effect. An identical or similar provision is found in the Constitutions of the *sev-[455

eral states, and its substantial equivalent is embodied in the 6th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States. It is the right which these constitutional provisions secure to persons accused of crime in this country that was carried to the Philippines by the congressional enactment, and, therefore, according to a familiar rule, the prevailing course of decision here may and should be accepted as determinative of the nature and measure of the right there. Kepner v. United States, 195 U. S. 100, 124, 49 L. ed. 114, 122, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 797, 1 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 655.

As the offense in this instance was a felony, we may put out of view the decisions dealing with this right in cases of misdemeanor. In cases of felony our courts, with substantial accord, have regarded it as extending to every stage of the trial, inclusive of the empaneling of the jury and the reception of the verdict, and as being scarcely less important to the accused than the right of trial itself. And with like accord they have regarded an accused who is in custody and one who is charged with a capital offense as incapable of waiving the right; the one, because his presence or absence is not within his own control; and the other because, in addition to being usually in custody, he is deemed to suffer the constraint naturally incident to an apprehension of the awful penalty that would follow conviction. But, where the offense is not capital and the accused is not in custody, the prevailing rule has been, that if, after the trial has begun in his presence, he voluntarily absents himself, this does not nullify what has been done or prevent the completion of the trial, but, on the contrary, operates as a waiver of his right to be present, and leaves the court free to proceed with the trial in like manner and with like effect as if he were present. Fight v. State, 7 Ohio, pt. 1, p. 181, 28 Am. Dec. 626; Wilson v. State, 2 Ohio St. 319; McCorkle v. State, 14 Ind. 39, 44; Hill v. State, 17 Wis. 675, 86 Am. Dec. 736; Stoddard v. State, 132 Wis. 520, 112 N. W. 453, 13 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1211; Sahlinger v. People, 102 Ill. 241; Gallagher v. People, 211 *Ill. 158, 71 N. E. 842; [456
Barton v. State, 67 Ga. 653, 44 Am. Rep. 743; Robson v. State, 83 Ga. 166, 9 S. E. 610; Price v. State, 36 Miss. 531, 72 Am. Dec. 195; Gales v. State, 64 Miss. 105, 8 So. 167; State v. Ricks, 32 La. Ann. 1098; State v. Perkins, 40 La. Ann. 210, 3 So. 347; State v. Kelly, 97 N. C. 404, 2 Am. St. Rep. 299, 2 S. E. 185; Lynch v. Com. 88 Pa. 189, 32 Am. Rep. 445; Gore v. State, 52 Ark. 285, 5 L.R.A. 832, 12 S. W. 564; State v. Hope, 100 Mo. 347, 8 L.R.A. 608, 13 S. W. 490; Frey v. Calhoun Circuit Judge, 107 Mich. 130, 64 N. W. 1047; People v. Mathews, 139 Cal. 527, 73 Pac. 416; State v. Way, 76 Kan. 928, 14 L.R.A.(N.S.) 603, 93 Pac. 159; Com. v. McCarthy, 163 Mass. 458, 40 N. E. 766; United States v. Davis, 6 Blatchf. 464, Fed. Cas. No. 14,923; United States v. Loughery, 13 Blatchf. 267, Fed. Cas. No. 15,631; Falk v. United States, 15 App. D. C. 446, 454, s. c. 180 U. S. 636, 45 L. ed. 709, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 923.

The reasoning upon which this rule of decision rests is clearly indicated in Barton v. State, 67 Ga. 653, 44 Am. Rep. 743, where it is said by the supreme court of Georgia:

"It is the right of the defendant in cases of felony . . . to be present at all stages of the trial,—especially at the rendition of the verdict; and if he be in such custody and confinement . . . as not to be present unless sent for and relieved by the court, the reception of the verdict during such compulsory absence is so illegal as to necessitate the setting it aside. . . . The principle thus ruled is good sense and sound law; because he cannot exercise the right to be present at the rendition of the verdict when in jail, unless the officer of the court brings him into the court by its order.

"But the case is quite different when, after being present through the progress of the trial and up to the dismissal of the jury to their room, he voluntarily absents himself from the court room, where he and his bail obligated themselves that he should be. . . . And the absolute necessity of the distinction, or the abolition of the continuance of the bail when the trial begins, is seen, when it is considered that otherwise there could be no conviction of any defendant unless he wished to be present at the time the verdict is rendered."

457] *True, in that case the defendant was absent only at the reception of the verdict, but the decisions, as also the reasoning upon which they proceed, embrace absences at other stages of the trial. In Falk v. United States, 15 App. D. C. 446, 454, s. c. 180 U. S. 636, 45 L. ed. 709, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 923, the accused, who was at large on bail, was present when the trial was begun and during the taking of a portion of the evidence for the government, and then fled the jurisdiction. He was called and defaulted, and the trial proceeded in his absence, the remaining evidence being taken and a verdict of guilt returned. Subsequently he was apprehended, and sentence was then imposed, notwithstanding his objection that the trial had proceeded in his absence. In affirming the judgment, the court of appeals, speaking through Mr. Justice Morris, said:

506

(p. 454) "It does not seem to us to be consonant with the dictates of common sense that an accused person, being at large upon bail, should be at liberty, whenever he pleased, to withdraw himself from the courts of his country and to break up a trial already commenced. The practical result of such a proposition, if allowed to be law, would be to prevent any trial whatever until the accused person himself should be pleased to permit it. For by the statute (U. S. Rev. Stat. § 1015, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 718) he is entitled as a matter of right to be enlarged upon bail 'in all criminal cases where the offense is not punishable by death;' and therefore, in all such cases, he may, by absconding, prevent a trial. This would be a travesty of justice, which could not be tolerated; and it is not required or justified by any regard for the right of personal liberty. On the contrary, the inevitable result would be to abridge the right of personal liberty by abridging or restricting the right now granted by the statute to be abroad on bail until the verdict is rendered. And this the counsel for the appellant appear candidly to admit. But we do not think that any rule of law or constitutional principle leads us to any conclusion that would be so disastrous as well to the administration *of justice as to [458 the true interests of civil liberty. . . .

(p. 460) "The question is one of broad public policy, whether an accused person, placed upon trial for crime, and protected by all the safeguards with which the humanity of our present criminal law sedulously surrounds him, can with impunity defy the processes of that law, paralyze the proceedings of courts and juries, and turn them into a solemn farce, and ultimately compel society, for its own safety, to restrict the operation of the principle of personal liberty. Neither in criminal nor in civil cases will the law allow a person to take advantage of his own wrong. And yet this would be precisely what it would do if it permitted an escape from prison, or an absconding from the jurisdiction while at large on bail, during the pendency of a trial before a jury, to operate as a shield."

But it is said that the question has been ruled otherwise by this court in Hopt v. Utah, 110 U. S. 574, 28 L. ed. 262, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 202, 4 Am. Crim. Rep. 417; Lewis v. United States, 146 U. S. 370, 36 L. ed. 1011, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 136; Schwab v. Berggren, 143 U. S. 442, 36 L. ed. 218, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 525; and Thompson v. Utah, 170 U. S. 343, 42 L. ed. 1061, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep.

223 U. S.

620. We think this is not the import of those cases. In each the accused was in custody, charged with a capital offense, and was sentenced to death. In the first, a part of the trial was had in his absence notwithstanding the territorial statute declared that he "must be personally present." He did not object at the time, and it subsequently was claimed that, by his silence, he had consented to what was done. But this court held otherwise, saying: "That which the law makes essential in proceedings involving the deprivation of life or liberty cannot be dispensed with or affected by the consent of the accused, much less by his mere failure, when on trial and in custody, to object to unauthorized methods." In the second case, "the prisoner was not brought face to face with the jury until after the challenges had been made and the selected jurors were brought into the box to be sworn," and he excepted at the 459]*time to the mode in which the challenges were required to be made. The ruling in this court was that the making of the challenges was an essential part of the trial, and that it was the right of the accused to be brought face to face with the jurors when the challenges were made. The other two cases are even less in point. In one the question was whether the presence of the accused was essential in proceedings on error in an appellate court, and it was held that it was not essential. And in the other the question was whether, when the applicable law contemplated that the accused should be tried before a tribunal composed of a court and a jury of twelve, he could by his silence or consent authorize a tribunal differently composed, and not recognized by law, to try him; and it was held that he could not.

We conclude that the Philippine laws before quoted accord to one charged with a felony the full right expressed in the congressional enactment, as that right was recognized and understood in this country at the time it was carried to the Philippines, and that in what was done in the present case there was no infringement of it.

Lastly, it is insisted that the evidence was inadequate to warrant the conviction. The trial was to the court without a jury, as is permitted in the Philippines, and both the trial court and the supreme court of the Islands concurred in finding the accused guilty under the evidence. Of course, these concurring findings are entitled to great respect. Nevertheless, following the rule recognized in Wiborg v. United States, 163 U. S. 632, 658, 41 L. ed. 289, 298, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1127, 1197, and Clyatt v. United States, 197 U. S. 207, 222, 49 L. ed. 56 L. ed.

726, 731, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 429, we have attentively examined the evidence as set forth in the record and discussed in the opinions of the Philippine courts, and are clearly of opinion that the conviction was warranted by it.

Judgment affirmed.

*Mr. Justice Lamar, dissenting: [460

I dissent, because the trial was conducted in accordance with the rules of procedure of the Spanish law, and in disregard of the fundamental changes made by the Bill of Rights of the Philippine Islands. The defendant was not given a speedy trial, but was kept in jeopardy during repeated and lengthy suspensions.

He was not confronted with the witnesses, but the court accepted his telegraphic waiver, and the trial thereafter proceeded without the defendant being present. Witnesses were examined, argument of counsel made, and three months later sentence was pronounced, all in his absence.

On appeal the judgment was reversed by the supreme court of the Philippines, not for the purpose of setting the judgment aside, but to inflict a penalty of more than twofold severity, and to raise the term of imprisonment from six to fourteen years in the penitentiary.

The act of July 1, 1902 [32 Stat. at L. 691, chap. 1369], regulating the government of the Philippine Islands, does not provide for trial by jury, nor does it destroy the power of the appellate court to change the sentence in a criminal case. But the absence of the right to trial by jury, and the presence of the danger of appeal make it all the more important to enforce those safeguards copied from the Constitution of the United States and granted the people of those islands.

Barring the right to indictment and trial by jury the defendant charged with a felony before a Philippine court has substantially the same rights as though he were on trial in a United States court. And if this conviction can stand, it must be because the same things would be proper in this country, where the language of the Constitution is, in this respect, substantially the same as that of Philippine Bill of Rights.

Sec. 5. "That in all criminal prosecutions the accused *shall enjoy the right to [461 be heard by himself and counsel, to demand the nature and cause of the accusation against him, to have a speedy and public trial, to meet the witnesses face to face, and to have compulsory process to compel the attendance of witnesses in his behalf.

"That no person shall be held to answer for a criminal offense without due process of law; and no person for the same offense shall be twice put in jeopardy of punishment, nor shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself."

Not only the fact that the defendant's liberty is involved, but the further fact that the decision will be a precedent in other cases, justifies a brief statement of the facts and reasons on which this dissent is based.

The opinion proceeds upon the theory that while a defendant has the right to be confronted with the witnesses, he may waive that privilege in all except capital cases. In support of that proposition many authorities are cited.

In some of these cases the defendant was voluntarily absent from the court room, for a short time, without the attention of the court being called to the fact. In others the defendant escaped while the trial was in progress. In others, having given bail, he failed to return in time to hear the verdict read. In all of them the court's decision was expressly, or by necessary implication, placed upon the ground that the defendant could not take advantage of his own wrong, and render a trial nugatory by escape or making an improper use of his bail.

These cases undoubtedly announce a correct rule. For, when the trial of a felony begins, it ought to proceed in due and orderly course to verdict. The defendant has no right to force the court to order a mistrial. If he escapes or takes advantage of his bail to remain away during the trial, the court proceeds, not because it is willing that he should be absent, but because it is obliged to go on without him. But because the court is compelled so to act under 462]*such facts, it does not follow that it could or would consent for him to be absent during the trial; or that it would accept a formal waiver from him of the right to be confronted by the witnesses, or to be present when sentence was pronounced. As said in Hopt's Case, 110 U. S. 579, 28 L. ed. 265, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 202, 4 Am. Crim. Rep. 417:

"The argument to the contrary necessarily proceeds upon the ground that he alone is concerned as to the mode by which he may be deprived of his life or liberty. . . . This is a mistaken view. . . . The public has an interest in his life and liberty. Neither can be lawfully taken except in the mode prescribed by law. . . . If he be deprived of his life or liberty without being so present, such deprivation would be without that due process of law required by the Constitution."

It is true, as pointed out in the opinion of the court here, that this was said in a case where the defendant was on trial for his life. But the principle was announced in language which, repeatedly and expressly, made it applicable to felonies, and wherever the defendant might be deprived of his life or liberty. The defendant, in such cases, cannot waive his right to be present when his liberty is involved, any more than when his life is at stake. And it is a misnomer to say that when he escapes or refuses to be present, that he has waived the right. He has made it impossible for the court to give him his rights.

But, even if the doctrine of waiver could be extended beyond these cases of necessity, arising from flight and voluntary absence after the trial began, it would not apply in the present instance. The case was conducted from beginning to end as though it were civil litigation, with several suspensions of the trial,—once for fourteen days, once for thirty days,—and with three months between the argument and the rendition of the judgment. There was in this case, therefore, no compelling necessity, as in those cited in the opinion of the majority. The court accepted the defendant's waiver, as though he alone had an interest *in the method of trial,—[463 ignoring the fact that, as said in the Hopt Case, "the public had an interest in his life and liberty."

In order to make this want of necessity clear it will be necessary to state some of the facts as they appear in this record.

The defendant lived in the town of San Carlos, in the province of Occidental Negros. He was charged with having killed Alcanzaren in that municipality. After a preliminary trial, he was bound over to answer for the charge of homicide,—equivalent to manslaughter, and not punishable by death. He gave bond, and was subsequently brought to trial before the court of first instance, sitting at Bacolod, which, according to the maps, is about 30 miles from San Carlos, and on the other side of the Island. The distance between the two places by water is about 100 miles.

Diaz was arraigned and pleaded "not guilty" September 26, 1906. The case was several times continued, the defendant once or twice consenting. But on August 15, 1907, eleven months after arraignment, the trial began,—the defendant and his counsel being present.

Two witnesses for the prosecution were examined. "At the request of the fiscal, the hearing was suspended and an order was issued for the arrest of" three absent witnesses. The record does not show to what date the court adjourned. But fourteen days later it reconvened, the defendant and his counsel again being present.

The trial was resumed August 29, 1907, and two witnesses for the prosecution were examined.

The record does not show why the proceedings were again suspended, nor the date to which the court adjourned. But it does appear that after a delay of thirty days the court again reconvened, and that the judge had received a telegram from Diaz. It is copied into the record, and reads as follows:

464] *San Carlos, Sept. 20, '07.
Judge Jocson, Bacolod:—

I waive right to be present during examination of government witnesses.

Gabriel Diaz.

Other entries of the same date show that "on September 20, 1907, in open court, the Honorable Vincent Jocson, of the 10th district, presiding, the provincial fiscal and the counsel for defendant being present, the accused himself having waived his right to be present at the trial, according to a telegram just received from him, the trial of this case was resumed and Pelagio Carbajosa, a witness for the prosecution, was examined. The prosecution then rested. The counsel for defendant only introduced in evidence a certified copy of the proceedings before the justice court. . . . The trial was then adjourned for the purpose of allowing the fiscal to introduce evidence in rebuttal."

The next day the court again met, the judge, provincial fiscal, and attorney for the defendant being present, "The trial of this case was resumed and a witness for the prosecution was examined in rebuttal. The fiscal then rested his case, and counsel for the accused waived his right to introduce further evidence. Both parties having rested, the fiscal and counsel for the defendant, respectively, made their oral arguments, and the court declared the trial closed, and took the case under advisement."

The court, however, did not adjourn to a given date, nor was there even a provision that the defendant and his counsel should be notified of the time and place when judgment would be entered and sentence pronounced.

The court waited ninety days. It then delivered an opinion, entitled in the case, and dated, "Bacolod, Dec. 24, 1907," in which he discussed the evidence, and concluded by finding the defendant guilty, and 465] sentencing him to *confinement in the penitentiary for six years and one day.

Notice of this sentence was evidently received by the defendant, because on January 17, 1908, he entered an appeal to the supreme court of the Philippines. One of the judges of that court held that "there was no competent evidence to sustain a conviction," but the majority, "notwithstanding the deficiencies and irregularities that are observable in the prosecution of this case," reversed the case, not for the purpose of setting aside the conviction, but solely for the purpose of increasing the penalty. It thereupon sentenced him to a penalty of fourteen years of reclusion temporal, with the accessory penalties of article 59 of the Penal Code.

From these facts it will be seen that the Philippine court of first instance was not in the situation of an American court with a jury impaneled and under the necessity either of proceeding to verdict in the defendant's absence, or of discharging the jury, and rendering the trial nugatory. It assumed that if Diaz was willing to be absent, the court could accept his waiver. The procedure adopted was evidently in accordance with the judge's view of the Spanish law, but in disregard of the fact that, under the Bill of Rights, when the trial began, the defendant stood upon his deliverance. There could thereafter be the customary adjournments from day to day, but no suspensions of the trial except "in case of urgent necessity," "and for very plain and obvious causes." United States v. Perez, 9 Wheat. 580, 6 L. ed. 165; Thompson v. United States, 155 U. S. 274, 39 L. ed. 149, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 73, 9 Am. Crim. Rep. 209.

At common law the trial of felonies was required to be completed at one sitting. Of necessity this rule had to be modified, and adjournments from day to day were finally allowed. There are a few instances in which the case was suspended for a reasonable time, in order to permit the attendance of witnesses who had been unavoidably delayed, *or for other proper[466] cause, in the discretion of the judge conducting the trial. But without regard to the delay of eleven months between arraignment and trial, the extremest extension heretofore allowed is insignificant by comparison with those here, first for two weeks and then for thirty days. In both these instances the record fails to show that the defendant objected, and it may be that if he can waive the right to be confronted by the witnesses he may waive the guaranty against multiplied jeopardy. For that right is not greater than the right to be present at every stage of the trial.

The court being of the opinion that the defendant need not be present at the trial, it is not surprising that he thought the defendant might also be absent when judgment was rendered and sentence pronounced.

It is true that the Philippine Code expressly declares that the defendant "must be personally present at the time of pronouncing judgment if the conviction is for a felony." But that could no more add to the Bill of Rights than a statute could repeal the requirement that the defendant should be confronted with the witnesses, and be present at every stage of the trial. That the defendant was not personally present is both the legal inference and the natural conclusion from what appears in the record. When the court took the case under advisement on September 21, 1907, it passed no order indicating when the decision would be delivered, even if it had the right to hold the defendant in suspense for days and weeks and months. There was therefore no reason for the defendant to be present at Bacolod on December 24, in anticipation that judgment would be entered on that date.

There are cases which hold that where the record shows that the defendant was present when the trial began, there is a presumption that he remains in attendance, and it is not necessary to repeat the statement in the record, from day to day, 467]so as to affirmatively show that *he was present. In the present case the presumption would be the other way, because, having been absent during the last two days of the trial, there is no reason to assume that he was present when, after an indeterminate suspension, the court reconvened. At any rate, there is peculiar room for the application of the rule in Federal courts announced in Lewis v. United States, 146 U. S. 372, 36 L. ed. 1012, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 136, that "where the personal presence is necessary in point of law, the record must show the fact."

In my opinion the conviction was not only erroneous because the defendant was not present when the witnesses were examined and argument made, but, having been unlawfully put in double jeopardy, and judgment equivalent to verdict having been pronounced in his absence, he is entitled to his discharge. Nolan v. State, 55 Ga. 521, 21 Am. Rep. 281, 1 Am. Crim. Rep. 532.

It may be that such views would work a radical change in criminal procedure in the Philippines. But when Congress incorporated the language of the 6th Amendment into the act of July 1, 1902, it must have intended to make just such changes, and to require the trial to be conducted in the American manner, and, among other things, also to prohibit suspensions and undue prolongation of the hearing, so as thereby to prevent the pain and anxiety which must inevitably be suffered by a prisoner who is thus kept on a mental rack.

These considerations compel me to dissent, and to add, that if the effort to review this judgment can lawfully result in having the sentence more than doubled, it imposes a penalty on the exercise of the right, and makes it worse to appeal than to submit to conviction on record which the supreme court of the Philippines admitted presented "irregularities and deficiencies."

*GAAR, SCOTT, & COMPANY, Plff.[468
in Err.,

v.

O. K. SHANNON.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 468-473.)

Error to state court—Federal question—decision on non-Federal ground.

1. A decision of a state court dismissing a suit by a foreign corporation to recover back a franchise tax imposed under a state statute which is alleged to contravene the Federal Constitution, which decision rests in part on the ground that the tax was voluntarily paid, cannot be reviewed in the Federal Supreme Court if the question as to voluntary payment fairly arises on the record, although the Federal questions may have been actually considered and determined by the state court.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 1455-1528, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Taxes—payment under protest—recovery back.

2. The payment by a foreign corporation of the franchise tax imposed by Tex. Laws 1905, chap. 19, to escape the consequences of the self-executing provisions of the statute, under which a corporation failing to pay the tax incurs a penalty and forfeits its right to do business in the state, and its right to sue, is not voluntary, so as to defeat the right to recover back the tax as paid under protest.

[For other cases, see Taxes, 608-612, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

NOTE.—On the general subject of writs of error from the United States Supreme Court to state courts—see notes to Martin v. Hunter, 4 L. ed. U. S. 97; Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 37 L. ed. U. S. 267; Re Buchanan, 39 L. ed. U. S. 884; and Kipley v. Illinois, 42 L. ed. U. S. 998.

On what adjudications of state courts can be brought up for review in the Supreme Court of the United States by writ of error to those courts—see note to Apex Transp. Co. v. Garbade, 62 L.R.A. 513.

On how and when questions must be raised and decided in a state court in order to make a case for a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States—see note to Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 63 L.R.A. 33.

As to when taxes illegally assessed may be recovered back—see note to Erskine v. Van Arsdale, 21 L. ed. U. S. 63.

Taxes — payment under protest— recovery back.

3. A foreign corporation doing only an interstate business, and therefore not liable to the franchise tax imposed by Tex. Laws 1905, chap. 19, cannot recover back the amount of such tax, as paid under the duress of the self-executing provisions of the statute, under which a corporation failing to pay the tax incurs a penalty and forfeits its right to do business in the state, and its right to sue.

[For other cases, see Taxes, 608-612, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 88.]

Argued December 11, 1911. Decided February 19, 1912.

IN ERROR to the Court of Civil Appeals for the Third Supreme Judicial District of the State of Texas, to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the District Court of Travis County, in that state, sustaining the demurrer to the complaint in an action by a foreign corporation to recover back a franchise tax. Affirmed.

See same case below, 52 Tex. Civ. App. 634, 115 S. W. 361.

Statement by Mr. Justice Lamar:

In this suit against Shannon, secretary of state for Texas, for the recovery of taxes paid under protest, the plaintiff, Gaar, Scott, & Company, alleged that it is a corporation chartered by the laws of Indiana, in which state it has its principal place of business, and where it manufactures 469]*machinery; that in 1901 it paid the amount of franchise tax required of foreign corporations, and obtained from the state of Texas a permit to do business for ten years. This permit, it alleges, was a contract which could not be impaired, but, notwithstanding that fact, the legislature, in 1905, passed an act requiring foreign companies doing business in Texas to pay a still higher franchise tax, measured by their capital and surplus, and provided that if the same was not paid by May 1st, a penalty of 25 per cent should be added, and if not paid by July 1st, the permit to do business in the state should be forfeited "without judicial ascertainment," and the company deprived of the right to sue in the courts. It alleged that the secretary of state had mailed to the company a circular calling attention to the provisions of the act, and thereupon, and before May 1, 1905, and again before May 1, 1906, under the duress of this statute, the company had paid the tax demanded, under protest, and with written notice that it reserved the right to sue for the recovery of the amount exacted by an unconstitutional law.

The petition alleges that plaintiff "only transacts an interstate business in the state of Texas in the sale of its manufactured products. That it employs at Dallas and Houston, Texas, agents who solicit and superintend the soliciting of orders for the goods manufactured by it at Richmond, Indiana, and that this applies to all goods sold by your petitioner in the state of Texas, and your petitioner further alleges that it was, at the time this permit was granted to do business in the state of Texas, and that it now is, and has been ever since said permit was granted to it, engaged in an interstate commerce business."

The only prayer was for the recovery of the taxes paid for the years 1905 and 1906. The defendant's general demurrer was sustained. 52 Tex. Civ. App. 634, 115 S. W. 361.

Mr. C. E. More argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Almon W. Bulkley and J. L. Patterson, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

These taxes were not voluntarily paid.

Arkansas Bldg. & L. Asso. v. Madden, 175 U. S. 269, 44 L. ed. 159, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 119; Erskine v. Van Arsdale, 15 Wall. 75, 21 L. ed. 63; State ex rel. McCurdy v. Nelson, 41 Minn. 25, 4 L.R.A. 300, 42 N. W. 548; Marshall v. Snediker, 25 Tex. 460, 78 Am. Dec. 534; Scottish Union & Nat. Ins. Co. v. Herriott, 109 Iowa, 606, 77 Am. St. Rep. 548, 80 N. W. 666; Denver v. Evans, 35 Colo. 490, 84 Pac. 65; Rumford Chemical Works v. Ray, 19 R. I. 302, 456, 33 Atl. 443, 34 Atl. 814; Boston & S. Glass Co. v. Boston, 4 Met. 181; Dunnell Mfg. Co. v. Newell, 15 R. I. 233, 2 Atl. 766; Creamer v. Bremen, 91 Me. 508, 40 Atl. 555; Woodmere Cemetery Asso. v. Springwells Twp. 130 Mich. 466, 90 N. W. 277; Gaar, S. & Co. v. Sorum, 11 N. D. 164, 90 N. W. 801; La Salle County v. Simmons, 10 Ill. 513; Harvey v. Olney, 42 Ill. 336; Prickett v. Madison County, 14 Ill. App. 454; Chicago v. Sperbeck, 69 Ill. 562; Robertson v. Frank Bros. Co. 132 U. S. 17, 33 L. ed. 236, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 5; Chicago v. Klinkert, 94 Ill. App. 524; Chicago v. Waukesha Imperial Spring Brewing Co. 97 Ill. App. 585; Henry v. Chester, 15 Vt. 460; Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Chicago, V. & W. Coal Co. 79 Ill. 121, 2 Mor. Min. Rep. 634; German Alliance Ins. Co. v. Van Cleave, 191 Ill. 410, 61 N. E. 94; Swift & C. & B. Co. v. United States, 111 U. S. 22, 28 L. ed. 341, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 244; Baker v. Panola County, 30 Tex. 86; Wood v. Stirman, 37 Tex. 585; Galveston v. Sydnor, 39 Tex. 236; Galveston Gas Co. v. Galveston County, 54 Tex. 287; Galveston

County v. Gorham, 49 Tex. 279; Galveston County v. Galveston Gas Co. 72 Tex. 509, 10 S. W. 583.

Mr. James D. Walthall, Assistant Attorney General of Texas, argued the cause, and, with Mr. Jewell P. Lightfoot, Attorney General, filed a brief for defendant in error:

If plaintiff in error was doing only an interstate business, as pleaded and contended by it, then a forfeiture of its permit could in no wise affect it, because its right to do an interstate business without first obtaining a permit is unquestioned.

Allen v. Tyson-Jones Buggy Co. 91 Tex. 22, 40 S. W. 393, 714; L. Miller & Co. v. Goodman, 91 Tex. 41, 40 S. W. 718; Lasater v. Purcell Mill & Elevator Co. 22 Tex. Civ. App. 33, 54 S. W. 425.

The taxes sought to be recovered in this case were therefore voluntarily paid, and cannot be recovered back, even though improperly collected.

2 Dill. Mun. Corp. 947; Lamborn v. Dickinson County, 97 U. S. 181, 24 L. ed. 926; Union P. R. Co. v. Dodge County, 98 U. S. 542, 25 L. ed. 196; Little v. Bowers, 134 U. S. 554, 33 L. ed. 1019, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 620.

Mr. Justice Lamar, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

On writ of error to a judgment sustaining defendant's demurrer to the complaint for the recovery of taxes paid under protest, the court of appeals of Texas considered all the assignments of error. It held that the permit of 1901, to do business for ten years, was not a contract, and that therefore the state, during that period, might demand an increased or additional franchise tax. It ruled that foreign corporations might be altogether excluded, or required to pay a discriminatory tax as the condition of the right to do business in Texas. It further held that even if there had been merit in plaintiff's contention, it was not entitled to recover the taxes for 1905 and 1906, because they had been voluntarily paid.

1. If the record affords a basis for sustaining the last proposition, this court cannot consider whether the act violates the 14th Amendment, or the commerce and contract clauses of the Constitution. For, as repeatedly ruled, where a state court has decided against the plaintiff in error on a matter of general law broad enough to sustain the judgment, this court will not consider the Federal questions, even though they may have been actually considered and determined adversely to his contention. Hale v. Akers, 132 U. S. 554, 564, 33 L. ed. 442, 446, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 171. The principle has been enforced in cases where the ruling of the state court was based on the application of the doctrine of res judicata, laches, statute of limitations, and others *similar in kind to[471 that involving the effect of a voluntary payment. Northern P. R. Co. v. Ellis, 144 U. S. 458, 36 L. ed. 504, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 724; Hale v. Lewis, 181 U. S. 473, 45 L. ed. 959, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 677; Moran v. Horsky, 178 U. S. 205, 44 L. ed. 1038, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 856; Pierce v. Somerset, 171 U. S. 648, 43 L. ed. 319, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 64; Rector v. Ashley, 6 Wall. 142, 18 L. ed. 733.

It is, however, equally well settled that if the Federal question is properly presented and necessarily controls the determination of the case, the appellate jurisdiction of this court is not defeated because the decision is put upon some matter of local law. West Chicago Street R. Co. v. Chicago, 201 U. S. 506, 520, 50 L. ed. 845, 850, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 518. And the plaintiff in error insists that, under this rule, the constitutionality of the statute must be decided, because the facts stated in the complaint, and admitted by the demurrer, do not afford any basis for holding that the money was voluntarily paid.

2. Neither a statute imposing a tax, nor the execution thereunder, nor a mere demand for payment, is treated as duress. It does not necessarily follow that there will be duress of goods. Or, if there is, the citizen, to avoid the consequences of the duress, may pay the money, regain the use of his property, and maintain a suit for the recovery of what has been exacted from him. The legal remedy redresses the wrong. But he has the same right to sue if he pays under compulsion of a statute whose self-executing provisions amount to duress. An act which declares that where the franchise tax is not paid by a given date, a penalty of 25 per cent shall be incurred, the license of the company shall be canceled, and the right to sue shall be lost, operates much more as duress than a levy on a limited amount of property. Payment to avoid such consequences is not voluntary but compulsory, and may be recovered back. Swift & C. & B. Co. v. United States, 111 U. S. 29, 28 L. ed. 343, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 244; Robertson v. Frank Bros. Co. 132 U. S. 23, 33 L. ed. 238, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 5; Oceanic Steam Nav. Co. v. Stranahan, 214 U. S. 329, 53 L. ed. 1018, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 671; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. *O'Connor, decided this day.[472 [223 U. S. 280, ante, 436, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 216.] Otherwise plaintiff might be without any remedy whatever. For in Arkansas Bldg. & L. Asso. v. Madden, 175 U. S. 269, 44 L. ed. 159, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 119, it was held that a taxpayer was not entitled to an injunction against the enforcement of a similar statute of the state of Texas, unless he could show that there was no adequate remedy at law. And, as payment under such an act was treated as compulsory, for which suit might be maintained, and as there was nothing to indicate inability of complainant to pay, or of the defendant to respond to a judgment, the bill was dismissed without prejudice. That necessarily recognized that the plaintiff had the right to pay under protest, sue the officer for the amount exacted, and recover it back in case it should be made to appear that the statute was void.

3. If, therefore, the plaintiff had been included in the class to which this statute applied, and, under the duress of its automatically enforced provisions, had paid the tax to avoid the disruption of its business, it could have maintained an action to recover the amount thus exacted. In that suit it would have been entitled to a decision on the question as to whether the statute was constitutional, and to a review of the judgment if it had been adverse to the company's contention. But the company did not, in any sense, come within the purview of the act. The plaintiff alleged that it was engaged only in interstate commerce. If so, the statute did not require from it the payment of the tax. For the supreme court of Texas in Allen v. Tyson-Jones Buggy Co. 91 Tex. 22, 40 S. W. 393, 714, and L. Miller & Co. v. Goodman, 91 Tex. 41, 40 S. W. 718, had held that the franchise tax act had no application to corporations doing an interstate business. The duress of its provisions, therefore, operated only on those doing intrastate business; and if the plaintiff, on a mere demand, paid the tax imposed by a statute applicable only to other corporations, it had no more right to recover than would a drygoods merchant 473] who voluntarily *paid a tax illegally imposed on those engaged in the selling of liquor.

To permit those not affected by a statute to pay the sum thereby assessed, and then sue for its recovery on the ground that the act was void, would reverse the rule that "one who would strike down a state statute as violative of the Federal Constitution must bring himself by proper averments and showing within the class as to whom the act thus attacked is unconstitutional. He must show that the alleged unconstitutional feature of the law injures him, and so operates as to deprive 56 L. ed.

him of rights protected by the Federal Constitution." Southern R. Co. v. King, 217 U. S. 534, 54 L. ed. 872, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594.

What we have said shows that the question as to voluntary payment fairly arose out of the record, and was not arbitrarily injected into the case. Leathe v. Thomas, 207 U. S. 99, 52 L. ed. 120, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30. A decision on that non-Federal point could properly dispose of the plaintiff's suit to recover back what it had paid. The judgment of the Civil Court of Appeals must therefore be affirmed.

NEW MARSHALL ENGINE COMPANY and Frank J. Marshall, Pliffs. in Err.,

v.

MARSHALL ENGINE COMPANY, by Andrew Van Blarcom, Its Receiver.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 473-480.)

Courts — concurrent jurisdiction — patent cases — specific performance.

A suit by the assignee of a patent, to compel the assignor and his assignee of a later patent, which, on the face of the application and letters patent, appears to be for an improvement, to assign the patent for such improvement to complainant, in compliance with a covenant for further assurance, is within the jurisdiction of a state court, although the bill also asks for an injunction against the sale or manufacture of machines covered by such later patent, where such injunction was only prayed as an incident of a finding that the title was vested in the complainant.

[For other cases, see Courts, 1416-1421, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 107]

Submitted December 15, 1911. Decided February 19, 1912.

IN ERROR to the Superior Court of the State of Massachusetts for the County of Franklin, to review a decree affirmed by the Supreme Judicial Court of that state, for the specific performance of a covenant for further assurance in the assignment of a patent. Affirmed.

See same case below in Supreme Judicial Court, 199 Mass. 546, 85 N. E. 741.

Statement by Mr. Justice Lamar:

On June 1, 1886, Letters Patent 342,802, were issued to Frank J. Marshall for an improvement in pulp-beating engines.

NOTE.—On concurrent jurisdiction of Federal and state courts—see notes to Copp v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 12 L.R.A. 725, and Smith v. M'Iver, 6 L. ed. U. S. 152.

Shortly before the patent expired he organized the Marshall Engine Company, and on September 15, 1902, assigned to it the patent and "all improvements thereon and renewals of the same." Marshall was elected president of the company, but neglected to have the assignment recorded within the time required by law. It contained, however, a provision for further assurance, and on October 8, 1904, after the patent had expired, Marshall executed an additional instrument whereby, after reciting the former assignment, he transferred the patent and "all further improvements thereon and renewals thereof."

In September, 1903, at the time the first assignment was made, Marshall had on file an application for a patent on "an improvement on patent 411,251, granted to E. R. Marshall, and embodies features shown in patent 342,802, granted in 1886 to myself." There is no further reference in the record to patent 411,251. Marshall's application was granted, and on April 14, 1903, Letters Patent 725,349 were granted to him.

No formal assignment was made, but it is found as a fact that, between September 15, 1903, and the receivership, the complainant manufactured nine or ten engines embodying the improvement covered by patent 725,349.

475] *On June 13, 1905, a receiver was appointed for the Marshall Engine Company. Immediately thereafter, Marshall organized under the laws of Massachusetts a new company bearing his name, and assigned to it this patent 725,349. The New Marshall Engine Company took with notice of the complainant's right.

The Marshall Engine Company, of New Jersey, claimed title to this patent 725,349 as an "improvement" on patent 342,802, which passed by virtue of the assignment of September 15, 1902. It thereupon filed, through its receiver, a bill in the superior court of Franklin County, Massachusetts, asserting this title, and praying that the defendants, Marshall and the New Marshall Engine Company, should be required to execute and deliver to it an assignment in due form to patent 725,349, so as to entitle it to be recorded in the Patent Office, and also that the defendants, their successors and assigns, should be enjoined from manufacturing or selling machines covered by patent 725,349.

The defendants answered, admitting or denying the several allegations of the bill, but setting up no affirmative defense. The case was referred to a master, who found in favor of the complainant. Thereupon the defendants moved to dismiss the bill because "it presents questions involving an inquiry as to the construction and scope of the patents therein mentioned, of which questions the Federal courts have exclusive jurisdiction." The motion was overruled, and a final decree was entered in favor of the complainants. The decision was affirmed by the supreme judicial court of Massachusetts, and the case was brought here by writ of error.

Mr. Edmund A. Whitman submitted the cause for plaintiffs in error. Messrs. Lyman W. Griswold and Frank J. Lawler were on the brief:

One question here presented is as to the construction to be given to the law governing the assignment under which the plaintiff claims title, which clearly makes it a case for the United States courts.

Littlefield v. Perry, 21 Wall. 205, 22 L. ed. 577; Aberthaw Constr. Co. v. Ransome, 192 Mass. 439, 78 N. E. 485.

If the assignee of a patent sets up his patent, he thereby puts the title in issue; and even if it is denied by the defendant, this does not make it a suit upon the contract, but it still remains a suit for infringement of a patent.

Excelsior Wooden Pipe Co. v. Pacific Bridge Co. 185 U. S. 291, 46 L. ed. 915, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681.

If the patent is involved it carries with it the whole case.

Excelsior Wooden Pipe Co. v. Pacific Bridge Co. 185 U. S. 282, 292, 46 L. ed. 910, 915, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681.

The character of a case is determined by the question involved. If it appears that some right will be defeated by one construction of a United States law, or sustained by an opposite construction of such law, a case thereby arises of which the United States courts alone have jurisdiction.

Pratt v. Paris Gaslight & Coke Co. 168 U. S. 255, 42 L. ed. 458, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 62; Excelsior Wooden Pipe Co. v. Pacific Bridge Co. 185 U. S. 282-286, 46 L. ed. 910-913, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681; Starin v. New York, 115 U. S. 257, 29 L. ed. 390, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 28.

This case involves the construction of patents, and the United States courts alone have jurisdiction.

Aberthaw Constr. Co. v. Ransome, 192 Mass. 439, 78 N. E. 485; Littlefield v. Perry, 21 Wall. 205, 22 L. ed. 577.

Assignees may sue in the United States courts for infringements.

Littlefield v. Perry, 21 Wall. 205, 22 L. ed. 577.

An injunction against future infringements is prayed for in this case, and thereby arises a case under the patent laws.

Excelsior Wooden Pipe Co. v. Pacific Bridge Co. 185 U. S. 282, 46 L. ed. 910, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681.

Even if the complaint, standing by itself, makes out a case of state jurisdiction, it will be taken away if the answer sets up a case of a right under the patent laws.

Robinson v. Anderson, 121 U. S. 522, 30 L. ed. 1021, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1011; Excelsior Wooden Pipe Co. v. Pacific Bridge Co. 185 U. S. 282, 46 L. ed. 910, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681.

A suit in which the relief sought is an injunction against infringing on a patent is one arising under the patent laws of the United States, although it incidentally involves a determination of the question of the ownership of the patent.

Atherton Mach. Co. v. Atwood-Morrison Co. 43 C. C. A. 72, 102 Fed. 949; Excelsior Wooden Pipe Co. v. Pacific Bridge Co. 185 U. S. 282, 294, 46 L. ed. 910, 916, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681.

The remedy sought involves the right of the defendant to use the patent; in other words, it is a suit for infringement, of which the Federal courts alone have jurisdiction.

Excelsior Wooden Pipe Co. v. Pacific Bridge Co. 185 U. S. 282, 46 L. ed. 910, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681.

Cases arising under the laws of the United States are such as grow out of the legislation of Congress, whether they constitute the right or privilege, or claim or protection, or defense of the party, in whole or in part, by whom they are asserted.

Tennessee v. Davis, 100 U. S. 257, 264, 25 L. ed. 648, 650; Story, Const. § 1647; Cohen v. Virginia, 6 Wheat. 264, 5 L. ed. 257; Puetz v. Bransford, 32 Fed. 318; White v. Rankin, 144 U. S. 628, 36 L. ed. 569, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 768; Adriance, P. & Co. v. McCormick Harvesting Mach. Co. 55 Fed. 288; Water A. Wood Harvester Co. v. Minneapolis-Easterly Harvester Co. 61 Fed. 256; Young Reversible Lock-Nut Co. v. Young Lock-Nut Co. 72 Fed. 62.

Mr. Walter H. Bond submitted the cause for defendant in error:

The state courts had jurisdiction of the case at bar, inasmuch as it was merely an attempt to enforce rights arising ex contractu.

Victor Talking Mach. Co. v. The Fair, 61 C. C. A. 58, 123 Fed. 424; Wade v. Lawder, 165 U. S. 624, 41 L. ed. 851, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 425.

If the validity of a patent is incidentally drawn in question in a cause properly cognizable in a state court, the jurisdiction of that court is not thereby ousted.

56 L. ed.

Pratt v. Paris Gaslight & Coke Co. 168 U. S. 255, 42 L. ed. 458, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 62.

Actions to compel the specific performance of contracts where the question was whether the improvement for which letters patent were issued is an improvement on a former improvement have been somewhat common in the state courts, and no question seems to have been raised as to the jurisdiction of those courts.

McFarland v. Stanton Mfg. Co. 53 N. J. Eq. 649, 51 Am. St. Rep. 647, 33 Atl. 962; Birkery Mfg. Co. v. Jones, 71 Conn. 113, 40 Atl. 917; Harris v. Wallace Mfg. Co. 84 Ohio St. 104, 95 N. E. 559; Bates Mach. Co. v. Bates, 192 Ill. 138, 61 N. E. 518.

Inasmuch as the equitable title to letters patent No. 725,349 passed by the agreement of September 15th, 1902, irrespective of the question as to whether letters patent No. 725,349 are an improvement on letters patent No. 342,802, it is not necessary to find that letters patent No. 725,349 are an improvement on letters patent, No. 342,802, in order to affirm the judgment of the supreme court of Massachusetts; and the state courts had unquestionable jurisdiction of the suit to enforce the specific performance of the said agreement.

Birkery Mfg. Co. v. Jones, 71 Conn. 113, 40 Atl. 917; Philadelphia, W. & B. R. Co. v. Trimble, 10 Wall. 367, 19 L. ed. 948; Topliff v. Topliff, 122 U. S. 121, 30 L. ed. 1110, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1057; Wade v. Lawder, 165 U. S. 624, 41 L. ed. 851, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 425.

Mr. Justice Lamar, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

The Federal courts have exclusive jurisdiction of all cases arising under the patent laws, but not of all questions in which a patent may be the subject-matter of the controversy. For courts of a state may try questions of title, and may construe and enforce contracts relating to patents. Wade v. Lawder, 165 U. S. 627, 41 L. ed. 852, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 425. The present litigation belongs to this class. The controlling fact for determination here is whether patent 725,349 belongs to the *Mar-[479 shall Engine Company, of New Jersey, or to the New Marshall Engine Company, of Massachusetts. The complainant did not, by its bill in the state court, raise any question as to the validity or construction of the patent, nor did it make any claim for damages for infringement. The suit was an ordinary bill for specific performance to compel Marshall to assign to complainant the improvement on patent 342,802, in compliance with his covenant for further assurance. If patent 725,349 was an improvement thereon, as on the face of the application and letters patent it appeared to be, then the complainant was entitled to a decree requiring Marshall to make a conveyance which could be properly recorded for the protection of the true owner.

Marshall had, however, in violation of his contract, previously assigned patent 725,349 to the New Marshall Engine Company, which took with notice of the prior transfer. This company, therefore, held the legal title as trustee for the complainant. Under the circumstances the state court had jurisdiction to pass on the question of ownership, and to enter a decree requiring Marshall, as patentee, and the New Marshall Engine Company, as trustee, to make an assignment in due form to the complainant. This jurisdiction was based on general principles of equity jurisprudence, and did not present a case arising under the patent law.

It is, however, urged that the state court was ousted of the jurisdiction to enter a decree for specific performance, because the bill went farther, and prayed that the defendants, and each of them, should be enjoined from manufacturing or selling the machines covered by patent 725,349. It is claimed that this was, in effect, an application and decree for injunction against infringement, and could only be granted by a Federal court.

But the allegations of the complainant's bill do not involve any construction of the meaning or effect of patent 725,349, 480] nor does it charge that the manufacture or sale of engines by the defendants would be an infringement of the patent, or of any right of the complainant, if in fact, patent 725,349 belonged to the New Marshall Engine Company. The injunction was asked for only as an incident of a finding that the title was vested in the complainant. "The bill . . . must be regarded and treated as a proceeding to enforce the specific execution of the contracts referred to and not as one to protect the complainants in the exclusive enjoyment of a patent right. . . . It is to prevent the fraudulent violation of these contracts, therefore, that the complainant seeks the aid of the court and asks for an injunction." Brown v. Shannon, 20 How. 56, 57, 15 L. ed. 827, 828. As said in Wilson v. Sandford, 10 How. 99, 13 L. ed. 344, "the injunction is to be the consequence of a decree sanctioning the forfeiture. He alleges no ground for an injunction unless the contract is set aside." Here the injunction asked for is to be the consequence of the decree sustaining the complainant's title.

516

It alleges no ground for injunction unless that title is established.

The state court had jurisdiction of the subject-matter of the controversy. The relief granted was appropriate to the cause of action stated in the bill. The decree must therefore be affirmed.

*GALVESTON, HARRISBURG, & [481
SAN ANTONIO RAILWAY COMPANY and the United States Fidelity & Guaranty Company, Plffs. in Err.,

v.

L. V. WALLACE. (No. 108.)

GALVESTON, HARRISBURG, & SAN ANTONIO RAILWAY COMPANY and the United States Fidelity & Guaranty Company, Plffs. in Err.,

v.

J. D. CROW. (No. 109.)

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 481-492.)

Courts — concurrent jurisdiction — enforcing cause of action arising under Federal statute.

1. The damage caused by the failure of a connecting carrier in an interstate shipment to deliver the goods to the consignee, for which failure the initial carrier is made liable by the Carmack amendment of June 29, 1906 (34 Stat. at L. 584, chap. 3591, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1909, p. 1149), to the interstate commerce act of February 4, 1887 (24 Stat. at L. 379, chap. 104, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3154), is not traceable to a violation of the statute, redress for which, under § 9 of the original act, can only be

NOTE.—On concurrent jurisdiction of Federal and state courts—see notes to Copp v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 12 L.R.A. 725, and Smith v. M'Iver, 6 L. ed. U. S. 152.

On the administration of Federal laws in state courts—see note to Loughlin v. McCaulley, 48 L.R.A. 33.

On the power of Congress to regulate commerce—see notes to State ex rel. Corwin v. Indiana & O. Oil, Gas & Min. Co. 6 L.R.A. 579; Bullard v. Northern P. R. Co. 11 L.R.A. 246; Re Wilson, 12 L.R.A. 624; Gibbons v. Ogden, 6 L. ed. U. S. 23; Brown v. Maryland, 6 L. ed. U. S. 678; Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 29 L. ed. U. S. 158; Ratterman v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 32 L. ed. U. S. 229; Harmon v. Chicago, 37 L. ed. U. S. 216; and Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Backus, 38 L. ed. U. S. 1041.

Connecting carriers; loss beyond own line; construction of Hepburn act (Carmack amendment).

The indisputable effect of the Carmack amendment is to hold the initial carrier engaged in interstate commerce, and receiving property for transportation from a had in the Interstate Commerce Commission or in the Federal courts.

223 U. S.

[For other cases, see Courts, 1361-1432, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Conflict of laws — enforcing cause of action created by foreign statute.

2. The jurisdiction of state courts extends to the hearing and determination of any civil and transitory cause of action created by a foreign statute, provided it is not of a character opposed to the public policy of the state in which the suit is brought. [For other cases, see Conflict of Laws, 4-10, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Courts — concurrent jurisdiction — enforcing cause of action arising under Federal statute.

3. A state court may enforce the liability of an initial carrier of an interstate shipment, arising under the Carmack amendment of June 29, 1906, to the interstate commerce act of February 4, 1887, by which such carrier is made liable for a loss beyond its own line.

[For other cases, see Courts, 1361-1432, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Commerce — Federal power — regulating liability of connecting carrier.

4. The imposition upon an interstate carrier voluntarily receiving property for transportation from a point in one state to a point in another state, of liability to the holder of the bill of lading for a loss anywhere en route, with a right of recovery over against the carrier actually causing the loss, which is made by the act of February 4, 1887, § 20, as amended by the act of June 29, 1906, in spite of any agreement or stipulation limiting liability to its own line, is a valid regulation of interstate commerce.

[For other cases, see Commerce, 328-333, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

point in one state to a point in another state, as having contracted for through carriage to the point of destination, using the lines of connecting carriers as its agents. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Riverside Mills, 219 U. S. 186, 55 L. ed. 167, 31 L.R.A.(N.S.) 7, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 164; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Scott, 219 U. S. 209, 55 L. ed. 183, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 171; Gibson v. Little Rock & H. S. W. R. Co. 93 Ark. 439, 124 S. W. 1033; Blackmer & P. Pipe Co. v. Mobile & O. R. Co. 137 Mo. App. 479, 119 S. W. 1; Travis v. Wells, F. & Co. 79 N. J. L. 83, 74 Atl. 444; Earnest v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. 134 N. Y. Supp. 323; Greenwald v. Weir, 130 App. Div. 696, 115 N. Y. Supp. 311; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Stark Grain Co. 103 Tex. 542, 131 S. W. 412, modifying — Tex. Civ. App. —, 120 S. W. 1146.

Congress intended by this act to adopt, as against the initial carrier in interstate shipments, the ordinary common-law liability, and to deny the common-law right to contract for special exemptions therefrom. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Warfield, 6 Ga. App. 550, 65 S. E. 308.

A carrier receives property for transportation from a point in Kentucky to a point in Georgia, and issues a through bill of lading therefor, within the meaning of the Hepburn act, where the shipper delivers the shipment to the initial carrier at a station in Kentucky, marked for a place in Georgia, and the carrier issues a bill of lading by which it agrees to transport the shipment to the place where it shall be received by the next connecting carrier for transportation, which was to a point in Alabama, and stipulates that its liability shall cease at its terminus when the shipment is delivered to the next carrier, which is to continue the transportation. Louisville, & N. R. Co. v. Scott, 133 Ky. 724, 118 S. W. 990, 19 Ann. Cas. 392, affirmed in 219 U. S. 209, 55 L. ed. 183, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 171.

A bill of lading showing the interstate character of the shipment, and containing stipulations governing the entire transportation from the initial point to destination, 56 L. ed.

undertaking to specify not only rights, duties, and limitations relating to the parties to the contract, but also those of subsequent carriers, is a through bill of lading within the meaning of the Hepburn act, and the carrier cannot therefore limit its liability to its own line. Southern P. Co. v. Meadors, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 129 S. W. 170, reversed on other grounds in — Tex. —, 140 S. W. 427.

A bill of lading for an interstate shipment stipulating that, as a condition precedent to the issuance of "this through bill of lading and guaranty of through rate," the initial carrier's liability is limited to its own line, is a through contract, and, as such, is governed by the Hepburn act, although the main contracting clause states the agreement as one to carry to a point on its own line within the state, and there deliver to the next succeeding carrier to continue the transportation. Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Lewis, 103 Tex. 452, 129 S. W. 594.

A bill of lading issued by the initial carrier for an interstate shipment to be transported by that carrier and connecting lines to final destination is for a through shipment, within the meaning of this statute, although it names the intermediate lines over which the shipment is to pass. Kemendo v. Fruit Dispatch Co. — Tex. Civ. App. —, 131 S. W. 73.

A so-called "live stock contract" possessing all the essentials of a bill of lading, by which the initial carrier agrees to transport at a reduced rate an interstate shipment of live stock destined for a point beyond its line, to the end of its line, there to be transferred to a connecting carrier for further transportation, is within the statute, and the carrier issuing it is therefore liable for the negligent acts of any connecting carrier over whose road the freight may be transported. Texas C. R. Co. v. Hico Oil Mill, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 132 S. W. 381.

The failure of the initial carrier to issue any receipt or bill of lading for an interstate shipment will not relieve it from liability under this statute, but it will be Connecting carriers — liability for loss beyond line.

5. A carrier voluntarily receiving property for transportation to a point on another line in another state is, under the Carmack amendment of June 29, 1906, to the interstate commerce act of February 4, 1887, conclusively treated as having made a through contract of carriage, rendering it liable for the other carrier's negligent failure to deliver the shipment to the consignee. [For other cases, see Carriers, 180-206a, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Evidence — presumption — burden of proof — negligence — excepted causes.

6. Proof of delivery of an interstate shipment to the initial carrier, and of failure to deliver the same to the consignee, raises a presumption of negligence, so as to give rise liable to the shipper to the same extent that it would have been liable to the lawful holder of the shipping receipt or bill of lading, had it performed its statutory duty to issue such receipt or bill of lading. International Watch Co. v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. 80 N. J. L. 553, 78 Atl. 49.

The Hepburn act applies to a carrier receiving property to be transported to a point beyond the state, although its own line lies wholly within the state. Shultz v. Skaneateles R. Co. 66 Misc. 9, 122 N. Y. Supp. 445, affirmed in 145 App. Div. 906, 129 N. Y. Supp. 1146.

A local express company, though operating only in one county of the state, which accepts goods for transportation to be delivered in a city outside the state, is, under the Hepburn act, liable for a loss in the hands of another express company to which the first company delivered the goods to complete the transportation. Florman v. Dodd & C. Exp. Co. 79 N. J. L. 63, 74 Atl. 446.

A truckman engaged to cart goods from a store to the dock or depot of a carrier to be forwarded to a destination outside the state, is not within the provisions of this statute. Hirsch v. New England Nav. Co. 129 App. Div. 178, 113 N. Y. Supp. 395. The court said: "It cannot be that the provisions of the interstate commerce act affect a truckman in a city, and hold him responsible for goods lost anywhere in the United States, upon the theory that he was the initial carrier, when all he had to do was to cart the goods from the store to the dock or the depot as an independent employment."

The liability which this statute imposes on the initial carrier in an interstate shipment for the conduct of the connecting carrier is referable entirely to acts and omissions which rendered the latter liable as a common carrier, and hence, where the initial carrier, being under no obligation to notify a connecting carrier that the shipper desired to divert the shipment, fails to do so and in consequence the connecting carrier fails to make the diversion, the initial carrier is not liable for any resulting loss.

to the liability imposed by the Carmack amendment of June 29, 1906, to the interstate commerce act of February 4, 1887, for loss or damage caused by it or any other carrier in the chain of transportation, and casts upon it the burden of proving that the loss resulted from some cause for which such initial carrier was not responsible in law or by contract.

[For other cases, see Evidence, 369-385, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[Nos. 108 and 109.]

Submitted December 15, 1911. Decided February 19, 1912.

TWO WRITS OF ERROR to the Court of Civil Appeals for the Fourth Supreme Judicial District of the State of Texas to Patton v. Texas & P. R. Co. — Tex. Civ. App. —, 137 S. W. 721.

The Hepburn act does not make the initial carrier liable for a sale of the goods by the terminal carrier, to satisfy the freight charges, after the latter's liability as carrier has terminated, and the new relation of warehouseman has been forced upon it by the negligence of the consignor, since the acts of the connecting carrier for which the initial carrier is made liable are acts as carrier, and not as warehouseman. Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Stuart's Draft Mill Co. 109 Va. 184, 63 S. E. 415.

Diversion of an interstate shipment by an intermediate carrier, to another connecting carrier than the one stipulated in the contract of carriage, is an act of negligence which makes the initial carrier liable under the Hepburn act, as though for a conversion of the goods, when not delivered, and for damages when delivered in a damaged condition. Kemendo v. Fruit Dispatch Co. — Tex. Civ. App. —, 131 S. W. 73.

The initial carrier is liable for loss, damage, or injury to the property under the Carmack amendment resulting from the action of the terminal carrier in permitting an inspection contrary to the express provisions of the bill of lading, but where no damage results it is not liable as for a conversion because of such inspection. Earnest v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. 134 N. Y. Supp. 323.

Whether the Hepburn act fixes the liability of the initial carrier for all damages for which any connecting carrier would be liable under the common-law rule was questioned, but not decided, in Southern P. Co. v. Weatherford Cotton Mills — Tex. Civ. App. —, 134 S. W. 778.

And where it has been held that the Carmack amendment does not apply where the damage claimed is not in reference to the property itself which is the subject of the transportation, such as a mere delay in forwarding a shipment of building materials which delays the completion of the contract to the damage of the contractor. Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Nelson, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 139 S. W. 81.

review judgments which affirmed judgments of the County Court of Uvalde County, in that state, holding an initial carrier in an interstate shipment liable to the shipper for loss on a connecting line. Affirmed.

See same case below, No. 108, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 117 S. W. 169; No. 109, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 117 S. W. 170.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Maxwell Evarts and James L. Bishop submitted the cause for plaintiffs in error:

The statute did not impose upon the defendant the obligation of an insurer of the safe delivery of the goods at destination.

Re Release Rates, 13 Inters. Com. Rep. 550; Bernard v. Adams Exp. Co. 205 Mass.

The initial carrier cannot complain of a division of damages with the terminal carrier, when, under the Hepburn act, judgment might have been rendered against it for the full amount of the damages. St. Louis, S. F. & T. R. Co. v. Fenley, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 118 S. W. 845.

The initial carrier in an interstate shipment is jointly liable under the Hepburn act (Carmack amendment) with the terminal carrier, for damages occurring through the negligence of the latter. Otrich v. St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. 154 Mo. App. 420, 134 S. W. 665.

And the right of the shipper of an interstate shipment under the Hepburn act to recover the whole damage from the initial carrier is not affected by the fact that he makes the other roads parties defendant. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Demere, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 145 S. W. 623.

Under the Hepburn act, the initial carrier may make any defense which could be made by any connecting carrier on whose line the loss occurred. Riverside Mills v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. 168 Fed. 927.

An initial carrier has a right of recovery over under this act against the other carriers of an interstate shipment in the event only that he is able to prove that the damage approximately resulted from the negligence of such other carriers. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Jarmon, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 141 S. W. 155.

This statute does not apply to a shipment to a foreign country. Houston, E. & W. T. R. Co. v. Inman, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 134 S. W. 275.

There is some uncertainty as to whether this act obligates carriers to undertake through carriage.

"It may require resort to construction to determine whether the language employed," said the court in Southern P. Co. v. Crenshaw Bros. 5 Ga. App. 675, 63 S. E. 865, speaking with reference to this statute, "is broad enough to require a carrier to receive property intended for transportation to a destination beyond its own line."

In Welch Lumber Co. v. Norfolk & W. R. Co. 137 App. Div. 248, 121 N. Y. Supp. 56 L. ed.

254, 28 L.R.A.(N.S.) 293, 91 N. E. 325, 18 Ann. Cas. 351; Travis v. Wells F. & Co. 79 N. J. L. 83, 74 Atl. 444; Wright v. Adams Exp. Co. 43 Pa. Super. Ct. 40; Latta v. Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. 97 C. C. A. 198, 172 Fed. 850.

Congress cannot enforce as a contractual obligation that which is merely a statutory obligation. It cannot create a contract against the will of the parties, not because it would be unconstitutional to do so, but because it is impossible to do so.

Parsons, Contr. *515.

The rule laid down in Muschamp v. Lancaster & P. R. Co. 8 Mees. & W. 421, 2 Eng. Ry. & C. Cas. 607, 5 Jur. 656, to the effect that a mere receipt of property for transportation to a point beyond the line of the 985, the court in sustaining the validity of this act, apparently assumed that it obliges the carrier to contract to carry beyond its own line.

The contention that the provisions of the act of Congress of June 29, 1906, commonly known as the "Hepburn act," when considered together, operate to compel a carrier to enter into contracts with other connecting common carriers, and then hold the former liable for such losses as occur on the line of the latter, was overruled in Smeltzer v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. 158 Fed. 649, the court saying: "Can it be fairly said that these provisions of the act of June 29, 1906, do anything more than require of carriers engaged in interstate commerce to make through routes and joint rates, and in the event they neglect or refuse to do so, confers power on the commission to establish, after hearing, through routes and fix maximum rates, subject, of course, to be reviewed by the courts?" The court pointed out that in this case it did not appear that the commission ever established a through route or fixed any rates, and added that, even conceding the contention to be well founded, there was no compulsion in this case. The court also said that here the initial carrier, having received the property for carriage beyond its own line, having issued a through bill of lading, and having guaranteed the rates and charges to the point of destination, could not, even at common-law, have stipulated against its liability for a loss beyond its own line (see infra, II. f. 2a), and that the act in this respect was declaratory merely.

The Federal Supreme Court left this question undecided in Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Riverside Mills, 219 U. S. 186, 55 L. ed. 167, 31 L.R.A.(N.S.) 7, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 164, expressly refraining from considering the question as to the right of the initial carrier to refuse a shipment designated for a point beyond its own line, or its right to refuse to make a through route or joint rate when such route and rate would involve a continuance of the transportation over independent lines.

The liability of the initial carrier in an receiving carrier, without any qualifying agreement, justifies an inference of an agreement for through transportation, is a rule of evidence, and the inference so derived may be rebutted by proof of the actual agreement between the parties.

Hutchinson, Carr. §§ 228 et seq.

Congress did not attempt to establish such a rule of evidence by the Carmack amendment. There is nothing said as to the character of the receipt to be given, or as to its effect. The statute concerns itself only with the liability imposed upon the initial carrier, irrespective of the terms of the receipt. Much less does the statute attempt to make a receipt or bill of lading conclusive evidence of a contract for through carriage. If it had attempted to do so, it may well be doubted whether the attempt would have been legal.

Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 134 U. S. 418, 33 L. ed. 970, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 209, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 462, 702; Howard v. Moot, 64 N. Y. 268; Meyer v. Berlandi, 39 Minn. 438, 1 L.R.A. 777, 12 Am. St. Rep. 663, 40 N. W. 513; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Simonson, 64 Kan. 802, 57 L.R.A. 765, 91 Am. St. Rep. 248, 68 Pac. 653; Wigmore, Ev. § 1354.

Another consideration, not without weight, is found in the common-law obligations of the defendant as a common carrier. The common law imposes upon the carrier the obligation to receive and carry the goods tendered to it for transportation over its own line, even though marked for a destination beyond its own line.

United States v. Geddes, 65 C. C. A. 320, 131 Fed. 452; Inman v. St. Louis Southwestern R. Co. 14 Tex. Civ. App. 39, 37 S. W. 37; Seasongood, S. K. Co. v. Tennessee & O. River Transp. Co. 21 Ky. L. Rep. 1142, 49 L.R.A. 270, 54 S. W. 193; Southern Exp. Co. v. R. M. Rose Co. 124 Ga. 581, 5 L.R.A.(N.S.) 619, 53 S. E. 185.

The common law also imposes upon the carrier the duty of delivery of the goods to the succeeding carrier, where they are received for transportation to a point beyond the initial carrier's line.

Michigan C. R. Co. v. Mineral Springs Mfg. Co. 16 Wall. 318, 21 L. ed. 297; Tift v. Southern R. Co. 123 Fed. 789; Rawson v. Holland, 59 N. Y. 611, 18 Am. Rep. 394.

This is an obligation from which the carrier cannot release itself.

Michigan C. R. Co. v. Mineral Springs Mfg. Co. 16 Wall. 318, 21 L. ed. 297.

Since the initial carrier was under the legal obligation to receive and carry the goods over its own line, although marked to a destination in another state, and was likewise under the legal obligation to deliver the goods to the succeeding carrier, no inference can be drawn from the mere receipt of the goods that the railroad company intended to contract to carry the goods to destination, because of the existence upon the statute book of the Carmack interstate shipment for loss or damage occurring anywhere en route, imposed by this statute notwithstanding any attempted contract restrictions, is confined to the case of a carrier "receiving property for transportation from a point in one state to a point in another state."

There are intimations in some of the cases that the statute does not prevent the initial carrier from limiting its undertaking to one for carriage to a point on its own line within the state, and for delivery of the shipment there to the next connecting carrier in the line of transportation. Blackmer & P. Pipe Co. v. Mobile & O. R. Co. 137 Mo. App. 479, 119 S. W. 1; Houston T. C. R. Co. v. Lewis, 103 Tex. Civ. App. 452, 129 S. W. 594.

There is nothing necessarily inconsistent with this idea in the holding in St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Furlow, 89 Ark. 404, 117 S. W. 517, that since the passage of the Hepburn act, a carrier cannot receive an interstate shipment which is destined to pass over its road and a connecting line, and exempt itself from liability for a loss occurring on such connecting line, by contracting to carry the shipment only over its own line, and then deliver it to a connecting line. The carriage over the initial carrier's own line in this case necessitated transportation between points in different states, which apparently brings the case within the express provisions of the statute.

But in Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v. Johnson, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 133 S. W. 725, the liability of the initial carrier under the Federal statute was said to be the same whether its contract as issued read to final destination beyond its own line, or was for carriage to the end of its own line, there to be delivered to a connecting carrier for further transportation. The court thought that stipulations inserted in the bill of lading contemplating transportation beyond the carrier's line, to transport only over its own line, and deliver at its terminus to the next succeeding carrier, were the equivalent of an attempt to restrict the initial carrier's liability to its own line, which was what the statute forbids.

Since the so-called Carmack amendment to the Hepburn act, a carrier undertaking the carriage of an interstate shipment cannot limit its liability to its own line. Central R. Co. v. Sims, 169 Ala. 295, 53 So. 826; Central R. Co. v. Chicago Varnish Co. 169 Ala. 287, 53 So. 832; St. Louis Southwestern R. Co. v. Grayson, 89 Ark. 154, 115 S. W. 933; Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Miles, 92 Ark. 573, 123 S. W. 775, 124 S. W. 1043; Southern Exp. Co. v. Meyer, 94 Ark. 103, amendment. Its act was not voluntary, but compulsory, and therefore there can be found no element of intention of adopting the statute as a condition of entering into the employment.

It is not in the power of the legislature to protect an invalid law from judicial scrutiny by providing that it must receive the assent of the parties to every contract to which it relates.

People ex rel. Rodgers v. Coler, 166 N. Y. 19, 52 L.R.A. 814, 82 Am. St. Rep. 605, 59 N. E. 716.

Much less will an unconstitutional statute be regarded as inserted in the contract by implication.

Cleveland v. Clements Bros. Constr. Co. 67 Ohio St. 197, 59 L.R.A. 775, 93 Am. St. Rep. 70, 65 N. E. 885; Palmer v. Tingle, 55 Ohio St. 423, 45 N. E. 313.

The mere failure of the last connecting carrier to deliver the goods at Lowell was not evidence of a loss of the goods caused by the initial carrier or a connecting carrier.

Ricks v. Reed, 19 Cal. 551; Blake v. Russell, 77 Me. 492, 1 Atl. 200; Hale v. Missouri P. R. Co. 36 Neb. 266, 54 N. W. 517; Hall v. Palmer, 54 Mich. 271, 20 N. W. 49.

The statute, as construed and enforced by the Texas courts, is unconstitutional because it deprives the defendant of its property without due process of law.

Wilkinson v. Leland, 2 Pet. 627-658, 7

125 S. W. 642; Pittsburg, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Mitchell, — Ind. —, 91 N. E. 735; Pittsburgh, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Knox, — Ind. —, 98 N. E. 295; Dodge v. Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. 111 Minn. 123, 126 N. W. 627; Southern P. R. Co. v. Lyon, — Miss. —, 34 L.R.A.(N.S.) 237, 54 So. 784; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Carpenter, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 114 S. W. 900; International & G. N. R. Co. v. Wilbourne, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 115 S. W. 111; Kemendo v. Fruit Dispatch Co. — Tex. Civ. App. —, 131 S. W. 73; Southern P. Co. v. Weatherford Cotton Mills, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 134 S. W. 778; Pecos & N. T. R. Co. v. Crews, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 139 S. W. 1049; Old Dominion S. S. Co. v. Flanary, 111 Va. 816, 69 S. E. 1107.

The prohibition of the Carmack amendment to the Hepburn act, against limiting liability to the carrier's own line, does not apply to a shipment to a foreign country. Houston, E. & W. T. R. Co. v. Inman, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 134 S. W. 275.

The language of the Hepburn act, as is pointed out by the court in St. Louis Southwestern R. Co. v. Ray, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 127 S. W. 281, apparently applies to intermediate as well as initial carriers.

But in Eastern R. Co. v. Montgomery, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 139 S. W. 885, the court said that the initial carrier of an interstate shipment is the only one made liable by the Carmack amendment for the damage or loss occurring beyond its own line, and that an intermediate carrier is only liable for such loss or damage as occurred on its line.

L. ed. 542-553; Taylor v. Porter, 4 Hill, 140, 40 Am. Dec. 274; Westervelt v. Gregg, 12 N. Y. 212, 62 Am. Dec. 160; Holden v. Hardy, 169 U. S. 369-390, 42 L. ed. 781-790, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Central Stock Yards Co. 212 U. S. 132, 53 L. ed. 441, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 246; Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 42 L. ed. 819, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Employers' Liability Cases (Howard v. Illinois C. R. Co.) 207 U. S. 463, 52 L. ed. 297, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 141.

The power to regulate commerce is subject to the limitations of due process of law.

Gibbons v. Odgen, 9 Wheat, 1, 196, 211, 6 L. ed. 23, 70, 73; Monongahela Nav. Co. v. United States, 148 U. S. 312, 37 L. ed. 463, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 622; Employers' Liability Cases (Howard v. Illinois C. R. Co.) 207 U. S. 463, 502, 52 L. ed. 297, 310, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 141; Hoxie v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 82 Conn. 356, 73 Atl. 754, 17 Ann. Cas. 324; Slaughter-House Cases, 16 Wall. 36, 75, 21 L. ed. 394, 408; Crandall v. Nevada, 6 Wall. 35, 18 L. ed. 745; Lottery Cases (Champion v. Ames) 188 U. S. 321, 362, 47 L. ed. 492, 503, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 321, 13 Am. Crim. Rep. 561; Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 42 L. ed. 819, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Smith, 173 U. S. 685, 43 L. ed. 859, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 565; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Central Stock Yards Co. 212 U. S. 132, 53 L. ed. 441, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep.

The terminal carrier in an interstate shipment is not made liable by the Hepburn act (Carmack amendment) for a loss or injury occurring on the line of the initial carrier. Otrich v. St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. 154 Mo. App. 420, 134 S. W. 665.

But the presumption against the terminal carrier in an interstate shipment is destroyed by the declaration in the Hepburn act (Carmack amendment) that the initial carrier in an interstate shipment is liable no matter on what line the damages have occurred. Carlton Produce Co. v. Velasco, B. & N. R. Co. — Tex. Civ. App. —, 131 S. W. 1187.

The liability of an initial carrier in an interstate shipment for negligence and delay beyond its own line, incurred under this act, is enforceable, in the state courts. Pittsburgh, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Knox, — Ind. —, 98 N. E. 295.

On the general subject of the liability of a connecting carrier for loss beyond its own line—see note to Rov v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co. 31 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1.

246; Chicago City R. Co. v. Chicago, 142 Fed. 845; Ogdensburg & L. C. R. Co. v. Pratt, 22 Wall. 123, 22 L. ed. 827; Richmond & A. R. Co. v. R. A. Patterson Tobacco Co. 169 U. S. 311, 42 L. ed. 759, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 335; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. McCann, 174 U. S. 580, 43 L. ed. 1093, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 755; Central R. Co. v. Murphey, 196 U. S. 195, 49 L. ed. 444, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 218, 2 Ann. Cas. 514.

If the railroad company came under any obligation to the shipper for the through carriage of the goods, then the court erred in excluding the defense of the release by the shipper of the railroad company from liability for loss or injury to the goods, not occasioned by its own negligence or that of a connecting carrier.

Greenwald v. Weir, 130 App. Div. 696, 115 N. Y. Supp. 311.

The right of action was created by the statute, and jurisdiction to entertain it was conferred exclusively upon the Federal courts.

Sheldon v. Wabash R. Co. 105 Fed. 785; Van Patten v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 74 Fed. 981; Northern P. R. Co. v. Pacific Coast Lumber Mfrs. Asso. 91 C. C. A. 39, 165 Fed. 9; Hoxie v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 82 Conn. 356, 73 Atl. 754, 17 Ann. Cas. 324.

No appearance for defendants in error:

Mr. Justice Lamar delivered the opinion of the court:

In both these cases the plaintiff in error was held liable as "initial carrier" for failure to deliver mohair shipped from points in Texas to the consignee in Lowell. The company denied liability on the ground that under the contract expressed in the bills of lading, its obligation and liability ceased when it duly and safely delivered the goods 489]*to the next carrier. It excepts to various rulings of the trial court by which it was prevented from proving that it had fully complied with its contract; had duly delivered the mohair, at Galveston, to the first connecting carrier, which delivered it, at New York, to the next carrier, which, in turn, delivered it to the Boston & Maine Railroad. Neither the pleadings nor proof showed what this company did with the mohair, nor the cause of its nondelivery, if indeed it was not delivered. For there was some evidence tending to show that this mohair might have been among other sacks, the marks of which had been destroyed, and were still held by the consignee awaiting identification. This contention, however, was found against the carrier, and it was held liable to the plaintiffs, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 117 S. W. 169, 170.

The question as to whether the plaintiff was entitled to recover the value of the goods at Lowell, or, as provided in the bill of lading, at the point of shipment, is suggested in one of the briefs. No such issue was made in the lower court, nor is it referred to in any of the many assignments of error involving the construction and constitutionality of the Carmack amendment to the Hepburn bill of 1906, providing that where goods are received for shipment in interstate commerce, the initial carrier shall be liable for damages caused by itself or connecting carriers, and making void any contract of exemption against such liability. 34 Stat. at L. 584, chap. 3591, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1909, p. 1149.

1. The jurisdiction of the state court was attacked, first, on the ground that § 9 of the original act of 1887 provided that persons damaged by a violation of the statute "might make complaint before the Commission . . . or in any district or circuit court of the United States." 24 Stat. at L. 379, chap. 104, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3154.

It was contended that Texas & P. R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co. 204 U. S. 426, 51 L. ed. 553, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350, 9 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1075, ruled that this jurisdiction was exclusive, and from that it was argued that no suit *could be maintained in a [490 state court on any cause of action created either by the original act of 1887 or by the amendment of 1906. But damage caused by failure to deliver goods is in no way traceable to a violation of the statute, and is not, therefore, within the provisions of §§ 8 and 9 of the act to regulate commerce. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Riverside Mills, 219 U. S. 208, 55 L. ed. 179, 31 L.R.A. (N.S.) 7, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 164.

The real question, therefore, presented by this assignment of error, is whether a state court may enforce a right of action arising under an act of Congress.

Statutes have no extraterritorial operation, and the courts of one government cannot enforce the penal laws of another. At one time there was some question both as to the duty and power to try civil cases arising solely under the statutes of another state. But it is now recognized that the jurisdiction of state courts extends to the hearing and determination of any civil and transitory cause of action created by a foreign statute, provided it is not of a character opposed to the public policy of the state in which the suit is brought. Where the statute creating the right provides an exclusive remedy, to be enforced in a particular way, or before a special tribunal, the aggrieved party will be left to the remedy given by the statute which created the right. But jurisdiction is not defeated by implication. And, considering the relation between the Federal and state government, there is no presumption that Congress intended to prevent state courts from exercising the general jurisdiction already possessed by them, and under which they had the power to hear and determine causes of action created by Federal statute. Robb v. Connolly, 111 U. S. 637, 28 L. ed. 546, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 544.

On the contrary, the absence of such provision would be construed as recognizing that where the cause of action was not penal, but civil and transitory, it was to be subject to the principles governing that class of cases, and might be asserted in a state court 491 as well as in those of *the United States. This presumption would be strengthened as to a statute like this, passed not only for the purpose of giving a right, but of affording a convenient remedy.

2. The question as to the constitutionality of the Carmack amendment though ably and elaborately argued, is out of the case, having been decided adversely to the contention of the plaintiff in Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Riverside Mills, 219 U. S. 186, 55 L. ed. 167, 31 L.R.A.(N.S.) 7, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 164, after the present suit was instituted.

The company, however, seeks to distinguish this from that on the ground that in the Riverside Case it was admitted that the damage to the freight was caused by the negligence of the connecting carrier. And, as the statute applies to cases where the damage is caused by the initial or connecting carrier, and as the cause of the loss of the goods does not appear here, it is argued that liability is to be governed by the contract, which provides that the initial carrier should not be responsible beyond its own line. Plaintiff in error insists that the Carmack amendment did not make it an insurer. Under the construction given that statute in Re Released Rates, 13 Inters. Com. Rep. 550; Bernard v. Adams Exp. Co. 205 Mass. 254, 28 L.R.A.(N.S.) 293, 91 N. E. 325, 18 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 351; Travis v. Wells, F. & Co. 79 N. J. L. 83, 74 Atl. 444, it claims that the initial carrier is not deprived of its right to contract with the shipper against liability for damages not caused by either carrier's negligence. But the failure to plead and to prove the cause of the non-delivery of the goods at destination precludes any determination of such questions.

Under the Carmack amendment, as already construed in the Riverside Mills Case, wherever the carrier voluntarily accepts goods for shipment to a point on another line, in another state, it is conclusively treated as having made a through contract. It thereby elected to treat the connecting carriers as its agents, for all purposes of transportation *and delivery.[492 This case, then, must be treated as though the point of destination was on its own line, and is to be governed by the same rules of pleading, practice, and presumption as would have applied if the shipment had been between stations in different states, but both on the company's railroad. Thus considered, when the holders of the bills of lading proved the goods had not been delivered to the consignee, the presumption arose that they had been lost by reason of the negligence of the carrier or its agents. The burden of proof that the loss resulted from some cause for which the initial carrier was not responsible in law or by contract was then cast upon the carrier. The plaintiffs were not obliged both to prove their case and to disprove the existence of a defense. The carrier and its agents, having received possession of the goods, were charged with the duty of delivering them, or explaining why that had not been done. This must be so, because carriers not only have better means, but often the only means, of making such proof. If the failure to deliver was due to the act of God, the public enemy, or some cause against which it might lawfully contract, it was for the carrier to bring itself within such exception. In the absence of such proof, the plaintiffs were entitled to recover, and the judgment is affirmed.

*PATRICK B. MCCARTHY, Plff. in Err.,
v.

FIRST NATIONAL BANK OF RAPID CITY, SOUTH DAKOTA.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 493-500.)

Limitation of actions — usury — national banks.

The "usurious transaction," from the date of which the two years' limitation prescribed by U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5198, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3493, for actions to recover back twice the amount of interest paid a national bank, begins to run, occurs on the date of the payment of the NOTE.—As to when statute of limitations begins to run against an action to recover the penalty from a national bank for taking usury—see notes to Citizens' Nat. Bank v. Gentry, 56 L.R.A. 673, and McCarthy v. First Nat. Bank, 23 L.R.A.(N.S.) 336.

usurious interest, and not on the date when the debt was paid.

[For other cases, see Limitation of Actions, 341, 342, 457-459, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 122.]

Argued December 19, 1911. Decided February 19, 1912.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of South Dakota, to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Circuit Court of Pennington County, in that state, in favor of defendant in a suit to recover back twice the usurious interest paid to a national bank. Affirmed.

See same case below, 23 S. D. 269, 23 L.R.A.(N.S.) 335, 121 N. W. 853, 21 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 437.

Statement by Mr. Justice Lamar:

Patrick B. McCarthy, under the provisions of Rev. Stat. § 5198, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3493, brought suit against the First National Bank of Rapid City, South Dakota, for twice the amount of interest paid the bank.

The complaint alleged that, the maximum legal rate being 12 per cent, McCarthy, on August 27, 1887, borrowed from the defendant $4,000, giving therefor promissory notes payable at different dates, each bearing 18 *per cent interest. These notes were not paid at maturity, and from time to time were renewed at the same rate. Many payments of usurious interest were made. The debt was finally consolidated into a note, bearing 12 per cent interest, dated May 22, 1889, for $5,000, which included the original principal and unpaid interest. It was renewed and secured by mortgage July 22, 1891. McCarthy alleges that between August 27, 1887, and January 1, 1897, he paid on the original and renewal notes various sums, aggregating $3,802.74, as interest, and that the defendant "knowingly . . . applied the same to the payment of usurious interest, and indorsed the same on the said several promissory notes as interest received thereon."

On January 26, 1897, the bank instituted proceedings to foreclose the mortgage given by plaintiff, his wife and others, to secure the debt. McCarthy filed a plea of usury, which was sustained, and, after purging the debt of usury and forfeiting all interest, a decree was finally entered, January 12, 1905, foreclosing the mortgage for $5,951.56, made up of the original debt of $4,000, taxes paid on the mortgaged property, and costs. On January 21 this sum was paid to the bank, and on January 25, 1905, plaintiff brought this suit for $7,605.48, or twice the amount of interest paid.

The defendant set up, by its plea, that the action was barred, because not brought within two years from the date of payment of the usurious interest. The plaintiff replied that the statute only began to run from the date the debt was paid. For the purpose of showing that the payments on account of interest ($3,802.74) did not equal the amount of the original debt ($4,000), and that the judgment had been paid (January 21, 1905) less than two years before suit, he offered the record in the foreclosure proceedings. It was excluded by the trial court, but incorporated in the record by bill of exceptions.

Mr. Hannis Taylor argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Charles W. Brown, John F. Schrader, and Clarence L. Lewis, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

Under § 5198 of the Revised Statutes of the United States (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3493) the limitation of two years within which the borrower may sue for double the amount of usurious interest collected and received from him does not commence to run, and therefore, the cause of action does not accrue, until the lender has actually collected or received more than the original debt.

McBroom v. Scottish Mortg. & Land Invest. Co. 153 U. S. 318, 38 L. ed. 729, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 852, 6 N. M. 573, 30 Pac. 859; Duncan v. First Nat. Bank, Fed. Cas. No. 4,135; First Nat. Bank v. Denson, 115 Ala. 650, 22 So. 518; Haseltine v. Central Nat. Bank, 155 Mo. 66, 56 S. W. 895; First Nat. Bank v. Childs, 130 Mass. 519, 39 Am. Rep. 474; First Nat. Bank v. Turner, 3 Kan. App. 352, 42 Pac. 936; First Nat. Bank v. McInturff, 3 Kan. App. 536, 43 Pac. 839; Louisville Trust Co. v. Kentucky Nat. Bank, 102 Fed. 442, 87 Fed. 143; Harvey v. National L. Ins. Co. 60 Vt. 209, 14 Atl. 8; Cotton States Bldg. Co. v. Peightal, 28 Tex. Civ. App. 575, 67 S. W. 524; Wheaton v. Hibbard, 20 Johns. 290, 11 Am. Dec. 284; Stevens v. Lincoln, 7 Met. 525; Saunders v. Lambert, 7 Gray, 484; Smith v. Robinson, 10 Allen, 132; Hall v. First Nat. Bank, 30 Neb. 99, 46 N. W. 151; Kendall v. Crouch, 88 Ky. 199, 11 S. W. 587; Talbot v. First Nat. Bank, 185 U. S. 172, 46 L. ed. 857, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 612; Talbot v. Sioux Nat. Bank, 185 U. S. 182, 46 L. ed. 862, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 621.

At common law the borrower could not recover the penalty given by the statutes relating to usury, without paying or offering to pay at least the principal of the loan, and the decisions in the Duncan and McBroom cases result from the application of common-law principles, including the doctrine of locus penitentiæ to the national bank act.

Wheaton v. Hibbard, 20 Johns. 290, 11 Am. Dec. 284; Scottish Mortg. & L. Invest. Co. v. McBroom, 6 N. M. 573, 30 Pac. 859; Stevens v. Lincoln, 7 Met. 525; Saunders v. Lambert, 7 Gray, 484; Smith v. Robinson, 10 Allen, 130; McBroom v. Scottish Mortg. & Land Invest. Co. 153 U. S. 318, 38 L. ed. 729, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 852; Haseltine v. Central Nat. Bank, 155 Mo. 66, 56 S. W. 895; First Nat. Bank v. Denson, 115 Ala. 650, 22 So. 518.

Mr. Charles J. Buell argued the cause, and, with Mr. A. K. Gardner, filed a brief for defendant in error:

Under § 5198 of the Revised Statutes of United States (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3493), the limitation of two years within which the borrower may sue for double the amount of usurious interest paid and received as such commences to run from the date of the usurious transaction, viz., the date of the actual payment of usurious interest; and suit must be entered within two years from the date of such payment.

McCarthy v. First Nat. Bank, 23 S. D. 269, 23 L.R.A.(N.S.) 335, 121 N. W. 853, 21 Ann. Cas. 437; Citizens' Nat. Bank v. Donnell, 195 U. S. 369, 49 L. ed. 238, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 49; Brown v. Marion Nat. Bank, 169 U. S. 416, 42 L. ed. 801, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 390; Walsh v. Mayer, 111 U. S. 36, 37, 28 L. ed. 340, 341, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 260; First Nat. Bank v. McCarthy, 18 S. D. 218, 100 N. W. 16; Lealos v. Union Nat. Bank, 9 N. D. 60, 81 N. W. 56; Smith v. First Nat. Bank, 70 App. Div. 376, 75 N. Y. Supp. 131; First Nat. Bank v. Smith, 36 Neb. 199, 54 N. W. 254; Lanham v. First Nat. Bank, 46 Neb. 663, 65 N. W. 786; Washington Nat. Bldg. & L. Asso. v. Wendling, 102 Va. 279, 46 S. E. 296; Monongahela Nat. Bank v. Overholt, 96 Pa. 327; Lebanon Nat. Bank v. Karmany, 98 Pa. 65; Burnside v. Mealer, 26 Ky. L. Rep. 79, 80 S. W. 785; Buntyn v. National Mut. Bldg. & L. Asso. 86 Miss. 454, 38 So. 345; Citizens' Nat. Bank v. Donnell, 172 Mo. 384, 72 S. W. 925; Talbot v. Sioux Nat. Bank, 111 Iowa, 583, 82 N. W. 963; Talbot v. First Nat. Bank, 106 Iowa, 361, 76 N. W. 726; Chadwick v. Menard Bros. 104 La. 38, 28 So. 933; Webb, Usury, § 526; 5 Fed. Stat. Anno. p. 137.

Mr. Justice Lamar, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

Section 5198 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3493), under 498] which this *suit was brought, provides that "taking, receiving, reserving, or charging" more than a lawful rate of interest, when knowingly done by a national bank, shall be deemed a forfeiture of the entire interest. In case a greater than the lawful rate "has been paid, the person by whom it has been paid . . . may recover back . . . twice the amount of the interest thus paid, . . . provided such action is commenced within two years from the time the usurious transaction occurred."

The debt was created in 1887, was paid in full in January, 1905, and on January 25, of the same year, the maker of the note brought suit to recover twice the amount of the interest paid thereon prior to 1897.

In considering the bank's plea that the action was barred because not brought within two years, and the plaintiff's claim that the statute only ran from the date the debt was paid, the supreme court of South Dakota pointed out the irreconcilable conflict in the cases dealing with this question, and, after making careful analysis of all the authorities, reached the conclusion, in which we concur, that the statute begins to run from the date of the payment of the usurious interest. 23 S. D. 269, 23 L.R.A.(N.S.) 335, 121 N. W. 853, 21 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 437. Considering this review of the decisions, we shall only discuss the statute itself, and that briefly.

National banks are prohibited from making usurious contracts. If they disregard its provisions, the law not only furnishes a defense, but gives a right of action. As to the defense, there is no statute of limitations. Whenever sued, the debtor may plead the usurious contract, and be relieved from paying any interest whatever. But if he elects to avail himself of the cause of action, he must sue "within two years from the time the usurious transaction occurred."

If the making of the note was the "usurious transaction," from which date the statute began to run, the anomaly of the right to recover being barred before the 499]*cause of action arose would result in all cases where the debtor for two years after the loan failed to pay interest, even though he subsequently discharged the debt, principal and usury. If the final payment of the debt is the "usurious transaction," and suit must be brought in two years from that date, then there could never be a recovery in those cases where the debtor had paid usury, but was not able to pay the debt in full.

That the statute does not begin to run from the date of the loan, nor from the date of the satisfaction of the debt, but from the date interest is paid, appears from an analysis of the two classes of cases referred to in Rev. Stat. § 5198, noting that "interest paid" in the last clause is used in contradistinction to interest "reserved or charged," in the first sentence of the section. Banks may make ordinary loans and charge interest to be collected at the maturity of the note. But, as they usually reserve and deduct it in advance, by way of discount, the statute is framed so as to apply to cases where the interest is paid by the debtor as well as to those in which it is reserved by the bank. These deductions by way of discount are not treated as payments. They do not come out of the debtor's pocket, though they lessen the amount which he receives when the loan is made, and when sued he may plead usury and escape liability for the amount thus charged or retained. But such reservation by the bank, not being a payment made by the debtor, he, of course, cannot avail himself of the right to maintain a suit given only to those who have paid interest.

But when the debtor actually makes a payment, as interest, and the bank knowingly receives and appropriates it as such, the usurious transaction is complete, the right of the one and the liability of the other is fixed, the cause of action arises, and the statute of limitations begins to run. There is no locus penitentiae. That privilege is only granted to those banks which, 500] having charged *usury, may, by, a refusal to accept interest when tendered, show that they will not carry the illegal contract into execution, and thus escape the twofold penalty.

Those courts which hold that the statute begins to run from the payment of the debt, instead of the payment of the interest, have been influenced by statements of Mr. Justice Harlan in McBroom v. Scottish Mortg. & Land Invest. Co. 153 U. S. 318, 38 L. ed. 729, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 852, which involved the construction of the usury statute of the territory of New Mexico. That act differed in several respects from Rev. Stat. § 5198. But that case did not rule that in a suit under the act of Congress, the statute did not run from the date usury was paid and received as such. This court did not understand that such was the meaning of that case, as appears from his opinion in Brown v. Marion Nat. Bank, 169 U. S. 416, 42 L. ed. 801, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 390, which involved a construction. Rev. Stat. § 5198. For he there points out the difference between "paying" and "agreeing to pay," and says that, "if at any time the obligee actually pays usurious interest, as such the usurious transaction must be held to have then, and not before, occurred, and he must sue within two years thereafter."

The Supreme Court of South Dakota properly held that the recovery of interest paid more than two years before suit was brought was barred, and its judgment is affirmed.

*GEORGE S. LATIMER, Appt., [501
v.

UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 501-504.)

Statutes — judicial construction — re-enactment.

1. Congress, in using the words "unmanufactured tobacco," in the tariff act of 1897 (30 Stat. at L. 194, 169, chap. 11, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 1679, 1648), ¶ 215, must be deemed to have adopted the construction given by the Federal Supreme Court to those words as used in an earlier tariff act.

[For other cases, see Statutes, 302-311, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Duties — tobacco sweepings — unmanufactured tobacco.

2. Tobacco sweepings or scrap used in the manufacture of stogies and cigarettes are dutiable at 55 cents a pound, under the tariff act of 1897, ¶ 215, as unmanufactured tobacco, and not at 10 per cent ad valorem under ¶ 463, as "waste not specially provided for in this act."

[For other cases, see Duties, 201-209, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 151.]

Submitted January 15, 1912. Decided February 19, 1912.

APPEAL from the District Court of the United States for Porto Rico to review a judgment which affirmed a decision of the board of general appraisers, overruling the importer's protest against a classification of tobacco sweepings by the collector of customs. Affirmed.

See same case below, 5 Porto Rico Fed. Rep. 138.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Walter F. Welch submitted the cause for appellant. Mr. Edward Hatch was on the brief:

The merchandise involved in this suit is waste.

NOTE.—On the effect of the re-enactment of statute which has received a judicial construction—see note to Sanders v. St. Louis & N. O. Anchor Line, 3 L.R.A. 390.

On the interpretation of commercial and tradenames in tariff laws—see note to Dennison Mfg. Co. v. United States, 18 C. A. 545.

United States v. Schroeder, 35 C. C. A. 376, 93 Fed. 448.

Merchandise is classifiable for the purposes of duty in its condition as imported.

Worthington v. Robbins, 139 U. S. 337, 35 L. ed. 181, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581; Dwight v. Merritt, 140 U. S. 219, 35 L. ed. 453, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 768; United States v. Schoverling, 146 U. S. 82, 36 L. ed. 895, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 24.

The merchandise is more specifically provided for as "waste" than as "tobacco unmanufactured."

Brennan v. United States, 69 C. C. A. 395, 136 Fed. 743; United States v. Reiss, 69 C. C. A. 393, 136 Fed. 741; Nairn Linoleum Co. v. United States, 142 Fed. 214; T. D. 16,324, G. A. 3,153; T. D. 23,347, G. A. 5,017; T. D. 23, 637, G. A. 5,115; T. D. 28,050, abstract 14,869; T. D. 31,739, G. A. 7,242.

The rules of construction tend to resolve this question favorably to the importer.

Hartranft v. Wiegmann, 121 U. S. 399, 616, 30 L. ed. 1012, 1015, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1240.

In case of uncertainty in the application of two conflicting provisions of the same act the last provision should prevail.

Powers v. Barney, 5 Blatchf. 202, Fed. Cas. No. 11,361.

This kind of waste is worth only 16 cents per pound; and if a duty of 55 cents should be imposed, it would be equivalent to an ad valorem duty of 340 per cent, which is unfair and unconscionable; and such prohibitive duty could not have been contemplated by Congress.

Shallus v. United States, 89 C. C. A. 445, 162 Fed. 653.

Assistant Attorney General Wempel submitted the cause for appellee:

The imported merchandise is still tobacco, and nothing but tobacco.

Seeberger v. Castro, 153 U. S. 32, 38 L. ed. 624, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 766.

Re-enactment of language which has been construed to include a given article is one of the strongest indications of the congressional intent to continue the existing status as to taxation.

United States v. Freeman, 3 How. 556, 11 L. ed. 724; The Abbotsford, 98 U. S. 440, 25 L. ed. 168; Kupfer v. United States, T. D. 32,041.

The waste referred to in the tariff laws is not absolutely worthless, but it is unmerchantable, and used for purposes for which merchantable material of the same class is unsuitable.

Patton v. United States, 159 U. S. 500, 503, 40 L. ed. 233, 234, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 89.

56 L. ed.

Mr. Justice Lamar delivered the opinion of the court:

In the process of manufacturing and handling tobacco small pieces are broken from the brittle leaves and fall to the floor of the warehouse or factory. These scraps are not treated as worthless, but are swept up, and, when cleaned, are used in the manufacture of a cheap grade of cigarettes and stogies.

The appellant shipped to Porto Rico a quantity of these sweepings, and the question arose as to whether the shipment was dutiable at 10 per cent ad valorem as "waste not specially provided for in this act," under ¶ 463 of the tariff act of 1897, or at 55 cents a pound, as "tobacco, manufactured or unmanufactured," under ¶ 215 of the same statute. 30 Stat. at L. 194, 169, chap. 11, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 1679, 1648. The customs officer classed it as "unmanufactured tobacco," and required the payment of a duty of 55 cents a pound. The importer protested and a case was made to test the question. On appeal, the General Board sustained the collector. It was affirmed by the district court of Porto Rico, and to reverse that judgment the importer has brought the case here.

There has been some difference of opinion as to the proper classification of scrap tobacco under the various tariff acts. In United States v. Schroeder, 35 C. C. A. 376, 93 Fed. 448, a higher grade of scrap was held to be "waste" within the meaning of the tariff act of 1890. [26 Stat. at L. 567, chap. 1244]. In Seeberger v. Castro, 153 U. S. 32, 38 L. ed. 624, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 766, it was decided that the clippings from the ends of cigars were dutiable as unmanufactured tobacco under the tariff act of 1883 [22 Stat. at L. 488, chap. 121, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2247].

*The plaintiff claims that this decision has no application here, because it related to clippings which were of a higher grade than scrap, and for the further reason that, as the importer there made no claim that it should be taxed as waste, the court did not pass on that question. But it did definitely decide that such material, by whatever name called, was "unmanufactured tobacco."

The words, having received such a construction under the act of 1883, must be given the same meaning when used in the tariff act of 1897, on the theory that, in using the phrase in the later statute, Congress adopted the construction already given it by this court. United States v. Baruch, this day decided. [223 U. S. 191, ante, 399, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 306.] That such was the intention of Congress appears further from the fact that the duty of "10 per cent ad valorem on waste" is found in "Schedule N—Sundries." The word as thus used generally refers to remnants and by-products of small value that have not the quality or utility either of the finished product or of the raw material. Patton v. United States, 159 U. S. 503, 40 L. ed. 234, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 89. But the scrap here involved retains the name and quality of tobacco. It is tobacco, and as such it is used for making cigarettes and stogies. It was therefore taxable under Schedule F, which fixes the duty on tobacco in all its forms,—manufactured or unmanufactured. The judgment is therefore affirmed.

505]*WILLIAM MILLER, Plff. in Err.,
v.

WILL R. KING, Substituted for the First National Bank of Payette, Idaho.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 505-511.)

National banks — powers — trust.

A national bank is acting within the scope of its power, under U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5136, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3455, to exercise "all such incidental powers as shall be necessary to carry on banking," where it accepts an assignment of a judgment for collection, and agrees to hold the proceeds subject to the order of the assignor; and, if its attorney, after collecting the money, improperly pays it over to a corporation which claimed that the cause of action had been transferred to it prior to the rendition of the judgment, the bank may sue in its own name conformably to the local law, to recover from such attorney the proceeds of the judgment.

[For other cases, see Banks, IV. g, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 153.]

Argued January 22 and 23, 1912. Decided February 19, 1912.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Oregon to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Circuit Court for Malheur County, in that state, in favor of the assignee of a national bank in an action to recover from its attorney the proceeds of a judgment assigned to it for collection, which such attorney had improperly paid over to a third person. Affirmed.

See same case below, 53 Or. 53, 97 Pac. 542.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. James H. Richards argued the cause, and, with Mr. Oliver O. Haga, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

A national bank cannot act as trustee under an express trust.

Central Transp. Co. v. Pullman's Palace Car Co. 139 U. S. 24, 35 L. ed. 55, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 478; McCormick v. Market Nat. Bank, 165 U. S. 538, 41 L. ed. 817, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 433; California Nat. Bank v. Kennedy, 167 U. S. 362, 42 L. ed. 198, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 831; Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. v. Louisville Trust Co. 174 U. S. 552, 43 L. ed. 1081, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 817; First Nat. Bank v. Hawkins, 174 U. S. 364, 43 L. ed. 1007, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 739; Bowen v. Needles Nat. Bank, 36 C. C. A. 553, 94 Fed. 925; Chemical Nat. Bank v. Havermale, 120 Cal. 604, 65 Am. St. Rep. 206, 52 Pac. 1071; Kerfoot v. Farmers' & M. Bank, 218 U. S. 281, 54 L. ed. 1042, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 14; Citizens' Central Nat. Bank v. Appleton, 216 U. S. 196, 54 L. ed. 443, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 364.

The doctrine of ultra vires, as announced in the cases above cited, has been applied most rigidly to banks operating under the national banking act.

Logan County Nat. Bank v. Townsend, 139 U. S. 67, 35 L. ed. 107, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 496; California Nat. Bank v. Kennedy, 167 U. S. 362, 42 L. ed. 198, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 831; Merchants' Nat. Bank v. Wehrmann, 202 U. S. 295, 50 L. ed. 1036, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 613; First Nat. Bank v. Converse, 200 U. S. 425, 50 L. ed. 537, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 306; Citizens' Central Nat. Bank v. Appleton, 216 U. S. 196, 54 L. ed. 443, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 364; McCormick v. Market Nat. Bank, 165 U. S. 538, 539, 41 L. ed. 817, 818, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 433.

Any contract or act of a national bank beyond the powers expressly conferred upon it by the statute, or fairly implied therefrom, and necessary in order to carry on the banking business, is ultra vires and void.

Bowen v. Needles Nat. Bank 87 Fed. 430; Commercial Nat. Bank v. Pirie, 27 C. C. A. 171, 149 U. S. App. 596, 82 Fed. 799; Farmers' & M. Nat. Bank v. Smith, 23 C. C. A. 80, 40 U. S. App. 690, 77 Fed. 129; McCrary v. Chambers, 48 Ill. App. 445; Weckler v. First Nat. Bank, 42 Md. 581, 20 Am. Rep. 95; First Nat. Bank v. Ocean Nat. Bank, 60 N. Y. 278, 19 Am. Rep. 181; Wiley v. First Nat. Bank, 47 Vt. 546, 19 Am. Rep. 122; Third Nat. Bank v. Boyd, 44 Md. 47, 22 Am. Rep. 35; Dresser v. Traders Nat. Bank, 165 Mass. 120, 42 N. E. 567; Lazear v. National Union Bank, 52 Md. 78, 36 Am. Rep. 355; Norton v. Derry Nat. Bank, 61 N. H. 589, 60 Am. Rep. 334; Cumberland Teleph. & Teleg. Co. v. Evansville, 127 Fed. 187; Davis v. Old Colony R. Co. 131 Mass. 258, 41 Am. Rep. 221; Kerfoot v. Farmers' & M. Nat. Bank, 218 U. S. 281, 54 L. ed. 1042, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 14.

An ultra vires contract is void; not merely voidable.

Central Transp. Co. v. Pullman's Palace Car Co. 139 U. S. 24, 35 L. ed. 55, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 478; St. Louis, V. & T. H. R. Co. v. Terre Haute & I. R. Co. 145 U. S. 393, 36 L. ed. 738, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 953; Pittsburgh, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Keokuk & H. Bridge Co. 131 U. S. 371, 33 L. ed. 157, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 770; Jacksonville, M. P. R. & Nav. Co. v. Hooper, 160 U. S. 514, 40 L. ed. 515, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 379; California Nat. Bank v. Kennedy, 167 U. S. 362, 42 L. ed. 198, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 831; McCormick v. Market Nat. Bank, 165 U. S. 538, 41 L. ed. 817, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 433; 1 Page, Contr. § 310.

No action can be maintained on an ultra vires contract.

Citizens' Central Nat. Bank v. Appleton, 216 U. S. 196, 54 L. ed. 443, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 364; Ashbury R. Carriage & Iron Co. v. Riche, L. R. 7 H. L. 653, 44 L. J. Exch. N. S. 185, 33 L. T. N. S. 451, 24 Week. Rep. 794, 2 Eng. Rul. Cas. 304; McCormick v. Market Nat. Bank, 165 U. S. 538, 41 L. ed. 817, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 433; De la Vergne Refrigerating Mach. Co. v. German Sav. Inst. 175 U. S. 40, 44 L. ed. 65, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 20; Bosshardt & W. Co. v. Crescent Oil Co. 171 Pa. 120, 32 Atl. 1120; Thomas v. West Jersey R. Co. 101 U. S. 71, 25 L. ed. 950; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. St. Louis, A. & T. H. R. Co. 118 U. S. 290, 30 L. ed. 83, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1094.

The revocation of the bank's authority revoked all authority which the bank had in the matter.

Taylor v. Burns, 203 U. S. 120, 51 L. ed. 116, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 40; 1 Clark & S. Agency, §§ 157-162, 433; Frink v. Roe, 70 Cal. 309, 11 Pac. 820; 2 Enc. L. & P. 1249, 1250.

Mr. Will R. King, in propria persona, argued the cause, and, with Messrs. C. E. S. Wood and F. M. Saxton, filed a brief for defendant in error:

If the ground upon which the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court is invoked is that a title, right, privilege, or immunity was claimed under the Constitution, or a treaty, or a statute of or an authority exercised under the United States, and the decision was against such title, right, etc., the fact that the question was raised or claim made in the state court and was passed upon adversely to plaintiff in error must appear from the face of the record.

Zadig v. Baldwin, 166 U. S. 485, 41 L. ed. 1087, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 639; Sayward v. Denney, 158 U. S. 180, 184, 39 L. ed. 941, 943, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 777; Harding v. Illinois, 196 U. S. 78, 49 L. ed. 394, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 176; California Powder Works v. Davis, 151

U. S. 389, 391, 38 L. ed. 206, 207, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350; Schuyler Nat. Bank v. Bollong, 150 U. S. 87, 37 L. ed. 1008, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 24.

Where the provisions of the national bank act prohibit certain acts, without imposing any penalty or forfeiture applicable to particular transactions which have been executed, their validity can be questioned only by the United States, and not by private parties.

Kerfoot v. Farmers' & M. Bank, 218 U. S. 281, 54 L. ed. 1042, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 14; Union Nat. Bank v. Matthews, 98 U. S. 621, 25 L. ed. 188; National Bank v. Whitney, 103 U. S. 99, 26 L. ed. 443; First Nat. Bank v. Stewart, 107 U. S. 677, 27 L. ed. 592, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 778; Thompson v. St. Nicholas Nat. Bank, 146 U. S. 240, 36 L. ed. 956, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 66; Union Gold Min. Co. v. Rocky Mountain Nat. Bank, 96 U. S. 640, 24 L. ed. 648, 1 Mor. Min. Rep. 432; Fortier v. New Orleans Nat. Bank, 112 U. S. 439, 28 L. ed. 764, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 234; Logan County Nat. Bank v. Townsend, 139 U. S. 77, 35 L. ed. 111, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 496; Reynolds v. First Nat. Bank, 112 U. S. 405, 28 L. ed. 733, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 213; 5 Fed. Stat. Anno. p. 83.

A national bank may engage in the business of collecting notes, bills of exchange, and other evidence of debt as an incident of the banking business, although the authority is not expressly mentioned in the statute.

Mound City Paint & Color Co. v. Commercial Nat. Bank, 4 Utah, 353, 9 Pac. 709; Logan County Nat. Bank v. Townsend, 139 U. S. 67, 35 L. ed. 107, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 496; Keyes v. Bank of Hardin, 52 Mo. App. 323; Hanson v. Heard, 60 N. H. 190, 38 Atl. 788; Newport Nat. Bank v. Board of Education, 114 Ky. 87, 70 S. W. 186; Yerkes v. National Bank, 69 N. Y. 386, 25 Am. Rep. 208; White v. Third Nat. Bank, 7 Ohio Dec. Reprint, 666; Prescott Nat. Bank v. Butler, 157 Mass. 548, 32 N. E. 909.

A national bank may act as trustee of an express trust.

Kerfoot v. Farmers' & M. Bank, 218 U. S. 281, 287, 54 L. ed. 1042, 1043, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 14; Union Nat. Bank v. Matthews, 98 U. S. 621, 25 L. ed. 188.

The Federal court will look beyond the Federal question only when it has been decided erroneously, and then only to see whether there are any other matters adjudged by the state court sufficiently broad to maintain the judgment.

McLaughlin v. Fowler, 154 U. S. 663, and 26 L. ed. 176, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1192; Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. Texas, 212 U. S. 86, 99, 53 L. ed. 417, 425, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 220;

Thompson v. St. Nicholas Nat. Bank, 146 U. S. 240, 36 L. ed. 956, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 66.

Questions of fact will not be reviewed on a writ of error from this court to the highest court of a state.

Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. Texas, 212 U. S. 86, 99, 100, 53 L. ed. 417, 425, 426; Egan v. Hart, 165 U. S. 188, 189, 41 L. ed. 680, 681, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 300; Clipper Min. Co. v. Eli Min. & Land Co. 194 U. S. 220, 222, 48 L. ed. 944, 948, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 632; Kerfoot v. Farmers' & M. Bank, 218 U. S. 281, 288, 54 L. ed. 1042, 1043, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 14.

Mr. Justice Lamar delivered the opinion of the court:

Miller, the plaintiff in error, was the attorney of Helmick in an action against Porter. The judgment obtained in that suit was assigned by Helmick to the First National Bank of Fayette, Idaho, which executed an instrument reciting that it would hold any money collected subject to the order of Hemlick. At the time of making the assignment, Helmick gave verbal instructions to pay part of the money when collected to Lauer. The bank placed the judgment in the hands of Miller, who collected the money, and, claiming to act as attorney for Helmick, paid over the proceeds to the Moss Mercantile Company, which asserted that the cause of action had been transferred to it prior to the rendition of the judgment. The bank thereupon brought suit against Miller for the recovery of the money thus collected by him and paid over to a third party. The defendant answered, denying that the bank had title; alleging that it had paid no consideration for the transfer; that it was intended to defraud creditors; setting up that Helmick had revoked the assignment and had given Miller a release. There was, however, no claim that the charter of the bank prevented it from taking the transfer or prosecuting the suit.

There were several trials of the case, and ultimately, with the consent of Helmick and Lauer, the bank assigned the judgment to King. He was substituted as plaintiff, and recovered a judgment against 510] Miller. The case was *taken to the supreme court, where it was contended that a national bank could not act as trustee on an express trust, so as to be able to institute and maintain a suit under the statute of Oregon, which provides that the trustee of an express trust may sue without joining the person for whose interest the action is prosecuted. The judgment was affirmed, and no Federal question is presented in the writ of error here except on the theory that, under Revised Statutes, § 5136, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3455, a national bank could not act as trustee of an express trust, and that therefore the suit was absolutely void, and could not proceed to judgment in the name of the substituted plaintiff.

A national bank cannot act as a technical trustee and hold land for the benefit of third persons. It cannot, for example, act as trustee under a railroad mortgage, nor take title to property to be held for the life of the grantor, with remainder to his children. Every such transaction would be voidable at the instance of the government. Kerfoot v. Farmers' & M. Bank, 218 U. S. 281, 54 L. ed. 1042, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 14. But under Revised Statutes § 5136, "it may exercise all such incidental powers as shall be necessary to carry on banking," and it may therefore act as a fiduciary and occupy a trust relation in matters connected with that business. It may do those acts and occupy those relations which are usual or necessary in making collections of commercial paper and other evidences of debt. It is both usual and proper for the legal title to negotiable instruments to be vested in a bank by mere indorsement for purposes of collection, holding the proceeds as the indorser directs. There is no difference in law if the title is conveyed by a lengthier and more formal instrument. In both cases the bank takes the legal title for the purpose of demand and collection. In a proper case, there is no reason why it might not go further and institute suit thereon in its own name for the recovery of what may be due. If the transfer was made, or the suit was being maintained, for purposes not *authorized by the charter of the [511 bank, and if the defendant was in a position where his rights were prejudiced thereby, it would be incumbent on him to raise that defense at the outset of the litigation, or as soon as he learned that fact.

In this case the assignment was made in order that the bank might collect the money, pay part to Lauer, and, in effect, hold the balance on deposit to the credit of Helmick. The judgment was not transferred to the bank for the mere purpose of enabling it to bring suit in its own name. At the time of the transfer no suit was contemplated, and, indeed, none was necessary, because the money was immediately paid by Porter. Suit only became necessary when the amount collected by Miller was later improperly paid over by him to the Moss Mercantile Company. There was nothing in this transaction which was so disconnected with the banking business as to make it in violation of Rev. Stat. § 5136, even if the defendant could raise such question. Kerfoot v. Farmers' & M. Bank, supra. The laws of Oregon permitted an action to be maintained by the bank in its own name. There is no Federal question before us which authorizes a reversal, and the judgment is affirmed.

512] *UNITED STATES, Plff. in Err.,
v.
NORD DEUTSCHER LLOYD.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 512-519.)

Aliens — deportation — charge for return passage.

A foreign steamship company which lawfully collected in Germany the return passage money from emigrants embarking for New York violates the prohibition of the immigration act of February 20, 1907 (34 Stat. at L. 898, chap. 1134, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1909, p. 447), § 19, against making any charge for the return of aliens unlawfully brought into the United States, or taking security therefor, where, after the deportation of such emigrants had been ordered, the steamship company retained the money with intent to make charge and secure payment for their return passage.

[Exclusion of aliens, see Aliens, VI., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 611.]

Argued January 12, 1912. Decided February 19, 1912.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York to review a judgment sustaining a demurrer to and quashing an indictment charging a foreign steamship company with taking security and making charge for the return passage of aliens unlawfully brought into the United States and ordered to be deported. Reversed.

See same case below, 186 Fed. 391.

Statement by Mr. Justice Lamar:

Writ of error to review a judgment sustaining a demurrer to an indictment charging the defendant with taking security and making charge for the return passage of aliens unlawfully brought into the United States, and ordered to be returned in pursuance of the immigration act of February, 1907 [34 Stat. at L. 898, chap. 1134, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1909, p. 447].

The indictment charges that the Nord Deutscher Lloyd, a German corporation, operated a line of steamers between Bremen and New York, maintaining an office and place of business in both cities. On November 25, 1910, in Bremen, it sold tickets to two aliens, entitling them to passage to New York and return. Before their embarkation the defendant collected from them 150 rubles for the return passage money in steerage. On arrival in New York the aliens were ordered to be deported to Germany, as likely to become public charges, because of scillity and inability to make a living. On December 16, 1910, after the unlawful bringing into this country of said aliens, and while they were liable to deportation on the vessel by which they came, the said 150 rubles were still held and retained in possession of the defendant up to (April 3, 1911) the date of filing the indictment, "the defendant so holding and retaining the same and making charge thereof for the return of such aliens, and being taken and continuously held by the said defendant, as security from the said aliens, for the payment of such charge for their return passage to Germany, aforesaid, in violation and evasion of § 19 of the immigration laws of the United States, approved February 20, 1907. The defendant . . . by the means aforesaid, at and within the southern district of New York, on December 16, 1910, unlawfully and wilfully did make charge for the return of aliens, so as aforesaid brought into this country in violation of law, and take security from them and keep and hold the same for the payment of such charge, then and there well knowing that such aliens had been brought to this country in violation of law."

The court sustained the demurrer on the ground that the money was paid and received in Germany, and that the facts did not amount to a violation of § 19, which provides: "That all aliens brought to this country in violation of law shall, if practicable, be immediately sent back to the country whence they respectively came, on the vessels bringing them. The cost of their maintenance while on land, as well as the expense of the return of such aliens, shall be borne by the owner or owners of the vessels on which they respectively came." And if such owner shall refuse "to pay the cost of their maintenance while on land, or shall make any charge for the return of any such alien, or shall take any security from him for the *payment of [514 such charge," such owner shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

Assistant Attorney General Harr argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The rule that penal statutes are to be strictly construed is qualified by the further one that such statutes are not to be so strictly construed as to defeat the obvious intention of the legislature.

NOTE.—As to what Chinese persons are excluded from the United States—see note to Wong You v. United States, 104 C. C. A. 538.

United States v. Wiltberger, 5 Wheat. 76, 95, 5 L. ed. 37, 42; American Fur Co. v. United States, 2 Pet. 358, 367, 7 L. ed. 450, 453; United States v. Morris, 14 Pet. 464, 475, 10 L. ed. 543, 548; United States v. Hartwell, 6 Wall. 385, 395, 18 L. ed. 830, 832; United States v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U. S. 649, 653, 42 L. ed. 890, 892, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 456.

Presumptions of intent from somewhat remote subsequent conduct are not unknown to the common law.

Bailey v. Alabama, 211 U. S. 452, 454, 53 L. ed. 278, 279, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 141; Com. v. Rubin, 165 Mass. 453, 43 N. E. 200.

Properly viewed, even where the charge is made or the security taken abroad for the return of an alien unlawfully brought to the United States, a substantial part of the transaction occurs within our jurisdiction. The service for which the charge is made or the security taken is performed partly within the territorial waters of the United States and partly on the high seas, either of which would be sufficient to give to this country jurisdiction of acts inhibited as contrary to its policies with respect to immigration of foreign commerce. (American Banana Co. v. United Fruit Co. 213 U. S. 355, 356, 53 L. ed. 831, 832, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 511, 16 Ann. Cas. 1047.) As in the case of the provisions of the Elkins act, prohibiting the giving of rebates, and authorizing prosecution in any district through which the transportation may have been conducted (Armour Packing Co. v. United States, 209 U. S. 56, 73, 74, 52 L. ed. 681, 691, 692, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 428), may it not be said here that the transportation contrary to the inhibitions of the statute is an essential part of the offense? But, independent of this, the statute would apply, and the authority of Congress be upheld, as to acts occurring in a foreign jurisdiction which are intended to interfere with the legitimate operations of the government or to defeat the exercise of its rightful powers (American Banana Co. v. United Fruit Co. 213 U. S. 356, 53 L. ed. 832, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 511, 16 Ann. Cas. 1047).

See also United States v. Craig, 28 Fed. 795; United States v. Lavarrello, 149 Fed. 297.

Mr. Joseph Larocque argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

A statute will, as a general rule, be construed as intended to be confined in its operation and effect to the territorial limits within the jurisdiction of the lawmaker, and words of universal scope will be construed as meaning only those subject to the legislation.

American Banana Co. v. United Fruit Co. 213 U. S. 347, 53 L. ed. 826, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 511, 16 Ann. Cas. 1047.

Mr. Justice Lamar, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

Section 19 of the immigration act of 1907 (34 *Stat. at L. 898, 904, chap. 1134, [517 U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1909, pp. 447, 458]) is not aimed at the aliens of the excluded class, but at the owners of vessels unlawfully bringing them into this country. The government might in large measure protect itself by inspection, rejection, and order of deportation, but it is purposed, also, as far as possible, to protect the alien. He might be ignorant of our laws, and ought to be deterred from incurring the expense of making a passage which could only end in his being returned to the country from whence he came. This policy could best be subserved by securing the co-operation of the transportation companies, and to this end the statute required that they should not only maintain the aliens unlawfully brought by them into this country, but should take them back free of charge. In the absence of this last provision the company might well afford to accept as passengers those known or suspected to belong to the excluded class. It would receive from them their passage money from Europe to America. If they passed the inspection, the transaction was ended. If they were deported, the company would be at the trifling expense of maintaining them while here. But if it could charge and secure payment for the return passage, it would collect two fares instead of one. This would have made the transportation of an excluded alien more profitable than the carrying of one who could lawfully enter. This was so obvious that the statute not only required the cost of their passage to be borne by the transportation company, but prohibited the making of a charge, or the taking of security, for the return passage, which might be collected or enforced at the end of the journey.

It is said, however, that no such charge was made in New York; that the indictment shows only the case of an ordinary sale of a round-trip steerage ticket from Bremen to New York, and that what was lawfully done in Germany cannot be punished as a crime in New York.

The statute, of course, has no extraterritorial operation, *and the defendant cannot be indicted here for what he did in a foreign country. American Banana Co. v. United Fruit Co. 213 U. S. 347, 53 L. ed. 826, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 511, 16 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1047. But the parties in Germany could make a contract which would be of force in the United States. When, therefore, in Bremen the alien paid and the defendant received the 150 rubles for a return passage, they created a condition which was operative in New York. If, in that city, the company had refused to honor the ticket, the alien could there have enforced his rights. In like manner, if by reason of facts occurring in New York the statute operated to rescind the contract, the rights and duties of the parties could there be determined, and acts of commission or omission, which, as a result of the rescission, were there unlawful, could there be punished.

If, as argued, the company did nothing in New York except to retain money which had been lawfully paid in Germany, the result is not different, because, under the circumstances, nonaction was equivalent to action. The indictment charges that on December 16, 1910, it was found that the aliens had been unlawfully brought into this country. The company at once was under the duty of taking them back at its own cost. Instead of returning to them the money previously received for such transportation, the defendant retained it up to the date of the indictment, April 3, 1911, with intent to make charge and secure payment for their passage to Bremen. This retention of the money, with such intent, was an affirmative violation of the statute. The company could not take the aliens back free of charge, as required by law, and at the same time retain the fare covering the same trip.

The demurrer admits that, with knowledge that it was bound to carry the excluded aliens back at its own cost, the defendant in New York made a charge, and retained the 150 rubles, with intent to apply that money in satisfaction thereof. If that be true, the defendant violated 519] *the statute within the southern district of New York, and can there be indicted and tried.

The judgment must therefore be reversed.

56 L. ed.

METROPOLITAN WATER COMPANY,
Appt.,
v.
KAW VALLEY DRAINAGE DISTRICT OF
WYANDOTTE COUNTY, KANSAS, et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 519-524.)

Appeal — from circuit court — jurisdiction below — prior appeal to circuit court of appeals.

1. The Federal Supreme Court cannot review, as presenting a question of jurisdiction, a decree of a Federal circuit court dismissing a bill in aid of an attempt to remove condemnation proceedings from a state court, which decree was necessitated by the mandate of a circuit court of appeals, which court, being of the opinion that the condemnation proceedings did not amount to a "suit" within the meaning of the removal statutes, had reversed an order of the circuit court, granting a temporary injunction restraining the further prosecution of the proceedings, and had remanded the cause with directions to proceed in accordance with its opinion, since there was an opportunity afforded to obtain a review of the jurisdictional question, either upon a certificate of the circuit court of appeals, or on a writ of certiorari to that court. [For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 990-993, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Certiorari — to circuit court of appeals — final judgment.

2. A judgment of a circuit court of appeals which, being of the opinion that condemnation proceedings did not amount to a "suit" within the meaning of the removal statutes, reversed a decree of a circuit court granting a temporary injunction on a bill in aid of an attempt to remove such proceedings from a state court, and remanded the cause with directions to proceed in accordance with its opinion, must be treated, for the purpose of testing the right to a review by certiorari, as the equivalent of a direction to enter a final decree against the complaint for want of jurisdiction. [For other cases, see Certiorari, II. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — judgment — dismissal.

3. The circuit court of appeals, on an appeal from a mere interlocutory order, may direct the bill to be dismissed, if it appears that the complainant is not entitled to maintain the suit.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 5481-5490, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 844.]

NOTE.—On direct review in Federal Supreme Court of district or circuit courts—see notes to Gwin v. United States, 46 L. ed. U. S. 741, and Paducah v. East Tennessee Teleph. Co. 106 C. C. A. 333.

On certiorari from Federal Supreme Court to circuit court of appeals—see note to United States v. Dickinson, 53 L. ed. U. S. 711.

Argued and submitted January 16, 1912.
Decided February 19, 1912.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Kansas to review a decree dismissing, conformably to the opinion of the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit, a bill in aid of an attempt to remove condemnation proceedings from a state court. Dismissed.

See same case below in Circuit Court of Appeals, 108 C. C. A. 393, 186 Fed. 315.

Statement by Mr. Justice Lamar:

The Metropolitan Water Company, a corporation of the state of West Virginia, owned land which the Kaw Valley Drainage District, a corporation of the state of Kansas, desired to acquire for public purposes.

Under the provisions of the act regulating the condemnation of land, the defendant 520] in error presented to the *judge of the district court of Wyandotte county, a petition for the appointment of commissioners to value the property of the complainant, necessary to be condemned for drainage purposes. The water company immediately filed with the judge a petition to remove the case to the United States circuit court. After argument this petition was denied and commissioners were appointed. The complainant at once filed, in the United States circuit court, its bill in aid of the removal proceeding, praying that the defendant and the commissioners be enjoined from further prosecuting the condemnation proceedings. Among other things it alleged that the act violated the 14th Amendment because it deprived the complainant of his property before judicial ascertainment of its value and before payment—in that when the report of the commissioners was filed with the register of deeds, the defendant, on paying the amount of the award, could take possession of the property; and, though an appeal to the district court was permitted, the defendant could retain possession in the meantime on giving bond to pay the amount of the verdict.

To this bill the defendant demurred, and after hearing, a temporary injunction was granted, restraining the defendant from proceeding further to condemn the property of the complainant. This order was reversed by the circuit court of appeals, which, in an elaborate opinion, held that the statute was valid, and that until an appeal was taken from the award of the commissioners the proceeding was in the nature of an inquest to determine damages, and not a "suit" within the meaning of the removal statute, and therefore not removable into the Federal court thereunder (108 C. C. A. 393, 186 Fed. 315).

The mandate directed "that the order granting the injunction be reversed and that the cause be, and the same is hereby, remanded to the said circuit court, with directions for proceeding in accordance with the opinion *of this court." On the re-521 turn of the mandate, the circuit court sustained the demurrer and, in allowing the appeal to this court, certified that it dismissed the bill solely on the ground of the want of jurisdiction.

Mr. Willard P. Hall argued the cause and filed a brief for appellant.

Mr. L. W. Keplinger submitted the cause for appellees. Mr. C. W. Trickett was on the brief.

Mr. Justice Lamar, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

While in form this is an appeal from the decree of the circuit court for the district of Kansas, it is really an effort to review a decision of the circuit court of appeals of the eighth circuit. From the statement of facts it is manifest that, in dismissing the bill, the circuit court merely applied the ruling that the petition for the appointment of commissioners was not the institution of a "suit" within the meaning of the removal act. If there was no suit which could be removed, it was not possible to maintain a bill in aid of removal proceedings thus decided to be void. When, therefore, the circuit court followed the opinion to its logical conclusion and dismissed the bill, it did only what it was bound to do. In obeying these directions it committed no error, and its decree cannot be reversed, even if it should appear that the court of appeals erred in holding that the condemnation proceedings did not amount to a suit within the meaning of the removal acts. The complainant had another remedy to test the correctness of that decision. It was open to it to ask the circuit court of appeals to certify the question of jurisdiction to this court. If that motion had been overruled, the complainant had the further right to apply for a writ of certiorari. If the writ *had been522 granted, the question of jurisdiction could have been tested here. If the writ of certiorari had been then denied, the complainant would have remained bound by the decision of the circuit court of appeals as the law of the case, which could be changed neither by the circuit court directly, nor indirectly by the reversal of a decree properly entered in pursuance of the mandate of the appellate court. Aspen Min. & Smelting Co. v. Billings, 150 U. S. 37, 37 L. ed. 988, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 4.

The case here is not like Globe Newspaper Co. v. Walker, 210 U. S. 361, 52 L. ed. 1098, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 726, where the judgment of the circuit court that the declaration was "insufficient in law" (130 Fed. 593) was reversed by the circuit court of appeals, and remanded "for further proceedings according to law" (2 L.R.A.(N.S.) 913, 72 C. C. A. 77, 140 Fed. 305, 5 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 274). At the trial there was a verdict for the plaintiff. But during that hearing the defendant moved that the action be dismissed because the court was without jurisdiction. It was held that from this decision an appeal could be taken under § 5 of the act of 1891. [26 Stat. at L. 827, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 549.]

The case is ruled by Brown v. Alton Water Co. 222 U. S. 325, ante, 221, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 156, although the facts there were the converse of those shown by the present record. There the circuit court dismissed the bill for want of jurisdiction. That decree was reversed by the court of appeals. After the filing of the mandate in the circuit court, a final decree was entered in favor of the complainant. Thereupon the case was brought here, the judge certifying that the defendants had challenged the jurisdiction of the court as a Federal court to hear and determine the cause. That appeal was dismissed on the ground that the circuit court was bound to follow the decision of the circuit court of appeals,—it being said that "if error was committed in so doing, it is not for the circuit court to pass upon that question. The circuit court could not do otherwise than carry out the mandate from the court of appeals, and 523]could *not refuse to do so on the ground of want of jurisdiction in itself or in the appellate court."

It is urged that the decision in the Alton Case does not apply, because in it there had been a final decree dismissing the bill for want of jurisdiction, while in the present case the ruling of the circuit court of appeals was made on a review of an interlocutory order, from which, it is said, no writ of certiorari could issue. It is argued that the complainant was obliged to wait until a final decree was entered, and then, for the first time its right of appeal became perfect, under § 5 of the act of 1891 (26 Stat. at L. 827, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 549), permitting cases to be brought to this court on questions of jurisdiction.

We need not consider when a writ of certiorari may issue to review decisions on 56 L. ed.

interlocutory orders by the circuit court of appeals, for, in any event, its judgment in the present case must be treated as equivalent to a direction to enter a final decree against the complainant for want of jurisdiction. It is true that the mandate did not in terms make such an order, yet its direction that the circuit court "should proceed in accordance with the opinion" operated to make the opinion a part of the mandate as completely as though it had been set out at length. Under such a mandate nothing was left for the circuit court to do except to dismiss the bill. It was within the power of the circuit court of appeals to make such an order on an appeal from an interlocutory order. For, while at one time there was some difference in the rulings on that subject, it was finally settled by Smith v. Vulcan Iron Works, 165 U. S. 518, 41 L. ed. 810, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 407, that, on appeal from a mere interlocutory order, the circuit court of appeals might direct the bill to be dismissed if it appeared that the complainant was not entitled to maintain its suit. Re Tampa Suburban R. Co. 168 U. S. 583, 42 L. ed. 589, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 177; Ex parte National Enameling & Stamping Co. 201 U. S. 162, 50 L. ed. 708, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 444; Bissell, Carpet-Sweeper Co. v. Goshen Sweeper Co. 19 C. C. A. 25, 43 U. S. App. 47, 72 Fed. 545 (5), 556-560.

*It follows, therefore, that the circuit court of appeals had authority to make a ruling which finally disposed of the case; that the complainant then had the right to ask it to certify the question of jurisdiction, and, if that was refused, might have applied to this court for a writ of certiorari. Having failed successfully to prosecute these remedies, the judgment of the circuit court of appeals remained conclusive upon the parties, and binding upon the circuit court and every other court to which the case could by any possibility be taken. For these reasons, the question as to whether there was a suit which was removable cannot be considered, and the appeal must be dismissed.

UNITED STATES, Appt.,
v.

CHARLES E. ELLICOTT and John B. Norris, Copartners, Trading as Ellicott Machine Company.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 524-543.)

Appeal — time for taking — court of claims.

1. A judgment of the court of claims is not final, so as to set in motion the time for taking an appeal therefrom, until a motion for a new trial, if entertained by the court, has been disposed of.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 2571-2585, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Contracts — construction.

2. Provisions in a schedule for the construction of barges for the United States, giving with much detail the weight and dimensions of structural materials, are not affected by a provision in the contract subsequently entered into for the construction of such barges in accordance with the specifications contained in such schedule, "with such modifications" as are shown on a specified drawing outlined in a designated letter, where such drawing, without any reference to weight and dimensions of materials, gives a schedule of displacement, load, and draft, with the total net weight of the barge, the letter authorizes distribution of such weight in any manner desired, and the contract elsewhere authorizes an inspection of all the "material" furnished, provides for payment for the barges when completed in accordance with the "specifications," letter, and drawing, and that no change or modification involving an alteration in the "specifications as to character, quantity, and quality" of material, which would either increase or diminish the cost of the work, should be made unless agreed to in writing.

[For other cases, see Contracts, II. d, 1, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Contracts — certainty — conflict between essential provisions.

3. An irreconcilable conflict between essential provisions of a contract for the construction of barges for the United States, NOTE.—On practice and procedure governing the transfer of causes to the Federal Supreme Court on writ of error or appeal—see note to Wedding v. Meyler, 66 L.R.A. 833.

When time for taking appeal to, or suing out writ of error from, the Federal Supreme Court, begins to run.

In computing the time within which a writ of error must be brought or an appeal taken, the day of the entry of the judgment, decree, or order appealed from should be excluded. Smith v. Gale, 137 U. S. 577, 34 L. ed. 792, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 185.

The rights of parties with respect to the time of appeal are to be determined by the date of actual entry, or of the signing and filing of the final decree, although it purports to be entered as of the date of a prior order settling its terms. Providence Rubber Co. v. Goodyear, 6 Wall. 153, 18 L. ed. 762.

And where a decree was drawn and placed in the hands of the clerk on an understanding that it was to be entered when approved by the court as of that date, it cannot be regarded as passed for the purposes of appeal until the day on which it was returned to the clerk by the judge and entered. Seymour v. Freer, 5 Wall. 822, 18 L. ed. 564.

The time within which a writ of error must be sued out begins to run from the day the judgment is entered in the record book of the court proceedings, although it may not then have been recorded in the judgment docket. Pollys v. Black River Improv. Co. 113 U. S. 81, 28 L. ed. 938, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 369.

A decree of the circuit court cannot be reviewed on appeal by the United States Supreme Court unless the appeal is taken within two years after the entry of such decree, although taken within two years from the time the decree took full effect. Radford v. Folsom, 131 U. S. 392, 33 L. ed. 203, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 792.

The time within which an appeal must be taken begins to run from the entry of a decree dismissing the bill, with costs, although a decree was afterward entered which included judgment for the amount of the costs as taxed. Fowler v. Hamill, 139 U. S. 549, 35 L. ed. 266, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 663.

Where the priority of liens upon property is the subject-matter of the suit, a decree which finally determines the entire controversy litigated is a final decree, and an appeal must be taken therefrom within the time limited by law or it will be too late, although the fund is afterwards brought into court for final distribution, as decreed. Bank of Lewisburg v. Sheffey, 140 U. S. 445, 35 L. ed. 493, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 755.

A writ of error prosecuted within sixty days from the entry by a circuit court of an order designating the day of execution of one convicted of murder, and that the death warrant issue, is in time, under the act of February 6, 1889, § 6, allowing such writ during the term, or within such time, not exceeding sixty days thereafter, as the court may allow by order entered of record, where, of the two orders previously entered, one, if it could be regarded as a final judgment, was void because entered on Sunday, and the other does not appear to have been made in the presence of the defendant. Ball v. United States, 140 U. S. 118, 35 L. ed. 377, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 761.

Where a decree of the court below is amended, such amended decree is the final decree from which the time to appeal must be reckoned. United States v. Gomez, 1 Wall. 690, 17 L. ed. 677.

An appeal from a special decree is in time to operate as a supersedeas, whether taken within ten days after the decision is pronounced and entered on the minutes, or within ten days after the decree is settled and signed by the judge and filed with the clerk. Silsby v. Foote, 20 How. 290, 15 L. ed. 822.

Since the judgment of affirmance of the New York court of appeals becomes a final judgment, on which execution can issue, only when it is entered in the supreme court, to which the record is returned with an order directing that court to enter judgment accordingly, this is the date from which will prevent the contractor from recovering for failure to carry it out, exists where the specifications, which are left in full force, prescribe with much detail the weight and dimensions of the structural materials, while the contract itself provides for the construction of the barges in accordance with the specifications, "with such modifications" as are shown by certain proposals contained in the contractor's bid, under which he claims the right to use materials of an inferior size, weight, and power of resistance.

[For other cases, see Contracts, I. d. 3, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 85.]

Argued December 7 and 8, 1911. Decided February 26, 1912.

which the time within which a writ of error must issue in order to operate as a supersedeas begins to run. Green v. Van Buskerk, 3 Wall. 448, 18 L. ed. 245.

Following this decision it was held in Brumagin v. Chew, 21 N. J. Eq. 180, that because no execution can issue from the New Jersey court of appeals, the time within which a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States must issue in order to operate as a supersedeas did not begin to run until the filing in the New Jersey court of chancery of the decree of affirmance which, with the record, was remitted to that court.

But, under similar circumstances, the court has adopted a different rule. Wurts v. Hoagland, 105 U. S. 701, 26 L. ed. 1109. Here the New Jersey court of errors and appeals had affirmed the judgment of the state supreme court and remitted the record to that court. A writ of error from the Federal Supreme Court was issued within sixty days of the filing of the remittitur, but more than sixty days after the judgment was rendered by the court of errors and appeals. The court held that this was too late to operate as a supersedeas. It does not seem possible to reconcile this decision with Green v. Van Buskerk, supra, as the practice in New York and New Jersey seems in this regard to be identical. The court did concede, however, in Wurts v. Hoagland, that in those states where the highest court does not have possession of the record, but decides questions certified by the inferior courts, and merely issues a rescript, directing the latter what judgment to render, the case would, perhaps, be different.

The right of appeal from the court of private land claims on the part of the United States continued to exist under § 9 of the act creating that court until six months next after the receipt by the Attorney General of a statement of the case and the points decided. United States v. Pena, 175 U. S. 500, 44 L. ed. 251, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 165.

A decree does not take final effect for the purpose of an appeal until an application

APPEAL from the Court of Claims to review a judgment for the recovery from the United States of damages for refusing to permit the carrying out of a contract for the construction of barges. Reversed.

See same case below, 43 Ct. Cl. 469; on motion for new trial, 44 Ct. Cl. 127.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Solicitor General Lehmann argued the cause and filed a brief for appellant:

The commission had no authority, without readvertising, to enter into a contract for barges of a radically different type from those originally specified.

Fones Bros. Hardware Co. v. Erb, 54 Ark. 645, 13 L.R.A. 353, 17 S. W. 7; Mazet v. Pittsburgh, 137 Pa. 548, 20 Atl. 693; Chip-

for rehearing, made in season and entertained by the court, is disposed of. Voorhees v. John T. Noye Mfg. Co. 151 U. S. 135, 38 L. ed. 101, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 295; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Murphy, 111 U. S. 488, 28 L. ed. 492, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 497; Northern P. R. Co. v. Holmes, 155 U. S. 137, 39 L. ed. 99, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 28.

If a petition for rehearing is presented in season, and entertained by the court, the time limited for suing out a writ of error to operate as a supersedeas does not begin to run until the petition is disposed of. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Murphy, 111 U. S. 488, 28 L. ed. 492, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 497; Slaughter-House Cases, 10 Wall. 273, 19 L. ed. 915.

The time within which a writ of error from the Federal Supreme Court must be served in order to operate as a supersedeas begins to run from the day on which a motion for a new trial was overruled. Rutherford v. Penn. Mut. L. Ins. Co. 1 McCrary, 120, 1 Fed. 456; Brown v. Evans, 8 Sawy. 502, 18 Fed. 56.

A motion made during the term, to set aside the judgment or decree, suspends its operation so that it does not take effect for the purpose of determining the time within which the writ of error must be sued out or the appeal taken, in order to operate as a supersedeas, until the date when the motion is denied. Memphis v. Brown, 94 U. S. 715, 24 L. ed. 244; Washington, G. & A. R. Co. v. Bradley, 7 Wall. 575, 19 L. ed. 274.

The same is true where a petition filed during the term to open the final decree for certain purposes is entertained by the court. Brockett v. Brockett, 2 How. 238, 11 L. ed. 251.

But a petition for a rehearing or motion for a new trial, made after the term, does not suspend the operation of the decree for the purpose of determining the time within which the appeal must be taken. Cam-buston v. United States, 95 U. S. 285, 24 L. ed. 448.

The thirty days' limitation prescribed by general order in bankruptcy No. 36 for taking an appeal from a final order of a cirpewa Bridge Co. v. Durand, 122 Wis. 85, 106 Am. St. Rep. 931, 99 N. W. 603; Packard v. Hayes, 94 Md. 233, 51 Atl. 32; Detroit Free Press Co. v. State Auditors, 47 Mich. 135, 10 N. W. 171; Littler v. Jayne, 124 Ill. 123, 16 N. E. 374.

The late Solicitor General Bowers and Mr. Barton Corneau, Special Assistant to the Attorney General, also filed a brief for appellant:

This appeal was prayed in apt time.

Brockett v. Brockett, 2 How. 238, 11 L. ed. 251; Memphis v. Brown, 94 U. S. 715, 24 L. ed. 244; Aspen Min. & Smelting Co. v. Billings, 150 U. S. 31, 37 L. ed. 986, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 4; Voorhees v. John T. Noye Mfg. Co. 151 U. S. 135, 38 L. ed. 101, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 295; Kingman & Co. v. Western Mfg. Co. 170 U. S. 675, 42 L. ed. 1192, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 786; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Murphy, 111 U. S. 488, 28 L. ed. 492, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 497.

The writing executed by the parties expresses with seeming clearness an agreement for the construction of barges of the dimensions shown on the plan, but of materials of the size, weight, and character prescribed by the specifications; and the facts that such construction would require barges of greater weight than was noted on the plan should not be permitted to alter the plain meaning of the language used.

Garrison v. United States, 7 Wall. 688, 19 L. ed. 277; White v. Hoyt, 73 N. Y. 511.

At most the impossibility of constructing a barge of the proposed dimensions and specified materials without exceeding the weight noted on the plan only renders the meaning of the writing ambiguous, and imposes on the court the duty to ascertain by extrinsic evidence the true intent of the parties. Accordingly, the court of claims erred in holding as a matter of law that it was immaterial in this case whether or not the evidence showed that the minds of the parties never met.

Walker v. Tucker, 70 Ill. 532, 8 Mor. Min. Rep. 672; Chesapeake & O. Canal Co. v. Hill, 15 Wall. 94, 21 L. ed. 64; Moran v. Prather, 23 Wall. 492, 23 L. ed. 121; Reed v. Merchants' Mut. Ins. Co. 95 U. S. 23, 24 L. ed. 348.

If the instrument must be construed as evidencing an agreement to construct the barges of lighter and smaller materials than those specified, it is absolutely void, because the canal commissioners had no authority to make a contract for the construction of a barge which did not conform, at least, substantially, with the specifications as to the weight and size of materials.

District of Columbia v. Bailey, 171 U. S. 161, 43 L. ed. 118, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 868; McMullen v. Hoffman, 174 U. S. 639, 43 L. ed. 1117, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 839; Whitney v. Hudson, 69 Mich. 189, 37 N. W. 184; Nash v. St. Paul, 11 Minn. 174; Gil. 110; Overshiner v. Jones, 66 Ind. 452; Wickwire v. Elkhart, 144 Ind. 305, 43 N. E. 216; People ex rel. Ream Pav. Co. v. Board of Improvement, 43 N. Y. 227; People ex rel. Trundy v. Van Nort, 65 Barb. 331.

Where parties intend to contract by parol, and there is a misunderstanding as to the terms, neither is bound, because their minds have not met. Where there is a written contract, and a like misunderstanding is developed, a court of equity will refuse to execute it. If a contract be unreasonable and unconscionable, but not void for fraud, a court of law will give to the party who sues for its breach damages, not according to its letter, but only such as he is equitably entitled to.

James v. Morgan, 1 Lev. 111; Thornborow v. Whitacre, 2 Ld. Raym. 1164; Baxter v. Wales, 12 Mass. 365; Hume v. United States, 132 U. S. 406, 412, 33 L. ed. 393, 397, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 134.

Mr. James Piper argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Francis K. Carey and A. A. Hoehling, Jr., filed a brief for appellees:

The only judgment from which appellant could properly appeal is the final judgment of the court of claims; and no appeal will lie to this court from a mere order of the court of claims, overruling the motion for a new trial, such order not being in the nature of a final judgment, and its disposition resting entirely in the discretion of the trial court.

Kellogg v. United States, 19 Ct. Cl. 73.

Appellant could have filed at any time within ninety days after final judgment an application for the allowance of an appeal, and such application would have temporaculit court of appeals in a bankruptcy case cannot be extended by filing a petition for rehearing after the thirty days have expired, although there may be but one term of that court, and, by its rules of practice, petitions for rehearing may be presented at any time during the term. Conboy v. First Nat. Bank, 203 U. S. 141, 51 L. ed. 128, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 50.

A motion to set aside a decree, filed by persons not then parties to the suit, and who had no right to intervene except upon leave, does not suspend the decree so as to give sixty days from the denial of the motion for obtaining a supersedeas. Sage v. Central R. Co. 93 U. S. 412, 23 L. ed. 933.

The court below may set aside a judgment and enter it anew during the term for the purpose of giving it effect for a supersedeas. Memphis v. Brown, 94 U. S. 715, 24 L. ed. 244.

rily suspended the further running of the time incident to the filing, consideration, and disposition of a motion for a new trial.

United States v. Ayres, 9 Wall. 609, 19 L. ed. 627; Ex parte Roberts, 15 Wall. 384, 25 L. ed. 131.

It would seem idle to contend that so long as the subject-matter of the advertisement and specifications be not departed from there can be absolutely no modification or change in respect of mere detailed matters incident to such subject-matter.

International S. S. & R. Supply Co. v. United States, 13 Ct. Cl. 209; McKee v. United States, 12 Ct. Cl. 504; Garfield v. United States, 93 U. S. 242, 23 L. ed. 779.

Mr. Chief Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

Whether or not the United States is responsible in damages because of a refusal to permit the carrying out of an alleged contract made with a copartnership, the Ellicott Machine Company, who are appellees, for the construction for the Isthmian Canal Company of six steel dump barges, is the issue here required to be decided. From a judgment for $10,000, entered in the court of claims, in favor of the Ellicott Machine Company, because of the refusal referred to, the United States took this appeal.

It will conduce to a clear understanding of the controversy to fully summarize the facts found below, and we proceed to do so.

After two unsuccessful attempts to procure satisfactory proposals for the construction and delivery of the six steel dump barges, the Isthmian Canal Commission, by advertisement and specifications, dated May 29, 1906, invited the proposals which culminated in the making of the alleged contract. One of the clauses of the advertisement reads as follows:

"Preliminary inspection will be made at the point of manufacture or purchase, to determine whether the material meets the requirements set forth in the specifications, and final inspection will be made at the point of delivery as above.

....."
In the specifications, among other things, it was recited as follows:

"The following specifications and requirements are general only as indicating the class of construction desired.

532] *"Barges of heavy construction for rough service, built in accordance with best modern marine practice, are desired.

"Bidders will be required to submit with their proposals plans in sufficient detail to show the proposed size of members and details of construction.
56 L. ed.

"The breadth of the barges should not be less than 25 feet nor more than 32 feet. They should have sufficient depth and length to carry a full load of sand on a draft of not more than 8 feet, and with not less than 30" freeboard when loaded. They will be rectangular in plan, with rake at each end about 11" long. . . ."

As shown by an excerpt in the margin,† the weight and *dimensions of the [533 structural materials were prescribed with much detail under the head of "Framing." In reply to this advertisement, appellee submitted a proposal to construct the desired barges, "subject to specifications of circular 310-C, with such modifications as are here shown on drawing No. 2105, dated June 7, submitted herewith." The plan referred to, as so submitted, showed the outline of a barge 101 feet 4 inches long, 30 feet wide, and 10 feet 6 inches in height, and a note on it read as follows:

"Capacity of bins—350 cu. yards. Maximum loaded draft when carrying 350 cu. yds. of material weighing 3240 lbs. per cu. yard, not to exceed 8'—0".

After examination of the bids by F. B. Maltby, division engineer on the Canal Zone, that official returned the bids to the general purchasing officer of the Commission *in Washington, accompanied by a let-[534 ter dated June 26, 1906. Therein, among other things, Mr. Maltby said: "It is noted that the drawing submitted by the Ellicott Machine Works does not show any detail, as required by the specifications. It is assumed, however (and we should insist on it), that the framing will be in strict accordance with our specifications." A sketch was inclosed "showing the desired arrangement of the hinges on the hopper doors and the method of securing timber lining to hoppers," and various suggestions were made †Framing.

Floor beams forward and aft of the hoppers and in the rake should not be less than 10" deep, and extended in one piece to the turn of the bilges. They will be spaced 24" center to center. Frames to be not less than 3½" x 5½", angles overlapping the floors not less than 18", and connected with them and to floor beams with proper gusset plates. Bilges to be of as short radius as it is practicable to bend the angles and plates.

In addition to the transverse bulkheads mentioned above, there will be a water-tight bulkhead at each end of each rake.

Transverse water-tight bulkheads will be made of 10.2 pound plate with double-riveted lap joints, stiffened with vertical explanatory of the details shown on this sketch. Thereupon D. W. Ross, purchasing officer, prepared and transmitted to the Ellicott firm a draft of contract for the construction and delivery of the barges, but it was returned with the suggestion that article 1 thereof be rewritten, so as to provide for the construction of—“six steel dump barges in accordance with specifications contained in circular No. 310-C of the Isthmian Canal Commission, dated May 29, 1906; with such modifications as are shown on drawing No. 2105, dated June 7, 1906, and subject to such amendments as to details of hinges, hoisting gear, and method of securing timber lining to hoppers as are described by letter of F. B. Maltby, division engineer, dated June 26, 1906, with the accompanying sketch, a copy of which specifications, drawing, letter, and sketch are attached herewith and form part of this contract.”

In the letter returning said draft of contract, it was stated that—

“our drawing No. 2105 was not intended to show working details, but solely to limit the conditions of displacements, load, and draft. As long as these are maintained we shall be pleased to follow such reasonable design of working details in arrangement and distribution of material as Mr. Maltby or his inspector may require.”

Claimant also, at the request of said Ross, 535]addressed *a letter, dated July 27, 1906, to Maltby, in which it submitted—“print No. 2105 revised July 27, specifying details as called for in your letter of June 26, 1906, of hinges, hoisting gear, and method of securing timber lining to hoppers.”

angle bars 3" x 3" x 5½", spaced 2" apart, except that the plates forming the ends of the hoppers will be of 21-pound plate, stiffened with 4" x 4" x ½" angle bars, spaced 2' apart.

In the space forward and aft of the hoppers there should be a central longitudinal bulkhead of 10.2 pound plate, fastened at the top of the floor beams and deck beams by 4" x 4" x ½" angle; it will be stiffened by vertical 3" x 3" x 5½" angles, spaced 2' apart. This bulkhead should extend from the hoppers to each end of the barges.

In addition to this bulkhead there will be 2 longitudinal lattice trusses, one on each side, midway from the center bulkhead to the side of the hull. They will have top and bottom cord of 3" x 3" x ½" angles, riveted to each floor and deck beam, lattice bars to be 3" x 3" x ½" angles made in double panels, and joined top and bottom with proper gusset plates with not less than 3 rivets in each landing. These trusses will extend from the hoppers to the rake.

In the rake there should be a 3" x 3" x ½" angle stanchion secured to each deck

In said letter, this statement also was made:

“We have also inserted on the drawing a schedule of displacement, load, and draft, showing a total net weight for the barge of 260,000 pounds. You will note that this corresponds with the note shown on print originally submitted with bid, and this weight may be distributed in any way your representative may desire.”

The alleged contract, the subject of this controversy, was then executed, F. P. Shonts, chairman of the Commission, signing for the party of the first part. Following a recital that “the Isthmian Canal Commission, for and on behalf of the United States of America, and the said Ellicott Machine Company, had covenanted and agreed, to and with each other, as follows.” The first article of the contract was inserted, reading as follows:

“Article 1. That the said Ellicott Machine Company shall construct, erect, and deliver to the Isthmian Canal Commission at Baltimore, Maryland, six (6) steel dump barges, in accordance with specifications contained in circular 310-C of the Isthmian Canal Commission, dated May 29th, 1906, with such modifications as are shown on drawing No. 2105, dated June 7th, 1906, and revised July 27th, 1906, outlined in letter of Ellicott Machine Company dated July 27th, 1906, and subject to such amendments as to details of hinges, hoisting gear, and method of securing timber lining to hoppers as are described by letter of F. B. Maltby, division engineer, dated June 26th, 1906, with accompanying sketch, copy of which specifications, drawing, letters, and sketch beam and floor timber on line with the said trusses.

Deck beams to be of 5" x ¾" Z bars spaced one to each frame, each beam to be attached to its frame by ½" gusset.

Gunwales to be not less than 4½" x 4½" x ½" angle running inside the side plating and below the deck.

The hull plating should be 21 pound on the bottom; bilges should be 21 pounds; the side plating may be of 18-pound plate and in no more than 2 streaks.

The deck should have a checkered stringer streak on each side 30" wide and about ½" thick; remaining deck may be of 15-pound plating.

All plating to be worked “in” and “out” on longitudinal streaks, longitudinal laps to be double-riveted. All girth seams to be double-riveted to butt straps.

There should be a nosing or fender streak of 8" x 8" yellow pine supported by 4" x 4" x ½" angles top and bottom. This nosing should extend entirely about the barge. On each side of the full length there should be a second fender streak of the same section about 3' below the deck.

are attached hereto and form a part of this contract."

It was provided in article 3 as follows: 536] "Article 3. That the party of the first part, by its duly authorized agent, shall have the right to inspect at any time during the process of construction of these barges, any and all material and workmanship used, or to be used, in said construction, and such inspection of said barges, and of the material used, or to be used, in the construction thereof, and of the workmanship thereon, may be made by the party of the first part, or its duly authorized agent, at any place where said materials may be found, and at the place of construction of said barges. In addition to the above, when said barges, or either of them, are pronounced by the party of the second part to be completed and ready for final inspection, such inspection may be made by the party of the first part, by its duly authorized agent, at the place or places where such barges, or either of them, have been constructed, such inspection being for the purpose of determining whether the same, or either of them, meet the requirements set forth in the letters, specifications, and blue print mentioned, in article 1 hereof, and all of said inspections, whether preliminary or final, the party of the first part, by its duly authorized agent, shall have the right to reject any and all material used, or to be used, in the construction of said barges, or either of them, or in the workmanship thereon, when, in the judgment of the party of the first part, by its duly authorized agent, the same or any part thereof, does not conform to the requirements above mentioned."

In article 8, among other things it was provided as follows:

"The barges herein contracted for shall be completed in accordance with the specifications, letter, and blue print annexed hereto and made a part hereof. . . ."

By article 9 it was agreed that payment would be made of the stipulated price for the six barges "upon their construction and delivery in accordance with the terms of this contract and the papers attached hereto."

537] *It was provided in the last article of the contract as follows:

"Article 12. If, at any time during the prosecution of this work, it shall be found advantageous or necessary to make any change or modification in said barges, or either of them, and this change or modification should involve such alteration in the specifications as to character, quantity, and quality, whether of labor or material, as 56 L. ed.

would either increase or diminish the cost of the work, then such change or modification must be agreed upon in writing by the contracting parties, the agreement setting forth fully the reasons for such change, and giving clearly the quantities and prices both of material and labor thus substituted for those specified in the original contract, and before taking effect must be approved by the chairman of the Isthmian Canal Commission: Provided, that no payment shall be made unless such supplemental or modified agreement was signed and approved before the obligations arising from such modification were incurred."

Two days after the execution of the contract, claimants presented to the government inspector of dredges a list of materials intended to be used by them in the construction of said barges, but upon examination of said list it was found by said inspector of dredges that the dredges which the claimants proposed to construct were different from those described in circular letter and specifications 310-C, set forth in the petition, the principal component parts or members being reduced in weight, size, and power of resistance, and thereupon the same was disapproved by the officers of the government. Demand was thereupon made that the claimants should adhere to the original specifications, which they refused to do, and, as a result, the United States abrogated the contract.

Soon afterwards this suit was commenced. By the petition judgment for $30,000 was demanded *as the "gains and profits[538 which claimants would have made had they constructed the barges in accordance with the contract, as the terms of that instrument were construed by the contracting firm." The court of claims, as already stated, gave judgment against the United States for the sum of $10,000. There is no statement in the findings as to the loss sustained by the claimants. Evidently, however, the conclusion to award the sum stated was based upon the hypothesis mentioned in the closing paragraph of the opinion of the court below, reading as follows:

"In consideration of all of the facts in the case, and in view of the difference between the cost of doing certain work and what claimants were to receive for it, making reasonable deduction of the less time engaged and release from the care, cost, risk, and responsibility attending a full execution of the contract, the court decides that claimants are entitled to recover as profits the sum of $10,000, and accordingly judgment against the defendants for said amount is hereby ordered." [43 Ct. Cl.

479.]

A motion to dismiss the appeal first requires attention. The facts are as follows:

The judgment against the United States was entered on May 18, 1908. Eighty-four days afterwards, on August 10, 1908, defendant filed a motion for a new trial. This motion was argued and submitted on November 23, 1908, and was overruled on January 4, 1909, in the term which began on December 7, 1908. Seventeen days afterwards, on January 21, 1909, the United States filed a motion to amend the findings of fact; on February 8, 1909, the motion was argued and submitted; and on February 15, 1909, the motion was overruled in part and allowed in part. Ten days afterwards, on February 25, 1909, the United States made application for and gave notice of an appeal "from the judgment rendered in the above-entitled cause on the 4th day of January, 1909."

539] *The grounds for the motion to dismiss are these: (a) that the appeal was not taken within ninety days after judgment (Rev. Stat. § 708, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 575), and (b) that the appeal prayed for and allowed was not from the judgment of January 4, 1909, "but was merely from the order overruling the motion for a new trial."

The motion is without merit. The general rule governing the subject of prosecuting error or taking appeals from final judgments or decrees is, we think, applicable to judgments or decrees of the court of claims, and that rule treats a judgment or decree properly entered in the cause as not final for the purposes of appeal until a motion for a new trial or a petition for rehearing, as the case may be, when entertained by the court, has been disposed of; and the time for appeal begins to run from the date of such disposition. Kingman & Co. v. Western Mfg. Co. 170 U. S. 675, 680, 681, 42 L. ed. 1192, 1194, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 786. It is, we think, also manifest that the appeal was taken upon the hypothesis just stated, that the judgment entered did not become a final judgment for the purposes of appeal until the motion for a new trial had been disposed of. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Murphy, 111 U. S. 488, 28 L. ed. 492, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 497.

Coming to the merits. The claimant in effect reiterates in the argument at bar the position taken by the court below in the opinions by it rendered, reported in 43 Ct. Cl. 469 and 44 Ct. Cl. 127. We shall therefore dispose of the case by reviewing the opinions of the court below.

In the opinion delivered upon the original hearing it was observed that "the litigation in this case resulted from what seems to have been an apparent misunderstanding by the agents of the defendants, as to certain changes in the terms of an original advertisement for bids for the construction of the said six steel dump barges of a specified size, strength, and weight," etc. It was, however, held that the contract was clear and unambiguous in terms, and that the evidence "revealed a degree of negligence *on the part of the agents of the de-[540 fendants from which they could not be allowed to extricate themselves by the abrogation of a duly executed contract in order to shift from themselves responsibility." The claimants, it was said, in their second bid, made part of the contract, had in detail specifically set forth the strength, weight, and measurement of the barges, and that "the only difference in the barges which the claimant proposed in its contract to construct under its bid was a difference in weight of framing and plates from those contained in the advertisement of the defendant's circular No. 310-C." The claimants, however, it was further observed, had called the attention of the defendant to the great difference between its then bid and the prior bid, and before the execution of the contract had noted on the blue print submitted by them and attached to the contract "the net weight of the barges," and stated that "this weight was to be distributed in such manner as the defendants might instruct." The printed specifications, it was held, although made part of the contract, could not govern, since the letter of claimants of July 27 and the blue print would have to be entirely ignored. It was also said that the materials proposed to be used by the claimants in the construction of the barges, although "reduced in weight, size, and power of resistance" from those prescribed by the specifications, did not constitute "a substitution of different strength and material for those provided in the specifications of the defendant as to the manner of constructing the barges, but was "rather a modification thereof."

We have, however, reached the conclusion, as well from the fact that the specifications were expressly made part of the contract as from various provisions of the contract which we have excerpted, that it cannot in reason be held that the specifications must be ignored, and as they cannot, therefore, be treated as having been abrogated, *it inevitably follows that the[541 alleged contract should have been held void for uncertainty.

It is, we think, in reason, impossible to construe the "modifications" referred to in the first article of the contract as having relation to the dimensions, etc., of the material so specifically described in the portions of the specifications embraced under the heading "Framing," since in that event a clear inconsistency would arise between the terms of that article and the terms of the specifications, also constituting part of the contract. And although this conclusion is, we think, so certain as to require no additional demonstration than the mere consideration of the terms of the two provisions, its conclusiveness is an addition convincingly shown by an analysis of the contract as a whole. The provision of article 3 in regard to the right of the government at any time during the progress of the work on the barges to inspect all the material furnished clearly imports that the contract had precisely settled the character of such material. So also does the provision in the same article in regard to final inspection, wherein it is provided: "Such inspection being for the purpose of determining whether the same, or either of them, meet the requirements set forth in the letters, specifications, and blue prints mentioned in article 1 hereof, and all of said inspections, whether preliminary or final, the party of the first part, by its duly authorized agent, shall have the right to reject any and all material used, or to be used, in the construction of said barges, or either of them, or in the workmanship thereon, when, in the judgment of the party of the first part, by its duly authorized agent, the same or any part thereof does not conform to the requirements above mentioned." Again, prominence is given in article 8 to the fact that, in the construction of the barges, the specifications are to be given effect, the provision being that "the barges herein contracted for shall be completed in accordance with the specifications, *letter, and blue print annexed hereto and made a part hereof. . . ." So also, in article 9, payment is to be made only when the barges have been constructed and delivered "in accordance with the terms of this contract and the papers attached hereto," of which papers the specifications formed a part. Article 12 also clearly negates the conception that it could have been intended by the parties that material parts of the specifications should be treated as not forming a portion of the contract, although declared by its terms to be a part thereof, since the binding efficacy of the specifications as to material is therein emphasized. The article, in substance, provided ed that no change or modification "involving an alteration in the specifications as to character, quantity, and quality, whether of labor or material, as would either increase or diminish the cost of the work," should be made unless "agreed upon in writing by the contracting parties, the agreement setting forth fully the reasons for such change, and giving clearly the quantities and price both of material and labor thus substituted for those specified in the original contract," etc. Manifestly, this article was drawn upon the conception, not that the contract did not, but that it did specifically, provide as to what material should be furnished for the work, and no other source could be resorted to for light as to the material contracted to be supplied than the specifications which it is now urged ought by construction to be removed from the contract.

Thus viewing the contract as a whole and determining that the specifications, so far as the "framing" schedule is concerned, should have been treated as unaffected by the provisions of article 1, it is evident that there was a conflict so irreconcilable between essential provisions of the assumed contract as to render it impossible to enforce it as an agreement between the parties. This result of the absolutely antagonistic and destructive character of essential provisions of the contract, one upon the other, can *only be escaped by indulging in one of [543 two hypotheses; either that the terms of the advertisement and specifications as incorporated in the assumed contract overshadowed and virtually destroyed the proposals resulting from the bid of the claimant, which also was incorporated in the contract, or, conversely, that the proposals which the bid embraced had the effect of setting at naught the provisions of the specifications. But if the first assumption were indulged in, it would clearly result that there was no right to recover, since that right is based upon the theory that the specifications are not binding and need not be complied with; and if the second were indulged, the same result would follow, since it would then come to pass that the contract was so irresponsible to and destructive of the advertised proposals as to nullify them, and therefore cause it to result that the contract was one made without the competitive bidding which was necessary to give it validity.

Under the circumstances, therefore, the court erred in treating the contract as a valid agreement, and in awarding judgment against the United States.

Judgment reversed.

ONTARIO LAND COMPANY, Appt.,
v.

CHARLES H. WILFONG and May A. Wilfong, His Wife, and Walter J. Reed.†

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 543-559.)

Delinquent taxes — foreclosure.

1. The omission of the county treasurer to file a certificate of delinquency with the clerk of the court in proceedings to foreclose the lien of the county for delinquent taxes, as required by the Washington statute, is not fatal to the validity of the proceedings, where jurisdiction has been obtained by the issue of the certificate and publication of the summons, as the filing of such certificate is directory, and not mandatory.

Delinquent taxes — foreclosure — judgment.

2. The judgment in proceedings to foreclose the lien of a county for delinquent taxes under the Washington statute is not void for failure to file the application for judgment until the day of its entry.

Pleading — complaint — filing.

3. The filing of a complaint in proceedings to foreclose the lien of a county for delinquent taxes before publication of summons is not jurisdictional, notwithstanding the requirement of Ball, Wash. Code, § 4878, that publication of summons shall not be had until after the filing of the complaint. [For other cases, see Pleading, I. v, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Writ and process — sufficiency of summons — delinquent taxes.

4. The judgment in proceedings under the Washington statute to foreclose the lien of a county for delinquent taxes is not rendered invalid by the fact that the summons requires answer within sixty days after the first publication, instead of within sixty days after the "date of" the first publication.

[For other cases, see Writ and Process, II. c, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Evidence — presumption of validity of tax deed.

5. A tax deed is not void because notice of sale was not posted nor otherwise given, as, under the laws of Washington, a tax deed is prima facie evidence not only of the validity of the deed and order under which the sale was made, but also of the regularity of the prior proceedings.

[For other cases, see Evidence, 453-471, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

†Death of Walter J. Reed, one of the appellees herein, suggested November 20, 1911, and appearance of Lydia McMillan Reed, as executrix of the estate of Walter J. Reed, deceased, as a party appellee herein, filed and entered.

NOTE.—As to what constitutes due process of law—see notes to People v. O'Brien, 2 L.R.A. 255; Kuntz v. Sumption, 2 L.R.A. 655; Re Gannon, 5 L.R.A. 359; Ulman v. Baltimore, 11 L.R.A. 224; Gilman v. Tucker, 544

Constitutional law — due process of law — in tax proceedings — notice.

6. Foreclosure of the lien of a county for delinquent taxes, resulting in a tax sale and deed under which property marked "reserved" on an official plat is described as specified numbered blocks, not designated on the plat, but which would have constituted such blocks if the tract reserved had been divided into blocks and numbered, does not deprive the owner of his property without due process of law, where he not only had notice from the record that the designated blocks were listed for taxation, and that they would occupy the place marked on the plat as reserved, but also had notice that the tract marked "reserved" was not otherwise listed for taxation, and had actual knowledge that the authorities were attempting to tax the reserved tract under the description of the designated blocks.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 725-744, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 160.]

Argued January 24, 1912. Decided February 26, 1912.

APPEAL from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit to review a judgment which, reversing a judgment of the Circuit Court for the Eastern District of Washington, Southern Division, in a suit to quiet title to certain land, against certain tax deeds issued to defendants, sustained the validity of such deeds. Affirmed.

See same case below, 96 C. C. A. 293, 171 Fed. 51.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Arcadius L. Agatin argued the cause, and, with Mr. William W. Billson, filed a brief for appellant:

These lands were not described in the tax proceedings.

Ronkendorff v. Taylor, 4 Pet. 349, 359, 362, 7 L. ed. 882, 885, 886; Miller v. Daniels, 47 Wash. 411, 92 Pac. 268; Bird v. Benlisa, 142 U. S. 664, 670, 35 L. ed. 1151, 1153, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 323; Stout v. Mastin, 139 U. S. 151, 152, 35 L. ed. 121, 122, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 519; Tallman v. White, 2 N. Y. 66; Hill v. Mowry, 6 Gray, 551; Zink v. McManus, 121 N. Y. 259, 24 N. E. 467;

13 L.R.A. 304; Pearson v. Yewdall, 24 L. ed. U. S. 436 and Wilson v. North Carolina, 42 L. ed. U. S. 865.

On notice and hearing required to constitute due process of law—see notes to Kuntz v. Sumption, 2 L.R.A. 657; Chauvin v. Valiton, 3 L.R.A. 194; and Ulman v. Baltimore, 11 L.R.A. 225.

On due process of law in revenue proceedings—see note to Read v. Dingess, 8 C. C. A. 398.

Miller v. Williams, 135 Cal. 185, 67 Pac. 788; Curtis v. Brown County, 22 Wis. 167; Williams v. Central Land Co. 32 Minn. 440, 21 N. W. 550; 2 Cooley, Taxn. 3d ed. p. 935; Schattler v. Cassinelli, 56 Ark. 172, 19 S. W. 746; Jones v. Pelham, 84 Ala. 208, 4 So. 22; People v. Mahoney, 55 Cal. 286; Greene v. Lunt, 58 Me. 534; Bidwell v. Webb, 10 Minn. 59, Gil. 41, 88 Am. Dec. 56; Jackson v. Sloman, 117 Mich. 126, 75 N. W. 282; Clemens v. Rannels, 34 Mo. 583; Wooters v. Arledge, 54 Tex. 395; Jackson ex dem. Livingston v. De Lancey, 13 Johns. 552, 7 Am. Dec. 403; Mitchell v. Ireland, 54 Tex. 301; Kleber, Void Judicial Sales, § 354.

To ascertain how far the court may go beyond the deed and plat, in aid of the concededly ambiguous description, the first inquiry is whether the ambiguity is patent or latent; and if patent, the deed is void, and no resort to extrinsic evidence of identification is permissible.

Jones, Real Prop. in Conveyancing, §§ 337, 338; Brown v. Guice, 46 Miss. 299; Jennings v. Brizeadine, 44 Mo. 332.

That the ambiguity is patent here is apparent on slight reflection. The tax deeds contain no other description or means of identification than by mere reference to Capitol Addition. There is nothing in the deeds or the plat to suggest the possibility of locating the land, or point to any source from which evidence may be sought to make the description intelligible. It is not a case, therefore, of latent ambiguity, since the essential elements of such ambiguity are absent here.

Jones, Real Prop. in Conveyancing, §§ 339-344.

The ambiguity is clearly patent on the face of the deed, because the plat referred to in the deed is as much a part of the deed as if it were written out upon the face of the deed itself.

Jones, Real Prop. in Conveyancing, § 424; Dolde v. Vodicka, 49 Mo. 98; Cragin v. Powell, 128 U. S. 691, 32 L. ed. 566, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 203; Hardin v. Jordan, 140 U. S. 371-380, 35 L. ed. 428-432, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 808, 838.

Applying, therefore, to the deeds in question, the rules of ordinary conveyancing, no evidence of what was intended to be conveyed by the grantor would be admissible to support a description void on its face.

Jones, Real Prop. in Conveyancing, § 336.

The lack of description is not cured by the owner's personal knowledge of the tax, whether accidentally derived or otherwise.

Stuart v. Palmer, 74 N. Y. 195, 30 Am. Rep. 289; Railroad Tax Cases, 8 Sawy. 238, 13 Fed. 753; Roller v. Holly, 176 U. S. 398-409, 44 L. ed. 520-524, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 410; Ronkendorff v. Taylor, 4 Pet. 349, 56 L. ed.

362, 7 L. ed. 882, 886; Brown v. Denver, 7 Colo. 305, 3 Pac. 455; Baltimore v. Scharf, 54 Md. 517; State ex rel. Blaisdell v. Billings, 55 Minn. 475, 43 Am. St. Rep. 524, 57 N. W. 206, 794; Powers v. Larabee, 2 N. D. 141, 49 N. W. 724; Kuntz v. Sumption, 117 Ind. 1, 2 L.R.A. 655, 19 N. E. 474.

Tax foreclosure proceedings and the service of summons thereunder are governed by the general statutes applicable in the commencement of "civil actions."

William's v. Pittock, 35 Wash. 271, 77 Pac. 385; McManus v. Morgan, 38 Wash. 528, 80 Pac. 786; Woodham v. Anderson, 32 Wash. 500, 73 Pac. 536; Bartels v. Christensen, 46 Wash. 478, 90 Pac. 658.

The requirement for filing the complaint before publication is therefore jurisdictional.

Barber v. Morris, 37 Minn. 194, 5 Am. St. Rep. 836, 33 N. W. 559; Murphy v. Lyons, 19 Neb. 89, 28 N. W. 328; Anderson v. Coburn, 27 Wis. 558; Witt v. Meyer, 69 Wis. 595, 35 N. W. 25; 17 Enc. Pl. & Pr. 51-56; Cummings v. Tabor, 61 Wis. 185, 21 N. W. 72; Charles v. Morrow, 99 Mo. 638, 12 S. W. 903; Klenk v. Byrne, 143 Fed. 1008; Kleber, Void Judicial Sales, § 122; McManus v. Morgan, 38 Wash. 528, 80 Pac. 786.

Failure to file certificate of delinquency is fatal to jurisdiction.

Barber v. Morris, 37 Minn. 194, 5 Am. St. Rep. 836, 33 N. W. 559; Galpin v. Page, 18 Wall. 350, 21 L. ed. 959.

The tax judgment is void for want of jurisdiction, because the tax summons is not in conformity to law.

Williams v. Pittock, 35 Wash. 271, 77 Pac. 385; Woodham v. Anderson, 32 Wash. 500, 73 Pac. 536; McManus v. Morgan, 38 Wash. 528, 80 Pac. 786; Bartels v. Christensen, 46 Wash. 478, 90 Pac. 658.

The failure in the summons to state that the complaint has been filed is a substantial departure from the statutory requirements for a summons, and therefore the court acquired no jurisdiction to enter judgment, and the judgment entered thereon is wholly void.

Brown, Jurisdiction, § 41; Wade, Notice, 2d ed. §1030; 26 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 692; Sutherland, Stat. Constr. 454, 455; Maxwell, Interpretation of Statutes, 333-337; Blackwell, Tax Titles, 287, 288; Odell v. Campbell, 9 Or. 305; Lyman v. Milton, 44 Cal. 630; Hayes v. Lewis, 21 Wis. 663; Kendall v. Washburn, 14 How. Pr. 380; Durham v. Betterton, 79 Tex. 223, 14 S. W. 1060; Fernekes v. Case, 75 Iowa, 152, 39 N. W. 238; Black v. Clendenin, 3 Mont. 44; Calkins v. Miller, 55 Neb. 601, 75 N. W. 1108; Delaware Western Constr. Co. v. Farmers' & M. Nat. Bank, 33 Tex. Civ. App. 658, 77 S. W. 628; 20 Enc. Pl. & Pr.

1115; Clifford v. Tomlinson, 62 Minn. 197, 64 N. W. 381.

The judgment is void because the summons required answer "within sixty days after first publication," instead of "within sixty days after the date of the first publication."

Woodham v. Anderson, 32 Wash. 500, 73 Pac. 536; Thompson v. Robbins, 32 Wash. 149, 72 Pac. 1043; Bailey v. Hood, 38 Wash. 700, 80 Pac. 559; Dolan v. Jones, 37 Wash. 176, 79 Pac. 640; Young v. Droz, 38 Wash. 648, 80 Pac. 810.

The tax deeds are void because no notice of sale was posted or otherwise given.

Martin v. Barbour, 140 U. S. 634, 642, 35 L. ed. 546, 549, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 944; McCord v. Sullivan, 85 Minn. 344, 89 Am. St. Rep. 561, 88 N. W. 989; Olsen v. Bagley, 10 Utah, 492, 37 Pac. 739; Sweigle v. Gates, 9 N. D. 538, 84 N. W. 481; Blackwell v. First Nat. Bank, 10 N. M. 555, 63 Pac. 43; Baumgardner v. Fowler, 82 Md. 631, 34 Atl. 537; Olson v. Phillips, 80 Minn. 339, 83 N. W. 189; Rustin v. Merchants' & M. Tunnel Co. 23 Colo. 351, 47 Pac. 300; Alexander v. Gordon, 41 C. C. A. 228, 101 Fed. 96; Black, Tax Titles, p. 205; 2 Cooley, Taxn. 3d ed. 928-930.

The record in the case at bar is entirely silent as to notice of the sale being posted. This being so, the fact should be deemed established that there was no such notice, because the burden is on the tax purchaser to show that the notice was posted, and we objected to the introduction of the tax deeds in evidence on that ground.

Williams v. Peyton, 4 Wheat. 77, 4 L. ed. 518; Ransom v. Williams, 2 Wall. 313, 17 L. ed. 803; Brooks v. Union Twp. 68 N. J. L. 133, 52 Atl. 238; Black, Tax Titles, 2d ed. §§ 346, 443; 2 Cooley, Taxn. 915, 916.

The burden of proof as to notice of sale is not changed by the statute of Washington (Ballinger's Code, 1767) providing that "deeds executed by the county treasurer shall be prima facie evidence . . . that the sale was conducted in the manner required by law."

2 Cooley, Taxn. 3d ed. 1006; Wilson v. Lemon, 23 Ind. 433, 85 Am. Dec. 471; Beekman v. Bigham, 5 N. Y. 366; Westbrook v. Willey, 47 N. Y. 458; Carpenter v. Shiners, 108 Cal. 359, 41 Pac. 473; Kepley v. Fouke, 187 Ill. 162, 58 N. E. 303; King v. Cooper, 128 N. C. 347, 38 S. E. 924; Johnson v. Harper, 107 Ala. 706, 18 So. 198; Carnahan v. Sieber Cattle Co. 34 Colo. 257, 82 Pac. 592; Richards v. Beggs, 31 Colo. 186, 72 Pac. 1077; Ayer v. Dillard, 45 Fla. 179, 33 So. 714.

Mr. Benjamin S. Grosscup argued the cause, and, with Mr. Ira P. Englehart, filed a brief for appellees:

A question which involves merely the construction of state statutes and the application thereto of general legal principles is not a Federal question.

Cosmopolitan Min. Co. v. Walsh, 193 U. S. 460, 48 L. ed. 749, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 489.

In every one of the numerous cases where this court has retained jurisdiction, a Federal question of real merit has been controlling, and in every instance where the record does not present a Federal question of real merit, the appeal or writ of error has been dismissed.

Macfadden v. United States, 213 U. S. 288, 53 L. ed. 801, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 490.

A Federal question must be involved as controlling. If the court has jurisdiction by reason of a real Federal question, it will dispose of the whole case, and not relegate the parties to another jurisdiction for determination of incidental questions.

Carey v. Houston & T. C. R. Co. 150 U. S. 170, 37 L. ed. 1041, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 63.

The law of Washington has constituted the superior court a court of record and of general jurisdiction, and the statutes have conferred upon that court authority to foreclose tax liens. Its judgment is not subject to collateral attack except upon the ground of jurisdiction. If competent jurisdictional matter is stated in the process initiating the cause, so as to invoke judicial action, the judgment is conclusive as to all incidental questions. Whether the facts are sufficient to sustain jurisdiction once acquired is judicial action, and can no more be questioned collaterally than any other element of a judgment.

Harvey v. Tyler, 2 Wall. 328, 342, 17 L. ed. 871, 873; Huling v. Kaw Valley R. & Improv. Co. 130 U. S. 559, 32 L. ed. 1045, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 603; Kromer v. Friday, 10 Wash. 640, 32 L.R.A. 671, 39 Pac. 229; Voorhees v. Jackson, 10 Pet. 449, 9 L. ed. 490; Applegate v. Lexington & C. C. Min. Co. 117 U. S. 255, 29 L. ed. 892, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 742.

The tax deed is made prima facie evidence of every fact connected with the legality of the proceeding.

Ward v. Huggins, 7 Wash. 621, 32 Pac. 740, 1015, 36 Pac. 285; Warren v. Oregon & W. R. Co. 99 C. C. A. 473, 176 Fed. 336.

Mr. Justice McKenna, delivered the opinion of the court:

Suit to quiet title to certain real estate situate in North Yakima, state of Washington, against certain tax deeds issued to appellees by the county treasurer of Yakima county.

It was brought in the circuit court for the eastern district of Washington, southern division. A decree was entered in favor of appellant. 162 Fed. 999. It was reversed by the circuit court of appeals. 96 C. C. A. 293, 171 Fed. 51.

The case depends upon the sufficiency of the tax deeds which appellant assails in its bill, after averments of diversity of citizenship, alleging the following: The land is part of Capitol Addition to North Yakima, and is designated on a plat thereof as "Reserved." It appears from the plat, which is attached to the bill, that the tract is surrounded by blocks, the lines of which and of the streets, if extended over 548]the tract, would constitute it *blocks 352, 372, 353 and 373. The "Reserved" was platted as Herman's Addition, and a plat duly recorded in the office of the county recorder of Yakima county on the 8th of December, 1904, and since the execution and recording of the plat the "Reserved" has not been otherwise known or designated than by lots and blocks, according to the recorded plat. Before the recording of the plat the "Reserved" tract was not known or designated by any other than by that name, and as a matter of fact there were not upon the map blocks or lots designated as blocks 352, 372, 353 and 373, nor any block or parcel of land to which such description could be made to apply; and it is averred that therefore the description in the tax proceedings was utterly void on its face, for the reason that it does not describe any land.

In 1901 Yakima county commenced proceedings in the superior court of Yakima county, the county being plaintiff and Edward Whitson and a large number of other persons were named as defendants, which included, among other lands, blocks 352, 353, 372 and 373, Capitol Addition to North Yakima. The proceedings purported to be under the laws of Washington for the foreclosure of tax liens, and culminated in a judgment and tax deeds. A pretended summons and notice were issued and published, but neither appellant nor any person was ever made or named a party defendant in the proceedings, either in the application for judgment or in the tax summons or notice as filed or published, nor in the tax judgment, and the owners of the blocks were designated as "unknown." The judgment was entered by default, and neither appellant nor any other person ever appeared or answered in the proceeding.

Appellees' claim of title rests exclusively on the tax judgment and deeds, and is based upon a certain decision of the supreme court of the state in a case in which appellant was plaintiff and one Jay Yordy et al. were *defendants, which case in-[549]volved lands within the tract designated "Reserved" herein, the decision of which was based "upon pretended principles of law which the court in that case applied in palpable violation of the provisions of the 14th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States."

It is alleged that by the "law of the land," in order to constitute a proper and legal notice under the 14th Amendment it is necessary that in a tax proceeding in rem the description of the property sought to be sold must be so full and clear as to disclose to persons of ordinary intelligence, without resort to inferences, what property is thus intended to be taken. It is further alleged that the notice in the tax proceedings had not that sufficiency, and that, hence, to hold the judgment and deeds valid would deprive appellant of its property without due process of law, in violation of the 14th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States. The protection of the Amendment is claimed, "and that because of the aforesaid unconstitutional decision of the state supreme court, the principles of which, if applied here, may deprive your orator of its property in violation of the said 14th Amendment, your orator invokes the protection of said article in this case, and hereby claims protection thereunder against the pretended claims of said defendants" (appellees).

There are other allegations, to the following effect: The judgment and tax deeds are void, because the court was without jurisdiction of the proceedings, because the notice of summons does not contain the specification of process, notice, or summons, as required by the laws of Washington, either in form or substance; that the summons was never served except by a pretended publication, and that neither it nor the application for judgment or complaint for the foreclosure of the tax liens was ever filed in the office of the clerk of the superior court; that *no certificate of[550] delinquency upon which the proceedings were based was ever filed in that court, as required by the laws of Washington, and that no complaint or application for judgment was ever filed in the office of the clerk of the court until the day of the entry of judgment.

That no notice of sale was ever given or posted, as required by law, and that the sale by the county treasurer of block 373 for $76.77 and block 353 for $76.77 was wholly unauthorized by the judgment and in excess of his authority; that appellant is willing and has offered to pay into court the amount of taxes assessed against the property which may be found to be justly due. A copy of the decision of the state supreme court in the Yordy Case is attached to the bill.

The answer of appellees denied the allegations of the bill, and set up title under the tax proceedings and the sale and deed thereunder.

They alleged that the land, by the description of blocks, was taxed for state, county, and municipal purposes for several years prior to September, 1902, and that the taxes being delinquent on said blocks, the county of Yakima filed in the office of the clerk of the county its summons, notice, and petition to foreclose the tax lien of the county, the case being entitled, "Yakima County, State of Washington, Plaintiff, v. Edward Whitson et al., Defendants," and duly published the same "by law made and provided." That thereafter, such proceedings being had, a judgment and decree was entered foreclosing the tax lien, the court adjudging the land subject to taxation, and that the taxes due upon it were delinquent, and directed the land to be sold.

It is alleged that the judgment was duly filed for record in the office of the clerk and recorded, and that the county treasurer gave notice of sale and sold the property, as required by law, to appellees, and executed a deed therefor to them.

551] *It is further alleged that appellant had not paid taxes on the land for many years, knew that taxes thereon were delinquent, knew of the fact of assessment, and all the subsequent proceedings and sale, "and permitted the same to be conducted without making any objection whatsoever," and is therefore estopped to claim any interest against appellees.

A motion is made to dismiss, on the ground that the bill is based on diversity of citizenship, that the decision of the circuit court of appeals decided the case on questions of state and general law, and that the only question of a Federal nature has been decided by this court adversely to appellant in Ontario Land Co. v. Yordy, 212 U. S. 152, 53 L. ed. 449, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 152, "thereby removing from the consideration of the circuit court of appeals any substantial Federal question."

The motion is denied. The bill attacks the constitutionality of the state law as applied by the supreme court of the state, and whether the Yordy Case applies runs into the merits.

It will be observed that as grounds of suit the following propositions are presented by the bill: (1) The insufficiency of the description of the land, it never having been known as lots and blocks, but designated or marked on the plat of Capitol Addition as "Reserved," and always known and designated as such. (2) The court acquired no jurisdiction of the property because the notice of summons was void on its face, for the reason that it did not contain the specifications of process, notice, or summons in such cases required by the laws of Washington, and did not comply with the statute either in form or substance. (3) There was no service of summons except by publication, but that prior to the publication neither the summons nor the application for judgment or the complaint was ever filed in the office of the clerk of the superior court. (4) No certificate of delinquency was filed in the office of the clerk of the *court, as re-[552] quired by the laws of Washington, and no complaint or application for judgment until the day of entry of the judgment. (5) No notice of sale under the judgment was ever given or posted, as required by law, and that the sale was in excess of the authority of the county treasurer.

All these propositions but the first rest upon the contention that the laws of Washington were not complied with in the particulars mentioned. For instance, it is contended that the certificate of delinquency was not filed in the office of the clerk of the court, and no complaint or application for judgment until the day of the entry of judgment. This is the most important of the contentions, and we will first dispose of it.

The laws of Washington provide that any day after taxes are delinquent, the treasurer of the county shall have the right, and it is his duty upon demand and payment of the taxes and interest, to issue a certificate of delinquency against such property, the holder of which may at any time after the expiration of three years give notice to the owner of the property that he will apply to the superior court of the county in which the property is situated for a judgment foreclosing a lien against the property. The contents of the notice and the time for appearance are prescribed, and the county attorney is directed to furnish forms to the certificate holder.

After the expiration of five years from the date of delinquency, if no certificate has been issued, the county treasurer is required to issue certificates of delinquency to the county, and file the certificates with the clerk of the court, and the treasurer shall thereupon, with the assistance of the county prosecuting attorney, proceed to foreclose in the name of the county the tax liens embraced in such certificates, and the same proceedings shall be had as when the certificates are held by individuals.

Summons may be served and notice given 553] exclusively *by publication in one general notice describing the property as the same is described in the tax rolls. The certificates of delinquency may be general, including all property, the proceedings to foreclose may be brought in one action, and unknown owners, described as such, and all persons owning or claiming the property, are required to take notice of the proceedings and of all steps thereunder. And it is provided that the court shall examine each application for judgment for foreclosing the tax lien, hear and determine the matter in a summary manner without other pleading, and pronounce judgment as the right of the case may be, for the taxes, penalties, interest, and costs, "and such judgment shall be a several judgment against each tract." Ballinger's Code, §§ 1749 et seq.

The certificate of delinquency was not filed. It was issued as required by law, and a summons was published and notice given that judgment would be applied for. The application was subsequently made and judgment rendered. This is shown by the judgment roll in the tax proceedings which was introduced in evidence. The application for judgment, after the title of the court and parties, set forth the following:

"Yakima county, plaintiff in the foregoing entitled action, by Wm. B. Dudley, its treasurer and legal representative, relates as follows:

"That it is the holder of certificate of delinquency issued on the 31st day of January, A. D. 1898, by Yakima county, state of Washington, the same being for taxes then due and delinquent, together with penalty, interest, and costs thereon, upon real property situate in said county, assessed to the defendants herein for the years and in the amount hereinafter stated.

"That no redemption of said property has been made, and there is now due plaintiff herein on said certificate of delinquency the amount set forth below, following each description, marked 'total.'" 554] *In the description is the property in suit, assessed to unknown owners.

Foreclosure of the lien was prayed, and that judgment be given against each piece of property.

It also appears from the judgment roll that summons for publication was issued which recited that the county held certificate of delinquency; that the taxes were delinquent, time for appearance designated to defend the action or pay the amount due, and it was stated that in case of "failure so to do," judgment would be rendered foreclosing the lien. Judgment was subsequently entered and the property ordered to be sold. The judgment states as follows:

"This cause having this 2d day of September, 1902, been brought to be heard upon the application for judgment foreclosing tax lien filed herein, and the defendants and each of them having been duly served with notice as by law required, and no appearance having been made by said defendants, or either of them, and upon the proofs adduced, it appearing to the court that the statements and allegations set forth in said application are true, the court finds as follows:

"That the plaintiff herein is the owner and holder of certificate of delinquency issued on the 31st day of January, 1898, by the county of Yakima, state of Washington, the same being for taxes then due and delinquent, together with penalty, interest, and costs thereon, upon real property situate in said county, assessed to the defendants herein for the years and in the amount hereinafter stated. That more than five years have elapsed since the original date of delinquency of the taxes for the year 1895, which are included in said certificate of delinquency."

But it is objected that it does not appear that the certificate of delinquency was filed by the county treasurer with the clerk of the court, and that the omission is fatal to the validity of the proceedings.

*To the contention the court of ap-[555] peals answered that the filing of the certificate was directory, not mandatory, and, therefore, not jurisdictional, and to sustain this position cited Washington Timber & Loan Co. v. Smith, 34 Wash. 625, 76 Pac. 267. In that case the validity of foreclosure proceedings was attacked on the ground, among others, that the certificate of delinquency was not filed in the clerk's office before publication of summons, and it was hence argued that the court had not acquired jurisdiction of the property. The court, in the foreclosure proceedings, made a nunc pro tunc order declaring that the certificates were, in fact, filed before the first publication of summons, and not at the time the file mark upon the certificate showed. The supreme court decided that the issue of the certificate was the essential thing and gave the court jurisdiction of the cause, and, having jurisdiction, and it appearing by the record that the certificates were filed in time, it followed that the point now raised related to a mere irregularity, which should have been raised in the foreclosure case. The court also ruled that the correction was one that could be made during the progress of the action, and that therefore the appellant in the case was estopped to raise the objection in the appellate court. The court finally observed: "The summons and its publication, we think, complied with the law. The property owner was therefore within the jurisdiction of the court, and was required to take notice of the action. The summons was by publication, it is true, but under § 3, pp. 385, 386, Laws of 1901, 'all persons owning or claiming to own, or having or claiming to have, an interest therein, are hereby required to take notice of said proceeding, and of any and all steps thereunder.'"

The language of the court, it must be admitted, is not as precise in distinguishing the elements of its decision as one would like, but we think the ground of its ruling is that jurisdiction having been obtained by the issue*of the certificate and the publication of the summons, the omission to file the certificate in the clerk's office is a defect or irregularity to which objection must be made in the case. In other words, the filing is not jurisdictional, for the court expressed the view that the "delinquency thought to be fatal" (the omission to file the certificate) ". . . could in no manner affect the rights of the appellants" in the action. The conclusion is reasonable. It would yield too much to technicality to give to the omission to file the certificate the controlling effect contended for by appellant. We have seen that the certificate was exhibited to the court and constituted one of the grounds of judgment.

As remarked by Judge Gilbert, speaking for the court of appeals:

"The revenue and taxation law of Washington is exceptionally lenient to the delinquent taxpayer, and offers him unusual protection in providing that his property may not be sold for delinquent taxes except upon foreclosure proceedings and after a long period of delinquency,—three years in the case of foreclosure by an individual certificate holder . . . and five years in the case of foreclosure by the county." In both cases there is public notice given and proceedings in court,—time and opportunity enough, we think, even to an accidental or negligent omission to pay taxes, and more than enough to the calculated and culpable delinquency charged against appellants in this case.

The courts of the state have refused to consider as essential to the proceedings in court to foreclose the lien for the taxes the omission of some merely ministerial duty of an officer which in no way could affect the rights of the property owner. Miller

v. Henderson, 50 Wash. 200, 96 Pac. 1052, and Smith v. Newell, 32 Wash. 369, 73 Pac. 369.

In this connection we may observe that the proceedings in this case are the same as those passed on in Ontario Land Co. v. Yordy, 44 Wash. 239, 87 Pac. 257, 212 U. S. 152, 53 L. ed. 449, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 152. It was*contended there, as here, that[557 the proceedings were void because of the failure to file the certificate of delinquency. The supreme court of the state declined to consider the contention, holding that it was not open, as the land company had not tendered the delinquent taxes, as required by the laws of the state. In this court it was not explicitly urged except in a petition for rehearing. The rehearing was not granted.

The other objections to the validity of the tax proceedings are presented in the briefs of appellant under two heads as to the judgment and one as to the deeds, as follows: (1) The judgment is void because of failure to file the application until the day of the entry of the judgment. (2) The judgment is void for want of jurisdiction, because the summons did not inform the defendants in the proceedings "that any complaint was filed in court, or that it was filed at all." (3) The tax deeds are void because no notice of sale was posted or otherwise given.

These grounds of objection are untenable. The laws of Washington are as clear as they are simple in their requirements. They do not require a complaint to be filed before the publication of summons, but provide for an application for judgment after the publication of summons, and the court is explicitly directed to examine the application and to "hear and determine the matter without other pleading." There is a careful avoidance of complexity and expense. The property is proceeded against, and the procedure is made simple. The certificates of delinquency may be issued in one general certificate in book form, and unknown owners may be proceeded against as such. And it is provided that all persons owning or claiming to have an interest in the property are "required to take notice of the said proceedings and of any and all steps thereunder." See Williams v. Pittock, 35 Wash. 271, 77 Pac. 385.

It is, however, contended that the supreme court of Washington has decided that § 4878 of Ballinger's Code is *appli-[558 cable to tax proceedings, and that it requires "that publication of summons shall not be had until after the filing of the complaint." And it is hence contended that the filing of the complaint before publication is jurisdictional.

The supreme court of the state has not decided as contended. It has decided exactly the other way. Indeed, it has held that if there were a total omission to file a complaint, the judgment would not be void. Snohomish Land Co. v. Blood, 40 Wash. 626, 82 Pac. 933; McManus v. Morgan, 38 Wash. 528, 80 Pac. 786, and Bartels v. Christensen, 46 Wash. 478, 90 Pac. 658, are not apposite, being constructions of the statute before its amendment in 1901.

In this connection is urged the very technical objection that "the summons required answer 'within sixty days after the first publication' instead of 'within sixty days after the date of the first publication.'" To sustain this objection Williams v. Pittock, supra, is cited. It does not sustain the objection. It would be surprising if it did.

The objection to the validity of the deeds is also without merit. Under the laws of the state a tax deed is prima facie evidence, not only of the validity of the deed and order under which the sale was made, but also of the regularity of the prior proceedings. Warren v. Oregon & W. R. Co. (C. C. A. Ninth Circuit) 99 C. C. A. 473, 176 Fed. 336, and cases cited.

This brings us to the first proposition of appellant; that is, the insufficiency of the description of the land in the certificate of delinquency and in the summons, judgment, and order of sale, and that therefore they were inadequate for notice and due process of law. This contention, however, was considered in Ontario Land Co. v. Yordy, supra, and decided adversely to appellant.

As we have seen, the proceedings in that case were those involved in this. It was held 559] that the company was *charged with notice of the platting and the condition shown by the plat of the Capitol Addition to North Yakima, that he had notice from the records of the listing and assessment for taxation of the blocks, 352, 353, 372 and 373, and that they would occupy the place marked upon the official plat as "Reserved." The company also "had notice," it was said, "that the tract marked 'Reserved' was not otherwise listed or assessed for taxation," and that the blocks "were used by the authorities for describing the 'reserved' tract." The presumption of knowledge thus arising was fortified, it was said, by actual knowledge "that the authorities were attempting to assess and tax this 'reserved' tract under the description of blocks 352, etc." Both were grounds of decision. In other words, the decision 56 L. ed.

was not based alone on actual knowledge of what property was intended to be taxed, but upon the sufficiency of the description to identify the land in connection with the notice given to appellant by the record. And this was not obiter. Union P. R. Co. v. Mason City & Ft. D. R. Co. 222 U. S. 237, ante, 180, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 86.

A like presumption exists in the case at bar, and there is testimony of like actual knowledge.

Judgment affirmed.

*SOUTHERN PACIFIC RAILROAD[560 COMPANY, D. O. Mills and Homer S. King, Trustees, and Central Trust Company of New York, Trustee, Appts.,
v.

UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 560-565.)

Public lands — conflicting railroad grants.

None of the lands lying within either the granted or the indemnity limits of the grant made to the Atlantic & Pacific Railroad Company by the act of July 27, 1866 (14 Stat. at L. 292, chap. 278), were subject to selection as indemnity lands by the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, under the act of March 3, 1871 (16 Stat. at L. 573, 579, chap. 122), § 23, although lying within the indemnity limits of such grant, and although the Atlantic & Pacific Railroad Company had forfeited its grant by the act of July 6, 1886 (24 Stat. at L. 123, chap. 637), before the Southern Pacific Railroad Company made its selection.

[For other cases, see Public Lands, 313-319, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 121.]

Argued January 26, 1912. Decided February 26, 1912.

A PPEAL from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit to review a decree affirming a decree of the Circuit Court for the Southern District of California, annulling patents to lands issued to the Southern Pacific Railroad Company. Affirmed.

See same case below, 93 C. C. A. 150, 167 Fed. 514.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Maxwell Evarts argued the cause and filed a brief for appellants:

The status of lands within indemnity limits at the time of selection determines entirely the right of the railroad thereto.

NOTE.—As to land grants to railroads—see note to Kansas P. R. Co. v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 28 L. ed. U. S. 794.

Ryan v. Central P. R. Co. 99 U. S. 382, 25 L. ed. 305; Re Alabama & C. R. Co. 20 Land Dec. 408; Re Southern P. R. Co. 26 Land Dec. 452; Allers v. Northern P. R. Co. 9 Land Dec. 452; Northern P. R. Co. v. Halvorson, 10 Land Dec. 15; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Beal, 10 Land Dec. 504; Northern P. R. Co. v. Moling, 11 Land Dec. 138; Hensley v. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. 12 Land Dec. 19; Northern P. R. Co. v. Bass, 13 Land Dec. 201; Hastings & D. R. Co. v. St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co. 13 Land Dec. 535; St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co. v. Munz, 17 Land Dec. 288; South & North Ala. R. Co. v. Hall, 22 Land Dec. 273; Southern P. R. Co. v. McKinley, 22 Land Dec. 493.

It cannot be supposed that it was the intention to overrule long-established principles without even mentioning the cases in which they were elaborately discussed and established.

Holmes v. Oregon & C. R. Co. 7 Sawy. 399, 9 Fed. 229.

Southern P. R. Co. v. United States, 168 U. S. 1, 42 L. ed. 355, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18, was limited solely to a question of place or granted lands.

Southern P. R. Co. v. United States, 183 U. S. 519, 46 L. ed. 307, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 154.

Solicitor General Lehmann argued the cause and filed a brief for appellee:

The question is res judicata because of a decision of this court in Southern P. R. Co. v. United States, 168 U. S. 1, 42 L. ed. 355, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18.

Southern P. R. Co. v. United States, 189 U. S. 447, 451, 452, 47 L. ed. 896, 899, 900, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 567; United States v. Southern P. R. Co. 184 U. S. 49, 53, 46 L. ed. 425, 428, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 285; Southern P. R. Co. v. United States, 200 U. S. 341, 50 L. ed. 507, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 296.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a bill brought by the United 564] States to annul *patents for lands lying within the indemnity limits of the grant made to the Southern Pacific Railroad Company by the act of March 3, 1871, chap. 122, § 23, 16 Stat. at L. 573, 579, known as the branch-line grant, and within the grant made to the Atlantic & Pacific Railroad Company by the act of July 27, 1866, chap. 278, 14 Stat. at L. 292. The Atlantic & Pacific road forfeited its grant (act of July 6, 1886, chap. 637, 24 Stat. at L. 123), and thereafter the Southern Pacific selected the two parcels in question, as indemnity under its branch-line grant, one of them lying within the granted, and the other within the indemnity, limits of the Atlantic & Pacific. It relies on the general principle that whether lands are subject to selection as indemnity depends upon the state of the lands at the time the selection is made. Ryan v. Central P. R. Co. 99 U. S. 382, 25 L. ed. 305. The circuit court, however, held that the right in this particular case had been decided not to exist (152 Fed. 314), and the circuit court of appeals affirmed the decree (93 C. C. A. 150, 167 Fed. 514).

We are of opinion that the decision was right. In Southern P. R. Co. v. United States, 168 U. S. 1, 42 L. ed. 355, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18, the lands in controversy embraced among others, as stated by Mr. Justice Harlan, "lands within the Southern Pacific indemnity limits and the Atlantic & Pacific granted limits; [and] lands within the common indemnity limits of both grants." Id. 47. It was held that the forfeiture to the United States did not enlarge the right of the Southern Pacific to select the lands in question, and the decree was for the United States. The proposition laid down in United States v. Southern P. R. Co. 146 U. S. 570, 36 L. ed. 1091, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 152, and United States v. Colton Marble & Lime Co. 146 U. S. 615, 36 L. ed. 1104, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 163, was applied to Southern Pacific branch-line indemnity lands. Whatever may be thought of the grounds for making an exception to the principle of Ryan v. Central P. R. Co. supra, the exception was established for this case. An elaborate argument was *made on petition for rehearing that 565 the decision could not be extended to indemnity lands, but the petition was denied. In Southern P. R. Co. v. United States, 183 U. S. 519, 46 L. ed. 307, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 154, the dismissal of the bill without prejudice to claims that by interpretation are said to include indemnity claims imports no limitation of the previously established law, and, on the other hand, in Southern Pacific R. Co. v. United States, 189 U. S. 447, 451, 452, 47 L. ed. 896, 899, 900, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 567, the case in 168 U. S. 1, 42 L. ed. 355, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18, was followed and the practice of the Land Department in accordance with that decision was mentioned as a further ground. There may be distinctions between the latest decision and this, but, in view of the rightly established understanding, it is too late to set them up now.

Decree affirmed.

UNITED STATES, Appt.,
v.

SOUTHERN PACIFIC RAILROAD COMPANY, D. O. Mills and Homer S. King, Trustees, and Central Trust Company of New York, Trustee. (No. 128.)

SOUTHERN PACIFIC RAILROAD COMPANY, D. O. Mills and Homer S. King, Trustees, and Central Trust Company of New York, Trustee, Appts.,

v.

UNITED STATES. (No. 129.)

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 565-572.)

Public lands — conflicting railroad grants.

1. Land lying within the primary limits of the grant made to the Atlantic & Pacific Railroad Company by the act of July 27, 1866 (14 Stat. at L. 292, chap. 278), and also within the indemnity limits of the grant made by the same act to the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, might, after the forfeiture by the Atlantic & Pacific Railroad Company of its grant by the act of July 6, 1886 (24 Stat. at L. 123, chap. 637), be selected as indemnity lands by the Southern Pacific Railroad Company.

[For other cases, see Public Lands, 313-319, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Res judicata — matters concluded — railroads.

2. A determination in a suit by the United States against the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, tried as a bill to quiet title, against claims of such company under the branch line grant made by the act of March 3, 1871 (16 Stat. at L. 573, chap. 122), that it took no title to lands lying within the primary limits of the grant to the Atlantic & Pacific Railroad Company, made by the act of July 27, 1866, is not a bar to a claim by the Southern Pacific Railroad Company to the same land under a selection as indemnity lands, made after the forfeiture of its grant by the Atlantic & Pacific Railroad Company, on the theory that such land was also embraced within the indemnity limits of the main line grant made to the Southern Pacific Railroad Company by the act of July 27, 1866, and that under such act each road, in case of conflict, took half the land within conflicting place limits.

[For other cases, see Judgment, 636-639, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[Nos. 128 and 129.]

Argued January 26, 1912. Decided February 26, 1912.

NOTE.—As to land grants to railroads—see note to Kansas P. R. Co. v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 28 L. ed. U. S. 794.

On conclusiveness of judgments generally—see notes to Sharon v. Terry, 1 L.R.A. 572; Bollong v. Schuyler Nat. Bank, 3 L.R.A. 142; Wiese v. San Francisco Music-
56 L. ed.

A PPEAL AND CROSS APPEAL from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit to review a decree affirming a decree of the Circuit Court for the Southern District of California, sustaining the rights of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company to certain indemnity lands selected by it, and denying its rights in other land on the ground that a prior decision was conclusive. Affirmed as to the first point and reversed as to the second.

See same case below, 93 C. C. A. 146, 167 Fed. 510.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Maxwell Evarts argued the cause and filed a brief for the Southern Pacific Railroad Company et al.:

The government, by its Attorney General, has insisted that no issue was presented in Southern P. R. Co. v. United States, 168 U. S. 1, 42 L. ed. 355, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18, involving the grant to the Southern Pacific Railroad under the main line grant of 1866. We have this court so holding not only in 168 U. S. 1, but in the subsequent case in 183 U. S. 519, 46 L. ed. 307, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 154. Notwithstanding all this, the Attorney General now claims that, in spite of the position which he took in 168 U. S. 1, the railroad company is barred by that case from asserting any claim under the main line grant of 1866 to any land which happened to be physically embraced within the suit in 168 U. S. 1, but only in its character and capacity of branch line grant land under the act of 1871.

The title to indemnity lands remains in the United States until selection and approval.

New Orleans P. R. Co. v. Parker, 143 U. S. 42, 57, 36 L. ed. 66, 70, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 364; United States v. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. 141 U. S. 358, 374, 35 L. ed. 766, 771, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 13; Wisconsin C. R. Co. v. Price County, 133 U. S. 496, 512, 33 L. ed. 687, 695, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341; Barney v. Winona & St. P. R. Co. 117 U. S. 228, 232, 29 L. ed. 858, 860, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 654; Clark v. Herington, 186 U. S. 206, 209, 43 L. ed. 1128, 1130, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 872.

Under the ordinary principles of law in regard to quieting title to property the defendant is not barred from asserting in a subsequent suit a title which he has acquired after the original suit has been tried.

Barrows v. Kindred, 4 Wall. 399, 18 L. ed. 383.

al Fund Soc. 7 L.R.A. 577; Morrill v. Morrill, 11 L.R.A. 155; Shores v. Hooper, 11 L.R.A. 308; Bank of United States v. Beverly, 11 L. ed. U. S. 76; Johnson Steel Street Rail Co. v. Wharton, 38 L. ed. U. S. 429; and Southern P. R. Co. v. United States, 42 L. ed. U. S. 355.

Solicitor General Lehmann argued the cause and filed a brief for the United States:

The Southern Pacific is not entitled to select, as being within the indemnity provisions of its main line grant (made by the act of July 27, 1866), any lands which were subject to the primary provisions of the Atlantic & Pacific grant, made by the same act.

Southern P. R. Co. v. United States, 168 U. S. 1, 61, 62, 42 L. ed. 355, 381, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18; Bardon v. Northern P. R. Co. 145 U. S. 535, 545, 36 L. ed. 806, 811, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 856; Sioux City & St. P. R. Co. v. United States, 159 U. S. 349, 364, 365, 40 L. ed. 177, 182, 183, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 17; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. United States, 159 U. S. 372, 374, 376, 40 L. ed. 185, 186, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 26; St. Paul & S. E. R. Co. v. Winona & St. P. R. Co. 112 U. S. 720, 732, 28 L. ed. 872, 876, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 334; Clark v. Herington, 186 U. S. 206, 46 L. ed. 1128, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 872.

Acts of Congress of this character are not only grants, but are statutes, subject to rules of statutory construction. They must receive such construction as will carry out the intent of Congress, however difficult it might be to give full effect to the language used if the grants were by instrument of private conveyance. And, further, if rights claimed under the government are set up against it, they must be so clearly defined that there can be no question of the purpose of Congress to confer them.

Leavenworth, L. & G. R. Co. v. United States, 92 U. S. 733, 740, 23 L. ed. 634, 637; Winona & St. P. R. Co. v. Barney, 113 U. S. 618, 625, 28 L. ed. 1109, 1111, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 606; Sioux City & St. P. R. Co. v. United States, 159 U. S. 349, 360, 40 L. ed. 177, 181, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 17.

On July 5, 1886,—the day before the Atlantic & Pacific forfeiture,—the Southern Pacific certainly could not have made selections within these primary limits.

St. Paul & S. C. R. Co. v. Winona & St. P. R. Co. 112 U. S. 720, 28 L. ed. 872, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 334; Sioux City & St. P. R. Co. v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 117 U. S. 406, 29 L. ed. 928, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 790.

If it could not select then, it cannot now, unless Congress has granted that privilege.

Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. United States, 159 U. S. 372, 375, 40 L. ed. 185, 186, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 26; Sioux City & St. P. R. Co. v. United States, 159 U. S. 349–366, 40 L. ed. 178–183, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 17.

The restoration of these lands to the public domain was certainly intended to subject them to the operation of the general land laws, but this is all that was intended. There is no sign of intention to subject them to the Southern Pacific grant of 1866.

Clark v. Herington, 186 U. S. 206, 209, 210, 46 L. ed. 1128, 1130, 1131, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 872.

The forfeiture provision in the Atlantic & Pacific grant (§ 8, act of July 27, 1866) was a condition subsequent, which could be enforced only by the United States.

Lake Superior Ship Canal, R. & Iron Co. v. Cunningham, 155 U. S. 354, 39 L. ed. 183, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 103.

To give to the act of 1886 the double effect of devoting the lands to the general homestead laws and also to the special Southern Pacific act is warranted neither by its own language nor by that of the prior legislation.

United States v. Southern P. R. Co. 146 U. S. 570, 615, 36 L. ed. 1091, 1104, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 152; Southern P. R. Co. v. United States, 168 U. S. 1, 42 L. ed. 355, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18.

This reservation to the United States was just as effective and made the lands included within it subject to the same exemptions as did the reservation of the even-numbered sections in the granting act of 1866. The lands so reserved could not, therefore, be selected by the railroad.

United States v. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. 141 U. S. 358, 368, 35 L. ed. 766, 768, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 13.

A claim entirely analogous to the one now made was unsuccessfully advanced by the Southern Pacific in Southern P. R. Co. v. United States, 189 U. S. 447, 47 L. ed. 896, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 567.

See also Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. United States, 159 U. S. 372, 40 L. ed. 185, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 26; Sioux City & St. P. R. Co. v. United States, 159 U. S. 349, 40 L. ed. 177, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 17.

The title to such of the lands in exhibit B of the bill as were included in the former case is res judicata. It is immaterial that the right now asserted was not asserted then. The bill was to quiet title, and the right now relied on should have been put forward at the time, as it could have been. The object of the rule is to end litigation.

United States v. California & O. Land Co. 192 U. S. 355, 48 L. ed. 476, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 266; Bienville Water Supply Co. v. Mobile, 186 U. S. 212, 216, 217, 46 L. ed. 1132, 1133, 1134, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 820; Dowell v. Applegate, 152 U. S. 327, 341, 346, 38 L. ed. 463, 468, 470, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 611.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a bill brought by the United States to quiet title and cancel patents and for an accounting, as to lands lying within the indemnity limits of the grant made to the Southern Pacific Railroad Company by the act of July 27, 1866, chap. 278, § 18, 14 Stat. at L. 292, known as the main-line grant, and within the primary limits of the grant made to the Atlantic & Pacific Railroad Company by § 3 of the same act. The Atlantic & Pacific road forfeited its grant (act of July 6, 1886, chap. 637, 24 Stat. at L. 123), and thereafter the Southern Pacific selected the parcels in question as indemnity under its main-line grant. The rights of the Southern Pacific under this grant were not subordinated to those of the Atlantic & Pacific under the same statute, as they were by its branch-line grant of 1871, considered in our last decision, but in case of conflict each road took half within the conflicting place limits. Southern P. R. Co. v. United States, 183 U. S. 519, 46 L. ed. 307, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 154. The special grounds for the decision between the same parties in 168 U. S. 1, 42 L. ed. 355, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18, followed in the case preceding this, do not exist here. Therefore the circuit court and the circuit court of appeals held that the state of the lands at the time of selection determined the right, with an accidental exception that we shall explain. 152 Fed. 303, 93 C. C. A. 146, 167 Fed. 510. Both parties appeal; the United States from the *decision on the main point, the Southern Pacific from what concerns the excepted lands.

The government argues that as the lands selected lay within the primary limits of the Atlantic & Pacific, they cannot have been contemplated as possibly falling into the indemnity lands of the other road. It refers to an intimation in Southern P. R. Co. v. United States, 189 U. S. 447, 452, 47 L. ed. 896, 900, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 567, made with regard to the branch-line grant and to lands within the place limits of the Southern Pacific but for the paramount right of the Texas Pacific, that as the indemnity grant was "not including the reserved numbers," "it might be argued" that those words excluded the secondary claim to the same lands by way of indemnity after a forfeiture of the Texas Pacific grant. It suggests that Ryan v. Central P. R. Co. 99 U. S. 382, 25 L. ed. 305, relied on for the ground of decision below, concerned land which the United States was claiming at the time of the indemnity grant, and which it ultimately acquired, and that its authority should be limited to such a case. But we are of opinion that these arguments ought not to prevail.

An indemnity grant, like the residuary clause in a will, contemplates the uncertain and looks to the future. What a railroad is to be indemnified for may be fixed as of the moment of the grant, but what it may elect when its right to indemnity is determined depends on the state of the lands selected at the moment of choice. Of course, the railroad is limited in choosing by the terms of the indemnity grant, but the so-called grant is rather to be described as a power. Ordinarily no color of title is gained until the power is exercised. When it is exercised in satisfaction of a meritorious claim which the government created upon valuable consideration, and which it must be taken to have intended to satisfy (so far as it may be satisfied within the territorial limits laid down), it seems to us that lands within those limits should not be excluded simply *because in a different event they would [571 have been subject to a paramount claim. It seems to us, in short, that Ryan v. Central P. R. Co. supra, should be taken to establish a general principle, and should not be limited to its special facts. As to the suggestion in 189 U. S. 447, 452, the words "not including the reserved numbers" refer primarily, at least, to the numbers reserved from any part of the grant by the terms of the act, and the suggestion was made only as to a claim of indemnity from lands in and adjoining a strip to which the title under the primary grant failed. Whether there was anything in it in any aspect we need not consider now. It certainly cannot affect this case.

A more delicate question is presented by the appeal of the Southern Pacific. It is this: A part of the lands in controversy were not only within the main line indemnity limits of the Southern Pacific and the primary limits of the Atlantic & Pacific, but also within the indemnity limits of the Southern Pacific branch-line grant. It is agreed that they were embraced in the decree against the right of the Southern Pacific under its branch-line grant in 168 U. S. 1, 42 L. ed. 355, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18, and the argument is that the matter is res judicata, on the ground that a decree or judgment is binding as to all media concludendi, and that the former decree established the right of the United States to this land. Dowell v. Applegate, 152 U. S. 327, 38 L. ed. 463, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 611; United States v. California & O. Land Co.

192 U. S. 355, 358, 48 L. ed. 476, 478, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 266. But the selections in this case were made after the decree in 168 U. S. 1, and if the matter were at large, it would seem a strong thing to hold an adjudication conclusive not only as to existing titles under the grant in controversy, but as to merely possible sources of title in the future under a different and distinct grant. We shall not discuss that question, however, or consider just how far the decisions have gone. The Solicitor General candidly agreed that the government should not and would not rely upon 572] this *ground, if it had taken a position inconsistent with it in the earlier case, and it seems to us plain that it did so, and expressly deprecated any reference in that case to the rights under the main-line grant.

It appears that the bill in 168 U. S. 1, was brought, or at least tried, as a bill to quiet title against claims of the Southern Pacific under the branch-line grant, and that during the litigation on that question there was pending another bill to quiet title under the main-line grant, being the one before this court in 183 U. S. 519, 46 L. ed. 307, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 154. It is said, and we do not understand it to be disputed, that in oral argument and printed brief before the circuit court of appeals the counsel for the government repeated that title under the main-line grant was not involved, and that if that question ever arose there would be pleadings and proof upon it. The court in its decision (168 U. S. 29) stated the claim of the Southern Pacific to be under the act of 1871 [16 Stat. at L. 573, chap. 122] (the branch-line grant). Again, in the case between the same parties in 183 U. S. 519, 533, the court said that it was not adjudged in the former cases that the Southern Pacific had no title to any real estate by virtue of the act of 1866 [14 Stat. at L. 292, chap. 278]; and although it also said that of course the decrees were conclusive as to the title to the property involved in them, still, in view of the conduct and disposition of the cause as to the branch-line grant, if for no other reason, we think that it would be inequitable for the United States now to rely upon the decree in that cause as conclusive upon the parties in this. It follows that as the present decision was in favor of the United States with regard to the last-mentioned lands, it must be reversed (No. 129), and that otherwise (No. 128) it stands affirmed.

Decree reversed.

*KANSAS CITY SOUTHERN RAIL-WAY COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,

v.

C. H. ALBERS COMMISSION COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 573-598.)

Error to state court — raising question below.

1. A right or immunity under a statute of the United States is "specially set up and claimed" in the state court within the meaning of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 709, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 575, where a railroad company insists, throughout garnishment proceedings brought against it for charges in excess of a special rate entered into with the garnishment debtor alone, that no recovery could be had against it consistently with the interstate commerce act, as, in disregarding the agreement for the special rate, it only conformed to the provisions of such act governing rates to be applied to interstate shipments.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 1178-1191, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

NOTE.—As to what constitutes an unlawful preference or discrimination by a carrier under interstate commerce regulations—see note to Gamble-Robinson Commission Co. v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 94 C. C. A. 230.

On the validity of contracts in business which it is a misdemeanor to transact—see note to Levison v. Boas, 12 L.R.A. (N.S.) 609.

On the effect of provisions of the interstate commerce act against rebates upon contracts prescribing rates less than those fixed in accordance with the act—see note to Armour Packing Co. v. United States, 14 L.R.A. (N.S.) 400.

On the general subject of writs of error from United States Supreme Court to state courts—see notes to Martin v. Hunter, 4 L. ed. U. S. 97; Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 37 L. ed. U. S. 267; Re Buchanan, 39 L. ed. U. S. 884; and Kipley v. Illinois, 42 L. ed. U. S. 998.

On what adjudications of state courts can be brought up for review in the Supreme Court of the United States by writ of error to those courts—see note to Apex Transp. Co. v. Garbade, 62 L.R.A. 513.

On how and when questions must be raised and decided in a state court in order to make a case for a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States—see note to Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 63 L.R.A. 33.

On what the record must show respecting the presentation and decision of a Federal question in order to confer jurisdiction on the Supreme Court of the United States of a writ of error to a state court—see note to Hooker v. Los Angeles, 63 L.R.A. 471.

As to what is the record for the purpose of showing the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of the United States of a writ of error to a state court—see note to Home for Incurables v. New York, 63 L.R.A. 329.

Error to state court — examination of record.

2. The United States Supreme Court may examine the entire record, including the evidence, if properly incorporated therein, to determine whether what purports to be a general finding of facts against one party necessarily involves the decision of questions of law bearing upon a Federal right claimed by such party in the state court.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 1436-1445, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Error to state court — jurisdiction — Federal question.

3. A general finding against a common carrier in garnishment proceedings against it by a creditor of a shipper, to recover charges in excess of a special rate agreed upon, necessarily involves the decision of questions of the interpretation and application of the interstate commerce acts of February 4, 1887 (24 Stat. at L. 379, chap. 104, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3154), and March 2, 1889 (25 Stat. at L. 855, chap. 382, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3158), so as to give the United States Supreme Court jurisdiction, where such carrier claimed in the state court that the rates collected, though in excess of the special rate agreed on, were the lawful rates applicable to the shipments, as shown by schedules filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 1436-1445, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Carriers — interstate freight rates — posting.

4. Interstate freight rates are established when schedules thereof are regularly printed, filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission, and kept open to public inspection by the carrier at its freight offices, although such rates may not be posted in public and conspicuous places, as required by § 6 of the interstate commerce act of February 4, 1887, as amended by the act of March 2, 1889, as posting is not essential to make rates legally operative, but is required only as a means of affording special facilities to the public for ascertaining the rates actually in force.

[For other cases, see Carriers, III. g., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Carriers — interstate freight rates — establishment.

5. The sanction of the other roads to schedules of freight rates containing a heading indicating their adoption by a particular road "in connection with" other designated railroads, which are the roads over which a haul, when there is such, from common points to the particular railroad, would be made, is not essential to the establishment of such rates in a proceeding involving shipments over such railroad and a connecting line not included among the other roads designated, from a city which is not one of the common points.

[For power to prescribe and decide as to rates, see Carriers, III. c., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Carriers — interstate freight rates — applicability.

6. Schedules of freight rates of a designated railroad, indicating that they were adopted by it "in connection with" other specified roads over which shipments from the common points, if any, would be made, may be applicable to a shipment over a different railroad from a city which is not a common point, where such schedules do not restrict the rate to shipments received from the roads specified, but indicate its applicability to shipments received from any connecting line.

7. Uncontradicted testimony cannot be disregarded, though not the best evidence, when offered and admitted without objection.

Evidence — secondary evidence — admission without objection.

[For other cases, see Evidence, 2261, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Carriers — interstate freight rates — applicability.

8. Shipments over connecting lines, even though moving on through bills of lading, must, under the interstate commerce act, take the lawfully established local rate in force on each line, where there is no established joint through rate.

Carriers — interstate freight rates — departure from.

9. An agreement with a single shipper for shipments over connecting lines having no joint through rate, at less than the established local rates for each road, is void and does not prevent the collecting of the established local rate by such carriers, under the interstate commerce act of February 4, 1887, § 6, as amended by the act of March 2, 1889, providing the manner for establishing rates, and making it unlawful for a carrier to depart from any rate so established and in force at the time and requiring connecting carriers agreeing on joint through rates to file schedules with the Interstate Commerce Commission, and prohibiting any deviation from an established joint rate while in force.

[For discrimination in freight rates generally, see Carriers, III. e., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 18.]

Argued October 26, 1911. Decided February 26, 1912.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Kansas to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the District Court of Crawford County, in that state, holding a common carrier liable as garnishee to a creditor of a shipper. Reversed.

See same case below, 79 Kan. 59, 99 Pac. 819.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Cyrus Crane argued the cause, and, with Mr. Samuel W. Moore, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The case is properly here for review.

The plaintiff's motion to dismiss or affirm should be overruled.

St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Taylor, 210 U. S. 281, 52 L. ed. 1061, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 616; Nutt v. Knut, 200 U. S. 12, 50 L. ed. 348, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 216.

The case is analogous to the claim, frequently asserted in this court, that subsequent state legislation has impaired the obligation of a contract. In such cases the well-established rule is that this court will determine for itself whether there is a contract, valid and binding, between the parties, and whether its obligation has been impaired by the legislative action of the state.

Northern P. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 208 U. S. 583, 52 L. ed. 630, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Nebraska, 170 U. S. 57, 42 L. ed. 948, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 513; Stearns v. Minnesota, 179 U. S. 223, 45 L. ed. 162, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 73; Mobile & O. R. Co. v. Tennessee, 153 U. S. 486, 38 L. ed. 793, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 968.

The same rule is applied by this court in actions to enforce a judgment rendered in a foreign state, where it is insisted that for various reasons it is not entitled to full faith and credit in the state where suit is instituted. This court, on writ of error, may determine for itself the nature of the original liability upon which the judgment was rendered.

Huntington v. Attrill, 146 U. S. 657, 36 L. ed. 1123, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224.

Neither the findings nor the rulings of the state court should be permitted to prevent the determination of the right asserted under the Constitution and laws of the United States.

St. Louis Southwestern R. Co. v. Arkansas, 217 U. S. 136, 54 L. ed. 698, 29 L.R.A. (N.S.) 802, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 476.

The inflexibility of published rates must be maintained in every court until the Commission shall, by its order, level the rate for the benefit of everyone.

Texas & P. R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co. 204 U. S. 426, 51 L. ed. 553, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350, 9 Ann. Cas. 1075; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. New Era Mill. Co. 80 Kan. 141, 101 Pac. 1011; American Union Coal Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 159 Fed. 278; Van Patten v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 81 Fed. 545; State ex rel. Crow v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 176 Mo. 687, 63 L.R.A. 761, 75 S. W. 776; Carlisle v. Missouri P. R. Co. 168 Mo. 652, 68 S. W. 898; Morrisdale Coal Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 106 C. C. A. 269, 183 Fed. 929.

Proportional rates are proper.

F. H. Bascom Co. v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 17 Inters. Com. Rep. 356; Re of Form & Contents of Rate Schedules, 4

Inters. Com. Rep. 701; Moore, Interstate Commerce, § 48; Barnes, Interstate Transp. § 80-D; Serry v. Southern P. Co. 18 Inters. Com. Rep. 556; North Bros. v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. 13 Inters. Com. Rep. 153; Kansas City Transp. Bureau v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 16 Inters. Com. Rep. 195; Lindsay Bros. v. Baltimore & O. S. W. R. Co. 16 Inters. Com. Rep. 6; Re-Through Routes & Through Rates, 12 Inters. Com. Rep. 172; Armour Packing Co. v. United States, 14 L.R.A. (N.S.) 400, 82 C. C. A. 135, 153 Fed. 1, s. c. 209 U. S. 56, 52 L. ed. 681, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 428; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 218 U. S. 89, 54 L. ed. 946, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 651; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. United States, 85 C. C. A. 194, 157 Fed. 830.

The existence of the proportional rate was established by the tariff itself, which it was admitted had been duly filed with the Commission. The presumption, in the absence of proof, would be that rates between these points had been duly and legally established.

Meeker v. Lehigh Valley R. Co. 162 Fed. 354; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co. 204 U. S. 426, 51 L. ed. 553, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350, 9 Ann. Cas. 1075; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Chicago G. W. R. Co. 209 U. S. 108, 121, 52 L. ed. 705, 713, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493; Clement v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 153 Fed. 979; American Union Coal Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 159 Fed. 278.

This proportional rate was as fixed and inflexible, by reason of its being established in accordance with law, as though it had been fixed by an act of Congress. No contract or other device could vary or depart from it. Any contract undertaking to vary from the published rate would be void.

Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Hefley, 158 U. S. 98, 39 L. ed. 910, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 802; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Mugg, 202 U. S. 242, 50 L. ed. 1011, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 628; Armour Packing Co. v. United States, 209 U. S. 56, 52 L. ed. 681, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 428; Hawley v. Kansas & T. Coal Co. 48 Kan. 593, 30 Pac. 14; Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Hubbell, 54 Kan. 232, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 241, 38 Pac. 266; Kizer v. Texarkana & F. S. R. Co. 66 Ark. 348, 50 S. W. 871; Armour Packing Co. v. United States, 153 Fed. 1; Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. Standard Lumber Co. 98 C. C. A. 81, 174 Fed. 107; Southern R. Co. v. Harrison, 119 Ala. 539, 43 L.R.A. 385, 72 Am. St. Rep. 936, 24 So. 552; St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Ostrander, 66 Ark. 567, 52 S. W. 435; Bullard v. Northern P. R. Co. 10 Mont. 168, 11 L.R.A. 246, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 536, 25 Pac. 120; 223 U. S.

Ralcligh & G. R. Co. v. Swanson, 102 Ga. 754, 39 L.R.A. 275, 28 S. E. 601; Southern Wire Co. v. St. Louis Bridge & Tunnel R. Co. 38 Mo. App. 191; Messenger v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 36 N. J. L. 407, 13 Am. Rep. 457; Scofield v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 43 Ohio St. 571, 54 Am. Rep. 846, 3 N. E. 907; Fitzgerald v. Grand Trunk R. Co. 63 Vt. 169, 13 L.R.A. 70, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 633, 22 Atl. 76; Savannah, F. & W.'R. Co. v. Bundick, 94 Ga. 775, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 289, 21 S. E. 995; Indianapolis, D. & S. R. Co. v. Ervin, 118 Ill. 250, 59 Am. Rep. 369, 8 N. E. 862; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Bowles, 1 Ind. Terr. 250, 40 S. W. 899; Gerber v. Wabash R. Co. 63 Mo. App. 145; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Holmes, 18 Okla. 92, 90 Pac. 22; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Stoner, 5 Tex. Civ. App. 50, 23 S. W. 1020; San Antonio & A. P. R. Co. v. Clements, 20 Tex. Civ. App. 498, 49 S. W. 913; Southern R. Co. v. Wilcox, 99 Va. 394, 39 S. E. 144; Georgia R. Co. v. Creety, 5 Ga. App. 424, 63 S. E. 528.

The lower court erroneously took the position that where two railway companies have no joint through rate published as the law requires, they may make a joint through rate by private contract, agreeing among themselves upon the divisions thereof, without filing with the commission a schedule showing the rate, and that a shipper not only may avail himself of this unpublished rate, but of the divisions thereof; and may require each of the railway companies to handle his shipments upon tender of its proportion or division of such unpublished rate.

Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. United States, 85 C. C. A. 194, 157 Fed. 830; Armour Packing Co. v. United States, 209 U. S. 56, 52 L. ed. 681, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 428, 14 L.R.A. (N.S.) 400, 82 C. C. A. 135, 153 Fed. 1.

A shipper is not entitled to avail himself of a division of a through rate.

Second Nat. Bank v. Grand Lodge, F. & A. M. 98 U. S. 123, 25 L. ed. 75; Keller v. Ashford, 133 U. S. 610, 33 L. ed. 667, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 494; Sayward v. Dexter, H. & Co. 19 C. C. A. 176, 44 U. S. App. 376, 72 Fed. 758; American Exch. Nat. Bank v. Northern P. R. Co. 76 Fed. 130; Metropolitan Trust Co. v. Topeka Water Co. 132 Fed. 702; German Alliance Ins. Co. v. Home Water Supply Co. — L.R.A. (N.S.) —, 99 C. C. A. 258, 174 Fed. 768.

Messrs. John M. Wayde and Philip P. Campbell argued the cause, and, with Mr. Carl O. Pingry, filed a brief for defendant in error:

Making a claim in such general terms as the interstate commerce act, without calling the attention of the court to the particular sections or provisions of the statute relied upon, is too general to give this court jurisdiction to review the case.

Kipley v. Illinois, 170 U. S. 182, 42 L. ed. 998, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 550; Maxwell v. Newbold, 18 How. 511, 15 L. ed. 506; Hoyt v. Sheldon (Hoyt v. Thompson) 1 Black, 518, 17 L. ed. 65; Farney v. Towle, 1 Black, 350, 17 L. ed. 216; Capital City Dairy Co. v. Ohio, 183 U. S. 238, 46 L. ed. 171, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 120.

When any right, title, privilege, or immunity is claimed under a Federal statute on a writ of error to a state court, that right, title, privilege, or immunity must be especially set up and claimed in the state court in the proper time and in the proper way. Where the case arises under the 3d clause of the jurisdictional statute, the right, title, privilege, or immunity must be specially set up or claimed.

Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Chicago, 164 U. S. 454, 41 L. ed. 511, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 129; Schuyler Nat. Bank v. Bollong, 150 U. S. 85, 37 L. ed. 1008, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 24; Manning v. French, 133 U. S. 186, 33 L. ed. 582, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 258.

The supreme court, in an action of law, at least, has no jurisdiction to review the decision of the highest court of the state on a pure question of fact, although a Federal question would or would not be presented, according to the way in which the question of fact was decided.

Lewis v. Campau, 3 Wall. 106, 18 L. ed. 211; Hall v. Jordan, 15 Wall. 393, 21 L. ed. 72; Merced Min. Co. v. Boggs, 3 Wall. 304, 18 L. ed. 245; Republican River Bridge Co. v. Kansas P. R. Co. 92 U. S. 315, 23 L. ed. 515; Dower v. Richards, 151 U. S. 658, 38 L. ed. 305, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 452, 17 Mor. Min. Rep. 704; Crary v. Devlin, 154 U. S. 619, and 23 L. ed. 511, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1199.

All questions of fact are settled by the decision of the state court.

Hedrick v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 167 U. S. 673, 42 L. ed. 320, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 922; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Matthews, 174 U. S. 96, 43 L. ed. 909, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609; A. Backus Jr. & Sons v. Fort Street Union Depot Co. 169 U. S. 557, 42 L. ed. 853, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 445; Egan v. Hart, 165 U. S. 188, 41 L. ed. 680, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 300; Re Buchanan, 158 U. S. 31, 39 L. ed. 884, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 723; Lewis v. Campau, 3 Wall. 106, 18 L. ed. 211; Hall v. Jordan, 15 Wall. 393, 21 L. ed. 72; Merced Min. Co. v. Boggs, 3 Wall. 304, 18 L. ed. 245; Carpenter v. Williams, 9 Wall. 785, 19 L. ed. 827; Republic River Bridge Co. v. Kansas P. R. Co. 92 U. S. 315, 23 L. ed. 515; Martin v. Marks, 97 U. S. 345, 24 L. ed. 940; Kenney v. Effinger, 115 U. S. 577, 29 L. ed. 498, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 185; Quinby v. Boyd, 128 U. S. 488, 32 L. ed. 502, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 147; Dower v. Richards, 151 U. S. 658, 38 L. ed. 305, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 452, 17 Mor. Min. Rep. 704.

The court nowhere held in its opinion that the railway company was not entitled to all of the rights and privileges which the interstate commerce law gave it, but simply held that it failed to establish sufficient facts by the evidence to bring it within the law and to relieve it from the obligations of its contract. This is not depriving the railway company of any right, title, or privilege under the law.

Crary v. Devlin, 154 U. S. 619, and 23 L. ed. 510, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1199; Bartlett v. Lockwood, 160 U. S. 357, 40 L. ed. 455, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 334; Merced Min. Co. v. Boggs, 3 Wall. 304, 18 L. ed. 245; Quinby v. Boyd, 128 U. S. 488, 32 L. ed. 502, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 147; Telluride Power Transmission Co. v. Rio Grande Western R. Co. 175 U. S. 639, 44 L. ed. 305, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 245; Martin v. Marks, 97 U. S. 345, 24 L. ed. 940; Dower v. Richards, 151 U. S. 658, 38 L. ed. 305, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 452; 17 Mor. Min. Rep. 704; France v. Missouri, 154 U. S. 667, and 26 L. ed. 86, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1191; Kenney v. Effinger, 115 U. S. 577, 29 L. ed. 498, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 185.

We are unable to adopt a construction of the interstate commerce act which will practically compel the carrier, when it enters into an arrangement with one carrier for through billing and rating and for the use of its tracks and terminals, to make the same arrangement with all other connecting carriers, if the physical facilities for an interchange of traffic are the same, and to do this without reference to the question whether the enforced arrangement is or is not of any material advantage to the public.

Little Rock & M. R. Co. v. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. 26 L.R.A. 195, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 854, 11 C. C. A. 417, 27 U. S. App. 380, 63 Fed. 775; Kentucky & I. Bridge Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 2 L.R.A. 289, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 351, 37 Fed. 630; Oregon Short Line & U. N. R. Co. v. Northern P. R. Co. 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 249, 51 Fed. 465; Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Osborne, 3 C. C. A. 347, 10 U. S. App. 430, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 257, 52 Fed. 915; Tozer v. United States, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 245, 52 Fed. 919.

It is the settled construction of the act that it does not make it obligatory upon connecting carriers to enter into traffic arrangement for through billing and rating, either as to passenger or freight traffic. This conclusion has been reached by all of the tribunals which have had occasion to consider the subject, and it is based on the fact that, in enacting the commerce act, Congress did not see fit to adopt that provision of the English railway and canal traffic act, passed in 1873, which expressly empowered the English commissioners to compel connecting carriers to put in force arrangements for through billing and through rating when they deemed it to the interest of the public that such arrangements should be made.

Little Rock & M. R. Co. v. East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 261, 47 Fed. 771; Kentucky & I. Bridge Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 2 L.R.A. 289, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 351, 37 Fed. 567.

Through rates are matters of agreement between carriers.

Wentworth, Interstate Commerce Law, pp. 23, 24, 37; Little Rock & M. R. Co. v. East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. 3 I. C. C. Rep. 1, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 454; Capelhart v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 4 I. C. C. Rep. 265, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 278; Re Clark, 3 I. C. C. Rep. 649, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 797; Southern P. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 200 U. S. 554, 50 L. ed. 593, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 330; Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 184, 197, 40 L. ed. 935, 939, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 391, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 700.

Through rates are not necessarily illegal which, when divided between carriers, give them less than their local rates, provided that the through rate itself is not less than some one of the locals, or unjustly discriminatory against individuals or localities, or so low as to burden other business with part of the cost of the business upon which it is imposed.

L. Lippman & Co. v. Illinois C. R. Co. 2 I. C. C. Rep. 584, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 414; Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Chicago & A. R. Co. 3 I. C. C. Rep. 450, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 721; New Orleans Cotton Exch. v. Illinois C. R. Co. 3 I. C. C. Rep. 534, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 777; Hamilton v. Chattanooga, R. & C. R. Co. 4 I. C. C. Rep. 686, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 482; Detroit Board of Trade v. Grand Trunk R. Co. 2 I. C. C. Rep. 315, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 199; Poughkeepsie Iron Co. v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. 4 I. C. C. Rep. 195, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 248.

The apportionment of rates on different parts of a through line does not determine the charge to the public, but may be significant on the question of reasonable rates for the whole distance.

Brady v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 2 I. C. C. Rep. 131, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 78.

A railroad company is under special obligations to give reasonable rates for its local business, but there are many influences which may affect through rates, while not bearing upon local rates at all; or, if at all, in less degree.

Wentworth, Interstate Commerce Law, p. 18.

Through rates are not required to be made on a mileage basis, nor local rates to correspond with the division of a joint through rate over the same line. Mileage is usually an element of importance, and due regard to distance proportion should be observed in connection with the other considerations that are material in fixing transportation charges.

McMorran v. Grand Trunk R. Co. 3 I. C. C. Rep. 252, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 604.

Purely local rates are such as are made from station to station, and with some approximation to distance, and are never, in railroad circles, made use of in connection with rates for long distances, which are made in disregard of rates to and from numerous intermediate stations.

Wentworth, Interstate Commerce Law, p. 34; Martin v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. 2 I. C. C. Rep. 25, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 32.

On a through and continuous line the carrier cannot escape responsibility for unjust charges by breaking haul in two, and calling itself a separate carrier.

Brady v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 2 I. C. C. Rep. 131, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 78; Re Grand Trunk R. Co. 3 I. C. C. Rep. 89, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 496; United States v. Mellen, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 247, 53 Fed. 229; Wentworth, Interstate Commerce Law, p. 54.

An indictment alleging that the share of a joint rate taken by one company is less than its local rate for a shorter haul, etc., is bad.

Ray, Freight Carriers, 652.

Through rates are not required to be made on a mileage basis, nor local rates to correspond with the divisions.

Martin v. Southern P. Co. 2 I. C. C. Rep. 1, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 1.

While it is the duty of the court to see that the provisions established by Congress are not frittered away on technical or trifling grounds, yet it is also their duty to see that such legislation is not carried beyond its clear scope, and that the owners of private capital invested in the business of transportation be not deprived of their liberty of contract and right of control any further than the law making power has intended that they should be.

Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Osborne, 3 C. C. A. 347, 10 U. S. App. 430, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 257, 52 Fed. 912.

As to the distinction between joint rates and other rates, see Chicago & N. W. R. Co.

v. Osborne, 3 C. C. A. 347, 10 U. S. App. 430, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 257, 52 Fed. 912; Tozer v. United States, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 245, 52 Fed. 917; Judson, Interstate Commerce, p. 190, § 150; Allen v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. 98 Fed. 16; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 145 U. S. 284, 36 L. ed. 706, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 92, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 844; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Miami S. S. Co. 30 C. C. A. 142, 52 U. S. App. 732, 86 Fed. 415.

A scheme for establishing compulsory through rates should be surrounded by proper safeguards, and its operation limited by proper restrictions.

Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Denver & N. O. R. Co. 110 U. S. 667, 28 L. ed. 291, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 185; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 145 U. S. 263, 36 L. ed. 699, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 92, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 844; Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 184, 40 L. ed. 935, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 391, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 700; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. ed. 940, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 405, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 666; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Alabama Midland R. Co. 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. ed. 414, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 45; Kentucky & I. Bridge Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 2 L.R.A. 289, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 351, 37 Fed. 626; Railway Co. v. Platt, June 26, 1907, Inters. Com. Rep.

We are not unmindful of the general proposition that contracts which are prohibited by law are invalid and cannot be enforced. However, to this general rule there are five exceptions which are recognized by high authority as well as by persuasive reasoning.

The contracts are upheld:

1. Where public policy requires the intervention of the court;

2. Where the parties are not in pari delicto;

3. Where the law which makes the agreement unlawful was intended for the special protection of the party seeking relief;

4. Where the illegal purpose has not been consummated;

5. Where the party complaining can exhibit his case without relying on the illegal transaction.

9 Cyc. 550; Packard v. Byrd, 73 S. C. 1, 6 L.R.A.(N.S.) 547, 51 S. E. 678; Fox v. Rogers, 171 Mass. 546, 50 N. E. 1041; Eastern Expanded Metal Co. v. Webb Granite & Constr. Co. 195 Mass. 356, 81 N. E. 251, 11 Ann. Cas. 631; Tootle v. Taylor, 64 Iowa, 629, 21 N. W. 115; Bemis v. Becker, 1 Kan. 226; Mason v. McLeod, 57 Kan. 105, 41 L.R.A. 548, 57 Am. St. Rep. 327, 45 Pac. 76.

To invalidate a contract for illegality, the illegality must be inherent. It is not enough that it be associated even closely. It must be a part of the contract.

Armstrong v. Toler, 11 Wheat. 258, 6 L. ed. 468; Union Nat. Bank v. Matthews, 98 U. S. 621, 25 L. ed. 188; Merchants' Cotton Press & Storage Co. v. Insurance Co. of N. A. 151 U. S. 368, 38 L. ed. 195, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 499, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 367; Larned v. Andrews, 106 Mass. 435, 8 Am. Rep. 346.

No findings of fact aside from the general judgment were requested by the plaintiff in error at the trial court, and the plaintiff in error is concluded by the findings of fact made by the supreme court. Whether those findings are correct or incorrect, they are conclusive, and the only question before this court is whether, taking the facts as found by the supreme court of Kansas, the decision or judgment of the supreme court violated any of the provisions of the interstate commerce act.

Missouri P. R. Co. v. Fitzgerald, 160 U. S. 556, 40 L. ed. 536, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389; Craig v. Missouri, 4 Pet. 410, 7 L. ed. 903; Telluride Power Transmission Co. v. Rio Grande Western R. Co. 175 U. S. 639, 44 L. ed. 305, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 245.

When no question is raised as to the validity of a statute of the United States, but merely as to the application of the statute to the case, no Federal question arises.

Cameron v. United States, 146 U. S. 533, 36 L. ed. 1077, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 184.

On a writ of error to a state court in a law case this court will not enter into a consideration of the testimony.

Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. Texas, 212 U. S. 86, 53 L. ed. 417, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 220; Dooley v. Pease, 180 U. S. 126, 45 L. ed. 457, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 329; St. Louis v. Rutz, 138 U. S. 226, 34 L. ed. 941, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 337; Boardman v. Toffey, 117 U. S. 271, 29 L. ed. 898, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 734; Bartlett v. Lockwood, 160 U. S. 357, 40 L. ed. 455, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 334; Crary v. Devlin, 154 U. S. 619, and 23 L. ed. 510, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1199; Merced Min. Co. v. Boggs, 3 Wall. 304, 18 L. ed. 245.

The interstate commerce act did not fix rates. The interstate commerce act, as it existed at the time of the shipments in question, gave no power to the Interstate Commerce Commission or to the courts to fix rates. The right to make rates was left with the carriers under the act as it had been before the passage of the act.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. 167 U. S. 479, 42 L. ed. 243, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 896; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Alabama Midland R. Co. 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. ed. 414, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 45; Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. ed. 939, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 391, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 700; Kentucky & I. Bridge Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 2 L.R.A. 289, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 351, 37 Fed. 567.

The fact that two or more roads have one joint tariff does not prevent one of the roads from having a different joint rate with other roads, neither does it raise a presumption that it does not have such rate.

Little Rock & M. R. Co. v. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. 26 L.R.A. 195, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 854, 11 C. C. A. 417, 27 U. S. App. 380, 63 Fed. 775.

We have been unable to find any decision, either state or Federal, which holds that a contract based on an unpublished rate applicable to the rate of shipment in question cannot be enforced as between the carrier and shipper, when the rate is not shown to be unjust and unreasonable, or does not discriminate either in favor of or against other shippers on the same haul, or does not conflict with a lawfully established rate which is applicable. The validity of such contracts has been upheld in the following cases:

Missouri P. R. Co. v. Relf, 78 Kan. 463, 97 Pac. 477; Wabash R. Co. v. Sloop, 200 Mo. 198, 98 S. W. 607; Southern Kansas R. Co. v. J. W. Burgess Co. — Tex. Civ. App. —, 90 S. W. 189; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Leatherwood, 29 Tex. Civ. App. 507, 69 S. W. 119; Atlanta, K. & N. R. Co. v. Horne, 106 Tenn. 73, 59 S. W. 134; Laurel Cotton Mills v. Gulf & S. I. R. Co. 84 Miss. 339, 66 L.R.A. 453, 37 So. 134; Southern P. Co. v. Redding, 17 Tex. Civ. App. 440, 43 S. W. 1061; Virginia Coal & Iron Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 98 Va. 776, 37 S. E. 315; Cherry v. Chicago & A. R. Co. 191 Mo. 489, 2 L.R.A.(N.S.) 695, 109 Am. St. Rep. 830, 90 S. W. 381.

The principle involved in this case comes clearly within the right to contract recognized by this court.

Southern P. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 200 U. S. 555, 50 L. ed. 593, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 330; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 192, 43 Fed. 37; Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 184, 197, 40 L. ed. 935, 939, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 391, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 700.

*Mr. Justice Van Devanter delivered the opinion of the court:

This was a proceeding in garnishment under the laws of the state of Kansas. The C. H. Albers Commission Company had recovered a judgment in the district court of Crawford county, in that state, against Robert L. Forrester and Joseph M. Forrester, doing business as Forrester Brothers, in the sum of $10,333.72, with interest, and had brought the Kansas City Southern Railway Company into the case, as a garnishee, upon a general allegation that it was indebted to Forrester Brothers. The railway company, which will be spoken of as the garnishee, appeared and denied that allegation. Under the practice in that state the issue so framed was, without other pleadings, brought on for trial as a civil action. The trial was begun before the court and a jury, but later the jury was discharged, with the consent of the parties, and the trial proceeded before the court alone. The case made by the evidence was this:

The garnishee was operating a railroad extending from Kansas City, Missouri, to Texarkana, Texas. Another railroad, which will be spoken of as the northern line, connected with it at Kansas City and extended northward to Omaha, Nebraska. Forrester Brothers were buyers and sellers of grain, with offices at St. Louis, Missouri. In the late summer or early fall of 1901 the two roads, at the solicitation of Forrester Brothers, entered into an oral agreement with the latter whereby they were granted a special rate on corn and oats to be shipped in car-load lots from Omaha via Kansas City to Texarkana. The evidence was conflicting as to whether the rate agreed upon for the through haul was 12½ or 16½ cents per hundred pounds, but it was one or the other, and the garnishee was to charge and receive 8 cents for the haul over its road, and the remainder was to go to the northern 585]line. The evidence *was also conflicting as to whether the agreement was to terminate on the 31st of October, or was to continue until all the shipments then contemplated by Forrester Brothers were completed. After the agreement was made, and in reliance thereon, Forrester Brothers made large purchases of corn and oats at Omaha for shipment to and sale at Texarkana, as they had contemplated doing when soliciting the special rate. The agreement was observed by the garnishee until and including the 31st of October, and during that time the shipments were carried on through bills of lading. Thereafter the garnishee disregarded the agreement, required that the shipments be rebilled at Kansas City, and collected a 10-cent rate for the haul over its road until November 10, and thereafter a 14-cent rate. The payment of the larger rates was made by an agent of Forrester Brothers at Kansas City, who did not know of the agreement. By exacting the larger rates the garnishee received $10,527.55 more than it would have received under the 8-cent rate. No schedule embodying the 12½ or 16½-cent rate, whichever it was, for the through haul, or the 8-cent rate for the haul over the garnishee's road, was filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission; and neither was any memorandum or statement of the oral agreement so filed. Apart from the agreement there was no joint through rate applicable to these shipments.

When the agreement was made there was in force on the garnishee's road a "proportional rate" of 10 cents per hundred pounds on corn and oats moving from Kansas City to Texarkana. This rate was not applicable to shipments originating at Kansas City, but only to such as originated elsewhere on connecting lines. Nor was it invariably confined to the movement from Kansas City to Texarkana, for it included also the haul, when there was such, to Kansas City from certain common points, such as St. Joseph, Atchison, and Leavenworth, which usually *enjoyed the[586 Kansas City rates, and were not reached by the garnishee's road, but by other roads. Thus, shipments originating on lines connecting at the common points with the roads leading to Kansas City took this rate from the common points to Texarkana. As applied to such shipments the rate was joint as well as proportional, and as applied to others it was a proportional rate of the garnishee alone. It was embodied in a schedule duly filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission, and remained in force until November 10, when it was superseded by a like rate of 14 cents, shown in an amendatory schedule so filed. These schedules bore a heading indicating that they were adopted by the garnishee "in connection with" other designated railroads, they being the roads over which the haul, when there was such, from the common points to the garnishee's road, would be made. The northern line was not one of them, nor was Omaha one of the common points. There was a like provision for the haul, when there was such, from Texarkana to common points therewith, and also a designation of the railroads over which that haul would be made; but as that feature of the schedules is immaterial here, it may be eliminated from consideration.

As explaining a proportional rate and indicating the correct application of the one just named, F. M. King, an experienced station agent of the garnishee, testified:

Q. I will ask if you know whether or not the words "proportional rates," have a well-defined and understood meaning in railroad business and on the Kansas City Southern.

A. They have; yes, sir.

Q. Now, just tell briefly what those terms mean, those words "proportional rates," if you know.

A. A proportional rate is a rate put in to cover business . . . coming to our lines from other points, applying to commodities where we have no through rates. It is put in in order to protect a shipper on a long haul. For instance, a shipment 587]coming from . . . points *out of Kansas where there is no through rate published, . . . we accept if from the connecting line and bill it out then on a proportional rate, which is less than the local tariff rate.

Q. Now, you spoke there of a local tariff rate; if those words have a well-defined meaning, I wish you would state what those are.

A. A local rate is a rate applying locally from one station to another on the same road.

Q. In that term "local rate," as distinguished from "proportional rate," how about the origin of the shipment?

A. That is where it originates and terminates on the same line.

And E. E. Smythe, the general freight agent of the garnishee, under whose direction the schedules embracing this proportional rate were prepared and filed, testified:

Q. Mr. Smythe, what is meant in railroading by "common points?"

A. Common points are points which take the same rate. . . .

Q. Common points are comparatively close together, taking the same rates?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How far north is Omaha from Kansas City?

A. 220 or 226 miles. . . .

Q. How far north from Kansas City is Atchison and Leavenworth?

A. Between 30 and 40 miles.

Q. And St. Joe about 60 miles north of Kansas City?

A. Yes, sir, 60.

Q. Is Omaha a common point with Leavenworth, Atchison, St. Joe, and Kansas City?

A. No, sir. . . .

Q. Now, Mr. Smythe, I will ask you to state what is known in railroading as "proportional rates," what does that expression mean, if it has any fixed or definite meaning?

A. Proportional rates are rates established in a great many centers—grain centers, if you please—on grain coming from any territory which may be shipped there for re-shipment. . . .

Q. I will ask you if the words "proportional rates" have a fixed and definite meaning among railroad men, especially among traffic men?

A. Yes, sir. . . .

Q. Can you give us an illustration, so we will understand it more definitely? Give your own illustration of shipments coming into Kansas City and *going out[588 again.

A. We will take Wichita, Kansas. Some Kansas City firm will buy hay and grain there from a Wichita dealer, or some point in that territory, and ship that hay to Kansas City to John Jones Commission Company. Mr. Jones pays the freight on that car, and in the meantime . . . he may have sold that car of hay or grain to go to New Orleans, . . . and he accordingly comes to you, or presents to the general agent the expense bill covering the freight in, and when that is checked to see that the correct rate is applied, it goes out on a proportional rate from Kansas City or any other point where the proportional rate applies, at the proportional rate named in the tariff. . . .

Q. Explain in your own way.

A. You want me to explain what that tariff [the proportional one now under consideration] means? What it would apply on?

Q. Yes, sir, just explain the meaning of this expression "in connection with the Chicago Great Western" and the other roads.

A. That tariff would apply on grain coming into Kansas City on any railroad in America [and bound] to Texarkana. . . .

Q. You say it would apply on grain coming into Kansas City from any point in the world? Yes, sir, any place in America.

This testimony, bearing upon the meaning of the proportional rate schedules, was not in any way contradicted.

It was not shown whether those schedules were sanctioned by the other railroads over which the haul, when there was such, from the common points to the garnishee's road, was to be made; and while it was shown that those schedules were regularly printed, and that copies thereof were sent to the freight offices of the garnishee at Kansas City and other points, and were there kept open to public inspection, it was not shown that copies were posted in public and conspicuous places in those offices.

Respecting the existence of an applicable local rate on the northern line from Omaha to Kansas City, the witness Smythe testified:

Q. I will ask you to state if you know 589]*what the rate was in 1901 on grain between Omaha and Kansas City.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I will ask you to state what it was.

A. The rate was 9 cents.

Q. Is that what you call a legal rate?

A. It was the legal rate; yes, sir.

Q. That is, between Omaha and Kansas City?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. On what roads was that in effect?

A. In effect over the Burlington, Missouri Pacific, and all lines reaching Omaha running into Kansas City.

This testimony was offered and admitted without objection, and its effect was in no way impaired or qualified, save as the same witness, as also others, testified to the existence of a rate of 6½ cents, called the "Missouri arbitrary," on grain carried from Omaha to Kansas City when destined to points beyond. If this latter was an individual rate of the northern line, and not a conventional division of some joint through rate, as to which the testimony was somewhat uncertain, it was applicable to the shipments in question; otherwise the 9-cent rate was applicable. In either event there was a lawful local rate covering the haul over the northern line.

At the trial the plaintiff took the position, not that the proportional rate was unreasonable, preferential, discriminatory, or otherwise objectionable under the interstate commerce act, but that the special agreement was valid, and the garnishee consequently was under a common-law liability to Forrester Brothers for all that it had collected in excess of the stipulated 8-cent rate for the haul over its road. And the garnishee's position, insisted upon throughout the trial, is reflected by the following declarations of law which it tendered and the court rejected:

"Where an interstate shipment of merchandise passes from the point of origin to the point of destination over the lines of two separate carriers, and such carriers have not, by agreement, established a joint rate over their said lines, and filed and published the same in the manner required by the interstate commerce act, then the only lawful charge for transportation to be ap- 590]plied to such *shipment is the published tariff rate of the first carrier from the point of origin of the shipment to the point of connection with the second carrier, plus the published tariff charge of the second carrier from the point of connection with the first carrier to the point of destination.

56 L. ed.

"On interstate shipments of merchandise the only lawful rates applicable thereto are such rates as have been filed and published in the manner required by the interstate commerce act."

And, applying those declarations to the evidence, the garnishee insisted that during the time of the shipments in question, lawfully established local rates, applicable thereto, were in force upon the two roads, and that those rates were not superseded or displaced by the special agreement with the shipper; that the rates agreed upon, that is, the joint through rate and the 8-cent rate, never became legally operative, because never embraced in any schedule filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission; and, finally, that the charges exacted for the haul over its road conformed to the lawfully established rate, and were the only charges which lawfully could have been accepted.

The trial court sustained the plaintiff's position, made a general finding in its favor, and entered judgment thereon against the garnishee. The supreme court of the state affirmed the finding and judgment (79 Kan. 59, 99 Pac. 819), and this writ of error was then allowed.

Consideration must first be given to a motion to dismiss, advanced upon two grounds: (1) That no right or immunity under a statute of the United States was "specially set up or claimed," within the meaning of Rev. Stat. § 709, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 575, in the state courts, and (2) that in those courts the facts were found generally against the garnishee, that the finding is conclusive upon this court, and that the errors assigned, when rightly considered, but challenge the finding, and therefore present nothing which is open to review.

*The first ground obviously is not[591 tenable. The garnishee insisted throughout the proceedings that no recovery could be had against it consistently with the interstate commerce act, because, in disregarding the agreement for the special rate and in exacting the proportional rate, first of 10 and later of 14 cents, it but conformed to the provisions of that act governing the rates to be applied to interstate shipments. This was an adequate assertion of a right or immunity under that act, for it named the act, indicated wherein it was claimed to be applicable, and invoked its protection. Nutt v. Knut, 200 U. S. 12, 50 L. ed. 348, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 216; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co. 204 U. S. 426, 51 L. ed. 553, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350, 9 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1075.

The second ground has more color, but is also untenable. While it is true that upon a writ of error to a state court we cannot review its decision upon pure questions of fact, but only upon questions of law bearing upon the Federal right set up by the unsuccessful party, it equally is true that we may examine the entire record, including the evidence, if properly incorporated therein, to determine whether what purports to be a finding upon questions of fact is so involved with and dependent upon such questions of law as to be in substance and effect a decision of the latter. That this is so is amply shown by our prior rulings. Thus, in Mackay v. Dillon, 4 How. 421, 447, 11 L. ed. 1038, 1050, where the state courts had given to certain evidence an effect claimed to be unwarranted by an applicable law of Congress, it was held that their decision "on the effect of such evidence may be fully considered here." In Dower v. Richards, 151 U. S. 658, 667, 38 L. ed. 305, 308, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 452, 17 Mor. Min. Rep. 704, where the conclusiveness of findings of fact by a state court was elaborately considered, it was recognized that where the question is "of the competency and legal effect of the evidence as bearing upon a question of Federal law, the decision may be reviewed by this court." In Stanley v. Schwalby, 162 U. S. 255, 274, 277-279, 40 L. ed. 960, 966-968, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 754, which was an action of ejectment, 592]*the validity of an authority exercised under the United States was drawn in question, and depended upon whether the United States had a good title to the land in controversy. That question turned upon whether the attorney for the United States, who had represented it in the acquisition of the land, knew at the time of a prior deed to one McMillan, and the state court found that he had such knowledge. In this court it was insisted, on the one hand, that the finding was conclusive, and, on the other, that the evidence was insufficient, as matter of law, to warrant the finding, and could be examined to determine whether this was so. In that connection this court, although recognizing the general rule that findings upon pure questions of fact are not open to review, said: "But so far as the judgment of the state court against the validity of an authority set up by the defendants under the United States necessarily involves the decision of a question of law, it must be reviewed by this court, whether that question depends upon the Constitution, laws, or treaties of the United States, or upon the local law, or upon principles of general jurisprudence." And, upon examining the evidence, this court held it to be "wholly insufficient, in fact and in law, to support the conclusion that the attorney had any notice of the previous deed to McMillan," and accordingly reversed the judgment of the state court. And in Schlemmer v. Buffalo, R. & P. R. Co. 205 U. S. 1, 51 L. ed. 681, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 407, a case arising under the Federal safety appliance law, wherein the state court found that the deceased contributed to his injury by his own negligence, thereby preventing a recovery, this court exercised the power to examine the evidence, notwithstanding a contention that the finding was conclusive, and reversed the judgment upon the ground that it appeared that what had been found to be contributory negligence was at most an assumption of the risk, which was not a defense under the Federal statute. *Perhaps the most frequent[593 exercise of this power occurs in cases arising under the clause of the Constitution forbidding a state to pass any law impairing the obligation of a contract, the existence of the contract in such cases being a mixed question of law and fact. Louisville Gas Co. v. Citizens' Gaslight Co. 115 U. S. 683, 697, 29 L. ed. 510, 515, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 265, a leading case upon the subject, contains this statement of the settled rule: "Whether an alleged contract arises from state legislation, or by agreement with the agents of a state, by its authority, or by stipulations between individuals exclusively, we are obliged, upon our own judgment, and independently of the adjudication of the state court, to decide whether there exists a contract within the protection of the Constitution of the United States." A like exercise of this power is shown in cases arising under the clause of the Constitution requiring full faith and credit to be given in each state to the judicial proceedings of every other state. Huntington v. Attrill, 146 U. S. 657, 683, 36 L. ed. 1123, 1133, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224, was such a case. It was a suit in Maryland upon a judgment obtained in New York under a statute of the latter state imposing a liability for the debts of a corporation upon a director making a false certificate respecting its condition. The court of appeals of Maryland held that the judgment was for a strictly penal liability, and therefore not within the protection of the full-faith-and-credit clause. But when the case came here it was held that "if the state court declines to give full faith and credit to a judgment of another state because of its opinion as to the nature of the cause of action on which the judgment was recovered, this court, in determining whether full faith and credit have been given to that judgment, must decide for itself the nature of the original liability." And upon reaching the conclusion that in that instance the original liability was not strictly penal, this court reversed the judgment of the court of appeals of Maryland.

594] *When due regard is had for the rule before indicated, and so often applied in other cases, it does not admit of doubt that in the present case we may examine the evidence, which has been properly incorporated in the record, to determine whether the general finding necessarily involved the decision of questions of law bearing upon the Federal right set up by the garnishee. And when this is done it is manifest, as is amply illustrated by the résumé which we have given of the evidence and contentions of the parties, that the finding necessarily involved the decision of questions of the interpretation and application of the interstate commerce act (24 Stat. at L. 379, chap. 104, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3154, 25 Stat. at L. 855, chap. 382, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3158), and also of other questions of law bearing upon the Federal right, such as the legal effect of evidence.

Coming, then, to the questions arising upon the case made by the evidence, we have seen that when the agreement for the special rate was made, and during the time of the shipments in question, there was in force on the garnishee's road a lawful proportional rate, at first of 10 and later of 14 cents, applicable to these shipments, unless it was objectionable in some of the following particulars:

(a) Although it was shown that the schedules embodying this rate were regularly printed, duly filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission, and kept open to public inspection at the freight offices of the garnishee at Kansas City and other points, it was not shown that copies were posted in public and conspicuous places in those offices, as required by § 6 of the interstate commerce act. Posting, however, was not essential to make rates legally operative, and was required only as a means of affording special facilities to the public for ascertaining the rates actually in force. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Cisco Oil Mill, 204 U. S. 449, 51 L. ed. 562, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 358.

(b) It was not shown that these schedules were sanctioned by the other railroads designated therein, they *being the roads over which the haul to the garnishee's road from the common points was to be made when the shipments were received from connecting lines at those points. Such a showing, however, was not necessary here. The other roads had no interest in the rate as applied to shipments received by the garnishee from the northern line at Kansas City, as were the shipments in question.

56 L. ed.

As applied to them the rate was not joint, but an individual rate of the garnishee. The sanction of the other roads was essential only to its application to the haul from the common points, when there was such.

(c) As before stated, the heading of those schedules indicated that they were adopted by the garnishee "in connection with" other designated railroads, they being the ones just mentioned as interested in the rate when applied to shipments received from connecting lines at the common points. This, it is contended, meant that the rate was applicable only to shipments received by the garnishee from those roads. But an examination of the schedules satisfies us that they had no such meaning. The heading merely reflected the fact that the rate, in some of its applications, was to be a joint one as between the garnishee and the designated roads. The schedules themselves did not restrict the rate to shipments received from those roads, but, on the contrary, indicated that it was applicable to shipments received by the garnishee at Kansas City from any connecting line. This view of it was fortified, unnecessarily, as we think, by the uncontradicted testimony of expert witnesses, who declared that the rate was applicable to shipments originating on any connecting line, whether received by the garnishee at Kansas City, or by one of the designated roads at a common point.

The uncontradicted testimony of witnesses likely to be informed on the subject disclosed the existence of an applicable lawful rate on the northern line from Omaha to *Kansas city. True, this testimony[596 was not the best evidence, but, being offered and admitted without objection, it was evidence which could not be disregarded. Diaz v. United States, 223 U. S. 442, ante, 500, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 250; Schlemmer v. Buffalo, R. & P. R. Co. 205 U. S. 1, 9, 51 L. ed. 681, 685, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 407; United States v. McCoy, 193 U. S. 593, 598, 48 L. ed. 805, 807, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 528. And while it may have been left somewhat uncertain as to which of two such rates, one of 6½ and the other of 9 cents, was the applicable one, it was disclosed with certainty that it was one or the other.

Such being the state of the evidence, the necessary conclusion, as matter of law, is that an applicable and lawfully established local rate was in force on each road. And as it was conceded that there was no established joint through rate, it likewise is a necessary conclusion that the shipments, even if moving on through bills of lading, should have taken these local rates, unless the latter were superseded or displaced by the special agreement.

We are thus brought to the question of the validity of that agreement. Not only did it contemplate a departure from the established local rates for the benefit of a single shipper, but no schedule embracing the rates agreed upon was filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission. Section 6 of the interstate commerce act, as it existed at the time, laid upon every carrier subject to the provisions of the act the duty of filing with the Commission and publishing schedules of the rates to be charged for the transportation of property over its road, provided for changing and superseding such rates by new schedules so filed and published, and made it unlawful for such a carrier to depart from any rate so established and in force at the time. That section also required connecting carriers, agreeing upon joint through rates, to file schedules thereof with the Commission, made similar provision for changing and superseding rates so established, and 597] likewise *prohibited any deviation from an established joint rate while remaining in force. Other sections contained provisions against unreasonable rates, unjust discriminations, undue preferences, and the like. The chief purpose of the act was to secure uniformity of treatment to all, to suppress unjust discriminations and undue preferences, and to prevent special and secret agreements in respect of rates for interstate transportation, and to that end to require that such rates be established in a manner calculated to give them publicity, to make them inflexible while in force, and to cause them to be unalterable save in the mode prescribed. In every substantial sense local rates and joint through rates were placed on the same level. Both required to be openly established and uniformly applied. True, the carriers were obliged to establish local rates, and were left free to agree upon joint through rates, or not, as they chose; but if they did agree thereon, the rates could become legally operative only by being established as prescribed in the act. The true effect of the statute in this regard—we speak of the statute as it existed in 1901—is clearly stated in the opinion of the circuit court of appeals for the eighth circuit, in Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. United States, 85 C. C. A. 194, 157 Fed. 830, 833, as follows:

"If an initial carrier accepts traffic for transportation and issues its bill of lading over a route made up of connecting roads for which no joint through rate has been published and filed with the Commission, the lawful rate to be charged is the sum of the established local rates published and filed by the individual roads; or if, as was the case here, there is a local rate over one road and a joint rate over the others for the remainder of the route, all published and filed with the Commission, the lawful through rate to be charged is the sum of the local and joint rates. By failing to establish or concur in a joint through rate for traffic accepted for interstate transportation, *each participating carrier im-[598 ppliedly asserts that the rate which it has duly established, published, and filed for its own line shall be a component part of the through rate to be charged. It is competent for carriers, if conditions justify, to make their proportions of a through rate less than the local charges upon their own lines, but in doing so they should observe legal methods, and if no action to that end is taken, they in effect adhere to the rates established, published, and filed by them as applying not only to local but to through traffic."

We conclude, as matter of law, that the special agreement was void, that the established local rates were unaffected by it, that the rate collected by the garnishee was the applicable legal rate, and that the finding and judgment should have been in favor of, and not against, the garnishee.

To avoid any misapprehension in respect of the character of the liability sought to be enforced in this case, we deem it well to repeat that there was no claim of any right to reparation or damages under the interstate commerce act, and no claim that the rate collected was unreasonable, preferential, discriminatory, or otherwise violative of that act, but only an attempt to enforce a supposed liability for a breach of the special agreement. See Texas & P. R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co. 204 U. S. 426, 51 L. ed. 553, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350, 9 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1075; Robinson v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 222 U. S. 506, ante, 288, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 114.

For the reasons given, the judgment of the Supreme Court of Kansas is reversed, and the cause is remanded for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion.

Judgment reversed.

*UNITED STATES, Plff. in Err., [599
v.

HARVEY C. MILLER and Morris F. Miller.
(No. 607.)

UNITED STATES, Plff. in Err.,
v.

HARVEY C. MILLER and Morris F. Miller.
(No. 608.)

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 599-605.)

Appeal — by government in criminal case — scope of review.

1. The question presented for decision on direct writ of error to a circuit court from judgments sustaining demurrers to indictments under the act to regulate commerce of June 29, 1906 (34 Stat. at L. 584, chap. 3591, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1909, p. 1149), making it a misdemeanor for a shipper knowingly to solicit, accept, or receive a rebate or concession whereby property is transported in interstate commerce at a less rate than that named in the tariffs "published and filed" by the carrier, on the ground that the indictments did not allege that the schedules and tariffs claimed to have been violated were posted in the manner required by law, is whether compliance with the requirements of the act as to posting of tariffs is essential to bring a tariff within the descriptive terms of the act. [For other cases, see Appeal and Error, I. e. in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]
223 U. S.

Carriers — interstate freight rates — posting.

2. Compliance with the requirements of § 6 of the act to regulate commerce of June 29, 1906, that copies of schedules and tariffs for the use of the public shall be "posted" in two public and conspicuous places in every depot, so as to be readily accessible to the public, is not essential to bring a tariff within the provision of such act making it a misdemeanor for any shipper knowingly to solicit, accept, or receive a rebate or concession whereby property is transported in interstate commerce at a less rate than that named in the tariffs "published and filed" by such carrier, as publication is a step in establishing rates, while posting is a duty arising from the fact that they have been established.

[For other cases, see Carriers, III. g, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[Nos. 607 and 608.]

Argued January 9, 1912. Decided February 26, 1912.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of Georgia to review judgments sustaining demurrers to indictments for violation of the act to regulate commerce by accepting rebates. Reversed.

See same case below, 187 Fed. 375.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Solicitor General Lehmann argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The posting of rates in the depots was not essential to their establishment.

United States v. Howell, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 818, 56 Fed. 21; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Cisco Oil Mill, 204 U. S. 449, 450, 452, 51 L. ed. 562-564, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 358.

NOTE.—On review by government in criminal case, under the act of March 2, 1907—see note to United States v. Stevenson, 54 L. ed. U. S. 153.
56 L. ed.

Mr. Alexander A. Lawrence argued the cause, and, with Messrs. M. Hampton Todd and William W. Osborne, filed a brief for defendants in error.

Posting being a condition precedent to the operation of the penal provision of the statute under consideration, no departure from an unposted rate subjects the shipper to such penal provisions.

Hardaway v. State, 1 Ga. App. 150, 58 S. E. 141; United States v. Cook, 17 Wall. 174, 21 L. ed. 539; United States v. Wood, 145 Fed. 410; Camden Iron Works v. United States, 85 C. C. A. 585, 158 Fed. 564.

Mr. Justice Van Devanter delivered the opinion of the court:

These were indictments under that provision of the act to regulate commerce (34 Stat. at L. 584, chap. 3591, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1909, p. 1149) which makes it a misdemeanor for a shipper knowingly to solicit, accept, or receive, from any common carrier subject to the act, a rebate or concession whereby property is transported in interstate commerce "at a less rate than that named in the tariffs published and filed by such carrier, as is required by said act;" and the question presented for decision is whether compliance with the requirement in respect of the posting of tariffs in the depots, stations, or offices of the carrier, is essential to bring a tariff within the descriptive terms of that provision. We say this is the question for decision, because it appears from the record that the circuit court, in sustaining demurrers to the indictments, placed its decision solely upon the ground that they did "not allege that the schedules and tariffs alleged to have been violated were posted in the manner required by law," and because upon these direct writs of error we must accept that court's interpretation of the indictments, and confine our review to the question of the construction of the statute involved in its decision. United States v. Keitel, 211 U. S. 370, 398, 53 L. ed. 230, 244, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 123; United States v. Kissel, 218 U. S. 601, 606, 54 L. ed. 1168, 1178, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 124.

That the act imposes upon common carriers subject to its provisions the duty of establishing in a prescribed mode the rates, whether individual or joint, to be charged for "the transportation in interstate commerce of property over their lines, and that the rates so established are obligatory alike upon carrier and shipper, and must be strictly observed by both until changed in the mode prescribed, are propositions which are not only plainly stated in the act, but settled by repeated decisions of this court. In speaking of the rates which must be thus observed, the act variously designates them as the rates "named in the tariffs published and filed," the "charges which have been filed and published," the "charges which are specified in the tariff filed and in effect at the time," the "regular charges . . . as fixed by the schedules of rates provided for in this act," and the "regular rates then established and in force;" but in none of these expressions is there any suggestion that posting is a necessary step in establishing rates; that is, in making them legally operative. Of course, these expressions, although differing in words, are identical in meaning, and to ascertain that meaning recourse must be had to § 6 of the act, which, at the time of the offenses charged in these indictments (1907-8), declared:

"Sec. 6. That every common carrier subject to the provisions of this act shall file with the Commission created by this act, and print and keep open to public inspection, schedules showing all the rates, fares, and charges for transportation between different points on its own route, and between points on its own route and points on the route of any other carrier by railroad, by pipe line, or by water when a through route and joint rate have been established [meaning adopted]. . . . Such schedules shall be plainly printed in large type, and copies for the use of the public shall be kept posted in two public and conspicuous places in every depot, station, or office of such carrier where passengers or freight, respectively, are received for transportation, in such form that they shall be accessible to the public and can be conveniently inspected. . . . *Provided, That the Commission may, in its discretion and for good cause shown, . . . modify the requirements of this section in respect to publishing, posting, and filing of tariffs, either in particular instances or by a general order applicable to special or peculiar circumstances or conditions. . . . No carrier, unless otherwise provided by this act, shall engage or participate in the transportation of passengers or property, as defined in this act, unless the rates, fares, and charges upon which the same are transported by said carrier have been filed and published in accordance with the provisions of this act. . . ."

It is the contention of the defendants that a tariff is not published in the sense in which the act uses that term unless printed copies are "kept posted in two public and conspicuous places in every depot," etc., and it was this contention that prevailed in the circuit court. But, in our opinion, it is not sound. Publication and posting in the sense of the act are essentially dis-tingent. This is the import of the provision that the requirements relating to "publishing, posting, and filing" may be modified by the Commission in special circumstances, for if publishing included posting, mention of the latter was unnecessary. And from all the provisions on the subject it is evident that the publication intended consists in promulgating and distributing the tariff in printed form, preparatory to putting it into effect, while the posting is a continuing act enjoined upon the carrier, while the tariff remains operative, as a means of affording special facilities to the public for ascertaining the rates in force thereunder. In other words, publication is a step in establishing rates, while posting is a duty arising out of the fact that they have been established. Obviously, therefore, posting is not a condition to making a tariff legally operative. Neither is it a condition to the continued existence of a tariff once legally established. If it were, the inadvertent or mischievous destruction or removal of one of the posted copies from a depot would disestablish or suspend the rates,—a result which evidently is not intended by the act, for it provides that rates once lawfully established shall not be changed otherwise than in the mode prescribed.

Like views of the posting clause were expressed in Texas & P. R. Co. v. Cisco Oil Mill, 204 U. S. 449, 51 L. ed. 562, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 358, and upon further consideration we perceive no reason for departing from them. See also Kansas City Southern R. Co. v. C. H. Albers Commission Co. 223 U. S. 573, ante, 556, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 316.

Whether, by failure to comply with that clause, a carrier becomes subject to a penalty, is apart from the present case and need not now be considered.

The judgments are reversed, and the cases are remanded for further proceedings in conformity with this opinion.

Reversed.

PHILADELPHIA COMPANY, Appt.,
v.

HENRY L. STIMSON,† Secretary of War.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 605-633.)

United States — suit against officer.

1. The exemption of the United States

†Resignation of Jacob M. Dickinson as Secretary of War suggested November 13, 1911, and Henry L. Stimson, his successor in office, substituted as party appellee herein.

NOTE.—On suit against Federal officers or agents as suit against United States—see from suit does not preclude an action to prevent the Secretary of War from causing criminal proceedings to be instituted against a riparian owner because of the reclamation and occupation of his land outside prescribed harbor limits, if his rights of property were wrongfully invaded in fixing such limits.
223 U. S.

[For other cases, see United States, 183-189, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Injunction — restraining institution of criminal proceedings.

2. One whose property rights have been invaded in fixing harbor lines may maintain an action to restrain the Secretary of War from causing threatened criminal proceedings to be instituted against him in accordance with the provisions of the act of Congress of March 3, 1899 (30 Stat. at L. 1121, 1151-1153, chap. 425, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 3541, 3542, 3544), §§ 11, 12, 17, for undertaking the reclamation and occupation of land belonging to him beyond the prescribed harbor limits.

[For other cases, see Injunction, 39, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Courts — territorial limitation — Secretary of War.

3. An action to prevent the Secretary of War from causing threatened criminal proceedings to be instituted against a riparian owner because of the reclamation and occupation of land outside prescribed harbor limits, in the fixing of which such owner claims that his property rights have been invaded, will lie in a court of equity in the District of Columbia in which jurisdiction of the person of the Secretary of War has been properly obtained, although complainant will be required to prove his title to land outside such harbor limits, the harbor line is claimed to be a cloud upon his title, and such land is in a navigable river in Pennsylvania, outside the territorial jurisdiction of the court.

[For other cases, see Courts, 66-74, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Waters — avulsion — submergence.

4. The loss of land, caused by its washing away from time to time by heavy floods and freshets in a rapidly flowing stream, during a course of years, falls upon the riparian owner, so as to preclude him from reclaiming land thus submerged inside the former line of high water.

[For other cases, see Waters, 122-142, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Pleading — avulsion.

5. An allegation that land was washed away from time to time by heavy floods and freshets, so that a large part of land became slightly submerged during a course of years, is insufficient to show that there was at any particular time such a sudden, violent, and visible change in the channel of the stream as to entitle the riparian owner to retain his boundary to the original line.

[For other cases, see Waters, 122-142, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Harbor lines — effect of raising of water by dam — rights of subsequent purchasers.

6. The lawful building of a dam by the United States in the interest of navigation, to increase the depth of water in a harbor in a navigable river, by which an island therein was submerged to a much greater extent than previously, and water over a part thereof rendered navigable at certain times, gives a subsequent purchaser of such island no right to relief because of its construction, in an action by him against the Secretary of War, to have harbor lines fixed in accordance with conditions existing before his purchase set aside.

Commerce — control of navigable waters — fixing harbor lines.

7. The action of a state in providing by statute for fixing the lines of ordinary high and low water in certain rivers, and that the lines so fixed shall be firm and stable for the purposes intended by the statute, however effective as between the state and riparian owners to fix a permanent boundary at the high-water line so fixed, gives such owners no rights which will prevent Congress, in the exercise of its right to regulate commerce, from fixing harbor lines in accordance with the high-water mark as changed by the wearing away of the banks in the course of years.

[For other cases, see Commerce, II. a, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Harbors — changing lines of.

8. The act of the Secretary of War in fixing harbor lines for an island in a navigable river, several hundred feet outside the high-water mark, does not exhaust his authority so as to prevent him from subsequently changing the lines so as to make them coincide with the actual high-water mark, in order more fully to preserve the river from obstruction.

[For other cases, see Harbors, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 70.]

Argued November 16, 1911. Decided March 4, 1912.

note to Louisiana v. Garfield, 53 L. ed. U. S. 92.

On injunction against criminal proceedings—see notes to Crichto v. Dahner, 21 L.R.A. 84; Hall v. Dunn, 25 L.R.A. (N.S.) 193; Denton v. McDonald, 34 L.R.A. (N.S.) 454; and Arbuckle v. Blackburn, 51 C. C. A. 133.

On the power of Congress to regulate commerce—see notes to State ex rel. Corwin v. Indiana & O. Oil, Gas & Min. Co. 6 L.R.A. 579; Bullard v. Northern P. R. Co. 11 56 L. ed.

L.R.A. 246; Re Wilson, 12 L.R.A. 624; Gibbons v. Ogden, 6 L. ed. U. S. 23; Brown v. Maryland, 6 L. ed. U. S. 678; Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 29 L. ed. U. S. 158; Ratterman v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 32 L. ed. U. S. 229; Harmon v. Chicago, 37 L. ed. U. S. 216; and Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Backus, 38 L. ed. U. S. 1041.

On the establishment of dock lines—see note to Grand Rapids v. Powers, 14 L.R.A. 498.

APPPEAL from the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia to review a decree affirming a decree of the Supreme Court of the District, sustaining a demurrer to a bill to set aside certain harbor lines so far as they encroached on complainant's land, and to restrain the Secretary of War from causing threatened criminal proceedings to be instituted against complainant for reclamation and occupation of land outside of the prescribed limits. Affirmed.

See same case below, 33 App. D. C. 338.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. William L. Marbury argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Morgan H. Beach, W. Graham Bowdoin, and Samuel McClay, filed a brief for appellant:

The rights of riparian owners on navigable waters, which include the question of how far, if at all, their title to land shall be deemed to be affected by the action of the water, are determined and governed by the laws of the respective states.

Shively v. Bowlby, 152 U. S. 1, 38 L. ed. 331, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 548; Barney v. Keokuk, 94 U. S. 324, 24 L. ed. 224; St. Louis v. Myers, 113 U. S. 566, 28 L. ed. 1131, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 640; St. Anthony Falls Water Power Co. v. St. Paul Water Comrs. 168 U. S. 349, 42 L. ed. 497, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 157; Packer v. Bird, 137 U. S. 661, 34 L. ed. 819, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 210.

In the state of Pennsylvania it is settled that the soil up to low-water mark in a navigable stream is the property of the commonwealth.

Monongahela Bridge Co. v. Kirk, 46 Pa. 120, 84 Am. Dec. 527.

That being the case, the power of the state of Pennsylvania to regulate and determine by law the effect which any change in the high- and low-water mark, caused by the action of the water, should have upon its title and that of the riparian owner, would seem not fairly open to question.

Packer v. Bird, 137 U. S. 661, 34 L. ed. 819, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 210; Barney v. Keokuk, 94 U. S. 324, 338, 24 L. ed. 224, 228.

Overflowing of the complainant's property, caused by the construction by the government in improving the harbor, would be damnum absque injuria; but it has never been contended until now that the owner of the property would not have the right to protect himself against such injury if he could, at his own expense, either by excluding or expelling the water.

Monongahela Nav. Co. v. United States, 148 U. S. 312, 336, 37 L. ed. 463, 471, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 622.

When, as here, instead of the submergence or loss of land being caused by the gradual and imperceptible encroachment of the water, it is caused by sudden floods and freshets, the law is well settled that the title of the owner of the island is not affected, and that he may at any time exclude the water or occupy the land itself submerged in any way he pleases.

Rex v. Yarborough, 3 Barn. & C. 91, 4 Dowl. & R. 790, 27 Revised Rep. 292, 1 Eng. Rul. Cas. 458; Angell, Tide Waters, 1st ed. 71; Emans v. Turnbull, 2 Johns. 314, 3 Am. Dec. 427; 2 Bl. Com. 261; Hargrave's Law Tracts, 28; Gould, Waters, § 158; Mulry v. Norton, 100 N. Y. 424, 53 Am. Rep. 206, 3 N. E. 581; Wallace v. Driver, 61 Ark. 429, 31 L.R.A. 319, 33 S. W. 641; Hunt, Boundaries, p. 29; St. Louis v. Rutz, 138 U. S. 226, 245, 34 L. ed. 941, 949, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 337; Nebraska v. Iowa, 145 U. S. 519, 36 L. ed. 798, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 976; Widdecombe v. Rosemiller, 118 Fed. 295.

This proceeding is not virtually a suit against the United States, but a suit to restrain the defendant, an executive officer of the Federal government, from exceeding his authority, to the impairment of the property rights of the claimant.

United States v. Lee, 106 U. S. 218, 219, 27 L. ed. 181, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 240; Noble v. Union River Logging R. Co. 147 U. S. 171, 172, 37 L. ed. 125, 126, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 271; American School v. McAnnulty, 187 U. S. 108-110, 47 L. ed. 96, 97, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 33; Scott v. Donald, 165 U. S. 112, 41 L. ed. 653, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 262; Re Tyler, 149 U. S. 164, 37 L. ed. 689, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 785; Osborn v. Bank of United States, 9 Wheat. 842, 6 L. ed. 229; New Orleans v. Paine, 147 U. S. 264, 37 L. ed. 163, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 303; Louisiana State Lottery Co. v. Fitzpatrick, 3 Woods, 222, Fed. Cas. No. 8,541.

A court of equity will entertain a bill to restrain the institution and prosecution of criminal proceedings, as threatened in this case, for the reason that such prosecution would interfere with, and in effect destroy, the property rights of the complainant in the land in question. Because in fact the prosecution of such proceedings would entirely deprive plaintiff of the use of its property, and constitute such a taking of private property for public uses as a court of equity will always enjoin.

Davis & F. Mfg. Co. v. Los Angeles, 189 U. S. 207, 47 L. ed. 778, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 498; Louisiana State Lottery Co. v. Fitzpatrick, 3 Woods, 222, Fed. Cas. No. 8,541; Dobbins v. Los Angeles, 195 U. S. 241, 49 L. ed. 177, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18; Hutchinson v. Beckham, 55 C. C. A. 333, 118 Fed. 401; Greenwich Ins. Co. v. Carroll, 125 Fed. 126; Frewin v. Lewis, 4 Myl. & C. 249, 9 Sim. 66; Baltimore v. Radecke, 49 Md. 217, 33 Am. Rep. 239; Georgia R. & Bkg. Co. v. Atlanta, 223 U. S.

118 Ga. 490, 45 S. E. 256; Central Trust Co. v. Citizens' Street R. Co. 80 Fed. 225.

The action of the defendant and his agent in seeking forcibly to prevent the complainant from building upon its land constitutes an interference with, and practically a destruction of, the complainant's property rights, and such action, if permitted to be persisted in, would constitute in law a taking of the complainant's property without compensation, in violation of his rights under the Constitution of the United States, and especially under the 5th Amendment thereof.

Georgia R. & Bkg. Co. v. Atlanta, 118 Ga. 491, 45 S. E. 256; 1 Lewis, Em. Dom. ¶ 56; Eaton v. Boston, C. & M. R. Co. 51 N. H. 511, 12 Am. Rep. 147.

The fact that the land of the plaintiff of which the defendant is depriving the plaintiff the possession by threatening it with criminal prosecution if it uses the land—which, in other words, the defendant is attempting to take without compensation—is not located in the District of Columbia does not deprive the supreme court of the District of jurisdiction.

Stone v. United States, 167 U. S. 178, 42 L. ed. 127, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 778; Cole v. Cunningham, 133 U. S. 107, 33 L. ed. 538, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 269; Phelps v. McDonald, 99 U. S. 298, 25 L. ed. 473.

Assistant Attorney General Knaebel argued the cause and filed a brief for appellee:

As riparian owner, with or without the fee of the river bed, the appellant is in no position to complain of the new harbor line. No "taking" of property is involved in the incidental losses which result to such an owner from the exercise by Congress of its paramount power to improve and protect navigation. The navigable waters are the public property of the nation, and subject to all the requisite legislation by Congress.

Gilman v. Philadelphia, 3 Wall. 725, 18 L. ed. 99.

Congress may build lighthouses in the bed of the stream. It may construct jetties. It may require all navigators to pass along a prescribed channel, and may close any other channel to their passage.

South Carolina v. Georgia, 93 U. S. 4, 11, 12, 23 L. ed. 782, 784.

And as commerce embraces navigation, the improvement of harbors and bays along our coast, and of navigable rivers within the states connecting with them, falls within the power.

Mobile County v. Kimball, 102 U. S. 691, 697, 26 L. ed. 238, 239.

Although the title to the shore and submerged soil is in the various states and individual owners under them, it is always subject to the servitude in respect of navigation, created in favor of the Federal government by the Constitution, and riparian ownership is subject to the obligation to suffer the consequences of the improvement of navigation in the exercise of the dominant right of the government in that regard.

Gibson v. United States, 166 U. S. 269, 272, 276, 41 L. ed. 996, 1000, 1002, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 578.

The pier involved in Scranton v. Wheeler, 179 U. S. 141, 45 L. ed. 126, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 48, not only cut off permanently all access to navigability from plaintiff's land, but was also constructed on submerged land—part of the river bed—of which he held the fee, yet it was held to be damnum absque injuria.

See also Scranton v. Wheeler, 6 C. C. A. 585, 16 U. S. App. 152, 57 Fed. 803; Hawkins Point Light-House Case, 39 Fed. 77.

In this case reliance seems to be placed entirely upon some proposed immunity, right, or privilege acquired from the state. But Congress, by its legislation, has assumed exclusive control over the whole subject of obstructions in navigable waters, and no obstruction hereafter made, with or without the permission of the state, can be considered lawful unless it have also the sanction of the National government.

United States v. Rio Grande Dam & Irrig. Co. 174 U. S. 690, 708, 43 L. ed. 1136, 1143, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 770; Union Bridge Co. v. United States, 204 U. S. 364, 400, 401, 51 L. ed. 523, 539, 540, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 367.

If the questions involved primarily be those of both fact and law, which respect, and the resolution of which must decide, the appellant's title under the laws of Pennsylvania, the suit as a suit to quiet title is local in character and must fail for that reason, and perhaps others (Boston & M. Consol. Copper & S. Min. Co. v. Montana Ore Purchasing Co. 188 U. S. 632, 639, 47 L. ed. 626, 631, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 434; Columbia National Sand Dredging Co. v. Morton, 28 App. D. C. 288, 7 L.R.A. (N.S.) 114, 8 Ann. Cas. 511), besides the reason that the suit could not possibly be other than a suit against the United States.

If, on the other hand, it be assumed, as appellant claims, that the bill but seeks to avoid the harbor line as a mere cloud, the invalidity of which cannot be established without parol proofs, but can be so made to appear without injecting any question of title, the suit is equally a proceeding against the government, because, unless the government, and not the defendant, be the claimant of the supposed adverse rights based upon or evidenced by the harbor line, and so the only real party in interest in this litigation, the line is without any legal significance at all.

Properly understood, however, a harbor line, even if erroneously laid out, is not to be regarded as a cloud upon the title to the land over which it extends. Prosser v. Northern P. R. Co. 152 U. S. 59, 38 L. ed. 352, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 528, appears to be determinative of this proposition as well as of the whole case.

See Yesler v. Washington Harbor Line, 146 U. S. 646, 36 L. ed. 1119, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 190; Harbor Line Comrs. v. State, 2 Wash. 530, 27 Pac. 550.

The suit is in effect a suit against the United States.

Minnesota v. Hitchcock, 185 U. S. 386, 46 L. ed. 962, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 650; Board of Liquidation v. McComb, 92 U. S. 531, 23 L. ed. 623; Oregon v. Hitchcock, 202 U. S. 60, 50 L. ed. 935, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 568; Harkrader v. Wadley, 172 U. S. 148, 169, 43 L. ed. 399, 406, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 119; Fitts v. McGhee, 172 U. S. 516, 43 L. ed. 535, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 269.

The case is also clearly not such a suit as ought to be entertained by the court as a court of equity. It is objectionable from this standpoint in the first place as a pure attempt to enjoin valid criminal proceedings.

Re Sawyer, 124 U. S. 200, 209, 210, 31 L. ed. 402, 405, 406, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 482; Harkrader v. Wadley, 172 U. S. 148, 170, 43 L. ed. 399, 406, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 119; Fitts v. McGhee, 172 U. S. 516, 43 L. ed. 535, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 269.

Mr. Justice Hughes delivered the opinion of the court:

This suit was brought in the supreme court of the District of Columbia to set aside certain harbor lines in the harbor of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, so far as they encroached upon land owned by the complainant, and to restrain the Secretary of War from causing criminal proceedings to be instituted against the complainant because of the reclamation and occupation of its land outside the prescribed limits. The court of appeals of the District affirmed a decree sustaining a demurrer to the bill, and the complainant appeals.

The allegations of the bill, in substance, are as follows:

The complainant, a corporation of the commonwealth of Pennsylvania, is the owner in fee of "Brunot's island," formerly Chartier's or Hamilton's island, in the Ohio river, in Allegheny county, Pennsylvania. In 1858, a statute was enacted in Pennsylvania, providing for the appointment of commissioners to ascertain and mark the "lines of ordinary high and low water in the Allegheny, Monongahela, and Ohio rivers in the vicinity of Pittsburgh. The act recited that the lines of land along the shores of the rivers had not been clearly ascertained, and it was important to all persons interested that their several rights and privileges should be defined. After the commissioners' surveys had been completed and the lines located, opportunity was to be afforded in the court by which they were appointed, for any needed corrections; and the map or plan finally determined upon was to be recorded. The statute declared that "the lines so approved shall forever after be deemed, adjudged, and taken firm and stable for the purposes aforesaid." Proceedings were had accordingly and the high- and low-water lines along the shore of Brunot's island were definitely fixed. In consequence the bill asserts that all the land, whether or not under water, inside of the commissioners' lines, became the property of the owners of Brunot's island; and that by virtue of the statute, and the action of the commissioners under it in fixing the high-water line as a permanent boundary, the right of the owners of the island to accretions beyond that line was taken away, while at the same time they were no longer subject to loss or diminution of their land by reason of its submergence "through the avulsion of floods or freshets or through gradual erosion."

Subsequent to the establishment, in 1865, of the state commissioners' line, a considerable portion of the shore of the island, "on the so-called back channel, within the said high-water mark," was washed away from time to time by heavy floods and freshets, so that a large part of the upland was slightly submerged, but not to an extent sufficient to permit of navigation. Some years ago, the United States government, in order to increase the depth of water in the harbor of Pittsburgh, caused a dam to be constructed across the Ohio river a short distance below Brunot's island, known as the Davis island dam. And the effect of this dam, says the bill, [615] by the increase of the depth of water in the channel, was to submerge Brunot's island to a far greater extent, and to make the water over the complainant's land navigable "at certain times, and for certain purposes," where it was not navigable before.

In 1895, the Secretary of War, claiming to act under the authority of § 12 of the act of Congress of September 19, 1890 [26 Stat. at L. 455, chap. 907], and knowing that the shore of Brunot's island had been washed away by floods and freshets, established a harbor line which ran across the complainant's land within the line of the state commissioners. It is further alleged that although the submerged land was generally covered by water, "it was not ordinarily navigable water," and "has never constituted, nor does it now constitute, a part of the public navigable waters of the United States;" that no authority was conferred by the act of Congress upon the Secretary of War to regulate or interfere with the use of the complainant's land by the establishment of harbor lines upon the same; and that, even if the water over this land was in fact part of the public navigable waters of the United States, without being rendered thus navigable by the construction of the dam, still the Secretary of War had no right so to run the harbor line over the land in question as to deprive the complainant of its use and enjoyment. It was the right of the complainant, the bill avers, to repair the damage caused by floods and freshets, and to reclaim the submerged portion by filling in or wharfing, "keeping at all times within the lines of the part that had been torn away by the violence of the waters."

In 1907, the Secretary of War, claiming authority under § 11 of the act of Congress of March 3, 1899 [30 Stat. at L. 1151, chap. 425, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3541], against the complainant's protest, changed the harbor line. The report of the United States engineer at Pittsburg stated that the conditions of high and low water had not changed since 1895, but as, along a part of the shore of the island. 616]*the harbor line of 1895 ran several hundred feet outside high-water mark as it then existed, it seemed advisable to change it so as to coincide with the actual high-water mark. A copy of the report with the order of the Secretary of War, dated February 23, 1907, was annexed to the bill and made a part of it. In this it is stated that the location of the proposed harbor lines was within the bed of the stream as it existed as a physical fact.

The bill further shows that to facilitate the delivery of coal for the operation of its power house on the island, the complainant desired to reclaim a part of it which had been submerged by establishing a coal wharf on the back channel, where both the harbor line of 1895 and that of 1907 "ran some distance landward of the said state commissioners' high-water line." According to the proposed plans, the wharf or pier was to extend over the complainant's land and to cross both of the harbor lines to the state commissioners' line. While these plans were being perfected, the Secretary of War, through his representative, the United States engineer officer at Pittsburg, declared to the complainant that it had no right to build upon its land across either of the harbor lines, and he refused to permit the complainant to reclaim its land or to build its wharf thereon outside the harbor line of 1907. He threatened that if it undertook to do so, he would prevent it and cause the complainant and its employees "to be prosecuted and fined by the authorities of the Federal government" for violations of the acts of Congress of September 19, 1890, and March 3, 1899. It was further charged that if the Secretary of War had authority to fix the original harbor line of 1895, that his power was exhausted by what was then done, and that the harbor line of 1907 was wholly unauthorized.

In consequence of the severe penalties prescribed by the acts of Congress for the construction of building, *piers, or[617 wharves outside any harbor line established by the Secretary of War, and by reason of the defendant's threats of prosecution in case the complainant carried out its plan of reclamation and the construction of its wharf, the bill avers that the complainant is prevented from making use of its property; that the defendant's action constitutes a taking of its property for public use without just compensation; that it is subjected in its endeavor, so long as the harbor line remains unmodified, to a multiplicity of criminal prosecutions; and that the harbor line is a cloud upon its title.

The provisions of the acts of Congress, referred to in the bill, are set forth in the margin.†

*In demurring to the bill the defend-[618 ant asserted that it was bad in substance, †Section 12 of the act of September 19, 1890 (chap. 907, 26 Stat. at L. 426, 455), provided:

"Sec. 12. That section twelve of the river and harbor act of August eleventh, eighteen hundred and eighty-eight [25 Stat. at L. 425, chap. 860, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3526], be amended and re-enacted so as to read as follows:

"Where it is made manifest to the Secretary of War that the establishment of harbor lines is essential to the preservation and protection of harbors, he may, and is hereby authorized to, cause such lines to be established, beyond which no piers, wharves, bulkheads, or other works shall be extended or deposits made, except under such regulations as may be prescribed from time to time by him; and any person who shall wilfully violate the provisions of this section, or any rule or regulation made by the Secretary of War in pursuance of this section, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine not exceed-and also specially assigned the following grounds:

"1. This proceeding is virtually a suit against the United States.

"2. This court has no jurisdiction to restrain the enforcement of a penalty or prosecution for violation of law.

"3. This court has no jurisdiction to restrain the defendant from instituting criminal proceedings against complainant.

"4. This court has no jurisdiction to declare or define harbor lines or boundary lines of land outside the District of Columbia and in the state of Pennsylvania.

619] "5. There is no jurisdiction in this court to base any decree removing cloud upon an alleged title of complainants in realty in the state of Pennsylvania, nor to accomplish the same by declaring the harbor lines referred to in the bill null and void."

First. If the conduct of the defendant constitutes an unwarrantable interference with property of the complainant, its resort to equity for protection is not to be defeated upon the ground that the suit is one against the United States. The exemption of the United States from suit does not protect its officers from personal liability to persons whose rights of property they have wrongfully *invas- [620 ed. Little v. Barreme, 2 Cranch, 170, 2 L. ed. 243; United States v. Lee, 106 U. S. 196, ing one thousand dollars, or imprisonment not exceeding one year, at the discretion of the court, for each offense."

Sections 11, 12, and 17 of the act of March 3, 1899 (chap. 425, 30 Stat. at L. 1121, 1151-1153, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 3541, 3542, 3544), are as follows:

"Sec. 11. That where it is made manifest to the Secretary of War that the establishment of harbor lines is essential to the preservation and protection of harbors, he may, and is hereby authorized to, cause such lines to be established, beyond which no piers, wharves, bulkheads, or other works shall be extended or deposits made, except under such regulations as may be prescribed from time to time by him: Provided, That whenever the Secretary of War grants to any person or persons permission to extend piers, wharves, bulkheads, or other works, or to make deposits in any tidal harbor or river of the United States beyond any harbor lines established under authority of the United States, he shall cause to be ascertained the amount of tide water displaced by any such structure or by any such deposits, and he shall, if he deem it necessary, require the parties to whom the permission is given to make compensation for such displacement, either by excavating in some part of the harbor, including tide-water channels between high- and low-water mark, to such an extent as to create a basin for as much tide water as may be displaced by such structure or by such deposits, or in any other mode that may be satisfactory to him.

"Sec. 12. That every person and every corporation that shall violate any of the provisions of sections nine, ten, and eleven of this act, or any rule or regulation made by the Secretary of War in pursuance of the provisions of the said section fourteen, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine not exceeding twenty-five hundred dollars nor less than five hundred dollars, or by imprisonment (in the case of a natural person) not exceeding one year, or by both such punishments, in the discretion of the court. And further, the removal of any structures or parts of structures erected in violation of the provisions of the said sections may be enforced by the injunction of any circuit court exercising jurisdiction in any district in which such structures may exist, and proper proceedings to this end may be instituted under the direction of the Attorney General of the United States.

"Sec. 17. That the Department of Justice shall conduct the legal proceedings necessary to enforce the foregoing provisions of sections nine to sixteen, inclusive, of this act; and it shall be the duty of the district attorneys of the United States to vigorously prosecute all offenders against the same whenever requested to do so by the Secretary of War or by any of the officials hereinafter designated, and it shall furthermore be the duty of said district attorneys to report to the Attorney General of the United States the action taken by him against offenders so reported, and a transcript of such reports shall be transmitted to the Secretary of War by the Attorney General; and for the better enforcement of the said provisions and to facilitate the detection and bringing to punishment of such offenders, the officers and agents of the United States in charge of river and harbor improvements, and the assistant engineers and inspectors employed under them by authority of the Secretary of War, and the United States collectors of customs and other revenue officers, shall have power and authority to swear out process, and to arrest and take into custody, with or without process, any person or persons who may commit any of the acts or offenses prohibited by the aforesaid sections of this act, or who may violate any of the provisions of the same: Provided, That no person shall be arrested without process for any offense not committed in the presence of some one of the aforesaid officials: And provided further, That whenever any arrest is made under the provisions of this act, the person so arrested shall be brought forthwith before a commissioner, judge, or court of the United States for examination of the offenses alleged against him; and such commissioner, judge, or court shall proceed in respect thereto as authorized by law in case of crimes against the United States."

220, 221, 27 L. ed. 171, 181, 182, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 240; Belknap v. Schild, 161 U. S. 10, 18, 40 L. ed. 599, 601, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 443; Tindal v. Wesley, 167 U. S. 204, 42 L. ed. 137, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 770; Scranton v. Wheeler, 179 U. S. 141, 152, 45 L. ed. 126, 133, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 48. And in case of an injury threatened by his illegal action, the officer cannot claim immunity from injunction process. The principle has frequently been applied with respect to state officers seeking to enforce unconstitutional enactments. Osborn v. Bank of United States, 9 Wheat. 738, 843, 868, 6 L. ed. 204, 229, 235; Davis v. Gray, 16 Wall. 203, 21 L. ed. 447; Pennoyer v. McConnaughy, 140 U. S. 1, 10, 35 L. ed. 363, 365, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 699; Scott v. Donald, 165 U. S. 107, 112, 41 L. ed. 648, 653, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 262; Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 42 L. ed. 819, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Ex parte Young, 209 U. S. 123, 159, 160, 52 L. ed. 714, 728, 729, 13 L.R.A. (N.S.) 932, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 441, 14 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 764; Ludwig v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 216 U. S. 146, 54 L. ed. 423, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 280; Herndon v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 218 U. S. 135, 155, 54 L. ed. 970, 976, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 633; Hopkins v. Clemson Agri. College, 221 U. S. 636, 643-645, 55 L. ed. 890, 894, 895, 35 L.R.A. (N.S.) 243, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 654. And it is equally applicable to a Federal officer acting in excess of his authority or under an authority not validly conferred. Noble v. Union River Logging R. Co. 147 U. S. 165, 171, 172, 37 L. ed. 123, 125, 126, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 271; American School v. McAnnulty, 187 U. S. 94, 47 L. ed. 90, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 33.

The complainant did not ask the court to interfere with the official discretion of the Secretary of War, but challenged his authority to do the things of which complaint was made. The suit rests upon the charge of abuse of power, and its merits must be determined accordingly; it is not a suit against the United States.

Second. The second and third grounds of demurrer, specially stated, raise the question as to the jurisdiction of the court to restrain the defendant from instituting criminal proceedings.

A court of equity, said this court in Re Sawyer, 124 U. S. 200, 210, 31 L. ed. 402, 405, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 482, "has no jurisdiction over the prosecution, the punishment, or the pardon of crimes or misdemeanors.

. . . To assume such a jurisdiction, or to sustain a bill in equity to restrain or relieve against proceedings for the punishment of offenses, . . . is to invade

621]*the domain of the courts of common law, or of the executive and administrative department of the government." Harkrader v. Wadley, 172 U. S. 148, 170, 43 L. ed. 399, 406, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 119; Fitts v. McGhee, 172 U. S. 516, 531, 43 L. ed. 535, 542, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 269; 2 Story, Eq. Jur. § 893. But a distinction obtains when it is found to be essential to the protection of the property rights, as to which the jurisdiction of a court of equity has been invoked, that it should restrain the defendant from instituting criminal actions involving the same legal questions. This is illustrated in the decisions of this court in which officers have been enjoined from bringing criminal proceedings to compel obedience to unconstitutional requirements. Davis & F. Mfg. Co. v. Los Angeles, 189 U. S. 207, 217, 218, 47 L. ed. 778, 780, 781, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 498; Dobbins v. Los Angeles, 195 U. S. 223, 241, 49 L. ed. 169, 177, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18; Ex parte Young, 209 U. S. 123, 161, 162, 52 L. ed. 714, 729, 730, 13 L.R.A. (N.S.) 932, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 441, 14 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 764; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Andrews, 216 U. S. 165, 54 L. ed. 430, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 286. In this, there is no attempt to restrain a court from trying persons charged with crime, or the grand jury from the exercise of its functions, but the injunction binds the defendant not to resort to criminal procedure to enforce illegal demands.

56 L. ed.

It is urged that the statute authorizing the Secretary of War to prevent encroachments upon navigable streams is a valid one, and that the decisions cited do not apply. The validity of the statute is not attacked, because of the assumption that it is not to be construed to contemplate or authorize the alleged deprivation of property. Where the officer is proceeding under an unconstitutional act, its invalidity suffices to show that he is without authority, and it is this absence of lawful power and his abuse of authority in imposing or enforcing, in the name of the state, unwarrantable exactions or restrictions, to the irreparable loss of the complainant, which is the basis of the decree. Ex parte Young, 209 U. S. p. 159, 52 L. ed. 728, 13 L.R.A. (N.S.) 932, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 441, 14 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 764. And a similar injury may be inflicted, and there may exist ground for equitable relief, when an officer, insisting that he has the warrant of the statute, is transcending its bounds, and thus unlawfully *assuming to exercise[622 the power of government against the individual owner, is guilty of an invasion of private property.

By § 12 of the act of March 3, 1899, it was provided that every person and every corporation which should violate any provision of § 11, relating to the observance of harbor lines, or any rule or regulation made by the Secretary of War in pursuance of that section, should be guilty of a misdemeanor and punished by fine or imprisonment. By § 17 it was made the duty of district attorneys of the United States to prosecute all offenders whenever requested by the Secretary of War. If the complainant's rights, as against the defendant, were as claimed, it was entitled to adequate protection. And, in such case, the remedy might properly embrace the restraining of unfounded prosecutions.

Third. The fourth and fifth special grounds of demurrer assert that the supreme court of the District of Columbia had no jurisdiction to define boundaries in the state of Pennsylvania, or to remove a cloud upon title to land in that state.

In dealing with these objections, it is important to observe the precise nature of the suit. It was not to determine a controversy as between conflicting claimants under the local law. It was not to restrain trespass. Northern Indiana R. Co. v. Michigan C. R. Co. 15 How. 233, 14 L. ed. 674; Ellenwood v. Marietta Chair Co. 158 U. S. 105, 39 L. ed. 913, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 771. It was not brought to try the naked question of the title to the land. Massie v. Watts, 6 Cranch, 148, 158, 3 L. ed. 181, 185. While the complainant's title lay at the foundation of the suit, and it would be necessary for the complainant to prove it, if denied, still, if its title to the land under water were established or admitted to be as alleged, the question would remain whether the defendant, in imposing restrictions upon the use of the property, was acting by virtue of authority validly conferred by a general act of 623]*Congress. This was the principal question which the complainant sought to have determined. The defendant is within the District, amenable to the process of the court. There is no ground upon which it may be denied jurisdiction to decide whether he should be restrained from continuing his opposition to the complainant's plan of improvement. Rather should it be said that the case falls within the general rule sustaining the jurisdiction of a court of equity which has control of the person of the defendant and may compel obedience to its decree. Phelps v. McDonald, 99 U. S. 298, 308, 25 L. ed. 473, 476.

Fourth. Assuming that the court had jurisdiction, we are brought to a consideration of the equity of the bill.

It has been held that the establishment of a general system of harbor lines, for the protection of commerce and navigation, is not of itself an injury to property and cannot be restrained. Yesler v. Washington Harbor Line, 146 U. S. 646, 656, 36 L. ed. 1119, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 190; Prosser v. Northern P. R. Co. 152 U. S. 59, 64, 65, 38 L. ed. 352, 355, 356, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 528. But it has also been recognized that a different question arises when active measures are taken against an individual proprietor to maintain a location of limits in alleged violation of his private rights, and thus to prevent him from enjoying what is asserted to be the lawful use of his property. Prosser v. Northern P. R. Co. supra.

The complainant starts with the lines as laid down, in 1865, by the state commissioners. These lines are averred to be "exactly in accordance with the then-existing actual ordinary high- and low-water marks." The argument is (1) that, independently of the effect of the statute of Pennsylvania, the washing away of the banks, and the submergence of a portion of the island, during the subsequent years, worked no loss of title, but that it remained absolute, including the right of reclamation and improvement of the submerged land inside the former line of high water; and (2) that, by virtue of the statute, the *boundary was permanently fixed by [624 the state commissioners' high-water line, and no subsequent encroachment of the water could affect the rights of the owner.

(1) It is the established rule that a riparian proprietor of land bounded by a stream, the banks of which are changed by the gradual and imperceptible process of accretion or erosion, continues to hold to the stream as his boundary; if his land is increased, he is not accountable for the gain, and if it is diminished he has no recourse for the loss. But where a stream suddenly and perceptibly abandons its old channel, the title is not affected, and the boundary remains at the former line. Rex v. Yarborough, 3 Barn. & C. 91; S. C. 2 Bligh, N. R. 147, 4 Dowl. & R. 790, 27 Revised Rep. 292, 1 Dow. & C. 178, 1 Eng. Rul. Cas. 458, sub nom. Gifford v. Yarborough, 5 Bing. 163; New Orleans v. United States, 10 Pet. 662, 717, 9 L. ed. 573, 594; Banks v. Ogden, 2 Wall. 57, 17 L. ed. 818; St. Clair County v. Lovington, 23 Wall. 46, 67, 68, 23 L. ed. 59, 63, 64; Jefferys v. East Omaha Land Co. 134 U. S. 178, 190-193, 33 L. ed. 872, 876-878, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 518; St. Louis v. Rutz, 138 U. S. 226, 245, 34 L. ed. 941, 949, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 337; Nebraska v. Iowa, 143 U. S. 359, 36 L. ed. 186, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 396; Shively v. Bowlby, 152 U. S. 1, 35, 38 L. ed. 331, 344, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 548; Hale, De Jure Maris, chaps. 1, 4, 6; Hargrave's Law Tracts; Mulry v. Norton, 100 N. Y. 424, 53 Am. Rep. 206, 3 N. E. 581. The doctrine that the owner takes the risk of the increase or diminution of his land by the action of the water applies as well to rivers that are strong and swift, to those that overflow their banks, and whether or not dykes and other defenses are necessary to keep the water within its proper limits. It is when the change in the stream is sudden, or violent, and visible, that the title remains the same. It is not enough that the change may be discerned by comparison at two distinct points of time. It must be perceptible when it takes place. "The test as to what is gradual and imperceptible in the sense of the rule is, that though the witnesses may see from time to time that progress has been made, they could not perceive it while the process was going on." St. Clair County v. Lovington, 23 Wall. 46, 67, 68, 23 L. ed. 59, 63, 64.

We are confined to the allegations of the 625]bill. We have *not the advantage of proof and findings, or even of a particularized description in the bill itself, as to the precise character of the alterations in the banks of Brunot's island which took place during the long period to which the bill refers. It is alleged "that subsequent to the establishment in 1865 by said commissioners of the line of high-water mark, as aforesaid, a considerable amount of the soil of the shore of said Brunot's island on the so-called back channel, within the said high-water mark, was washed away from time to time by heavy floods and freshets, so that a large part of the upland of the island, that is, the land above high-water mark, became and was overflowed and slightly submerged by water, but said land was not submerged to an extent sufficient to permit of navigation of any kind thereover." There is no other statement on the point save that the bill asserts that the complainant was entitled to reclaim, "keeping at all times within the lines of the part that had been torn away by the violence of the waters."

It is manifest that these allegations are inadequate to support the complainant's contention. The determining words are that the land was "washed away from time to time by heavy floods and freshets," and the reference is to what occurred in many years. This is far from a statement that at any particular time there was such a sudden, violent, and visible change as to justify a departure from the ordinary rule which governs accretion and diminution, albeit the stream suffer wide fluctuations in volume, the current be swift, and the banks afford slight resistance to encroachment.

56 L. ed.

For example, the general principle of accretion, which has that of diminution as its correlative, applies to such rivers as the Mississippi and the Missouri, notwithstanding the extent and rapidity of the changes constantly effected. Jefferis v. East Omaha Land Co. 134 U. S. 178, 190-193, 33 L. ed. 872, 876-878, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 518; Jones v. Souldard, 24 How. 41, 16 L. ed. 604; Saulet v. Shepherd, 4 Wall. 602, 18 L. ed. 442; *St. Clair County [626 v. Lovington, supra; St. Louis v. Rutz, 138 U. S. 226, 245, 34 L. ed. 941, 949, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 337. In Nebraska v. Iowa, 143 U. S. 359, 36 L. ed. 186, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 396, the question concerned the boundary between the two states, which, by the acts of admission, was the middle of the main channel of the Missouri river. Between 1851 and 1877, in the vicinity of Omaha, there were marked changes in the course of this channel, so that in the latter year it occupied a very different bed from that through which it flowed in the former year. The opinion of the court describes in detail the physical conditions along the river. The court said (pp. 368-370): "The current is rapid, far above the average of ordinary rivers; and by reason of the snows in the mountains there are two well-known rises in the volume of its waters, known as the April and June rises. The large volume of water pouring down at the time of these rises, with the rapidity of its current, has great and rapid action upon the loose soil of its banks. . . . The only thing which distinguishes this river from other streams, in the matter of accretion, is in the rapidity of the change caused by the velocity of the current; and this, in itself, in the very nature of things, works no change in the principle underlying the rule of law in respect thereto. Our conclusions are that, notwithstanding the rapidity of the changes in the course of the channel, and the washing from the one side and onto the other, the law of accretion controls on the Missouri river, as elsewhere; and that not only in respect to the rights of individual landowners, but also in respect to the boundary lines between states. The boundary, therefore, between Iowa and Nebraska, is a varying line, so far as affected by these changes of diminution and accretion in the mere washing of the waters of the stream." And, in the same case, the decision clearly points the distinction between the losses and gains thus described, and an abrupt, visible change where at one place, at a particular time, the river having "pursued a course in the nature of an ox-bow, suddenly *cut through the neck of the bow, and [627 made for itself a new channel." (P. 370.)

The present case falls within the category first mentioned, and according to general principles of law the owner would bear the losses caused by the washings of the river.

The bill also alleges that "some years ago the United States government, in the interest of navigation, and in order to increase the depth of water in the harbor of Pittsburg, caused a dam to be constructed across the Ohio river a short distance below said Brunot's island, known as the Davis island dam. The effect of this dam was to very decidedly increase the depth of the water in the channel back of Brunot's island, and to cause the water of the river to flow higher upon the land of your orator, and to submerge same to a far greater extent, and in fact to make said water which submerged your orator's land navigable at certain times, and for certain purposes, which was not navigable before the construction of said dam."

It will be observed that it is said that the United States caused the erection of the dam in the interest of navigation. The complainant purchased the island subsequently, in the year 1896. And we are not concerned here with the question whether there was any appropriation of land of the former owner by the United States, and a cause of action arose to recover its value. Gibson v. United States, 166 U. S. 269, 41 L. ed. 996, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 578; United States v. Lynah, 188 U. S. 445, 47 L. ed. 539, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 349; Bedford v. United States, 192 U. S. 217, 48 L. ed. 414, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 238; Manigault v. Springs, 199 U. S. 473, 50 L. ed. 274, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 127; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Illinois, 200 U. S. 561, 583, 584, 50 L. ed. 596, 605, 606, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341, 4 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1175. So far as the bill shows, the dam was lawfully built, and the allegations with respect to it wholly fail to state any case entitling the complainant to relief by reason of its construction.

(2) The complainant, however, insists that the effect of the Pennsylvania statute was to fix the boundary of the island permanently at the state commissioners' high-628water line, and hence that within that line it was entitled to make the desired reclamation and improvement.

This statute (act of 16th April, 1858) provided that the commissioners' lines approved by the court should "forever after be deemed, adjudged, and taken firm and stable for the purposes aforesaid." The supreme court of Pennsylvania has held that the purpose of the act was to regulate the rights of the public in respect to navigation, and to prevent private rights from being exercised to the prejudice of the public interest. Wainwright v. McCullough, 63 Pa. 66; Zug v. Com. 70 Pa. 138, 142; Poor v. McClure, 77 Pa. 214, 219; Allegheny City v. Moorehead, 80 Pa. 118, 139, 140. In Wainwright v. McCullough (1869) supra, that court, holding that the statute was not applicable to disputed boundaries between private owners, considered the navigable character of the rivers to which it related, the extent of riparian rights under the law of the state, and the meaning of the act in the light of the mischief which it was intended to correct. The court said:

"In order to arrive at the legal effect of the lines established by the commissioners under that act, we must ascertain its true purpose; and to reach this, it becomes necessary to examine the navigable character of the rivers Allegheny, Monongahela, and Ohio, and the rights of the riparian proprietors upon their banks. These rivers are among the largest in the state; larger than the Schuylkill and Lehigh, recognized as navigable in the early history of the province, and have been repeatedly held by name to be rivers naturally navigable, and therefore classed with the Delaware and Susquehanna. Carson v. Blazer, 2 Binn. 478, 4 Am. Dec. 463; Shrunk v. Schuylkill Nav. Co. 14 Serg. & R. 79, 80; Hunter v. Howard, 10 Serg. & R. 244. Many acts have been passed declaring tributaries of these rivers navigable. But an act perhaps most pertinent to this controversy is that of 8th April, 1785, 2 Smith, Laws, 317, *regulating the tak-[629 ing up of lands within the new purchase, of which the 13th section expressly excepts islands in the Ohio, Allegheny, and Delaware.

"This being the navigable character of the stream, the rights of the riparian owners are settled by numerous decisions, a few of which may be referred to: Carson v. Blazer, 2 Binn. 478; Shrunk v. Schuylkill Nav. Co. 14 Serg. & R. 79, 80; Ball v. Slack, 2 Whart. 508, 30 Am. Dec. 278; Zimmerman v. Union Canal Co. 1 Watts & S. 346; Bailey v. Miltenberger, 31 Pa. 37; McKeen v. Delaware Div. Canal Co. 49 Pa. 424; Tinicum Fishing Co. v. Carter, 61 Pa. 21, 100 Am. Dec. 597, opinion by Sharswood, J., decided last winter at Philadelphia. From these and other cases, it will appear that the absolute title of the riparian proprietor extends to high-water mark only, and that between ordinary high and ordinary low water mark, his title to the soil is qualified, it being subject to the public rights of navigation over it, and of improvement of the stream as a highway. He cannot occupy to the prejudice of navigation, or cause obstructions to be placed upon the shore between these lines, without express authority of the state.

"The case of Bailey v. Miltenberger, 31 Pa. 37, decided in 1856, doubtless had something to do in turning public attention to the shores of the streams surrounding the city of Pittsburgh, which led to the passage of the act of 1858, for the purpose of defining the low- and high-water lines. It referred to the mistaken idea entertained by some proprietors of making ground for their mills by depositing cinders on the shore between low- and high-water marks. 'The Allegheny and many other navigable rivers' (says the opinion) 'do not, at the time of low water, occupy over one third of their bed; and it would be most disastrous to allow every owner to fill out his land to low-water mark.' This state of affairs, for these rivers had been seriously encroached upon at and opposite Pittsburgh, 630] no doubt led to the act of 16th April, 1858, Pamph. L. 326. It begins by a recital: 'Whereas, the lines of lands on and along the shores at the rivers at and near the city of Pittsburgh, in the county of Allegheny, have never yet been clearly ascertained, and as it is important to the owners of such lands, the persons navigating the waters of, and the corporations adjacent to, such rivers, and to all parties interested, to know and to have their several rights and privileges in extension and limitation ascertained and defined; therefore,' etc. The first impression arising from this language might seem to be that the law was intended to ascertain and fix these high-and low-water lines to end all controversies, private as well as public. But a careful consideration of its purpose and provisions shows that it is not applicable to disputed boundaries between private owners, but was intended to regulate the respective rights of the public and the land-owners, over whose property the right of navigation extends between high-and low-water lines.

"The effect of the lines as established is thus stated: 'The lines so approved shall forever after be deemed, adjudged, and taken, firm and stable for purposes aforesaid.' If we seek for the 'aforesaid' purposes, the act discloses none but those relating to the public interest and that of the riparian owner. Then if we advert to the power of the state over navigable streams, as stated in the authorities cited, we discover that it is plenary over the subject of navigation and the improvement of these natural channels of commerce, while the ownership of the riparian proprietor is qualified between the lines of low and high water. The legislature may, therefore, with great propriety, define the bounds of high and low water, by means of a suitable commission, for the purpose of regulating the public right, so as not to conflict with private interests, and to prevent private rights from being exercised *to[631 the prejudice of public interests; for example, to prevent the shores from being filled up with great banks of cinders."
56 L. ed.

In Allegheny City v. Moorehead (1875) 80 Pa. 118, 139, 140, the question was presented whether, by the fixing of water lines under the act of 1858, title had been vested in the city of Allegheny or lot owners, so as to defeat the claim of the plaintiff Moorehead under a subsequent patent from the state. The court said: "Nor can the operation of the act of 1858 be extended by the act of the commissioners in running out the low-water line of the northern shore of the river to include a part of what was Killbuck island. It was not the purpose of the commissioners to transfer titles, but to mark the boundaries of riparian rights, so as to make them certain and permanent in their extent. So it was not the intention of the framers of the act of 1858 to pass titles to lands, or to ascertain boundaries between individuals; but it was their purpose to regulate the right of navigation along the shores of these rivers by establishing high-and low-water lines, which would definitely ascertain and fix the extent to which the right could be exercised; and the extent to which the owners of the land could exercise their own rights under the law of the state."

It is contended for the complainant that the effect of the statute was to secure to riparian owners complete protection against any loss of their land, or of the right to build upon it, by reason of the gradual washing away of the banks of the river; that the state chose to resign to the riparian proprietors its right to such additions from the moving landward of the low-water mark, and required the owner at the same time to surrender, in the interest of navigation, his right to alluvion. In support, the complainant cites the opinion of the court of common pleas No. 2 of Allegheny county in Briggs v. Pheil (1894) 42 Pittsb. L. J. p. 18, in which it is said with respect to the same statute: "At the passage of this act *the riparian own-[632 er owned absolutely to high-water mark, and had a qualified property to low-water mark, and outside of the low-water mark the title to the soil was in the state. It seems to us there can be no doubt that the state had power to enact that thereafter the legal limits of the property should remain unchanged, either by gradual accretions or by gradual cutting away. This, in our opinion, was intended to be done and was done by the act of assembly and the proceedings thereunder. . . . It seems to us that the establishing of these lines, at least, as between the state and riparian owners, fixed the lines for the future. If the river washes in beyond the high-water line the owner may fill up and reclaim the lost land, and, on the other hand, accretions belong to the state or the municipalities."

The established doctrine is invoked that the title to the soil under navigable waters within their territorial limits, and the extent of riparian rights, are governed by the laws of the several states, subject to the authority of Congress under the Constitution of the United States. Martin v. Waddell, 16 Pet. 367, 10 L. ed. 997; Pollard v. Hagan, 3 How. 212, 11 L. ed. 565; Weber v. State Harbor Comrs. 18 Wall. 57, 21 L. ed. 798; Barney v. Keokuk, 94 U. S. 324, 338, 24 L. ed. 224, 228; Packer v. Bird, 137 U. S. 661, 669, 34 L. ed. 819, 820, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 210; St. Louis v. Rutz, 138 U. S. 226, 242, 34 L. ed. 941, 947, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 337; Hardin v. Jordan, 140 U. S. 371, 382, 402, 35 L. ed. 428, 433, 440, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 808, 838; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Illinois, 146 U. S. 387, 435, 452, 36 L. ed. 1018, 1036, 1042, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110; Shively v. Bowlby, 152 U. S. 1, 40, 47, 38 L. ed. 331, 346-348, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 548; St. Anthony Falls Water Power Co. v. St. Paul Water Comrs. 168 U. S. 349, 365, 42 L. ed. 497, 503, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 157. Let it be assumed that the Pennsylvania statute, in its regulation of rights, established the commissioners' high-water line as the permanent boundary of the island, and conferred upon the riparian owner, so far as it was within the competency of the state to confer it, the right to fill in and to erect structures to the limit of this line, regardless of subsequent changes in the actual high-water line caused by the washing away of the banks of the river. What, then, was the power of Congress with 633respect to the river, and what was the extent of the authority conferred upon the Secretary of War?

When the Secretary of War, in 1895, fixed harbor lines, he dealt with the stream as it then existed. Whatever right the owner of the island may have had under the state law to reclaim the submerged land within the former line of high water had not been exercised. The bill, in alleging that the new harbor line ran across the complainant's land, must be taken to refer to the submerged land already described. This is the import of its allegations, and is shown by the record of the War Department annexed to the bill. In establishing this line, the Secretary of War followed quite closely the actual line of high water as it existed in 1895, except in the back channel of Brunot's island, where it ran several hundred feet outside the then high-water mark. The change of the harbor line at this point, in 1907, was for the purpose of making the line coincide with the actual high-water mark; and in the report of the United States engineer who advised the change it was said that the lines as previously established had "not been filled out to, and the river bed on the Brunot island side, and in the bend referred to," was in "essentially the same condition" as at the time the harbor lines of 1895 were fixed. He added:

"Pittsburg suffers annually from floods, and in my opinion any material contraction of the channel immediately below the city would result in general injury and would produce conditions detrimental to navigation and to harborage; and it is respectfully recommended that the changes in the established harbor lines shown and described on the map inclosed herewith be made, such changes being necessary in preserving and protecting the harbor of Pittsburg.

"The location of the proposed harbor lines recommended in this communication is within the bed of the stream as it exists as a physical fact."

*To this stream, as a highway of 634 commerce, the power of Congress extended,—a power which "acknowledges no limitations other than are prescribed in the Constitution." Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 196, 6 L. ed. 23, 70. The exercise of this power could not be fettered by any grant made by the state of the soil which formed the bed of the river, or by any authority conferred by the state for the creation of obstructions to its navigation. "Commerce includes navigation. The power to regulate commerce comprehends the control for that purpose, and to the extent necessary, of all the navigable waters of the United States which are accessible from a state other than those in which they lie. For this purpose they are the public property of the nation, and subject to all the requisite legislation by Congress. This necessarily includes the power to keep them open and free from any obstructions to their navigation, interposed by the states or otherwise; to remove such obstructions when they exist; and to provide, by such sanctions as they may deem proper, against the occurrence of the evil and for the punishment of offenders. For these purposes, Congress possesses all the powers which existed in the states before the adoption of the national Constitution, and which have always existed in the Parliament in England." Gilman v. Philadelphia, 3 Wall. 713, 725, 18 L. ed. 96, 99.

Nor is the authority of Congress limited to so much of the water of the river as flows over the bed of forty years ago. The alterations produced in the course of years by the action of the water do not restrict the exercise of Federal control in the regulation of commerce. Its bed may vary and its banks may change, but the Federal power remains paramount over the stream, and this control may not be defeated by the action of the state in restricting the public right of navigation within the river's ancient lines. The public right of navigation follows the stream (Rolle's Abr. 390; Carlisle v. Graham, L. R. 4 Exch. 361, 367, 368, L. J. Exch. N. S. 226, 21 L. T. N. S. 133, 18 Week. Rep. 318), 635]*and the authority of Congress goes with it. When the state of Pennsylvania established harbor lines and thus undertook to regulate the rights of navigation, its action, however effective as between the state and the riparian proprietors, was necessarily subject to the paramount power of Congress. The state lines can be conceded no permanent force, as against the will of Congress, without substituting for its constitutional authority the supremacy of the state with respect to navigable waters.

It is for Congress to decide what shall or shall not be deemed in judgment of law an obstruction of navigation. Pennsylvania v. Wheeling & B. Bridge Co. 18 How. 421, 15 L. ed. 435. And in its regulation of commerce it may establish harbor lines or limits beyond which deposits shall not be made or structures built in the navigable waters. The principles applicable to this case have been repeatedly stated in recent decisions of this court. Gibson v. United States, 166 U. S. 269, 41 L. ed. 996, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 578; Scranton v. Wheeler, 179 U. S. 141, 45 L. ed. 126, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 48; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Illinois, 200 U. S. 561, 50 L. ed. 596, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341, 4 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1175; West Chicago Street R. Co. v. Illinois, 201 U. S. 506, 50 L. ed. 845, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 518; Union Bridge Co. v. United States, 204 U. S. 364, 51 L. ed. 523, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 367; Monongahela Bridge Co. v. United States, 216 U. S. 177, 54 L. ed. 435, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 356; Hannibal Bridge Co. v. United States, 221 U. S. 194, 55 L. ed. 699, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 603.

In Gibson v. United States, supra, the construction of a dyke in the Ohio river under the authority of the Secretary of War had substantially destroyed the landing on and in front of a farm owned by Mrs. Gibson "by preventing the free egress and ingress to and from said landing" to "the main or navigable channel" of the river. The court said (pp. 271, 272, 275): "All navigable waters are under the control of the United States for the purpose of regulating and improving navigation, and although the title to the shore and submerged soil is in the various states and individual owners under them, it is always subject to the servitude in respect of navigation created in favor of the Federal government by the Constitution. South Carolina v. Georgia*, 93 U. S. 4, 23 L. ed. 782; Shively v. Bowlby, 152 U. S. 1, 38 L. ed. 331, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 548; Eldridge v. Trezevant, 160 U. S. 452, 40 L. ed. 490, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 345. . . . The 5th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States provides that private property shall not 'be taken for public use without just compensation.' Here, however, the damage of which Mrs. Gibson complained was not the result of the taking of any part of her property, whether upland or submerged, or a direct invasion thereof, but the incidental consequence of the lawful and proper exercise of a governmental power."

Again, in Scranton v. Wheeler, 179 U. S. 141, 45 L. ed. 126, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 48, the question arose with respect to the riparian owner whose access from his land to navigability was permanently lost by reason of the construction by the United States of a pier resting on submerged lands in front of his upland. The court said in its opinion (p. 163): "The primary use of the waters and the lands under them is for purposes of navigation, and the erection of piers in them to improve navigation for the public is entirely consistent with such use, and infringes no right of the riparian owner. Whatever the nature of the interest of a riparian owner in the submerged lands in front of his upland bordering on a public navigable water, his title is not as full and complete as his title to fast land which has no direct connection with the navigation of such water. It is a qualified title, a bare technical title, not at his absolute disposal, as is his upland, but to be held at all times subordinate to such use of the submerged lands and of the waters flowing over them as may be consistent with or demanded by the public right of navigation."

In Union Bridge Co. v. United States, 204 U. S. 364, 51 L. ed. 523, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 367, the Secretary of War found a bridge to be an unreasonable obstruction to the free navigation of the Allegheny river, and required the bridge company to make certain changes which it was insisted it could not be compelled to make without compensation. The court, after reviewing the *authorities, said (pp. 400, 401): "Al-[637

though the bridge, when erected under the authority of a Pennsylvania charter, may have been a lawful structure, and although it may not have been an unreasonable obstruction to commerce and navigation as then carried on, it must be taken, under the cases cited, and upon the principle, not only that the company, when exerting the power conferred upon it by the state, did so with knowledge of the paramount authority of Congress to regulate commerce among the states, but that it erected the bridge subject to the possibility that Congress might, at some future time, when the public interest demanded, exert its power by appropriate legislation to protect navigation against unreasonable obstructions. Even if the bridge, in its original form, was an unreasonable obstruction to navigation, the mere failure of the United States, at the time, to intervene by its officers or by legislation and prevent its erection, could not create an obligation on the part of the government to make compensation to the company, if, at a subsequent time, and for public reasons, Congress should forbid the maintenance of bridges that had become unreasonable obstructions to navigation. It is for Congress to determine when it will exert its power to regulate interstate commerce. Its mere silence or inaction when individuals or corporations, under the authority of a state, place unreasonable obstructions in the water ways of the United States, cannot have the effect to cast upon the government an obligation not to exert its constitutional power to regulate interstate commerce except subject to the condition that compensation be made or secured to the individuals or corporation who may be incidentally affected by the exercise of such power. The principle for which the bridge company contends would seriously impair the exercise of the beneficent power of the government to secure the free and unobstructed navigation of the water ways of the United States. We cannot give our assent to that principle. In conformity with the adjudged cases, and in order that the constitutional power of Congress may have full operation, we must adjudge that Congress has power to protect navigation on all water ways of the United States against unreasonable obstructions, even those created under the sanction of a state; and that an order to so alter a bridge over a water way of the United States that it will cease to be an unreasonable obstruction to navigation will not amount to a taking of a private property for public use for which compensation need be made."

It must be concluded, therefore, that it was competent for Congress to provide for the establishment of the harbor lines in question for the protection of the harbor of Pittsburg. It acted within its constitutional power in authorizing the Secretary of War to fix the lines. Union Bridge Co. v. United States, supra (pp. 385-388); Monongahela Bridge Co. v. United States, 216 U. S. (p. 192) 54 L. ed. 441, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 356. That officer did not exhaust his authority in laying the lines first established in 1895, but was entitled to change them, as he did change them in 1907, in order more fully to preserve the river from obstruction. And, in none of the acts complained of, did he exceed the power which had been conferred.

The bill failed to show any ground upon which the complainant was entitled to relief, and it was properly dismissed.

Decree affirmed.

*RE MERCHANTS' STOCK & GRAIN COMPANY et al., Petitioners.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 639-642.)

Appealable judgments — contempt.

A judgment finding defendants in a pending suit in equity guilty of contempt of its authority in violating an interlocutory injunction previously granted in a suit for the benefit of the complainant, and ordering the payment of specified fines, three fourths of which when paid should go to the complainant "as compensation in part for the expenses incurred in prosecuting these contempt proceedings," is punitive instead of remedial, and reviewable on writ of error without awaiting a final decree in the suit in equity.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, I. d. 21, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 10, Original.]

Submitted December 11, 1911. Decided March 4, 1912.

PETITION for a writ of mandamus to require the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit to reinstate and take jurisdiction of a writ of error dismissed by it. Granted.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

NOTE.—As to whether proceeding for contempt for violation of injunction is civil or criminal—see notes to Vilter Mfg. Co. v. Humphrey, 13 L.R.A.(N.S.) 591, and Gompers v. Buck's Stove & Range Co. 34 L.R.A.(N.S.) 874.

As to what judgments or decrees are final for purposes of review—see notes to Brush Electric Co. v. Electric Improv. Co. 2 C. C. A. 379; Central Trust Co. v. Madden, 17 C. C. A. 238; Prescott & A. C. R. Co. v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 28 C. C. A. 482; Gibbons v. Ogden, 5 L. ed. U. S. 302; and Schlosser v. Hemphill, 49 L. ed. U. S. 1001.

Messrs. Chester H. Krum and Henry S. Priest submitted the cause for petitioners:

The motion should prevail unless the court is prepared to reverse Re Christensen Engineering Co. 194 U. S. 458, 48 L. ed. 1072, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 729.

Accurately defined, a fine is the pecuniary punishment of an offense, inflicted by the sentence of a court in the exercise of criminal jurisdiction.

Hanscomb v. Russell, 11 Gray, 374.

Mr. Henry S. Robbins submitted the cause for respondents:

The decision of this court in Gompers v. Buck's Stove & Range Co. 221 U. S. 418, 55 L. ed. 797, 34 L.R.A. (N.S.) 874, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 492, seems a sufficient authority for the denial of this motion.

The most practical solution of the question under consideration would seem to be to make the main or dominating purpose of the contempt proceeding the test of its character. This will make a contempt proceeding arising out of the violation of an injunction, and instituted by the party in whose favor it is issued, civil rather than criminal, as in such proceeding the main or dominating purpose is to obtain for the plaintiff the benefit of the injunction; except, perhaps, when a second disobedience of the same injunction may make the vindication of the court's authority the main object.

O'Shea v. O'Shea, L. R. 15 Prob. Div. 59, 59 L. J. Prob. N. S. 47, 38 Week. Rep. 374, 62 L. T. N. S. 713, 17 Cox, C. C. 107; Oswald, Contempt of Court, 3d ed. 36, 230; Bessette v. W. B. Conkey Co. 194 U. S. 324, 329, 48 L. ed. 997, 1002, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 665; Seaward v. Patterson, L. R. 1 Ch. Div. 545, 66 L. J. Ch. N. S. 267, 76 L. T. N. S. 215, 45 Week. Rep. 610; Re Evans [1893] 1 Ch. 267.

Mr. Justice Van Devanter delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a petition for a writ of mandamus commanding the circuit court of appeals for the eighth circuit to reinstate and take jurisdiction of a writ of error dismissed by it. The facts are these: During the pendency, in a circuit court of the United States, of a suit in equity to which the petitioners were parties defendant, they were charged by the complainant with having wilfully violated an interlocutory injunction theretofore granted in the suit at the instance and for the benefit of the complainant, and at the hearing upon that complaint were by the court adjudged guilty of contempt of its authority, and ordered unconditionally to pay into its registry, within five days, fines of $1,000, $2,000, and $500, respectively, each fine, when paid, to go three fourths to the complainant, "as compensation in part for the expenses incurred in prosecuting these contempt proceedings," and one fourth to the United States. With the purpose of securing a review of the order, the petitioners sued out a writ of error from the circuit court of appeals, and when the writ came on for hearing, that court dismissed it, upon the ground that the order, rightly considered, was remedial, not punitive, and was merely interlocutory, and reviewable only upon an appeal from the final decree. 109 C. C. A. 230, 187 Fed. 398.

We are not now concerned with whether the proceedings resulting in the order were such as to admit of the imposition of punitive, as distinguished from compensatory, fines, or whether, if the proceedings were not of that character, the order was erroneous in its entirety, or only "as to so much" [641 of the fines as was to go to the United States; and therefore we pass what is said in that connection in the briefs and come at once to the only question presented for decision; which is, whether the order was open to review upon a writ of error. The answer turns upon the character of the order. If it was remedial, it was merely interlocutory, and reviewable only upon an appeal from the final decree; but, if it was punitive, it was a final judgment, criminal in its nature, and reviewable upon a writ of error, without awaiting the final decree. Such an order against an offending suitor is deemed remedial when its purpose is to indemnify the injured suitor, or coercively to secure obedience to a mandate in his behalf, and is deemed punitive when its purpose is to vindicate the authority of the court by punishing the act of disobedience as a public wrong. As was said in Gompers v. Buck's Stove & Range Co. 221 U. S. 418, 441, 55 L. ed. 797, 805, 34 L.R.A. (N.S.) 874, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 492: "It is not the fact of punishment, but rather its character and purpose, that often serve to distinguish between the two classes of cases." And again, p. 448: "The classification, then, depends upon the question as to whether the punishment is punitive, in vindication of the court's authority, or whether it is remedial, by way of a coercive imprisonment, or a compensatory fine, payable to the complainant."

Applications of this test are shown in several adjudged cases in this court, among them being Worden v. Searls, 121 U. S. 14, 30 L. ed. 853, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 814; Doyle v. London Guarantee & Acci. Co. 204 U. S. 599, 51 L. ed. 641, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 313; Ex parte Heller, 214 U. S. 501, 53 L. ed.

1060, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 698; Gompers v. Buck's Stove & Range Co. supra, and Re Christensen Engineering Co. 194 U. S. 458, 48 L. ed. 1072, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 729. In the last case the defendant in a suit in equity in a circuit court was found guilty of contempt in disobeying an interlocutory injunction, and ordered to pay a fine of $1,000, one half to go to the complainant and the other half to the United States. A writ of error, whereby it was sought to have the order reviewed in the circuit court [642] of appeals for the second circuit, *was dismissed by that court for the same reason that was assigned for the dismissal in the present case. A petition for a writ of mandamus, commanding the reinstatement of the writ of error, was then presented to this court, and, upon full consideration of the prior cases, was held to be well grounded. In that connection it was said:

"These authorities show that when an order imposing a fine for violation of an injunction is substantially one to reimburse the party injured by the disobedience, although called one in a contempt proceeding, it is to be regarded as merely an interlocutory order, and to be reviewed only on appeal from the final decree. In the present case, however, the fine payable to the United States was clearly punitive and in vindication of the authority of the court, and, we think, as such, it dominates the proceeding and fixes its character. Considered in that aspect, the writ of error was justified and the circuit court of appeals should have taken jurisdiction."

That case differs from this only in that the portion of the fine made punitive was there one half, while here it is one fourth; but this, in our opinion, does not take this case out of the principle applied in that, which is, that the punitive feature of the order is dominant, and fixes its character for purposes of review.

We accordingly hold that the writ of error should be reinstated; and, as it is evident from the return that this will be done on the expression of our opinion, our order will be, petitioners entitled to mandamus.

643]*J. M. GRAHAM and B. F. Hampton, Plffs. in Err.,

v.

CHARLES H. GILL.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 643-645.)

Appeal — when Federal question presented.

1. A Federal question is presented and decided in ejectment for a tract of land derived by the parties from the United States under two different surveys, by passing adversely on plaintiff's objection to the admission of all evidence bearing on the location of the tract in controversy other than the field notes of the survey under which plaintiffs claimed, and which they contended were the best and only evidence, as by such decision the court passed on the competency and legal effect of the evidence as bearing on the effect of the requirements of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 2396, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1473, as to the mode of surveying lands.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 1825-1871, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Evidence — admissibility — precise location of land derived from the United States.

2. The defendant in ejectment for a tract of land derived from the United States under different surveys is not debarred by U. S. Rev. Stat. § 2396, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1473, from introducing evidence other than the field notes, which have a legitimate tendency to identify the precise location of the tract occupied by him, although such evidence may tend to show a mistake in the field notes of the survey of the tract claimed by plaintiff.

[For other cases, see Evidence, 2248-2253, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 173.]

Submitted February 29, 1912. Decided March 11, 1912.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Florida to review a judgment affirming a judgment of the Circuit Court of Lee County, in that state, in favor of defendant in an action of ejectment for a tract of land derived by the parties from the United States under two different surveys. Affirmed.

See same case below, first appeal, 54

NOTE.—On the general subject of writs of error from United States Supreme Court to the state courts—see notes to Martin v. Hunter, 4 L. ed. U. S. 97; Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 37 L. ed. U. S. 267; Re Buchanan, 39 L. ed. U. S. 884; and Kipley v. Illinois, 42 L. ed. U. S. 998.

On what adjudications of state courts can be brought up for review in the Supreme Court of the United States by writ of error to those courts—see note to Apex Transp. Co. v. Garbade, 62 L.R.A. 513.

On how and when questions must be raised and decided in a state court in order to make a case for a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States—see note to Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 63 L.R.A. 33.

On writs of error to state courts in cases involving land titles—see note to O'Connor v. Texas, 50 L. ed. U. S. 1120.

On review of questions of fact on writ of error to a state court—see note to Smiley v. Kansas, 49 L. ed. U. S. 546.

Fla. 259, 45 So. 845; second appeal, 56 Fla. 316, 47 So. 917.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Hilary A. Herbert, Benjamin Micou, and Richard P. Whiteley submitted the cause for plaintiffs in error. Mr. Hilton S. Hampton was on the brief:

Denying to plaintiffs the right to locate their lands according to the recognized government survey made in accordance with the requirements of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 2396, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1473, is a denial of a right under a Federal statute which would give this court jurisdiction to review the case.

Doe ex dem. Barbarie v. Eslava, 9 How. 443, 13 L. ed. 209; Lavagnino v. Uhlig, 198 U. S. 443, 451, 49 L. ed. 1119, 1122, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 716.

A Federal right is specially set up or claimed in a state court so as to confer jurisdiction on this court of a writ of error to such court, where a claim of such right sufficiently appears in a motion for a new trial and in the assignments of error in the state court, and was fully considered and the decision was adverse to the claim.

San José Land & Water Co. v. San José Ranch Co. 189 U. S. 177, 47 L. ed. 765, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 487.

Surveys of the public lands, made under authority of Congress, are conclusive as between individuals.

Miller v. White, 23 Fla. 307, 2 So. 614; Stonewall Phosphate Co. v. Peyton, 39 Fla. 726, 23 So. 440; Whitaker v. McBride, 197 U. S. 512, 49 L. ed. 860, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 530; Russell v. Maxwell Land Grant Co. 158 U. S. 258, 39 L. ed. 972, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 827; Stoneroad v. Stoneroad, 158 U. S. 251, 252, 39 L. ed. 969, 970, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 822; Chapman v. Pollock, 70 Cal. 487, 11 Pac. 764.

Mr. John W. Burton submitted the cause for defendant in error:

The supreme court of Florida did not deal with the question of evidence or instruction as presenting a Federal question.

Mallett v. North Carolina, 181 U. S. 589-601, 45 L. ed. 1015-1021, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 730, 15 Am. Crim. Rep. 241.

The presentation of a Federal question in a petition for rehearing is insufficient to bring the question before this court, unless the state court entertained the petition and decided the Federal question there raised.

Loeber v. Schroeder, 149 U. S. 580, 37 L. ed. 856, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 934; Sayward v. Denny, 158 U. S. 183, 39 L. ed. 942, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 777; Pim v. St. Louis, 165 U. S. 273, 41 L. ed. 714, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 322; Mallett v. North Carolina, 181 U. S. 589, 56 L. ed.

45 L. ed. 1015, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 730, 15 Am. Crim. Rep. 241.

What the supreme court held was that the evidence did not sustain the claim of the plaintiffs that the defendant was in possession of the premises described in the declaration, and it is obvious that in passing on this question of the sufficiency of the evidence no Federal question was involved; hence there is nothing on which to found jurisdiction for review by this court.

Dower v. Richards, 151 U. S. 658, 38 L. ed. 305, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 452, 17 Mor. Min. Rep. 704; Moreland v. Page, 20 How. 522, 15 L. ed. 1009; Almonester v. Kenton, 9 How. 1, 13 L. ed. 21; Gleason v. White, 199 U. S. 54, 50 L. ed. 87, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 782.

Where the state court may properly dispose of a case without deciding the Federal question, its judgment is not reviewable in the Supreme Court of the United States.

Klinger v. Missouri, 13 Wall. 257, 20 L. ed. 635.

The defendant's homestead entry segregated the land from the public domain, and it was not subject to be thereafter selected as school indemnity land.

Hodges v. Colcord, 193 U. S. 192, 48 L. ed. 677, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 433; Holt v. Murphy, 207 U. S. 407, 52 L. ed. 271, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 212.

When the defendant received his patent it related back to the date of his entry, and it was also superior to the subsequently acquired claim arising from the state's selection and the approval thereof.

Weyerhaeuser v. Hoyt, 219 U. S. 380, 55 L. ed. 258, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 300; Sjoli v. Dreschel, 199 U. S. 564, 50 L. ed. 311, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 154.

Memorandum opinion by direction of the court. By Mr. Chief Justice White:

Plaintiffs in error were plaintiffs below. The action was in ejectment. In brief, the controversy was this: An island in Charlotte harbor, Florida, described on the plat of survey as lot 1, section 8, of a specified township and range, was certified in 1899 by the United States to the state of Florida as school indemnity lands, and on *Oc-[644]tober 23, 1900, was conveyed by the state board of education to the plaintiffs in error. The claim in the action was that the defendant wrongfully withheld possession of this tract. On the other hand, the defendant averred that the land of which he was in possession was lot 2, section 17, the same township and range, and that he made a homestead entry thereon in 1896 and received a patent therefor in 1901. A portion of the plat of survey showing the location of the respective tracts is contained in an opinion of the supreme court of the state of Florida, reversing a judgment for the plaintiffs, entered on the first trial of the case, reported in 54 Fla. 259, 45 So. 845.

The tract sold to the plaintiffs in error was surveyed by continuing a survey made from land lying east of the tract. That of the defendant was surveyed by continuing a survey made from lands lying to west of the tract. By using the field notes of the respective surveys it would seem that the tract in possession of the defendant was the tract which had been conveyed to both parties.

On the second trial the defendant was allowed to introduce evidence of the physical location of his tract with reference to other land in the vicinity, shown on the plat of survey, and such testimony, in the opinion of the court below, conclusively established that the tract in the possession of the defendant was in fact lot 2 of section 17, as delineated on the plat, according to which the land was patented to the defendant. There was a verdict and judgment on the second trial for the defendant, which was affirmed by the supreme court of the state. 56 Fla. 316, 47 So. 917.

It is insisted that the writ of error should be dismissed because no Federal question is involved. The contention, however, is without merit, since repeatedly during the trial the plaintiffs objected to the admission of all evidence bearing upon the location of the tract in controversy other than the field notes of the survey under which the [645]*plaintiffs claimed, which it was contended were the best and only evidence. In passing adversely on these objections the trial court did not merely determine the weight or sufficiency of the evidence to prove a fact, but passed on the competency and legal effect of the evidence as bearing upon a question of Federal law; viz., the effect of the requirements of § 2396, Rev. Stat. (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1473), as to the mode of surveying public lands. Thus a Federal question was presented and decided. Dower v. Richards, 151 U. S. 658, 38 L. ed. 305, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 452, 17 Mor. Min. Rep. 704. See also French-Glenn Live Stock Co. v. Springer, 185 U. S. 54, 46 L. ed. 803, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 563.

Although, however, the Federal question was necessarily involved and decided, we are of opinion that under the circumstances of this case it comes directly within the rule announced in French-Glenn Live Stock Co. v. Springer, supra, and therefore the state court was right in holding that the defendant was not debarred from introducing evidence other than the field notes which had a legitimate tendency to indemnify the precise location of the tract occupied by him, although such evidence might tend to show a mistake in the field notes of the survey of the tract which the plaintiffs claimed. Indeed, considering the peculiar nature of the controversy, we think it is true to say that the effect of the extrinsic evidence was in substance to support, and not to contradict, the plat with reference to which the tract was patented to the defendant.

The only Federal question presented by the record having been correctly adjudicated, it results that the judgment must be and it is affirmed.

*CHARLES CLASON, Appt., [646
v.

NICK MATKO, Dan Seffer, John Lopizich,
J. Krilanovich, and Louis Visalia.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 646-655.)

Appeal — construction of stipulation — dispute between counsel as to.

1. A judgment for plaintiffs in an action to quiet title to a mining claim which defendant claims under a relocation after an alleged forfeiture for failure to do the necessary assessment work before resumption of work by plaintiffs, on the ground that defendant's relocation was void, because the location notice attached to his cross complaint did not state that the claim was located as forfeited or abandoned property, as required by Ariz. Rev. Stat. § 3241, and that a stipulation that the respective locations on which the parties based their rights were each "duly made," and that all acts required by the laws of the United States and the territory of Arizona necessary to vest good and valid titles in the locators had been duly performed at the time of the location, except that plaintiffs do not admit that at the time of defendant's location the ground was open to location, because of failure to do assessment work, was entered into only to take the place of evidence, and not to supplant the pleadings, and that the cross complaint was insufficient for failure to show a proper location notice, will not be disturbed on appeal, even though the stipulation might be regarded as admitting the sufficiency of defendant's notice, where both parties amended their pleadings after the filing of the stipulation, and defendant was not deprived of any right by the decision as to the nature of the stipulation.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, VIII. m, 1, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

NOTE.—On location of mining claim—see notes to Dwinnell v. Dyer, 7 L.R.A. (N.S.) 763; Last Chance Min. Co. v. Tyler, 39 L. ed. U. S. 859, and Enterprise Min. Co. v. Rico-Aspen Consol. Min. Co. 42 L. ed. U. S. 96.

As to review by the United States Supreme Court of territorial decisions—see note to Miners' Bank v. Iowa, 13 L. ed. U. S. 867.

Mines — location notice — relocation.

2. A notice of location of mining property forfeited for failure to do the necessary assessment work must state that the property has been forfeited or abandoned, under Ariz. Rev. Stat. § 3241, providing for the "relocation of forfeited or abandoned lode claims" in one of two specified methods, and that in either case a new location monument shall be erected and the location notice shall state if the whole or any part of the new location is "located as abandoned property," or it will be void.

[For other cases, see Mines, 37-42, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Courts — construction of territorial statute — following decision of territorial court.

3. The Supreme Court of the United States, in construing the provisions of a territorial statute which is ambiguous, will lean to the construction given it by the territorial supreme court.

[For other cases, see Courts, VII. d, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Mines — location notice — conflict of statutes.

4. The requirement of Arizona Rev. Stat. § 3241, that the location notice of relocation of a mining claim forfeited for failure to do the necessary assessment work shall state that the claim was located as forfeited or abandoned property, is not in conflict with U. S. Rev. Stat. § 2324, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1427, permitting miners to make regulations as to location notices not in conflict with the laws of the United States or of the state or territory in which the mining district is situated, subject to the requirement that not less than $100 worth of work shall be performed or improvements made each year, and that, upon a failure to comply with such conditions, the claim or mine on which such failure occurred shall be "open to relocation in the same manner as if no location of the same had ever been made."

[For other cases, see Mines, 37-43, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 178.]

Submitted February 26, 1912. Decided March 11, 1912.

APPEAL from the Supreme Court of the Territory of Arizona, to review a judgment affirming a judgment of the District Court of Pima County, in that territory, quieting plaintiffs' title to a mining claim on the ground that defendant's location notice was insufficient in failing to state that any part of the ground included therein was located as abandoned property, as required by the statute of the territory. Affirmed.

See same case below, 12 Ariz. 213, 100 Pac. 773.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

56 L. ed.

Mr. Edward M. Cleary submitted the cause for appellant. Mr. Edward J. Flanagan was on the brief:

The stipulation should be fairly construed so as to effectuate the intentions of the parties thereto.

20 Enc. Pl. & Pr. 657.

Parties by their stipulations may in many ways make the law for any legal proceedings to which they are parties, which not only binds them, but which the courts are bound to enforce. They may stipulate away statutory and even constitutional rights.

Re New York, L. & W. R. Co. 98 N. Y. 453; Brady v. Nally, 151 N. Y. 258, 45 N. E. 549; Van Horn v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co. 69 Iowa, 239, 28 N. W. 547; McCann v. McLennan, 3 Neb. 28; Re Cullinan, 113 App. Div. 485, 99 N. Y. Supp. 374; 20 Enc. Pl. & Pr. 607; Bennett v. Bennett, 65 Neb. 441, 91 N. W. 409, 96 N. W. 994; Hine v. New York Elev. R. Co. 149 N. Y. 154, 43 N. E. 414; Water Supply & Storage Co. v. Larimer & W. Reservoir Co. 25 Colo. 87, 53 Pac. 386; Muir v. Preferred Acci. Ins. Co. 203 Pa. 338, 53 Atl. 158; Thompson v. Fort Worth & R. G. R. Co. 31 Tex. Civ. App. 583, 73 S. W. 29; Traey v. Reed, 2 L.R.A. 773, 13 Sawy. 622, 38 Fed. 69; Sittig v. Birkenstack, 35 Md. 273; People v. Stephens, 52 N. Y. 306; Vail v. Stone, 13 Iowa, 285.

Unless the stipulation is expressly so limited by its own terms, it will bind upon all trials of the case; and the only remedy of the party claiming to be injuriously affected is to move to relieve him from its operation upon a proper showing made by him.

20 Enc. Pl. & Pr. 626; Clason v. Baldwin, 152 N. Y. 204, 46 N. E. 324; Brown v. Pechman, 55 S. C. 555, 33 S. E. 732; Lee v. Wharton, 11 Tex. 61; Prestwood v. Watson, 111 Ala. 604, 20 So. 600; Ex parte Hayes, 92 Ala. 120, 9 So. 156; Hinckley v. Beckwith, 23 Wis. 328; United States Exp. Co. v. Jenkins, 73 Wis. 474, 41 N. W. 957; Vattier v. Hinde, 7 Pet. 252, 8 L. ed. 675; Blankinship v. Oklahoma City Light & Water Power Co. 4 Okla. 242, 43 Pac. 1088; Consolidated Steel & Wire Co. v. Burnham, 8 Okla. 514, 58 Pac. 654.

Section 3241 of Arizona Revised Statutes 1901 is not properly to be construed as having any application to a mining claim relocated as for failure to do annual work.

National Mill. & Min. Co. v. Piceolo, 54 Wash. 617, 104 Pac. 128, 57 Wash. 572, 107 Pac. 353.

The meaning given to Ariz. Rev. Stat. § 3241, by the territorial supreme court, obliterates the well-recognized distinction between abandoned and forfeited claims.

Farrell v. Lockhart, 210 U. S. 142, 52 L.

ed. 994, 16 L.R.A.(N.S.) 162, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681; Black v. Elkhorn Min. Co. 163 U. S. 445, 41 L. ed. 221, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1101, 18 Mor. Min. Rep. 375; McCarthy v. Speed, 11 S. D. 362, 50 L.R.A. 184, 77 N. W. 591, 19 Mor. Min. Rep. 615; Street v. Delta Min. Co. 42 Mont. 371, 112 Pac. 705; St. John v. Kidd, 26 Cal. 271, 4 Mor. Min. Rep. 454; 27 Cyc. 596; Cunningham v. Pirrung, 9 Ariz. 288, 80 Pac. 329; Lindley, Mines, 2d ed. § 643, p. 1830.

An argument against these views may be thought to arise from the phrasing of the general rule that relocation in any event admits the validity of the original location.

Lindley, Mines, § 404; Goldex v. Murphy, 31 Nev. 395, 103 Pac. 398, 105 Pac. 99; Zerres v. Vanina, 80 C. C. A. 366, 150 Fed. 564; Belk v. Meagher, 104 U. S. 279, 26 L. ed. 735, 1 Mor. Min. Rep. 510; Wills v. Blain, 5 N. M. 238, 20 Pac. 798; Providence Gold Min. Co. v. Burke, 6 Ariz. 323, 57 Pac. 641, 19 Mor. Min. Rep. 625; Slothower v. Hunter, 15 Wyo. 189, 88 Pac. 38.

In all these cases there was an express statement in the location notice that there was in fact a relocation. We have been unable to find any authority to the effect that such a status, existing at the time of location, is fixed by other means than such an express admission. The effect of these decisions, therefore, is to hold the locator to the position he voluntarily assumes. We think we are warranted in saying that the law, in the absence, at least, of any statute on the subject, leaves the locator free on the point.

Carlin v. Freeman, 19 Colo. App. 334, 75 Pac. 26.

If the subsequent claimant must decide the status of the former claim at his peril, then years might elapse from the time the former claimant did any work whatever; but if location had been perfected in the first instance, he would be required to do this or suffer defeat if the first locator determined to contest the new location after the subsequent claimant had perhaps shown its great value by development.

Del Monte Min. & Mill. Co. v. Last Chance Min. & Mill. Co. 171 U. S. 77, 43 L. ed. 81, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 895, 19 Mor. Min. Rep. 370; Russell v. Brosseau, 65 Cal. 608, 4 Pac. 643; Du Prat v. James, 65 Cal. 555, 4 Pac. 562, 15 Mor. Min. Rep. 341.

If the statute be susceptible of the construction placed upon it by the territorial supreme court, it is unconstitutional and in conflict with §§ 1851 and 2324 of the Revised Statutes of the United States (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1427).

Lindley, Mines, §§ 248-251, 361, 380, 408, 642-645; Penn v. Oldhauber, 24 Mont. 287, 61 Pac. 649; DuPrat v. James, 65 Cal. 555, 4 Pac. 562, 15 Mor. Min. Rep. 341; Russell v. Brosseau, 65 Cal. 608, 4 Pac. 643; Carlin v. Freeman, 19 Colo. App. 334, 75 Pac. 26.

The location notice is not void for uncertainty.

1 Lindley, Mines, 2d ed. §§ 381, 383; Tal-madge v. St. John, 129 Cal. 430, 62 Pac. 79, 21 Mor. Min. Rep. 13; Wiltsee v. King of Arizona Min. & Mill. Co. 7 Ariz. 95, 60 Pac. 896; Kinney v. Fleming, 6 Ariz. 263, 56 Pac. 723, 20 Mor. Min. Rep. 13; Farmington Gold Min. Co. v. Rhymney Gold & Copper Co. 20 Utah, 363, 77 Am. St. Rep. 913, 58 Pac. 833; Carter v. Bacigalupi, 83 Cal. 187, 23 Pac. 362; Morrison v. Regan, 8 Idaho, 291, 67 Pac. 956, 22 Mor. Min. Rep. 69; Fissure Min. Co. v. Old Susan Min. Co. 22 Utah, 438, 63 Pac. 587, 21 Mor. Min. Rep. 125; Bramlett v. Flick, 23 Mont. 95, 57 Pac. 869, 20 Mor. Min. Rep. 103; Wilson v. Triumph Consol. Min. Co. 19 Utah, 66, 75 Am. St. Rep. 718, 56 Pac. 300; Hammer v. Garfield Min. & Mill. Co. 130 U. S. 299, 32 L. ed. 967, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 348, 16 Mor. Min. Rep. 125.

Mr. A. R. Serven submitted the cause for appellees. Mr. John McGowan was on the brief:

Appellant was not a "co-owner" under U. S. Rev. Stat. § 2324, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1427, and hence could not "advertise out" Daley, and for all these reasons the "advertising out," by which alone he claims, is absolutely void, and appellant is thus shown to be now a party without interest or standing herein.

Turner v. Sawyer, 150 U. S. 578, 37 L. ed. 1189, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192, 17 Mor. Min. Rep. 683.

This class of forfeitures has always been held by the courts to be odious and requires strict proof in every particular.

Hammer v. Garfield Min. & Mill. Co. 130 U. S. 291, 32 L. ed. 964, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 548, 16 Mor. Min. Rep. 125; Providence Gold Min. Co. v. Burke, 6 Ariz. 323, 57 Pac. 641, 19 Mor. Min. Rep. 625.

The stipulation is not available to appellant.

Walker v. Felt, 54 Cal. 386; Holman v. Bank of Norfolk, 12 Ala. 369; Smith v. Whittier, 95 Cal. 279, 30 Pac. 529.

The supreme court of Arizona has frequently sustained the provision of our statute making every relocation notice void that failed to state whether any of the ground was relocated as abandoned or forfeited land, and held that the words "abandoned" and "forfeited" are used interchangeably therein.

Cunningham v. Pirrung, 9 Ariz. 288, 80 Pac. 329; Score v. Griffin, 9 Ariz. 295, 80 Pac. 331; Matko v. Daley, 10 Ariz. 175, 85

Pac. 721; Clason v. Matko, 12 Ariz. 213, 100 Pac. 773.

This provision is but an enactment of a common miners' rule that has always been held valid.

Rush v. French, 1 Ariz. 99, 25 Pac. 816, Johnson v. McLaughlin, 1 Ariz. 493, 4 Pac. 130; Emerson v. McWhirter, 133 Cal. 510, 65 Pac. 1036, 21 Mor. Min. Rep. 470; Jupiter Min. Co. v. Bodie Consol. Min. Co. 7 Sawy. 96, 11 Fed. 666, 4 Mor. Min. Rep. 411; Flaherty v. Gwinn, 1 Dak. 509, 12 Mor. Min. Rep. 605.

The contention that the stipulation fixes the legal effect of the relocation notice and answer is untenable.

Graves v. Alsap, 1 Ariz. 274, 25 Pac. 836; Holms v. Johnston, 12 Heisk. 158; 20 Enc. Pl. & Pr. 613, 614; Tombstone v. Reilly, 4 Ariz. 102, 33 Pac. 823.

This "relocator" claims no width, hence he is entitled to none, even as against the United States, and his location is void. This notice thus failing to contain what the statute requires, and a copy of which notice is to be recorded, is universally held to be void.

Deeney v. Mineral Creek Mill Co. 11 N. M. 279, 67 Pac. 724, 22 Mor. Min. Rep. 47; Purdum v. Laddin, 23 Mont. 387, 59 Pac. 153.

By counting on a forfeiture, appellant conclusively admits the validity of appellees' location.

Belk v. Meagher, 104 U. S. 279, 26 L. ed. 735, 1 Mor. Min. Rep. 510; Providence Gold Min. Co. v. Burke, 6 Ariz. 323, 57 Pac. 641, 19 Mor. Min. Rep. 625.

647] *Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

Action to quiet title to a mining claim called the "Bangor." The action was brought in the district court of the first judicial district, county of Pima, Arizona, by appellees as plaintiffs against August Daley, Clason, appellant here, subsequently being made a party. It will be convenient to refer to appellees as plaintiffs, and, except where necessary to expressly distinguish appellant, to include him with Daley under the designation of defendants.

The amended complaint alleged the location of the claim by one Scott Turner and the recording of the notice thereof, a copy of which was annexed to the complaint. There was an allegation of a claim of interest in the defendants, and a prayer for judgment "establishing a plaintiffs' estate in and exclusive possession" of the claim, and "debaring and forever estopping defendants, and each of them, from claiming any right or title" thereto.

The fourth amended answer of the defendants denied the allegations of the complaint, except that Scott Turner filed a notice of location, and alleged that the claim of the plaintiffs had become forfeited on account of their failure to do the necessary assessment work, and that August Daley entered upon and relocated the claim.

As a further defense it was alleged that the action had been originally commenced against Daley as the sole defendant, and that in the first trial of the action a stipulation was entered into as follows:

"That all parties plaintiff and defendant are now and at all the times mentioned in the pleadings have been each citizens of the United States of America.

"That the respective locations, upon which, as shown by the pleadings herein, the parties plaintiff and defendant base their rights to the 'Bangor' mining claim, were *each duly made, and that all[648 acts required by the laws of the United States, and the laws of the territory of Arizona, necessary to vest in the parties so locating good and valid titles so far as valid location could vest the same, such as mineral discovery, monumenting of claim, and recording of location notices, etc., were each duly done and performed at the time of said locations, except that plaintiffs do not admit that at the time of said location of defendant Daley the ground was open to such location, by reason of failure to do assessment work for the years 1901 and 1902, or to resume work prior to the date of said location."

The case went to trial, it is alleged, on the single issue whether the claim was open to location, and resulted in a judgment against Daley. A new trial was granted, which took place, and the agreement was recognized by counsel and the parties to be still in force and effect, and the same issue was submitted to a jury as in the first trial to the court, and a verdict and judgment went for defendant Daley. The judgment was reversed by the supreme court and the cause remanded for a new trial (10 Ariz. 175, 85 Pac. 721), the court saying: "Under the allegations in the defendant's cross complaint with respect to the relocation by the defendant of the claim as a forfeited claim, the location notice of the defendant would seem to be void, in failing to state that the claim was located as forfeited or abandoned property, as required by the statute, and would seem to afford the defendant no ground for the relief claimed. Cunningham v. Pirrung, 9 Ariz. 288, 80 Pac. 329."

The defendants, ever since the making and filing of the agreement, have relied on it as establishing the doing of assessment work on the claims and the validity of the claims by reason thereof, the agreement never having been rescinded or withdrawn.

As a further defense it was urged that the decision of the supreme court of the territory in *Cunningham v. Pirrung, in so far as it holds or construes paragraph 3241 of the Revised Statutes of Arizona (Revision of 1901) as it existed prior to the amendment of 1907, to provide that the relocation of a forfeited mining claim shall be void or voidable when the relocation notice does not state that the "whole or any part of the ground covered by such relocation is relocated or located as forfeited ground," and that said statute, in so far as it justifies such interpretation, is contrary to the provisions of § 2324 of the Revised Statutes of the United States (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1427) in its general terms, and specifically to that portion thereof which provides that, upon failure to do assessment work therein required, such claim "shall be open to relocation in the same manner as if no location of the same had ever been made," and also contravenes the provisions of § 1851 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, and the defendants specially rely upon said provisions of the laws of the United States.

The defendants also filed a cross complaint, which asserted title in them, derived from a location of the claim, a notice of which was attached.

The cross complaint further alleged that the title of the plaintiffs was derived from Scott Turner, but that plaintiffs had no title, by reason of the fact that the annual assessment work had not been performed, that the ground was open to relocation, that before work was resumed Daley entered upon the land and duly located it as a mining claim, and performed all acts required to perfect the location prior to any attempt of the plaintiffs to resume work thereon. All of the separate defenses pleaded were made part of the cross complaint.

The location notice attached to the cross complaint did not state that the claim was located as forfeited or abandoned property.

There was attached to the cross complaint an amended location notice signed by August Daley and Charles Clason. It refers to the location by Daley, and states 650 *that such location was made as a relocation of forfeited ground for the failure to do assessment work. It further states that the amended notice of location was made, without waiving any previous rights, to secure all of the benefits of paragraph 3238 of the Revised Statutes of Arizona (1901), and without waiving, but especially relying upon, the rights conferred upon Daley by his original location by the laws of the United States. It also states that Charles Clason was the owner of an undivided one-half interest under Daley.

A demurrer was sustained to the cross complaint, and, defendants declining to amend, judgment was entered for plaintiffs in accordance with the prayer of their complaint upon the stipulation of facts which has been set out above. The case was taken by Clason to the supreme court of the territory, where the judgment was affirmed.

The first question in the case is the effect of the stipulation. Appellant contends that all questions were "formally and expressly" admitted by it "pertaining to the validity of the respective locations except the single question, which was: Was the ground open to relocation on May 1, 1903, for plaintiffs' [appellees'] default in performing the work required by law? It covered, therefore, it is further contended, all acts necessary to be done under the laws of Arizona; that is, to come to the specific controversy in the case, the stipulation contained an admission that the location notice complied with the laws of Arizona, which necessarily includes compliance, it is contended, "with paragraph 3241 in any construction thereof."

The enumeration, it is urged, in the stipulation, of certain acts, cannot be considered "to have been intended to be exhaustive, but merely illustrative of what the parties considered necessary to make a valid location or relocation," and there was left open only the failure of plaintiffs to do the assessment work. And this, it is insisted further, was the construction of the parties through two trials, *and 651 that its insufficiency is now urged in the face of that fact, and that defendants have expended money upon the faith of the waiver of the defect in the location notice.

The trial court and the supreme court took a different view of the stipulation, and considered it as but a substitute for evidence, not waiving or supplying the defects of the pleadings, and that, therefore, as the cross complaint contained no allegation of compliance with law, it was insufficient. And both courts held further that the stipulation, as evidence, did not establish such compliance.

The supreme court explicitly, and the trial court impliedly, from its action in sustaining the demurrer to the cross complaint, took a different view of the stipulation as indicated by the conduct of the parties. The "obvious purpose of the parties in filing the stipulation," the supreme court said, "was manifestly to have it take the place of testimony or other evidence upon the trial, and not to supplant the pleadings in the case." The court recognized that the parties could, under the laws of the territory, have agreed upon a statement of the case which would have been a substitute for formal pleadings, but, said the court, "such was not the attempt in this case, as appears from the stipulation itself and the conduct of the parties in the proceedings subsequent to the entry of the stipulation," both parties amending their pleadings after the filing of the stipulation. The court concluded, therefore, that it was not an agreed case under paragraph 1390 of the Revised Statutes of the territory, "but a stipulation appertaining merely to the matter of evidence upon the trial."

The record seems to support this view. It is true that it appears from the answer of the defendants that the stipulation was filed before the trial of the action, and that the case was submitted and decided against defendants on the single issue as to whether the claim was open to relocation by Daley.

652] *A new trial was granted, upon what ground does not appear. It does appear, however, that the case was again submitted on the same issue, a judgment resulting for Daley. It was reversed by the supreme court, the court intimating that the defect in the cross complaint in not stating that the relocation by Daley was upon forfeited or abandoned property, as required by the statute, would seem to make the relocation void, and the intimation was made to control or have effect in the new trial which was ordered. It was after this decision that the fourth amended answer and cross complaint were filed and the demurrer which attacked the cross complaint.

But if it be granted that the stipulation is ambiguous, we should not be disposed to reverse the lower court on its construction. It pertained simply to the conduct of the trial and a dispute between counsel as to the effect of an agreement between them, and its decision deprived the defendants in the action of no right which they possessed. We do not consider it necessary to review the cases cited by appellant, in which stipulations have been sustained and the power of the parties recognized to waive legal or even constitutional rights.

The construction of the supreme court of paragraph 3241 of the Revised Statutes of the territory is attacked. That section required, before its amendment in 1907, that in case of a relocation of a claim, the location notice should state if the whole or any part of the new location was located as abandoned property, else it should be void. The section is inserted in the margin.†

*The contention is that this section, [653 properly considered, applied only to "abandoned property," and did not apply to forfeited property, and it is insisted that the distinction between forfeited and abandoned property is well recognized and is "obliterated" by the court's construction.

Of course, there may be a distinction between the abandonment of a claim and its forfeiture, but the question does not turn upon that distinction only, but upon what the statute means, considering all of its words; and, considering them all, we think they show quite clearly that no distinction was intended. Paragraph 3241 provides for "the relocation of forfeited or abandoned lode claims,"—in other words, claims which have once been located,—and "the new locator's right is based upon the loss of the possessory right acquired by the former locator," to quote from Cunningham v. Pirrung, 9 Ariz. 288, 80 Pac. 329, where the rule is announced. The same rule is repeated in subsequent cases, including that at bar. Score v. Griffin, 9 Ariz. 295, 80 Pac. 331; Kinney v. Lundy, 11 Ariz. 75, 89 Pac. 496.

Even if we should concede that the statute is ambiguous, we should certainly lean to agreement with the supreme court of the territory. Fox v. Haarstick, 156 U. S. 674, 39 L. ed. 576, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 457; Armijo v. Armijo, 181 U. S. 558, 45 L. ed. 1000, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 707; English v. Arizona, 214 U. S. 359, 53 L. ed. 1030, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 658; Santa Fe County v. New Mexico, 215 U. S. 296, 305, 54 L. ed. 202, 207, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111; Albright †3241. (Sec. 11.) Such affidavit, when so recorded, shall be prima facie evidence of the performance of such labor or the making of such improvements, and said original affidavit, after it has been recorded, or a certified copy of record of same, or the record of same, shall be received as evidence accordingly by the courts of this territory. The relocation of forfeited or abandoned lode claims shall only be made by sinking a new discovery shaft and fixing the boundary in the same manner and to the same extent as is required in making an original location; or the relocater may sink the original discovery shaft 10 feet deeper than it was at the date of the commencement of such location, and shall erect new or make the old monuments the same as originally required. In either case a new location monument shall be erected, and the location notice shall state if the whole or any part of the new location is located as abandoned property, else it shall be void.

v. Sandoval, 216 U. S. 331, 54 L. ed. 502, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 318.

The next contention of appellant is that if the statute admits of the construction 654] put upon it by the supreme *court of the territory it is unconstitutional and in conflict with §§ 1857 and 2324 of the Revised Statutes of the United States.

Upon what ground the statute is unconstitutional is not stated, and we can put that objection aside and pass to the asserted conflict with the Revised Statutes of the United States. It is only necessary to consider § 2324. Section 1857 expresses a general limitation of the powers of the territory by the Constitution and laws of the United States. The other section directly concerns locations of mining ground.

The section permits the miners to make regulations in regard to mining locations not in conflict with the laws of the United States or of the state or territory in which the mining district is situated, "governing the location, . . . subject to the following requirements: . . . On each claim located after the tenth day of May, eighteen hundred and seventy-two, and until a patent has been issued therefor, not less than one hundred dollars' worth of labor shall be performed or improvements made during each year, . . . and upon a failure to comply with these conditions, the claim or mine upon which such failure occurred shall be open to relocation in the same manner as if no location of the same had ever been made."

Appellant contends "that the spirit and intention of this enactment" is that, upon the failure of the original locator to comply with the provisions of the law, "the ground is open to relocation in the same manner as if no location had ever been made;" and that therefore neither a state nor a territory can impose conditions or burdens upon the exercise of the right.

That cannot be said to be a burden upon a right to which the right when taken is subject. The section gives to the miners of a mining district and the state or territory in which the district is situated the power to make regulations "governing the 655] location" of a mining claim, *subject to certain requirements. Those requirements may not be dispensed with, but they may be supplemented, certainly to the extent (and we need go no farther in this case) prescribed by the Arizona statute. It is a provision strictly "governing the location," and is not repugnant either to the spirit or the letter of the mining laws of the United States. Butte City Water Co. v.

Baker, 196 U. S. 119, 49 L. ed. 409, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 211.

Judgment affirmed.

CEDAR RAPIDS GAS LIGHT COMPANY,
Plff. in Err.,

v.

CITY OF CEDAR RAPIDS, George S. Lightner, Mayor, et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 655-670.)

Constitutional law — what constitutes a contract.

1. A provision in an ordinance granting a renewal of its franchise to a gas company that, in consideration of the privileges granted, it shall furnish gas at a price not to exceed $1.80 per thousand cubic feet, and 20 cents per thousand feet for discount to consumers paying before the 10th of each month after consumption, is not a contract by the city that the price shall be kept high enough to allow a discount for prompt payment, the agreement being that of the company alone, and subject to the city's power to regulate rates.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 1246, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — examination of evidence.

2. The evidence in an equity case will be examined by the Supreme Court of the United States in proceedings in error to the state court, in so far as such examination is necessary to answer questions properly saved, coming within the appellate jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of the United States, where the findings to be reviewed depend on questions which are re-examinable in such court.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 2206, 2207, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

NOTE.—As to what laws are void as impairing obligation of contracts—see notes to Franklin County Grammar School v. Bailey, 10 L.R.A. 405; Fletcher v. Peck, 3 L. ed. U. S. 162; McCanna & F. Co. v. Citizens' Trust & Surety Co. 24 C. C. A. 20; and Montana Ore-Purchasing Co. v. Boston & M. Consol. Copper & S. Min. Co. 35 C. C. A. 12.

On what questions the Federal Supreme Court will consider in reviewing the judgments of state courts—see note to Missouri ex rel. Hill v. Dockery, 63 L.R.A. 571.

On review of questions of fact on writ of error to a state court—see note to Smiley v. Kansas, 49 L. ed. U. S. 546.

On legislative regulation of rates, tolls, and prices—see note to Winchester & L. Turnp. Road Co. v. Croxton, 33 L.R.A. 177.

On contract exemptions from legislative power to fix tolls, rates, or prices—see note to Detroit v. Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. 46 L. ed. U. S. 592.

As to the power of a municipality, apart from contract, to regulate the rates to be charged by public-service corporations—see note to Bluefield Waterworks & Improv. Co. v. Bluefield, 33 L.R.A. (N.S.) 759.

Appeal — grounds for reversal — reduction in gas rates.

3. A judgment of a state court, dismissing a bill to restrain the enforcement of an ordinance fixing 90 cents per thousand cubic feet as a maximum gas rate, without prejudice to a later suit after the ordinance, which had not been enforced before the commencement of the suit, had been given a fair test, the court estimating on a value fixed by it for the plant considerably in excess of its cost, that the return under the ordinance would be over 6 per cent, will not be disturbed on review by the Supreme Court of the United States. [For other cases, see Appeal and Error, VIII. m, 7, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 163.]

Argued February 29, 1912. Decided March 11, 1912.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Iowa to review a decree which, modifying a decree of the District Court of Linn County, in that state, dismissed a bill to restrain the enforcement of an ordinance fixing 90 cents per thousand cubic feet as a maximum charge for gas, without prejudice to a later suit after the ordinance should have been given a fair test. Affirmed.

See same case below, 144 Iowa, 426, 138 Am. St. Rep. 299, 120 N. W. 966.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. James H. Trewin argued the cause, and, with Mr. John N. Hughes, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The ordinance granting the plaintiff in error a franchise is a contract.

Cedar Rapids Water Co. v. Cedar Rapids, 118 Iowa, 234, 91 N. W. 1081; Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. 518, 4 L. ed. 629; Fletcher v. Peck, 6 Cranch, 87, 3 L. ed. 162; Sinking Fund Cases, 99 U. S. 700, 719, 25 L. ed. 496, 501; New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Rivers, 115 U. S. 674, 681, 29 L. ed. 525, 527, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; People v. O'Brien, 111 N. Y. 1, 2 L.R.A. 255, 7 Am. St. Rep. 684, 18 N. E. 692.

The power to pass ordinances regulating rates having been conferred on the city by the legislature, an ordinance fixing the 90-cent rate is a law within the meaning of the Constitution.

United States v. New Orleans, 98 U. S. 381, 382, 25 L. ed. 225; Meriwether v. Garrett, 102 U. S. 472, 26 L. ed. 197; Knoxville v. Knoxville Water Co. 212 U. S. 1, 53 L. ed. 371, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 148; Prentiss v. Southern R. Co. 211 U. S. 210, 53 L. ed. 150, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 67; Honolulu Rapid Transit & Land Co. v. Hawaii, 211 U. S. 282, 53 L. ed. 186, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 55; Wisconsin, M. & P. R. Co. v. Jacobson, 179 56 L. ed.

U. S. 297, 45 L. ed. 199, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 115.

A legislative enactment in the ordinary form of a statute may contain provisions which, when accepted and acted upon by individuals, become contracts between them and the state, within the protection of § 10 of art. 1 of the Federal Constitution.

New Jersey v. Yard, 95 U. S. 104-113, 24 L. ed. 352-354; Walla Walla v. Walla Walla Water Co. 172 U. S. 1, 43 L. ed. 341, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77.

Public utility corporations are entitled to exercise their franchises during the terms thereof, and the obligations of such contracts are protected by the Constitution.

Fisk v. Jefferson, 116 U. S. 135, 29 L. ed. 588, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 329; Burton v. Koshkonong, 4 Fed. 377; Cary Library v. Bliss, 151 Mass. 364, 7 L.R.A. 765, 25 N. E. 92; Capital City Gaslight Co. v. Des Moines, 72 Fed. 831; Central Trust Co. v. Citizens' Street R. Co. 82 Fed. 13; Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 392, 38 L. ed. 1022, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047.

The plaintiff, having invested a large sum of money in the construction and maintenance of its gas plant, on the faith of the franchise, has vested rights to continue to enjoy the franchise during its term, including the discount provision, and to charge remunerative rates for gas, and these rights cannot be impaired or destroyed by the city under the guise of its reserved power to fix rates.

Railroad Tax Cases, 8 Sawy. 238, 13 Fed. 756; Detroit v. Detroit & H. Pl. Road Co. 43 Mich. 140, 5 N. W. 275; Com. v. Essex Co. 13 Gray, 239; Maine C. R. Co. v. Maine, 96 U. S. 499, 24 L. ed. 836; Sinking Fund Cases, 99 U. S. 700, 25 L. ed. 496.

Grants of franchises to operate public utilities, when embodying the terms of a contract, are protected by the Federal Constitution from impairment by subsequent legislation, and notwithstanding the principle of strict construction, whatever is plainly granted cannot be taken from the parties entitled thereto by such legislative enactments. Statutes and ordinances of this character are not to be extended by construction, nor should they be deprived of their meaning if it is plainly and clearly expressed.

Minneapolis v. Minneapolis Street R. Co. 215 U. S. 417, 54 L. ed. 259, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Detroit v. Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. 184 U. S. 368, 46 L. ed. 592, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 410.

The discount provision in effect grants to the company the right to impose a penalty for failure to make prompt payment on or before the 10th of the succeeding month, and is of the very essence of the contract. Ibid.

Under § 1619 of the Code, the legislature of Iowa reserved the power to repeal, alter, or amend the charters of corporations, but the legislature of Iowa never exercised this power itself, nor did it ever confer this power on the defendant in error, either directly or by implication. Therefore, this case does not come within the rule laid down in the case of Missouri P. R. Co. v. Kansas, 216 U. S. 262, 54 L. ed. 472, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 330.

The basis of all calculations as to the reasonableness of the rates to be charged by a corporation furnishing gas to the public is the fair value of the property being so used, at the time of fixing the rate.

Willcox v. Consolidated Gas Co. 212 U. S. 19, 53 L. ed. 382, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192, 15 Ann. Cas. 1034; Knoxville v. Knoxville Water Co. 212 U. S. 1, 53 L. ed. 371, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 148; Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. North Carolina Corp. Commission, 206 U. S. 1, 51 L. ed. 933, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585, 11 Ann. Cas. 398; Stanislaus County v. San Joaquin & K. River Canal & Irrig. Co. 192 U. S. 201, 48 L. ed. 406, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 241; San Diego Land & Town Co. v. Jasper, 189 U. S. 438, 47 L. ed. 892, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 571, affirming 110 Fed. 702; Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 186 U. S. 257, 46 L. ed. 1151, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 900; Vicksburg Waterworks Co. v. Vicksburg, 185 U. S. 82, 46 L. ed. 815, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585; San Diego Land & Town Co. v. National City, 174 U. S. 739, 43 L. ed. 1154, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 804; Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 547, 42 L. ed. 849, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Covington & L. Turnp. Road Co. v. Sanford, 164 U. S. 578, 41 L. ed. 560, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 198; Cotting v. Kansas City Stock Yards Co. (Cotting v. Godard) 183 U. S. 79, 46 L. ed. 92, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30; Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 363, 38 L. ed. 1014, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047; Spring Valley Waterworks v. San Francisco, 124 Fed. 574; Southern P. Co. v. Railroad Comrs. 78 Fed. 261; New Memphis Gas & Light Co. v. Memphis, 72 Fed. 952; Brunswick & T. Water Dist. v. Maine Water Co. 99 Me. 371, 59 Atl. 537; Cedar Rapids Water Co. v. Cedar Rapids, 118 Iowa, 234, 91 N. W. 1081; Lewis, Em. Dom. § 462.

The value at the time the property is being used is to be ascertained.

Willcox v. Consolidated Gas Co. 212 U. S. 19, 53 L. ed. 382, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192, 15 Ann. Cas. 1034; San Diego Land & Town Co. v. National City, 174 U. S. 753, 43 L. ed. 1160, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 804; Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 42 L. ed. 819, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Lewis, Em. Dom. last ed. 477;

Metropolitan Trust Co. v. Houston & T. C. R. Co. 90 Fed. 683; Brunswick & T. Water Dist. v. Maine Water Co. 99 Me. 371, 59 Atl. 537.

And it is the market value that is to be ascertained and considered as the fair value of the property.

Lewis, Em. Dom. last ed. 478; Henry v. Dubuque & P. R. Co. 2 Iowa, 300; Steenerson v. Great Northern R. Co. 69 Minn. 353, 72 N. W. 715; Beale & W. Railroad Rate Regulation, § 355.

The owner of property devoted to a public use is entitled to the benefit of any appreciation in value above the original cost and cost of improvements, which is due to good management, or any natural causes.

Willcox v. Consolidated Gas Co. 212 U. S. 19, 53 L. ed. 382, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192, 15 Ann. Cas. 1034; San Diego Land & Town Co. v. Jasper, 189 U. S. 439, 47 L. ed. 892, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 571; San Diego Land & Town Co. v. National City, 174 U. S. 739, 43 L. ed. 1154, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 804; Detroit v. Detroit & H. Pl. Road Co. 43 Mich. 140, 5 N. W. 275.

The value of the plant for which compensation must be made is obviously the fair value for which it might be sold to any other corporation or investor.

Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 524, 42 L. ed. 841, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418.

The question is not what the plant originally cost, or what amount of capital stock it has issued, but what it will cost to reproduce the plant in its present condition.

San Diego Land & Town Co. v. Jasper, 189 U. S. 439, 47 L. ed. 892, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 571; Ames v. Union P. R. Co. 64 Fed. 165; Beale & W. Railroad Rate Regulation, § 255; Steenerson v. Great Northern R. Co. 69 Minn. 353, 72 N. W. 715.

It is immaterial in what way the property was lawfully acquired, whether by labor, gift, or by making profitable use of a franchise previously granted; it is enough if it has become private property.

Monongahela Nav. Co. v. United States, 148 U. S. 312, 37 L. ed. 463, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 622; Spring Valley Waterworks v. San Francisco, 124 Fed. 574; Metropolitan Trust Co. v. Houston & T. C. R. Co. 90 Fed. 683; Detroit v. Detroit & H. Pl. Road Co. 43 Mich. 140, 5 N. W. 275; Brunswick & T. Water Dist. v. Maine Water Co. 99 Me. 371, 59 Atl. 540.

Good will or going value should be considered, in arriving at the value of plaintiff's property, upon which it is entitled to earn dividends.

Willcox v. Consolidated Gas Co. 212 U. S. 19, 53 L. ed. 382, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192, 15 Ann. Cas. 1034; Monongahela Nav. Co. v. United States, 148 U. S. 313, 37 L. ed. 463, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 622; Spring Valley Waterworks v. San Francisco, 124 Fed. 574; National Waterworks Co. v. Kansas City, 27 L.R.A. 827, 10 C. C. A. 653, 27 U. S. App. 165, 62 Fed. 853; Brunswick & T. Water Dist. v. Maine Water Co. 99 Me. 371, 59 Atl. 537; Omaha v. Omaha Water Co. 218 U. S. 180, 54 L. ed. 991, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 615.

The plaintiff, in its contract with the city, assumed certain obligations and acquired certain rights. In the performance of these obligations and the exercise of these rights it invested capital and established its business. Has this business a value in addition to its tangible assets? The mere fact that the franchise was granted does not necessarily give it value, but the fact that plaintiff acted on it, invested money, organized and built up a business, gives it value as an established and going concern, in addition to the value of the tangible assets.

People v. O'Brien, 111 N. Y. 41, 2 L.R.A. 255, 7 Am. St. Rep. 684, 18 N. E. 692.

The franchise or going value is property, taxable, inheritable, alienable, subject to levy and sale under execution, to condemnation under the exercise of the right of eminent domain, and invested with all the attributes of property generally.

Monongahela Nav. Co. v. United States, 148 U. S. 313, 37 L. ed. 463, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 622; People v. O'Brien, supra.

In rate cases, values of property and franchise should be taken into account. The court has recognized that the same principle is involved in rate regulation as in the exercise of the right of eminent domain.

Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 544, 42 L. ed. 848, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 362, 410, 38 L. ed. 1014, 1027, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047; San Diego Water Co. v. San Diego, 118 Cal. 556, 38 L.R.A. 460, 62 Am. St. Rep. 261, 50 Pac. 633; Ames v. Union P. R. Co. 64 Fed. 165.

The question as to rate of income is, What rate of dividends would induce prudent men to invest in stock of the company representing the real value of the property as a going business? Certainly not less than an assured annual income of 6 per cent.

Willcox v. Consolidated Gas Co. 212 U. S. 19, 53 L. ed. 382, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192, 15 Ann. Cas. 1034.

The value of all franchises, rights, and privileges should be taken at their value, not to the taker, but to the seller.

Fairbank v. United States, 181 U. S. 300, 45 L. ed. 869, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 648, 15 Am. Crim. Rep. 135; United States v. Gettysburg Electric R. Co. 160 U. S. 668, 40 L. ed. 576, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427; Monongahela Nav. Co. 56 L. ed.

v. United States, 148 U. S. 312, 37 L. ed. 463, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 622.

In fixing the value of the companies' franchises, the appraisers may give such regard as is demanded by ample and fair policy to the past investment, risks, and services of the companies, and to the reasonably just expectations which those who made the investment had in mind when so investing. The franchises must be valued as living franchises, not as dead or moribund.

Kennebec Water Dist. v. Waterville, 97 Me. 185, 60 L.R.A. 856, 54 Atl. 6.

Allowance should be made, in addition to the value as otherwise established, that the gas company is a going concern, with a profitable business already established, and with a present income assured and now being earned.

National Waterworks Co. v. Kansas City, 27 L.R.A. 827, 10 C. C. A. 653, 27 U. S. App. 165, 62 Fed. 853; Newburyport Water Co. v. Newburyport, 168 Mass. 541, 47 N. E. 533; Gloucester Water Supply Co. v. Gloucester, 179 Mass. 365, 60 N. E. 977; Bristol v. Bristol & W. Waterworks, 23 R. I. 274, 49 Atl. 974.

If the plaintiff's property were condemned and taken as an entirety, the franchise or going value would unquestionably be allowed. Under the present proceedings the owner has no option but to continue to own the property and receive the reduced rates, with the results that if no allowance is made for the going value, it would be in a worse position when regulated than when the property is taken outright.

Willcox v. Consolidated Gas Co. 212 U. S. 19, 53 L. ed. 382, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192, 15 Ann. Cas. 1034; Ames v. Union P. R. Co. 64 Fed. 178.

The going value or franchise should not be discarded because of difficulty in ascertaining its amount.

Howe Mach. Co. v. Bryson, 44 Iowa, 166, 24 Am. Rep. 735; Richmond v. Dubuque & S. C. R. Co. 40 Iowa, 272; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Tompkins, 176 U. S. 167, 172, 44 L. ed. 417, 420, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 336.

The franchise is an easement or right of way in the streets, and hence is real property.

Milhau v. Sharp, 27 N. Y. 620, 84 Am. Dec. 314; People v. O'Brien, 111 N. Y. 40, 2 L.R.A. 255, 7 Am. St. Rep. 684, 18 N. E. 692; Ghee v. Northern Union Gas Co. 158 N. Y. 510, 53 N. E. 692; People ex rel. Metropolitan Street R. Co. v. State Tax Comrs. 174 N. Y. 435, 63 L.R.A. 884, 105 Am. St. Rep. 674, 67 N. E. 69; Water Comrs. v. Westchester County Waterworks Co. 176 N. Y. 239, 68 N. E. 348; Kronsbein v. Rochester, 76 App. Div. 494, 78 N. Y. Supp. 813; Re East River Gas Co. 122 App.

Div. 890, 106 N. Y. Supp. 1125; Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. v. Detroit, 26 L.R.A. 667, 12 C. C. A. 365, 22 U. S. App. 570, 64 Fed. 643; Bowman v. Wathen, 2 McLean, 376, Fed. Cas. No. 1,740; West River Bridge Co. v. Dix, 6 How. 507, 12 L. ed. 535; Gue v. Tide Water Canal Co. 24 How. 257, 16 L. ed. 635; East Alabama R. Co. v. Doe, 114 U. S. 340, 29 L. ed. 136, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 869; Chicago v. Baer, 41 Ill. 306; Stockton Gas & Electric Co. v. San Joaquin County, 148 Cal. 313, 5 L.R.A.(N.S.) 174, 83 Pac. 54, 7 Ann. Cas. 511; Rex v. Brighton Gas-light & Coke Co. 5 Barn. & C. 466, 8 Dowl. & R. 308, 4 L. J. K. B. 213, 29 Revised Rep. 290.

A corporation cannot be deprived of its franchises except under the power of eminent domain, and upon payment of their full value.

Sixth Ave. R. Co. v. Kerr, 72 N. Y. 330; Water Comrs. v. Westchester County Waterworks Co. 176 N. Y. 239, 68 N. E. 348; Coney Island, Ft. H. & B. R. Co. v. Kennedy, 15 App. Div. 588, 44 N. Y. Supp. 825; Spring Valley Waterworks v. San Francisco, 124 Fed. 574; Monongahela Nav. Co. v. United States, 148 U. S. 312, 37 L. ed. 463, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 622.

The power of the Federal government to regulate commerce does not authorize it to destroy a franchise of this kind without making just compensation for it.

United States v. Bellingham Bay Boom Co. 176 U. S. 211, 44 L. ed. 437, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 343; Monongahela Nav. Co. v. United States, 148 U. S. 312, 37 L. ed. 463, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 622.

Plaintiff's franchise is entitled to the same protection as any other property.

Parker v. Elmira, C. & N. R. Co. 165 N. Y. 274, 59 N. E. 81.

As the plaintiff in error cannot be deprived of its franchise granted by the city to operate its plant, except under the power of eminent domain and upon payment of value, it certainly cannot be deprived of its franchise indirectly, through the exercise of the legislative power regulating rates. The exercise of this power amounts to a taking of private property for public use.

Railroad Commission Cases, 116 U. S. 307, 331, 29 L. ed. 636, 644, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 334, 388, 1191.

This court has never decided that, in fixing a rate, the going value or value of the franchise, or right to be a going concern, shall not be included, but in passing upon rate questions, it has been stated or assumed that the going value is to be included.

Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 42 L. ed. 819, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 362, 38 L. ed.

1014, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Tompkins, 176 U. S. 167, 44 L. ed. 417, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 336; Detroit v. Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. 184 U. S. 368, 46 L. ed. 592, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 410; Ames v. Union P. R. Co. 64 Fed. 176; Spring Valley Waterworks v. San Francisco, 124 Fed. 574; San Diego Water Co. v. San Diego, 118 Cal. 556, 38 L.R.A. 460, 62 Am. St. Rep. 261, 50 Pac. 633; Willcox v. Consolidated Gas Co. 212 U. S. 19, 53 L. ed. 382, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192, 15 Ann. Cas. 1034.

The plant is not to be a public-service property to-day and something else to-morrow, and the company has a right to look to the future in making its permanent improvements.

San Diego Land & Town Co. v. National City, 174 U. S. 740, 43 L. ed. 1155, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 804.

It is the present value of the plant that should be taken into consideration.

Brunswick & T. Water Dist. v. Maine Water Co. 99 Me. 371, 59 Atl. 540; Willcox v. Consolidated Gas Co. 212 U. S. 19, 53 L. ed. 382, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192, 15 Ann. Cas. 1034; Knoxville v. Knoxville Water Co. 212 U. S. 1, 53 L. ed. 371, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 148.

The elements entering into a fair rate to be charged for gas are:

1. The actual cost of all labor, materials, and immediate repairs necessary to manufacture the gas and place it at the disposal of the consumer.

Willcox v. Consolidated Gas Co. 212 U. S. 19, 53 L. ed. 382, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192, 15 Ann. Cas. 1034; Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 42 L. ed. 819, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 362, 38 L. ed. 1014, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047; Union P. R. Co. v. United States, 99 U. S. 700, 25 L. ed. 496; Southern P. Co. v. Railroad Comrs. 78 Fed. 265; New Memphis Gas & Light Co. v. Memphis, 72 Fed. 952; Clyde v. Richmond & D. R. Co. 57 Fed. 436.

2. A reasonable earning on account of depreciation of the plant.

Willcox v. Consolidated Gas Co. 212 U. S. 19, 53 L. ed. 382, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192, 15 Ann. Cas. 1034; Knoxville v. Knoxville Water Co. 212 U. S. 1, 53 L. ed. 371, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 148; San Diego Land & Town Co. v. National City, 174 U. S. 739, 43 L. ed. 1154, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 804; Milwaukee Electric R. & Light Co. v. Milwaukee, 87 Fed. 577; Brymer v. Butler Water Co. 179 Pa. 231, 36 L.R.A. 260, 36 Atl. 249.

Depreciation is due to three general factors, to wit:

(a) Inadequacy. Where, by reason of increased demand, the machinery or mains, or some parts of them, become too small.

(b) Obsolescence. Where, by reason of new invention and advancement in the art, the machinery in use can no longer be economically operated.

(c) Physical decay. Where the apparatus and mains rust or wear out and have to be renewed.

Knoxville v. Knoxville Water Co. 212 U. S. 1, 53 L. ed. 371, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 148; Union P. R. Co. v. United States, 99 U. S. 700, 25 L. ed. 496; Milwaukee Electric R. & Light Co. v. Milwaukee, 87 Fed. 577; Southern P. Co. v. Railroad Comrs. 78 Fed. 265.

No ordinance fixing prices charged for a public service is reasonable which, in addition to the foregoing elements, does not allow to the investors a fair return on the money invested in the enterprise, with due regard to the nature and hazards of the business.

Des Moines v. Des Moines Waterworks Co. 95 Iowa, 348, 64 N. W. 269; Southern P. Co. v. Railroad Comrs. 78 Fed. 261; Cedar Rapids Water Co. v. Cedar Rapids, 118 Iowa, 234, 91 N. W. 1081; Brymer v. Butler Water Co. 179 Pa. 231, 36 L.R.A. 260, 36 Atl. 249; San Diego Water Co. v. San Diego, 118 Cal. 556, 38 L.R.A. 460, 62 Am. St. Rep. 261, 50 Pac. 633.

The special hazards incident to the business must be taken into consideration in determining the income which the company should receive over and above the fixed charges.

San Diego Water Co. v. San Diego, 118 Cal. 556, 38 L.R.A. 460, 62 Am. St. Rep. 272, 50 Pac. 633; Des Moines v. Des Moines Waterworks Co. 95 Iowa, 363, 64 N. W. 269.

The earlier leaning of the courts toward the doctrine that the legislative power to fix rates stops only at confiscation has been supplanted by the rule that rates must be reasonable; that is, such as to earn a fair, just, and adequate income on the investment.

Willcox v. Consolidated Gas Co. 212 U. S. 19, 53 L. ed. 382, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192, 15 Ann. Cas. 1034; Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. North Carolina Corp. Commission, 206 U. S. 1, 51 L. ed. 933, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585, 11 Ann. Cas. 398; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Tompkins, 176 U. S. 167, 44 L. ed. 417, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 336; San Diego Land & Town Co. v. National City, 174 U. S. 753, 754, 43 L. ed. 1159, 1160, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 804; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 226, 41 L. ed. 979, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581; Covington & L. Turnp. Road Co. v. Sanford, 164 U. S. 578, 41 L. ed. 560, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 198; Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 362, 38 L. ed. 1014, 56 L. ed.

4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047; Monongahela Nav. Co. v. United States, 148 U. S. 312, 37 L. ed. 463, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 622; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 134 U. S. 418, 33 L. ed. 970, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 209, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 462, 702; Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 141, 24 L. ed. 89; Railroad Commission Cases, 116 U. S. 307, 29 L. ed. 636, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 334, 388, 1191; Central R. Co. v. Railroad Commission, 161 Fed. 995; Southern P. Co. v. Railroad Comrs. 78 Fed. 265; New Memphis Gas & Light Co. v. Memphis, 72 Fed. 952; Allnutt v. Inglis, 12 East, 527, 11 Revised Rep. 482; Ames v. Union P. R. Co. 64 Fed. 165; Des Moines v. Des Moines Waterworks Co. 95 Iowa, 348, 64 N. W. 269; Cedar Rapids Water Co. v. Cedar Rapids, 118 Iowa, 234, 91 N. W. 1081.

The rule that the fair return must not be less than the legal rate of interest is justified on reason and authority.

Willcox v. Consolidated Gas Co. 212 U. S. 19, 53 L. ed. 382, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192, 15 Ann. Cas. 1034; Brymer v. Butler Water Co. 179 Pa. 251, 36 L.R.A. 260, 36 Atl. 249; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Philadelphia County, 220 Pa. 115, 15 L.R.A.(N.S.) 108, 68 Atl. 676; Chicago Union Traction Co. v. State Board, 114 Fed. 561; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Brown, 123 Fed. 951; Central R. Co. v. Railroad Commission, 161 Fed. 925; Milwaukee Electric R. & Light Co. v. Milwaukee, 87 Fed. 585; Southern P. Co. v. Railroad Comrs. 78 Fed. 261; People ex rel. Jamaica Water Supply Co. v. State Tax Comrs. 128 App. Div. 13, 112 N. Y. Supp. 392; Spring Valley Waterworks v. San Francisco, 124 Fed. 598; International Bridge Co. v. Canada Southern R. Co. 7 Ont. App. Rep. 226, affirmed in L. R. 8 App. Cas. 723.

It is not enough that something is earned for the stockholders. They are entitled to fair compensation.

Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 534, 547, 42 L. ed. 844, 849, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Southern P. Co. v. Railroad Comrs. 78 Fed. 261; Des Moines v. Des Moines Waterworks Co. 95 Iowa, 363, 64 N. W. 269; Cedar Rapids Water Co. v. Cedar Rapids, 118 Iowa, 236, 91 N. W. 1081.

To deprive the plaintiff of a fair and reasonable earning capacity, such as the citizen enjoys as to his money and as to all types of his property, is to deprive it of the equal protection of the laws.

Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 134 U. S. 418, 33 L. ed. 970, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 209, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 462, 702.

The state may be said to have appropriated the gas plant to public use. For the appropriation it is bound to make a just, fair, and reasonable compensation.

San Diego Water Co. v. San Diego, 118 Cal. 556, 38 L.R.A. 460, 62 Am. St. Rep. 261, 50 Pac. 633.

The question as to rate of income is what rate of dividends would induce prudent men to invest in stock of the company representing the real value of the property as a going business.

Willcox v. Consolidated Gas Co. 212 U. S. 19, 53 L. ed. 382, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192, 15 Ann. Cas. 1034.

It is proper to apply the prescribed rate to the past experience of the company, taking into consideration the increased cost of operation after the time when the new rate is applied.

Seaboard Air Line R. Co. v. Railroad Commission, 155 Fed. 792.

An annual income of 4.41 per cent on value of property, or 3.30 per cent on stock, after deducting fixed charges, is unreasonably low.

Spring Valley Waterworks v. San Francisco, 124 Fed. 574.

The compensation should be for the real, substantial value employed, and no legislation can diminish by one jot the rotund expression of the Constitution.

Virginia & T. R. Co. v. Henry, 8 Nev. 170; Spring Valley Waterworks v. San Francisco, supra.

The power to regulate is not the power to destroy, and limitation is not equivalent to confiscation.

Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 134 U. S. 418, 33 L. ed. 970, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 209, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 462, 702; Southern P. Co. v. Railroad Comrs. 78 Fed. 236.

Whatever the state may do, even with the creation of its own will, it must be in subordination to the inhibition of the Federal Constitution.

Vicksburg v. Vicksburg Waterworks Co. 202 U. S. 453, 50 L. ed. 1102, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 660, 6 Ann. Cas. 253; Omaha Water Co. v. Omaha, 12 L.R.A.(N.S.) 736, 77 C. C. A. 267, 147 Fed. 7, 8 Ann. Cas. 614; Omaha Water Co. v. Omaha, 218 U. S. 180, 54 L. ed. 991, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 615; Railroad Tax Cases, 13 Fed. 754.

When just compensation is determined, the least infraction of it is confiscation, and is a violation of the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States and § 13 of art. 1 of the Constitution of Iowa, because it is a taking of private property for public use without just compensation.

Spring Valley Waterworks v. San Francisco, supra.

The plaintiff must have just compensation. Any schedule of rates is forbidden which produces injustice. The quantum of injustice is immaterial. There must be no injustice. Justice must be applied.

Southern P. Co. v. Railroad Comrs. 78 Fed. 261.

The company is entitled to earn not only a fair return upon all the money expended by it in the service, but also on obligations incurred for such loans.

Railroad Commission Cases, 116 U. S. 307, 29 L. ed. 636, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 334, 388, 1191; Chicago & G. T. R. Co. v. Wellman, 143 U. S. 339, 36 L. ed. 176, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 400; New Memphis Gas & Light Co. v. Memphis, 72 Fed. 952.

The question as to the competency and legal effect of evidence as bearing upon a question of Federal law is a Federal question.

Dower v. Richards, 151 U. S. 658, 38 L. ed. 305, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 452, 17 Mor. Min. Rep. 704; Mackay v. Dillon, 4 How. 421, 11 L. ed. 1038; Gelston v. Hoyt, 3 Wheat. 246, 4 L. ed. 381.

The refusal of the state court to consider a Federal question which is controlling in a case is equivalent to a decision against the Federal right involved therein.

Des Moines Nav. & R. Co. v. Iowa Homestead Co. 123 U. S. 552, 31 L. ed. 202, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 217.

It is not necessary that the express language of the opinion should recite that a Federal question has been decided, but it is sufficient for the purpose of the jurisdiction of this court, that the state court, by its decisions, necessarily adjudicates the defense under the Federal Constitution.

El Paso & N. E. R. Co. v. Gutierrez, 215 U. S. 90, 54 L. ed. 108, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 21; Wabash R. Co. v. Adelbert College, 208 U. S. 38-44, 52 L. ed. 379-381, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 182; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Sowers, 213 U. S. 55, 53 L. ed. 695, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 397; San José Land & Water Co. v. San José Ranch Co. 189 U. S. 179-181, 47 L. ed. 766-769, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 487; Fire Asso. of Philadelphia v. New York, 119 U. S. 110-120, 30 L. ed. 342-347, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 108; Murdock v. Memphis, 20 Wall. 590, 22 L. ed. 429; Mallett v. North Carolina, 181 U. S. 589, 590, 45 L. ed. 1015, 1016, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 730, 15 Am. Crim. Rep. 241.

The judgment and decree of the supreme court of Iowa could not have been given, affirming the decision of the district court of Linn county, Iowa, without deciding Federal questions adversely to the plaintiff in error.

California Power Works v. Davis, 151 U. S. 389, 38 L. ed. 206, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350; Armstrong v. Athens County, 16 Pet. 281, 10 L. ed. 965.

A decision of the Federal question in terms is not essential. If a decision of such question was necessarily involved in the judgment rendered, it is not a matter of importance that the state court avoids all reference to the question.

Chapman v. Goodnow (Chapman v. Crane) 123 U. S. 540, 31 L. ed. 235, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 211; Chicago L. Ins. Co. v. Needles, 113 U. S. 574, 28 L. ed. 1084, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681; Bell's Gap R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 134 U. S. 232, 33 L. ed. 892, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 533; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 226, 41 L. ed. 979, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581; Consolidated Coal Co. v. Illinois, 185 U. S. 203, 46 L. ed. 872, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 616.

The record in this case not only discloses that the rights of the plaintiff in error under the Constitution were set up and were expressly denied, but such was the necessary effect in law of the judgment of the supreme court of Iowa.

Appleby v. Buffalo, 221 U. S. 524, 55 L. ed. 838, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 699; Sayward v. Denny, 158 U. S. 181, 183, 39 L. ed. 941, 942, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 777; Harding v. Illinois 196 U. S. 78, 49 L. ed. 394, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 176; Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. Texas, 212 U. S. 86, 97, 53 L. ed. 417, 424, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 220.

This is a suit in equity in which a trial was had de novo in the supreme court of Iowa, and the complaint here made against the decision of the supreme court of Iowa is not merely that its decision was erroneous as to the weight and sufficiency of the evidence to prove the facts, but that the court erred in its decision as to the competency and legal effect of the evidence as bearing upon the questions arising under the Federal Constitution, and in such cases the decision and the facts will be reviewed by this court.

Mackay v. Dillon, 4 How. 421, 11 L. ed. 1038; Almonester v. Kenton, 9 How. 1-7, 13 L. ed. 21-23; Moreland v. Page, 20 How. 522, 15 L. ed. 1009; Dower v. Richards, 151 U. S. 658, 38 L. ed. 305, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 452, 17 Mor. Min. Rep. 704; Republican River Bridge Co. v. Kansas P. R. Co. 92 U. S. 315, 23 L. ed. 515.

The question of reasonableness of rates is not merely one of fact, but involves one of constitutional law.

Hastings v. Ames, 15 C. C. A. 628, 32 U. S. App. 485, 68 Fed. 728.

The reasons for examining into the facts set forth in the case of Knoxville v. Knoxville Water Co. 212 U. S. 1, 53 L. ed. 371, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 148, have full application to the case at bar.

Implied obligations of contracts come within the protection of § 10, art. 1, of the Constitution of the United States.

Stewart v. Jefferson, 116 U. S. 135, 29 L. 56 L. ed.

ed. 588, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 332; Burton v. Koshkonong, 4 Fed. 377; Cary Library v. Bliss, 151 Mass. 364, 7 L.R.A. 765, 25 N. E. 92.

The state can no more impair the obligation of its own contracts than it can the contracts of individuals.

Woodruff v. Trapnall, 10 How. 207, 13 L. ed. 390; Providence Bank v. Billings, 4 Pet. 560, 7 L. ed. 955; Green v. Biddle, 8 Wheat. 92, 5 L. ed. 570; Fletcher v. Peek, 6 Cranch, 127, 3 L. ed. 175.

A valid contract of a municipal corporation is just as sacred from legislative interference or construction as one of individual citizens.

Shinn v. Cunningham, 120 Iowa, 383, 94 N. W. 941; People ex rel. Seeley v. Hall, 8 Colo. 485, 9 Pac. 34; Erie v. Griswold, 184 Pa. 435, 39 Atl. 231; Atkins v. Randolph, 31 Vt. 226.

The prohibition of the Constitution against the passage of laws impairing the obligation of contracts applies to the contracts of the state and to those of its agents, acting under its authority, as well as to contracts between individuals; and that obligation is impaired in the sense of the Constitution when the means by which a contract at the time of its execution could be enforced, that is, by which the parties could be obliged to perform it, are rendered less efficacious by legislation operating directly upon those means.

Wolff v. New Orleans, 103 U. S. 358, 26 L. ed. 395; Von Hoffman v. Quincy, 4 Wall. 535, 18 L. ed. 403.

The discount provision is the language of the city. It grants a valuable right, and there is an obligation on the part of the city not to deprive the plaintiff in error thereof.

Detroit v. Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. 184 U. S. 368, 46 L. ed. 592, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 410; State ex rel. St. Louis v. Laclede Gaslight Co. 102 Mo. 472, 22 Am. St. Rep. 789, 14 S. W. 974, 15 S. W. 383; New Orleans Gaslight Co. v. Louisiana Light & H. P. & Mfg. Co. 115 U. S. 650, 29 L. ed. 516, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 252; Delaware Railroad Tax, 18 Wall. 206, 21 L. ed. 888; Greenwood v. Union Freight R. Co. 105 U. S. 20, 26 L. ed. 964; New Jersey v. Yard, 95 U. S. 113, 24 L. ed. 354.

The granting of a franchise to a corporation is a contract with mutual considerations, and justice and good policy alike require that the protection of the law should be assured to it.

The Binghamton Bridge (Chenango Bridge Co. v. Binghamton Bridge Co.) 3 Wall. 51, 18 L. ed. 137; West River Bridge Co. v. Dix, 6 How. 507, 12 L. ed. 535

Messrs. James W. Jamison and William Chamberlain argued the cause and filed a brief for defendants in error:

The Supreme Court of the United States will determine for itself whether the record presents a Federal question conferring jurisdiction of this court to review the opinion of the supreme court of a state on writ of error.

Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Nebraska, 170 U. S. 57, 42 L. ed. 948, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 513; Douglas v. Kentucky, 168 U. S. 488, 42 L. ed. 553, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 199; Covington & L. Turnp. Road Co. v. Sanford, 164 U. S. 578, 41 L. ed. 560, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 193.

No Federal question is raised by the contention that the 90-cent ordinance impairs the discount provision of plaintiff in error's ordinance 427, and thus impairs the obligation of the contract.

Central Land Co. v. Laidley, 159 U. S. 103, 40 L. ed. 91, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 80; Weber v. Rogan, 188 U. S. 10, 47 L. ed. 363, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 263; Tampa Waterworks Co. v. Tampa, 199 U. S. 241, 50 L. ed. 170, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 23.

The solution of the immunity or privilege, and the only immunity or privilege specially set up by the plaintiff, depends upon the evidence. This evidence cannot be re-examined by the Supreme Court of the United States on a writ of error to the state supreme court of Iowa, but the finding of facts by that court is conclusive.

Quimby v. Boyd, 128 U. S. 489, 32 L. ed. 503, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 147; Egan v. Hart, 165 U. S. 188, 41 L. ed. 680, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 288; Dower v. Richards, 151 U. S. 658, 38 L. ed. 305, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 452, 17 Mor. Min. Rep. 704; Thayer v. Spratt, 189 U. S. 346, 47 L. ed. 845, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 576; Rhodes v. Iowa, 170 U. S. 412, 42 L. ed. 1088, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 664; E. Bement & Sons v. National Harrow Co. 186 U. S. 83, 46 L. ed. 1064, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747; Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 193 U. S. 53, 48 L. ed. 614, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 396; Adams v. Church, 193 U. S. 510, 48 L. ed. 769, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 512; Chapman & D. Land Co. v. Bigelow, 206 U. S. 41, 51 L. ed. 953, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 679.

Assuming that this court will accept the conclusions of the supreme court of the state of Iowa as to the facts found by it from the evidence, the Federal question of immunity or privilege thus raised and presented is not the subject of review, and does not present a Federal question so as to invoke the jurisdiction of this court on a writ of error, as provided in U. S. Rev. Stat. § 709, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 575, but in order that this court may review a Federal question thus raised, it must be made affirmatively to appear from the record that the immunity or privilege set up and claimed must have been passed upon by the supreme court of the state of Iowa, and the immunity or privilege denied by that court as a matter of law, and not denied because of a finding of facts.

Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 258, 41 L. ed. 994, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 992; Detroit City R. Co. v. Guthard, 114 U. S. 133, 29 L. ed. 118, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 811.

Messrs. James W. Jamison and John M. Redmond filed a brief on the motion to dismiss or affirm:

Plaintiff in error was not denied the due process of law guaranteed to it under the Federal Constitution.

Mason v. Messenger, 17 Iowa, 261; Foule v. Mann, 53 Iowa, 42, 3 N. W. 814; Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 97, 24 L. ed. 616; Iowa C. R. Co. v. Iowa, 160 U. S. 389, 40 L. ed. 467, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 344; Leeper v. Texas, 139 U. S. 462, 35 L. ed. 225, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 577; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Schmidt, 177 U. S. 230, 44 L. ed. 747, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 620; Simon v. Craft, 182 U. S. 427, 45 L. ed. 1165, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 836; Pearson v. Yewdall, 95 U. S. 294, 24 L. ed. 436; Morley v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 146 U. S. 162, 36 L. ed. 925, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 54; Howard v. Kentucky, 200 U. S. 164, 50 L. ed. 421, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 189; Central Land Co. v. Laidley, 159 U. S. 103, 40 L. ed. 91, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 80; Reetz v. Michigan, 188 U. S. 505, 47 L. ed. 563, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 390.

A state legislature may limit the amount of charges or rates which individuals or corporations who have devoted their property to a use in which the public have an interest may charge, provided that the rates imposed are reasonable.

Cotting v. Kansas City Stock Yards Co. (Cotting v. Goddard) 183 U. S. 79, 46 L. ed. 92, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30; Peik v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 94 U. S. 164, 24 L. ed. 97; Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 113, 24 L. ed. 77; Brass v. North Dakota, 153 U. S. 391, 38 L. ed. 757, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 670, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 857.

The legislature of the state of Iowa may delegate the power to regulate and limit the rates which individuals or corporations may charge for furnishing gas, water, and light to the inhabitants of a municipal corporation.

Cedar Rapids Water Co. v. Cedar Rapids, 118 Iowa, 234, 91 N. W. 1081.

The exercise of this right is presumed to have been in the proper exercise of the power conferred.

Knoxville v. Knoxville Water Co. 212 U. S. 1, 53 L. ed. 871, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 148.

There was no allegation in the pleading that any statute of the state of Iowa conferring power upon municipal councils to regulate the price of gas deprived the plaintiff in error of the right to have the rate thus fixed by municipal council reviewed by the courts of the state of Iowa. An ordinance of a municipal council in pursuance of legislative power conferred upon it to regulate the price of gas, water, or light is subject to review by the courts as to whether the rate thus fixed is reasonable or not.

Des Moines v. Des Moines Waterworks Co. 95 Iowa, 348, 64 N. W. 269.

The question of whether a rate or rent fixed in pursuance of legislative authority is so low as to operate to deprive a corporation or individual of his property is a subject of judicial inquiry.

Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 42 L. ed. 819, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418.

The only question of Federal jurisdiction attempted to be raised is fictitious and frivolous and colorable only.

Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 147 U. S. 531, 37 L. ed. 267, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 353; St. Louis, G. & Ft. S. R. Co. v. Missouri, 156 U. S. 478, 39 L. ed. 502, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 443; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Chicago, 176 U. S. 646, 44 L. ed. 622, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 509; Clarke v. McDade, 165 U. S. 168, 41 L. ed. 673, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 284; Iowa v. Rood, 187 U. S. 87, 47 L. ed. 86, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 49; Wabash R. Co. v. Flannigan, 192 U. S. 29, 48 L. ed. 328, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224; Swafford v. Templeton, 185 U. S. 487, 46 L. ed. 1005, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 783; New Orleans v. New Orleans Waterworks Co. 142 U. S. 79, 35 L. ed. 943, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 142; Millingar v. Hartuppee, 6 Wall. 258, 18 L. ed. 829; McCain v. Des Moines, 174 U. S. 168, 43 L. ed. 936, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 644; Wilson v. North Carolina, 169 U. S. 586, 42 L. ed. 865, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 435; Kimball v. Kimball, 174 U. S. 158, 43 L. ed. 932, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 639; Patterson v. Colorado, 205 U. S. 454, 51 L. ed. 879, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 556, 10 Ann. Cas. 689.

A court of equity ought not to interfere by injunction with state legislation fixing the gas rate before a fair trial has been made by continuing the business under such rates where the rates complained of show a very narrow line of division between possible confiscation and proper regulation as based upon the finding as to the value of the property, and the division depends upon variant opinions as to value, and upon results in the future from operating under such rates.

New York v. Consolidated Gas Co. 212 U. S. 19, 53 L. ed. 382, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192, 15 Ann. Cas. 1034.

56 L. ed.

Messrs. John N. Hughes, James H. Trewin, and John M. Grimm filed a brief in opposition to the motion to dismiss or affirm.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a bill brought by the plaintiff in error to restrain the enforcement of an ordinance fixing 90 cents per thousand cubic feet as the highest price to be charged in Cedar Rapids for gas. As the ordinance was passed in 1906, and had not yet been enforced, the supreme court of the state dismissed the bill without prejudice to a later suit after it should have been given a fair test. 144 Iowa, 426, 138 Am. St. Rep. 299, 120 N. W. 966. *The plain-[667 tiff, having specially set up that the ordinance violated the contract clause of the Constitution (article 1, § 10) and the 14th Amendment, brings the case here. There is a motion to dismiss, but the constitutional questions appear upon the record, and are not so frivolous as to warrant that summary course.

The supposed contract arises from a term in the ordinance under which the plaintiff was granted a renewal of its franchise in 1896. By § 3, "In consideration of the privileges herein granted to said company it shall furnish to the inhabitants of said city gas for lighting at a price not to exceed $1.80 per thousand feet, and 20 cents per thousand cubic feet discount if consumers pay on or before the 10th of each month after consumption," etc. It is admitted that under the laws of Iowa the rate could be changed by the city, but it is argued that the quoted words import a contract that it shall not be changed to such an extent as to make impossible the offer of a discount for prompt payment,—that being the cheapest and most efficient way of collecting the price of the gas. The state court assumed that there was no contract in the case, and in discussing what it treated as the sole question, whether the plaintiff would be deprived of a fair compensation for its services, pointed out that the company could secure payment by requiring a deposit in advance or by making other reasonable rules.

We are of opinion that there was no contract on the part of the city that the price should be kept high enough to allow a discount for prompt payment. The general power reserved to regulate rates was limited only by the 14th Amendment. The words relied upon by the plaintiff express its promise in consideration of the privileges granted,—not a promise by the city. Knoxville Water Co. v. Knoxville, 189 U. S. 434, 437, 47 L. ed. 887, 891, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep.

531. It is true that the contract was in the form of an ordinance, but the ordinance was drawn as a contract, to be accepted, and it was accepted *by the plaintiff; it contained reciprocal undertakings, the one in question being that of the plaintiff, as we have said; and it was subject to the power retained by the city to regulate rates. That power, it was expressly provided by the Iowa statute, was not to be abridged by ordinance, resolution, or contract. Code of 1897, § 725, 22 G. A. (1888) chap. 16.

Upon the issue under the 14th Amendment, the plaintiff argues on the strength of Rev. Stat. § 709, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 575, that the facts are open to re-examination here. By that section it is provided that a writ of error to a state court "shall have the same effect as if the judgment or decree complained of had been rendered or passed in a court of the United States" It is argued that, as the decree of a state court can be reviewed only by writ of error, the foregoing words give to a writ of error in a chancery case the effect of an appeal, and open the evidence to re-examination to the same extent as upon an appeal. A suggestion to that effect was made in Republican River Bridge Co. v. Kansas P. R. Co. 92 U. S. 315, 317, 23 L. ed. 515, 516, but the practice and decisions from an early date have been the other way. Egan v. Hart, 165 U. S. 188, 189, 41 L. ed. 680, 681, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 300; Almonester v. Kenton, 9 How. 1, 7, 13 L. ed. 21, 23; Dower v. Richards, 151 U. S. 658, 663, 38 L. ed. 305, 307, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 452, 17 Mor. Min. Rep. 704; Gardner v. Bonesteel, 180 U. S. 362, 365, 370, 45 L. ed. 574, 577, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 399; Thayer v. Spratt, 189 U. S. 346, 353, 47 L. ed. 845, 849, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 576; German Sav. & L. Soc. v. Dormitzer, 192 U. S. 125, 129, 48 L. ed. 373, 376, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 221; Adams v. Church, 193 U. S. 510, 513, 48 L. ed. 769, 770, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 512.

But, of course, findings, either at law or in equity, may depend upon questions that are re-examinable here. The admissibility of evidence or its sufficiency to warrant the conclusion reached may be denied; or the conclusion may be a composite of fact and law, such as ownership or contract; or in some way the record may disclose that the finding necessarily involved a ruling within the appellate jurisdiction of this court. Such questions, properly saved, must be answered, and, so far as it is necessary to examine *the evidence in order to answer them or to prevent an evasion of real issues, the evidence will be examined. Kansas City Southern R. Co. v. C. H. Albers Commission Co. Feb. 26, 1912. [223 U. S. 573, ante, 556, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 316.] For instance, in this case the finding of the court that it was not prepared to say that a 90-cent rate was confiscatory may perhaps be taken to have been made subject to the admission that the rate was too low to permit a discount for prompt payment, and, if so, opens the question whether it was not confiscatory on that account, as matter of law. The plaintiff presents a number of such objections to the decision of the court below, although confused with arguments on pure matter of fact.

It would require a very clear case to warrant the reversal of the decree of a state court, which, though final in form, merely postpones a decision upon the merits for further experience. The present one is far from being such a case. To refer in the first instance to the point just mentioned, we cannot say as matter of law that at 90 cents a thousand feet the company will be unable to collect payment without losses that will amount to a taking of its property. Then again, although it is argued that the court excluded going value, the court expressly took into account the fact that the plant was in successful operation. What it excluded was the good will or advantage incident to the possession of a monopoly, so far as that might be supposed to give the plaintiff the power to charge more than a reasonable price. Willcox v. Consolidated Gas Co. 212 U. S. 19, 52, 53 L. ed. 382, 399, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192, 15 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1034. An adjustment of this sort under a power to regulate rates has to steer between Scylla and Charybdis. On the one side, if the franchise is taken to mean that the most profitable return that could be got, free from competition, is protected by the 14th Amendment, then the power to regulate is null. On the other hand, if the power to regulate withdraws the protection of the Amendment altogether, then the property *is nought. This is not a matter of economic theory, but of fair interpretation of a bargain. Neither extreme can have been meant. A midway between them must be hit.

In this case the court fixed a value on the plant that considerably exceeded its cost, and estimated that, under the ordinance, the return would be over 6 per cent. Its attitude was fair, and we do not feel called upon to follow the plaintiff into a nice discussion of details. We perhaps should have adopted a rule as to depreciation somewhat more favorable to the plaintiff, or, it may be, might have allowed this or that item that the state court struck out, but there is nothing of which we can take notice in the case that could warrant us in changing the result, or in saying that the plaintiff did not get as much as it could expect when leave was reserved for it to try again.

Decree affirmed.

LEWIS P. WINGERT, Appt.,

v.

FIRST NATIONAL BANK OF HAGERS-TOWN et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 670-672.)

National banks — construction of new building — recovery of damages by stockholder.

1. A stockholder in a national bank cannot recover damages or make any claim against the bank for tearing down its old building and constructing a new one during the pendency of an action by him to restrain it from doing so, whether such action by the bank was lawful or unlawful.

[For other cases, see Banks, IV. d, 1, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — taken for costs only — dismissal.

2. An appeal from a decree refusing to enjoin the construction of a new building by a national bank, which is prosecuted as one for costs only, because of the completion of the new building pending the litigation, will be dismissed.

[For other cases, See Appeal and Error, VII. i, 1, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 176.]

Argued February 29, 1912. Decided March 11, 1912.

A PPEAL from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit to review a decree affirming a decree of the Circuit Court for the District of Maryland, dismissing a bill by a stockholder to restrain a national bank from pulling down its bank building and erecting a new building in its place, the upper floors to be let for offices. Appeal dismissed.

See same case below, 99 C. C. A. 315, 175 Fed. 739.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Henry F. Wingert argued the cause, and, with Mr. Miller Wingert, filed a brief for appellant.

Messrs. Charles A. Little and George R. Gaither argued the cause and filed a brief for appellees.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a bill to restrain the defendants, a national bank, its directors and a contractor employed by them, from pulling down the bank building and erecting a six-story building in its place,—the first floor to be used for banking purposes, the other floors to be let for offices. The plaintiff is a holder of stock in the bank, and alleges that the intended construction is ultra vires and commercially unwise. The circuit court dismissed the bill on the ground that, in the absence of bad faith, it would not revise the judgment of the majority of the directors on the question of policy, and that a national bank lawfully might turn its building to the best account by adding upper stories for offices to let. The circuit court of appeals affirmed the decree on the opinion below. 99 C. C. A. 315, 175 Fed. 739. Pending the litigation the new structure has been built.

Objections are interposed on both sides,—on the part of the defendants, to the right of a stockholder to prevent by injunction acts beyond the power of the corporation; on that of the plaintiff, to the reception of the bank's answer, because it was adopted at a meeting of which the plaintiff's brother, a protesting director, was not notified. Without giving the slightest countenance to either, it is enough to say that the whole case is disposed of by the erection of the new bank. No doubt, after the filing of a bill for an injunction defendants proceed at their peril, even though no injunction is issued; and, if they go on to inflict an actionable wrong upon the plaintiff, will not be allowed to defeat the jurisdiction of the court by their own act. In such a case the bill will be retained for the assessment of damages. Milkman v. Ordway, 106 Mass. 232, 253; Lewis v. North Kingston, 16 R. I. 15, 27 Am. St. Rep. 724, 11 Atl. 173. But in the present matter the only ground for further prosecution of the case is costs. There are no damages for which the plaintiff could make any claim against the corporation for doing as it saw fit with its own, lawfully or unlawfully. Furthermore, a recovery would be futile. It would cost the plaintiff as much as it brought in. To transmute the cause of action into a demand for damages against the directors alone would be an essential change, and probably would do the plaintiff no good, as it has been held in well-considered cases that that action also would not lie. Smith v. Hurd, 12 Met. 371, 46 Am. Dec. 690; Allen v. Curtis, 26 Conn. 456. As the appeal really is prosecuted only for costs, it must be dismissed. Nixon v. Union Paper-Bag Mach. Co. 105 U. S. 766, 26 L. ed. 959. See Richardson v. McChesney, 218 U. S. 487, 54 L. ed. 1121, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 43. But we are far from intimating that the plaintiff loses anything by this disposition of the case. Brown v. Schleier, 55 C. C. A. 475, 118 Fed. 981.

Appeal dismissed.

673]*TANG TUN and Leung Kum Wui, Petitioners,
v.

HARRY EDSSELL, Chinese Inspector in Charge at the Port of Sumas, Washington, for the United States Government.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 673-682.)

Courts — exclusion of Chinese — conclusiveness of decision of Department of Commerce and Labor.

1. The decision of the Secretary of Commerce and Labor, affirming the denial by the inspector in charge of the right of a person of Chinese descent to admission into the United States, is, under the acts of Congress of August 18, 1894 (28 Stat. at L. 372, 390, chap. 301, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1303), and of February 14, 1903. (32 Stat. at L. 825, 828, chap. 552, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1909, p. 87), making the decision of the appropriate immigration officer final unless reversed on appeal to the Secretary of Commerce and Labor, conclusive, and not subject to review by the court, unless it affirmatively appears that they acted improperly or abused their discretion.

[For other cases, see Courts, 243-245, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Aliens — Chinese exclusion — acts of inspector.

2. The rights of an applicant of Chinese descent for admission to the United States, who presents papers bearing apparent indorsement of the collector, showing the applicant's admission on a former arrival from China, are not violated by the acts of the inspector in examining the records of the customhouse, which contain a statement over the apparent signature of the same collector that the applicant had been rejected on his previous application, and in asking for an explanation of such apparent rejection, nor by his communicating with immigration officers after an order rejecting such applicant, to the end that the matter should be sifted, and that witnesses who had made affidavits in support of the applicant's appeal should be carefully examined.

[For other cases, see Aliens, VI. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Aliens — Chinese exclusion — acts of inspector.

3. An inspector who has rejected the application of a person of Chinese descent for admission into the United States cannot, on appeal from a writ of habeas corpus by such applicant, be held guilty of unfair or improper conduct in inserting in the record transmitted by him to the Secretary of Commerce and Labor statements as to the result of investigations made by him as to arrivals and clearings of vessels at the time of an application for admission by the same applicant on a previous return from China, comments on the practice which had obtained in dealing with Chinese applicants for admission, and references to entries in the official records, where such matters were called to the attention of the witnesses for the applicant, are not shown to have been false, or made with any attempt to deceive the Secretary, and on the hearing of the writ of habeas corpus it was stipulated that the matter should be heard on the record, including such statements, comments, and references, and that the writ should be dismissed if the court should find that there had been no abuse of discretion.

[For other cases, see Aliens, VI. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Aliens — Chinese exclusion — acts of inspector.

4. An inspector who had rejected the application of a person of Chinese descent for admission into the United States cannot be held guilty of bad faith or improper conduct in forwarding to the Secretary of Commerce and Labor papers found by examination of the records in the cases of other Chinese persons who arrived on the same steamer with the applicant at the time of an application for admission on a previous return from China, which records show his rejection at such time, although the papers presented by him on the later application show an apparent admission.

[For other cases, see Aliens, VI. b, 1, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Aliens — Chinese exclusion — fairness of hearing.

5. The refusal to admit a person of Chinese descent into the United States, on the ground that he was not born in the United States, does not show a denial of a fair hearing, where all but one of the witnesses except himself to testify on such point were shown to be unworthy of belief, and that one relied upon his identification of him at eighteen, as the same person he had last seen as a boy of five years old.

[For other cases, see Aliens, VI. b, 1, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Aliens — Chinese exclusion — decision of appeal.

6. The decision of an appeal from the rejection of the application of a person of Chinese descent for admission into the United States is none the less that of the Secretary of Commerce and Labor, because communicated by a telegram from the Assistant Secretary.

[For other cases, see Aliens, VI. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Aliens — Chinese exclusion — finality of decision on appeal.

7. The finality of the decision by the Secretary of Commerce and Labor of an appeal from the decision of an inspector rejecting the application of a person of Chinese descent for admission into the United States is not affected by the fact that the Department held the case under consideration for less than two days, where the issue was a narrow one and permitted of speedy disposition.

NOTE.—As to what Chinese persons are excluded from United States—see note to Wong You v. United States, 104 C. C. A. 538.

[For other cases, see Aliens, VI. b, 1, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — Chinese exclusion — taking entire case to the circuit court of appeals.

8. The entire case may be taken to the circuit court of appeals for review where the district court took jurisdiction of a writ of habeas corpus by a person of Chinese descent, whose application for admission into the United States had been rejected, and then proceeded to determine the merits, sustaining his claim of citizenship.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 888-894, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 45.]

Argued and submitted November 7, 1911.
Decided March 11, 1912.

ON WRIT of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit to review a judgment which, reversing the judgment of the District Court for the Western District of Washington, Northern Division, held that there was no ground for intervention by the courts to reverse the decision of the Secretary of Commerce and Labor, affirming the decision of an inspector of customs, refusing admission into the United States of a person of Chinese descent. Affirmed.

See same case below, 93 C. C. A. 644, 168 Fed. 488.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. James A. Kerr submitted the cause for petitioners.

Assistant Attorney General Harr argued the cause and filed a brief for respondent.

674] *Mr. Justice Hughes delivered the opinion of the court:

On June 22, 1906, Tang Tun and Leung Kum Wui, his wife, Chinese persons, sought entry to the United States at the port of Sumas, state of Washington, and were denied admission by the inspector in charge, whose order was affirmed by the Secretary of Commerce and Labor. Application was then made to the district court of the United States for a writ of habeas corpus.

It was alleged in the petition that Tang Tun was a citizen of the United States, born in 1879, at Seattle, of parents there domiciled; that, in 1884, he went to China, where he remained thirteen years; that, in 56 L. ed.

1897, he returned to the United States, was admitted by the collector of customs after examination, entered the employ of Wa Chong & Company, in Seattle, and continued with that firm until 1905, when he returned to China for the purpose of marrying; that he was married to Leung Kum Wui in accordance with the laws of China and the consular requirements of the United States; that the officers concerned had improperly conducted the inquiry and had abused their discretion in refusing admission; and that the petitioners were restrained of their liberty without due process of law.

The writ was granted, and the case having been submitted to the district court upon the record of the proceedings on the application for entry and the appeal to the Secretary of Commerce and Labor, it was held that the petitioners had been denied the hearing for which the act of Congress provided, that Tang Tun had established his citizenship, and that he and his wife were entitled to remain in this country. Accordingly, both were discharged from custody. 161 Fed. 618. This decision was reversed by the circuit court of appeals, which reached the conclusion that the requirements of the law had been satisfied and that there was no ground for judicial intervention. 93 C. C. A. 644, 168 Fed. 488. This court issued a writ of certiorari.

The acts of August 18, 1894, chap. 301 (28 Stat. at L. 372, 390, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1303), and of February 14, 1903, chap. 552 (32 Stat. at L. 825, 828, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1909, p. 87), make the decision of the appropriate immigration officer final unless reversed on appeal to the Secretary of Commerce and Labor. And if it does not affirmatively appear that the executive officers have acted in some unlawful or improper way and abused their discretion, their finding upon the question of citizenship must be deemed to be conclusive, and is not subject to review by the court. United States v. Ju Toy, 198 U. S. 253, 49 L. ed. 1040, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 644; Chin Yow v. United States, 208 U. S. 8, 52 L. ed. 369, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 201.

It appears from the record that on his arrival, Tang Tun was promptly examined by the inspector at Sumas. The examination was careful and fair. He testified on June 23, 1906, again on June 27, 1906, and still further on July 5, 1906. He had presented, in support of his application, affidavits which he had taken with him for the purpose of identification when he left the United States in 1905. These affidavits described his parentage, his place of birth, and his residence in this country, substantially as set forth in his petition; and they bore the indorsement of the inspector under date of October 1, 1905. The two white witnesses who had joined in one of the affidavits were examined at Seattle on July 2, 1906, and in the report of the inspector at that place, it is stated that the Chinese witness who made the remaining affidavit of identification had been notified to appear and had informed the inspector that he did not care to testify.

As already noted, the applicant asserted that he had been admitted to the United States in 1897, after examination, by the collector of customs, and a copy of the identification papers he then had was produced, bearing what purported to be the indorsement of the collector as to the fact of admission. The inspector found, however, *that in the records of the customs office at Port Townsend, Washington, the port at which he had arrived in 1897, it was stated that he had been rejected. On his re-examination, Tang Tun was questioned as to the discrepancy. He was also told that the witnesses who had made the identification affidavits in 1905 had been examined and that their testimony was not satisfactory; and he was asked whether he could furnish any additional testimony as to his nativity. Apparently he had nothing further to submit, and the inspector made an order on July 5, 1906, rejecting his application.

On the same day Tang Tun was informed of the inspector's decision and of his right to appeal to the Secretary of Commerce and Labor. An appeal was taken and on July 7, 1906, the applicant's attorney notified the inspector that he intended to take additional testimony. An extension of time was granted for this purpose. Several affidavits were presented on behalf of the applicants, and these were forwarded to the office at Seattle, where the witnesses as to disputed points were examined by the inspector. On August 28, 1906, the record of the proceedings, with the exhibits to which we shall presently refer, was forwarded to the Secretary of Commerce and Labor, and a brief discussing the evidence and the course of the proceedings was also submitted on behalf of the applicants under date of August 25, 1906. The record was received by the Secretary of Commerce and Labor on the morning of September 5, 1906, and on the afternoon of the following day a telegram was sent from the Department to the inspector at Sumas, as follows: "Appeal Tang Tun and Leung Gum Wui dismissed. Murray;" and this was confirmed by a letter from the Department. Then followed the habeas corpus proceedings.

It is clear that the applicants had full opportunity to present their evidence and to produce witnesses on their behalf. But it is charged that the inspector who conducted *the inquiry was biased, and [677 that his unfairness is shown by the manner in which he dealt with the question whether Tang Tun had been admitted by the collector in 1897. We do not find this charge to be justified. When it was ascertained that Tang Tun had papers bearing, apparently, the indorsement of the collector, and showing that he had been admitted on his former arrival, it was certainly permissible for the inspector, if indeed it was not his duty, to examine the official records of the customs office to ascertain whatever they might disclose as to the disposition of the case. On finding that these records contained the statement, over what appeared to be the signature of the same collector, that Tang Tun had been rejected, the inspector properly brought this fact to the latter's attention, and asked whether he had any explanation to give. No right of the applicants was violated by the inspector, either in his own action preliminary to the order of rejection, or in his subsequent communication with the Seattle officers to the end that the matter should be sifted and the witnesses who had made affidavits in support of the appeal should be carefully examined.

It is urged, however, that, without the knowledge of the petitioners, and to their serious prejudice, incompetent statements were injected into the record which was submitted to the Secretary of Commerce and Labor. The statements, to which objection was made, had relation to the evidence presented by Tang Tun to support his assertion that the collector had permitted him to enter in 1897. From Tang Tun's identification papers it appeared that he had arrived at Tacoma on April 10, 1897, on the steamer "Tacoma," and had been admitted April 20, 1897. In the customs records it was noted that he had been held at Vancouver, British Columbia, and rejected on May 25, 1897. In his additional evidence he presented affidavits of a special deputy and an inspector of customs under the collector at the time, in which it was stated by both that it was the *prac-[678 tice not to permit Chinese persons to leave the steamer in which they had arrived until after a decision had been made allowing them to enter the United States, and that if the decision was adverse they were returned to China on the same steamer; and that at no time did they recall any steamer remaining in port from April 10 to May 25. In transmitting the record to the Secretary of Commerce and Labor, the inspector reviewed the case; and, referring to the affidavits submitted for the applicants and the impeachment of the office records, he stated that he had "made a careful examination of the customs records showing the arrivals and clearings of vessels in the district of Puget sound in April and May, 1897," that "the steamer 'Tacoma' was shown to have arrived at Tacoma on April 10, 1897, and to have cleared for the Orient on April 16," and that furthermore "the said records showed that no other vessel of the same company was in the harbor at the time of the 'Tacoma's' departure, nor until five days" thereafter. The inspector added that in his examination of the Port Townsend customs records "in order to verify or refute the statements" of the witnesses, he had learned that there were two plans, as a rule, for disposing of the cases of Chinese persons; that is, they were either held on the ship until admitted or rejected, or, if their cases were not disposed of while the ships were in port, they were landed at Victoria, British Columbia, on the outward trips of the vessels, and remained there until notified of the decision. If this were favorable they would be forwarded on local steamers and admitted, and if adverse, they would be informed accordingly and entries would be made to that effect in the record. He added that his information on this point being at first somewhat uncertain, he had verified it by conversations with the members of a Chinese firm who for many years were agents for all oriental steamship lines touching at Seattle, by an investigation conducted at Tacoma, and finally by the testimony (which appeared 679] in the record) of *the witnesses for the applicants; that is, the testimony taken by the inspector after their affidavits had been submitted. In addition, "he found further verification" in the fact that "the Chinese passenger manifests of the Port Townsend office showed that Chinese whose names appeared on arriving manifests of oriental steamers subsequently appear on manifests of local vessels arriving from Victoria and Vancouver," and that a careful examination "of all such local steamer manifests from April 10 to May 25, 1897, fail to reveal the name of Tang Tun on any of them." The inspector also directed the attention of the Secretary to a typewritten list (presented as an exhibit) of the Chinese who had arrived on the steamer "Tacoma" on April 10, 1897, which had been prepared according to the custom prevailing in the office of the collector at that time, and had been found in the Port Townsend records. On this list was the name of Tang Tun, identified by reference to his father, with the word "rejected."

Neither the nature of these statements, nor the manner of their introduction, affords ground for invalidating the proceeding. On the examination of the applicants's witnesses—the former customs official—reference was made in the questions of the examiner to the date of the departure of the steamer "Tacoma," and the inquiry was explicitly directed to the practice of holding Chinese persons at Victoria whose right to enter had not been determined. The point of the inquiry was clearly understood, and not only was there no denial of the practice of detention at Victoria, but the statements of the inspector as to its existence found confirmation in the testimony of the special deputy collector. The list of passengers arriving on the "Tacoma" on April 10, 1897 (being the exhibit to which the inspector referred in his report) was shown to this witness, and he identified the word "rejected" after the name Tang Tun on this list, as being in the collector's handwriting. Both the special deputy and the customs *inspector stated that the [680 signature of the collector on the original identification papers, below the indorsement "Rejected May 25/97," was genuine, as they had also testified that the signature was genuine upon the copy which Tang Tun had, purporting to show his admission.

And it will be observed that it is not shown that the statements of the inspector, of which complaint is made, were false, or that there was any attempt to deceive the Secretary. The writ of habeas corpus was granted in September, 1906. For some reason which the record does not disclose, the case was not brought on for hearing until January 20, 1908, when an order was made for the taking of testimony. Then, instead of adducing evidence to show that these statements of the inspector were false or misleading, it was stipulated (on February 26, 1908) that the matter should be heard upon the record, including the papers which were submitted to the Secretary, and that the writ should be dismissed if the court, upon this record, should find that there had been no abuse of discretion. Had there been ground for saying that the inspector had misled the Secretary by misrepresenting the records to which he referred, or by false assertions as to the matters of fact disclosed by his inquiries, it cannot be doubted that this would have been shown, as there was abundant time for full consideration and inquiry. In these circumstances, it cannot be said that the inspector, in stating the result of his investigations, in commenting upon the practice which had obtained in dealing with Chinese applicants for admission, and in referring to the entries in the official records, was guilty of unfair or improper conduct.

Complaint is also made of the action of the inspector in forwarding to the Secretary the papers in the cases of other Chinese persons who arrived on the steamer "Tacoma" with Tang Tun on April 10, 1897, some of whom had identification papers similar to those of Tang Tun, with the indorsement of the collector, purporting to 681]show their admission, *in conflict with the office records. The inspector called attention to the fact that, in certain cases, after inquiry before the United States Commissioner, and despite the possession of such identification papers, deportation had been ordered, and also that it appeared that all the applicants described in the papers forwarded to the Secretary had been held in British Columbia pending decision. The contents of these papers are not printed in the transcript of record, but we must assume from the description that they were from the official files. Of these the Secretary might at all times take cognizance, and it would be extraordinary indeed to impute bad faith or improper conduct to the executive officers because they examined the records, or acquainted themselves with former official action.

But it is said that the evidence for the applicants was of such an indisputable character that their rejection argues the denial of the fair hearing and consideration of their case to which they were entitled. This contention is not supported. It was proved that Tang Tun had lived at Seattle for several years before he left for China in 1905. The question, however, was whether he was born in the United States. Of the witnesses who professed to testify on this point—other than Tang Tun himself—all save one were shown by their examination to be unworthy of credit; and the knowledge of the one trustworthy witness—a police officer of Seattle—was plainly insufficient to make his testimony controlling. This witness relied upon his identification of the youth of about eighteen years of age, who arrived in 1897, as the same person whom he had last seen as a child some thirteen years before. There remained the testimony of Tang Tun himself, but this, with all the other evidence in the case, was for the consideration of the officers to whom Congress had confided the matter for final decision. The record fails to show that their authority was not fairly exercised, 682]that is, consistently with *the fundamental principles of justice embraced within the conception of due process of law. And, this being so, the merits of the case were not open to judicial examination.

The decision of the appeal was not the less that of the Secretary of Commerce and Labor because communicated by the telegram of Mr. Murray, the Assistant Secretary (Hannibal Bridge Co. v. United States, 221 U. S. 194, 206, 55 L. ed. 699, 703, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 603), later verified by letter from the Department. The statement of the dismissal of the appeal described the decision against the applicants upon the merits, in accordance with the Department's usage. Nor does the fact that the case was held under consideration by the Department less than two days affect the finality of its determination. Although the proceeding had been long pending, the issue was a narrow one and permitted of speedy disposition; and the circumstance that it received immediate attention and the decision was promptly announced is not a basis for attack.

As the District Court took jurisdiction and then proceeded to determine the merits, sustaining Tang Tun's claim of citizenship, the respondent was entitled to carry the entire case to the Circuit Court of Appeals. United States v. Jahn, 155 U. S. 109, 39 L. ed. 87, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 39; Spreckels Sugar Ref. Co. v. McClain, 192 U. S. 397, 407, 48 L. ed. 496, 499, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 376; United States v. Ju Toy, 198 U. S. 253, 259, 49 L. ed. 1040, 1042, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 644. And the judgment of that court, reversing the decision of the District Court, and directing the dismissal of the proceedings, was right.

Judgment affirmed.

*UNITED STATES EX REL. MARY[683
S. NESS, Plff. in Err.,
v.

WALTER L. FISHER,† Secretary of the Interior.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 683-694.)

Mandamus — review of the decision of the Secretary of the Interior.

The decision of the Secretary of the Interior that an application for the purchase of land under the timber and stone act of June 3, 1878 (20 Stat. at L. 89, chap. 151, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1545), must disclose that the applicant has personally examined the land, and that her statement that it is unfit for cultivation, valuable chiefly for timber, uninhabited, and contains no mining or other improvements, cannot be made on information and belief, under § 2 of such act, requiring the statement setting forth such facts to be "verified" by the oath of the applicant, and therefore rejecting the application, is not arbitrary, capricious, or merely discretionary, so as to be controllable by mandamus, where the view taken by him has long prevailed in the Land Department, and been approved by the courts, although some later decisions have adopted the opposite construction.

†Resignation of Richard A. Ballinger as Secretary of the Interior suggested, and Walter L. Fisher, his successor in office, substituted October 23, 1911, as the party defendant in error herein.

NOTE.—As to when mandamus is the proper remedy—see notes to United States ex rel. International Contracting Co. v. Lamont, 39 L. ed. U. S. 160; M'Cluny v. Silliman, 4 L. ed. U. S. 263; Fleming v. Guthrie, 3 L.R.A. 54; Burnsville Turnp. Co. v. State, 3 L.R.A. 265; State ex rel. Charleston, C. & C. R. Co. v. Whitesides, 3 L.R.A. 777; and Ex parte Hurn, 13 L.R.A. 120.

[For other cases, see Mandamus, II. d. 4; Public Lands, 631-633, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 66.]

Argued November 15, 1911. Decided March 11, 1912.

IN ERROR to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia to review a judgment which, reversing a judgment of the Supreme Court of the District, sustained the right of the Secretary of the Interior to require that the statement of an applicant for the purchase of land under the timber and stone act of January 3, 1878, that the land is unfit for cultivation, valuable chiefly for its timber, is uninhabited, and contains no mining or other improvements, shall be verified on personal knowledge. Affirmed.

See same case below, 33 App. D. C. 302. The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Samuel Herrick argued the cause, and, with Mr. S. P. Ness, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The Interior Department regulation here involved is unauthorized and illegal.

Morrill v. Jones, 106 U. S. 466, 27 L. ed. 267, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 423.

Such regulation is destructive of rights conferred by act of Congress.

Adams v. Church, 193 U. S. 510, 48 L. ed. 769, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 512; Williamson v. United States, 207 U. S. 425, 52 L. ed. 278, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 163.

The ruling of the Department has completely disregarded the decision of the United States circuit court of appeals for the seventh circuit, and the more recent decision of the circuit court of appeals for the ninth circuit.

Hoover v. Salling, 49 C. C. A. 26, 110 Fed. 43; Robnett v. United States, 95 C. C. A. 244, 169 Fed. 778.

56 L. ed.

Assistant Attorney General Knaebel argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

A continuous administrative construction, unless clearly erroneous, should be adopted, even though in its absence the courts might be disposed to construe the statute differently.

United States v. Moore, 95 U. S. 760, 763, 24 L. ed. 588, 589; Hastings & D. R. Co. v. Whitney, 132 U. S. 357, 366, 33 L. ed. 363, 367, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 112; United States v. Hammers, 221 U. S. 220, 228, 55 L. ed. 710, 715, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 593.

Mandamus does not lie in this case.

Roberts v. United States, 13 App. D. C. 46; Roberts v. United States, 176 U. S. 221, 231, 44 L. ed. 443, 447, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 376; United States ex rel. Dunlap v. Black, 128 U. S. 40, 32 L. ed. 354, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 12; Merrill, Mandamus, § 57; United States ex rel. International Contracting Co. v. Lamont, 155 U. S. 303, 308, 39 L. ed. 160, 163, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 97; Ex parte Cutting, 94 U. S. 14, 19, 24 L. ed. 49, 50; United States ex rel. Redfield v. Windom, 137 U. S. 636, 644, 34 L. ed. 811, 814, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 197; United States ex rel. Riverside Oil Co. v. Hitchcock, 190 U. S. 316, 324, 47 L. ed. 1074, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 698; Kimberlin v. Commission, 44 C. C. A. 109, 104 Fed. 653; Brown v. Hitchcock, 173 U. S. 473, 476, 43 L. ed. 772, 773, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485; Oregon v. Hitchcock, 202 U. S. 60, 68, 50 L. ed. 935, 938, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 568.

The Department is a special tribunal constituted by law for the express purpose of administering the statutes relating to the disposition of the lands and of deciding all questions and controversies arising under them.

Knight v. United Land Asso. 142 U. S. 161, 181, 35 L. ed. 974, 981, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 258; United States ex rel. Riverside Oil Co. v. Hitchcock, 190 U. S. 316, 324, 47 L. ed. 1074, 1078, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 698.

An action of this kind approaches closely, if indeed it be not clearly in principle, an action against the United States.

Oregon v. Hitchcock, 202 U. S. 60, 68, 50 L. ed. 935, 938, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 568; Louisiana v. Garfield, 211 U. S. 70, 53 L. ed. 92, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 31; Conley v. Ballinger, 216 U. S. 84, 54 L. ed. 393, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224.

Mr. Justice Van Devanter delivered the opinion of the court:

This was a petition, in the supreme court of the District of Columbia, for a writ of mandamus to compel the Secretary of the Interior to accept, as conforming to the timber and stone act of June 3, 1878, 20 Stat. at L. 89, chap. 151, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1545, an application to purchase under that act 160 acres of public land in the Roseberg, Oregon, land district. The respondent answered, but the answer was held insufficient upon demurrer, and judgment was entered awarding the writ as prayed. An appeal to the court of appeals resulted in a reversal of the judgment, with a direction that the petition be dismissed (33 App. D. C. 302), and that ruling is now here for review. Briefly stated, the material facts are these: Being desirous of purchasing the land under the timber and stone act, the relator, Mary S. Ness, filed in the proper local land office a written application which fully conformed to the statutory requirements, unless it was objectionable in that it disclosed that she had not personally examined the land, and that her statement that it was unfit for cultivation, valuable chiefly for its timber, uninhabited and contained no mining or other improvements, was made upon information and belief, and not upon personal knowledge. The register and receiver ruled that the application was objectionable in that regard, and therefore rejected it, subject to her right to appeal. Successive appeals by her to the Commissioner of the General Land Office and the Secretary of the Interior resulted in an affirmation of the ruling of the local officers, the decision of the Secretary being adhered to upon a motion for review. Soon after the act was passed it was construed by the Land Department as requiring that in applications thereunder the statement respecting the character and condition of the land be made upon the personal knowledge of the applicant, save in the particulars which the act declares may be stated upon belief, and it was because of this construction, disclosed in repeated decisions of the Secretary of the Interior and in the regulations issued under the act (see 6 Land Dec. 690]114; Re Walker, 11 Land *Dec. 599; Re Featherstone, 32 Land Dec. 631), that this application was rejected. After its final rejection, that is, after the decision of the Secretary on the motion for review, one William A. Taylor made application at the local land office to purchase the land under the same act, and his application, which appeared to be in conformity with the statutory requirements, was accepted by the local officers and was being carried to final entry when this petition and the answer were filed.

The answer concluded by alleging, in substance, that the respondent was the head of the Land Department, to which the law committed the administration of the timber and stone act and other public land laws; that the duty of determining whether the relator's application conformed to the statutory requirements was not merely ministerial, but involved the exercise of judgment and discretion; that to compel him to accept that application would be to control his judgment and discretion, and to require him to disregard his own decision, in a matter falling within his lawful authority, and that a writ of mandamus could not be used to that end.

Section 2 of the act reads as follows:

"That any person desiring to avail himself of the provisions of this act shall file with the register of the proper district a written statement in duplicate, one of which is to be transmitted to the General Land Office, designating by legal subdivisions the particular tract of land he desires to purchase, setting forth that the same is unfit for cultivation, and valuable chiefly for its timber or stone; that it is uninhabited; contains no mining or other improvements, except for ditch or canal purposes, where any such do exist, save such as were made by or belong to the applicant, nor, as deponent verily believes, any valuable deposit of gold, silver, cinnabar, copper, or coal; that deponent has made no other application under this act; that he does not apply to purchase the same on speculation, *but[691 in good faith to appropriate it to his own exclusive use and benefit; and that he has not, directly, or indirectly, made any agreement or contract, in any way or manner, with any person or persons whatsoever, by which the title which he might acquire from the government of the United States should inure, in whole or in part, to the benefit of any person except himself; which statement must be verified by the oath of the applicant before the register or the receiver of the land office within the district where the land is situated; and if any person taking such oath shall swear falsely in the premises, he shall be subject to all the pains and penalties of perjury, and shall forfeit the money which he may have paid for said lands, and all right and title to the same; and any grant or conveyance which he may have made, except in the hands of bona fide purchasers, shall be null and void."

The Secretary's decision, rejecting the relator's application, was not arbitrary or capricious, but was based upon a construction of § 2 which was at least a possible one, had long prevailed in the Land Department, had been approved in United States v. Wood, 70 Fed. 485, and Hoover v. Salling, 102 Fed. 716, and has since been sustained by the court of appeals in the present case. True, a different construction had been adopted in Hoover v. Salling, 49 C. C. A. 26, 110 Fed. 43, and has since been followed in Robnett v. United States, 95 C. C. A. 244, 169 Fed. 778, but this, instead of indicating that the Secretary's decision was arbitrary or capricious; illustrates that there was room for difference of opinion as to the true construction of the section, and that to determine whether the relator's application conformed thereto necessarily involved the exercise of judgment and discretion.

So, at the outset we are confronted with the question, not whether the decision of the Secretary was right or wrong, but whether a decision of that officer, made in the discharge of a duty imposed by law, and 692] involving the *exercise of judgment and discretion, may be reviewed by mandamus and he be compelled to retract it, and to give effect to another not his own, and not having his approval. The question is not new, but has been often considered by this court and uniformly answered in the negative. Decatur v. Paulding, 14 Pet. 497, 515, 10 L. ed. 559, 568; United States ex rel. Tueker v. Seaman, 17 How. 225, 230, 15 L. ed. 226, 227; Gaines v. Thompson, 7 Wall. 347, 19 L. ed. 62; Litchfield v. Register (Litchfield v. Richards) 9 Wall. 575, 19 L. ed. 681; United States v. Schurz, 102 U. S. 378, 26 L. ed. 167; United States ex rel. Dunlap v. Black, 128 U. S. 40, 48, 32 L. ed. 354, 357, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 12; United States ex rel. Riverside Oil Co. v. Hitchcock, 190 U. S. 316, 324, 47 L. ed. 1074, 1078, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 698. Original discussion being foreclosed by these cases, we will merely quote from two of them to illustrate the reasoning upon which they proceed. In the Decatur Case it was held that mandamus could not be awarded to compel the head of one of the executive departments to allow a claim, under one construction of a resolution of Congress, which he had disallowed under another construction, the court saying: "The duty required by the resolution was to be performed by him as the head of one of the executive departments of the government, in the ordinary discharge of his official duties. In general, such duties, whether imposed by act of Congress or by resolution, are not mere ministerial duties. The head of an executive department of the government, in the administration of the various and important concerns of his office, is continually required to exercise judgment and discretion. He must exercise his judgment in expounding the laws and resolutions of Congress, under which he is from time to time required to act. . . . If a suit should come before this court which involved the construction of any of these laws, the court certainly would not be bound to adopt the construction given by the head of a department. And if they supposed his construction to be wrong, they would, of course, so pronounce their judgment. But their judgment upon the construction of a law must be given in a case in *which they have jurisdiction, and[693 in which it is their duty to interpret the act of Congress in order to ascertain the rights of the parties in the cause before them. The court could not entertain an appeal from the decision of one of the Secretaries, nor revise his judgment in any case where the law authorized him to exercise discretion or judgment. Nor can it by mandamus act directly upon the officer, and guide and control his judgment or discretion in the matters committed to his care, in the ordinary discharge of his official duties. . . . The interference of the courts with the performance of the ordinary duties of the executive departments of the government would be productive of nothing but mischief, and we are quite satisfied that such a power was never intended to be given to them." And in the Riverside Oil Co. Case, where it was sought by mandamus to compel the Secretary of the Interior to depart from a decision of his, to the effect that a forest reserve lieu-land selection must be accompanied by an affidavit that the selected land was nonmineral in character and unoccupied, it was held that his judgment and discretion could not be thus controlled, it being said: "Congress has constituted the Land Department, under the supervision and control of the Secretary of the Interior, a special tribunal with judicial functions, to which is confided the execution of the laws which regulate the purchase, selling, and care and disposition of the public lands. . . . Whether he decided right or wrong is not the question. Having jurisdiction to decide at all, he had necessarily jurisdiction, and it was his duty, to decide as he thought the law was, and the courts have no power whatever under those circumstances to review his determination by mandamus or injunction. The court has no general supervisory power over the officers of the Land Department by which to control their decisions upon questions within their jurisdiction. If this writ were granted we would require the Secretary of the Interior to *repudiate and disaffirm a decision[694 which he regarded it his duty to make in the exercise of that judgment which is reposed in him by law, and we should require him to come to a determination upon the issues involved directly opposite to that which he had reached, and which the law conferred upon him the jurisdiction to make. Mandamus has never been regarded as the proper writ to control the judgment and discretion of an officer as to the decision of a matter which the law gave him the power and imposed upon him the duty to decide for himself. The writ never can be used as a substitute for a writ of error. Nor does the fact that no writ of error will lie in such a case as this, by which to review the judgment of the Secretary, furnish any foundation for the claim that mandamus may therefore be awarded. The responsibility, as well as the power, rests with the Secretary, uncontrolled by the courts."

The relator seems to believe that Roberts v. United States, 176 U. S. 221, 44 L. ed. 443, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 376, and Garfield v. United States, 211 U. S. 249, 53 L. ed. 168, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 62, in some way qualify the rule so stated; but this is a mistaken belief. Both cases expressly recognize that rule, and neither discloses any purpose to qualify it. In the former the duty directed to be performed was declared to be "at once plain, imperative, and entirely ministerial." And in the latter the writ was awarded to compel the respondent to erase and disregard a notation which he arbitrarily and unwarrantably had caused to be made upon a public record, and which beclouded the relator's right to an Indian allotment.

We conclude that the decision of the respondent in the present case was not arbitrary or merely ministerial, but made in the exercise of judgment and discretion conferred by law, and not controllable by mandamus, and therefore that the Court of Appeals rightly directed that the petition be dismissed.

Judgment affirmed.

695] *HENRY C. RIPLEY, Appt.,
v.

UNITED STATES. (No. 498.)

UNITED STATES, Appt.,
v.

HENRY C. RIPLEY. (No. 499.)

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 695-704.)

Public contracts — conclusiveness of agent's judgment.

1. One having a contract with the United States to build a jetty in a harbor, with a provision that crest blocks should be put in place on the jetty as the work progressed, when, "in the judgment of the United States agent in charge," the core or mound of riprap had sufficiently consolidated, is not entitled to relief because of any delay, however great, by the refusal of such agent to permit the laying of the blocks, unless such refusal is the result of fraud, or such gross mistake as would imply fraud, but is entitled to recover damages when the refusal was a gross mistake and an act of bad faith.

[For other cases, see Contracts, V. e, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Public contracts — conclusiveness of agent's judgment.

2. A contractor with the United States for the construction of a jetty in a harbor, under a contract providing that crest blocks should be put in place on the jetty as the work progressed, when, "in the judgment of the United States agent in charge, the core or mound of riprap had sufficiently consolidated, does not, by submitting to the wrongful refusal of such agent to permit the laying of the blocks, on the ground that the mound or core had not sufficiently consolidated, without taking an appeal to the engineer in charge, lose his right to recover damages from such refusal because of another provision for rigid inspection by an inspector appointed on the part of the government before acceptance of "material" furnished, and the rejection of such as does not conform to the specifications, and making the decision of the "engineer officer" in charge as to "quality and quantity" final.

[For other cases, see Contracts, V. e, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Evidence — burden of proof.

3. A contractor with the United States for the construction of a jetty in a harbor, who claims to have been damaged by a wrongful refusal of the government agent to permit the laying of crest blocks on the jetty when the core or mound had sufficiently settled, under a provision of the contract for such laying when, "in the judgment of the United States agent in charge," the mound had sufficiently settled, has the burden of showing the number of working days between the first wrongful refusal and the first permission to lay blocks, and on how many such days he was unable to do labor of another character on the jetty.

[For other cases, see Evidence, II. k, 6, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Public contracts — decision of agent in charge.

4. A strict construction by the inspector under a contract for the construction of a jetty in a harbor for the United States, providing for a rigid inspection of material and the rejection of such as does not conform to specifications, so as to reject stones which do not measure up to requirements at the narrowest, thinnest, and shortest points, instead of accepting mean or average measures, does not entitle the contractor to damages resulting from such rejection and the use of the rejected material in a place where inferior material was called for, although a supplementary agreement is subsequently made for the acceptance of stones not conforming strictly to the letter of the specifications, where their use would make the work equally stable with those conforming strictly to specifications.

[For other cases, see Contracts, V. e, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Public contracts — conclusiveness of engineer's decision.

5. The decision of the Chief of Engineers in allowing or disallowing items for expenses of inspection in the construction of a jetty in a harbor for the United States during the suspension of work because of a yellow fever epidemic is conclusive on the court, in the absence of fraud, or gross mistake implying fraud, where the contract authorized the remission of charges for such expenses for so much time as, in the engineer's judgment, may have been actually lost by epidemic.

[For other cases, see Contracts, 577-580, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[Nos. 498 and 499.]

Submitted March 10, 1911. Decided March 11, 1912.

A PPEAL AND CROSS APPEAL from the Court of Claims to review a judgment sustaining the right of a contractor for the construction for the United States of a jetty in a harbor to recover for damages from delay in permitting the laying of crest blocks on riprap, for the rejection of certain materials, and for the disallowance of expenses of inspection during a suspension of work because of a yellow fever epidemic. Modified so as to disallow all claims except those proved to have been caused by delay, and, as modified, affirmed.

Statement by Mr. Justice Lamar:

Appeal and cross appeal from a judgment by the court of claims for $14,732.05 in favor of Henry C. Ripley against the United States, in a suit for the recovery of damages in connection with the construction of a public work, consequent upon the action of the agent in charge.

By the act of June 13, 1902 (32 Stat. at L. 340, chap. 1079), Congress appropriated $250,000 for the completion of the work of improving the harbor of Aransas Pass, Texas. The contract was awarded to Henry 696]C. Ripley. It provided for *the completion of a jetty, having a brush foundation, to be covered with a layer of stone, on which was to be built a superstructure, with sloping sides and a top width of 10 feet. This superstructure was to be formed of a core or mound of riprap, "and when, in the judgment of the United States agent in charge, this mound has become sufficiently consolidated, its gaps shall be filled and its crest leveled; . . . large blocks shall then be bedded in the crest of the mound."

It was provided that—

"Where the contract contemplates the placing of the materials in the work, the material shall be placed securely and carefully where directed by the U. S. agent in charge. . . .

56 L. ed.

"All material furnished and work done under this contract shall, before being accepted, be subject to a rigid inspection by an inspector appointed on the part of the government, and such as does not conform to the specifications set forth in this contract shall be rejected. The decision of the engineer officer in charge as to quality and quantity shall be final."

The contract also provided that the work should be executed under the supervision of the engineer officer in charge or his duly authorized agent. The United States was to employ one or more inspectors, and the contractor, without additional compensation, was bound to furnish facilities for the inspection of work and material. The contractor was to furnish extra labor at cost prices, as determined by the engineer, and should furnish board and lodging to government employees at reasonable rates satisfactory to the engineer. If the work was not diligently prosecuted, the contract might be annulled, or the engineer in charge, "with the prior sanction of the Chief of Engineers, may waive for a reasonable period the limit originally set for the completion of the work, and remit the charges for the expenses of superintendence and inspection *for so much time[697 as, in the judgment of the engineer officer in charge, may actually have been lost on account of . . . violence of the elements, or by epidemic, or local or state quarantine restrictions, or other unforeseeable causes of delay arising from no fault of the contractor, and which actually prevented him from commencing or completing the work within the period required by the contract.

Claimant entered upon the performance of the contract August 18, 1903, and completed 2,100 feet of jetty when operations ceased about September 17, 1904, owing to the exhaustion of the appropriation.

About the time work began, without fault on the part of the contractor or of the United States, there was a delay of about thirty days, due to the fact that the contractor's tug, while in charge of a licensed pilot, was grounded on a sand bar. The government apparently incurred expenses for inspection during this period and deducted that amount from Ripley's account.

Owing to an epidemic of yellow fever the force of the contractor was disorganized, and work was necessarily suspended for thirty days. The government did not charge him with inspection expenses during the fifteen days the quarantine was in force, in a city through which the cars hauling the material were prevented from passing. And the court held also that Ripley was not chargeable with the inspection expenses for the other fifteen days, during which his force was scattered as a result of the epidemic.

During the progress of the work, a large number of blocks were rejected by the inspector as not conforming to specifications. "Many of those so rejected were afterwards accepted, but ninety of the stones offered as crest blocks were rejected as such, and were accepted and used as riprap and paid for as such. The difference in the amount paid claimant for said 698]stones used as riprap and *the amount he would have received if they had been used as crest blocks" was allowed him by the court of claims. It found that "he was compelled to furnish other crest blocks to take the place of those rejected, which caused a delay of ten days to claimant in the completion of the work."

It appears that the rejection of these blocks was due to a difference in the method of measurement, the inspector insisting that the blocks should be measured at the narrowest, thinnest, and shortest points. The contractor contended that mean or average measurements should be taken, claiming that this was the understanding of himself and the officer who drew the specifications. The engineer at Galveston thereupon suggested that the matter should be referred to the Chief of Engineers in Washington; and later a supplementary agreement was drawn, which permitted the use of blocks "which would make the work as stable, or more stable, than if the dimensions conformed strictly to the letter of the specifications. In consideration of which change the contractor agrees to accept $5 per ton for all blocks received under the supplementary agreement which would have been rejected under the original specification."

The plaintiff's claim for additional compensation for extra labor furnished the government and for board and lodging furnished its employees was rejected by the court, as also his claim for damages for double handling caused by the inspector's refusal to permit him to unload certain material on the jetty.

The contractor's principal claim, however, was for damage caused by the delay resulting from the refusal of the inspector in charge to permit crest blocks to be laid after the core had fully consolidated. As long as the jetty was uncovered by these blocks it was subject to the rough action of the waves, and the plaintiff's employees were deprived of the advantage of working 699]in still water on the *lee side of the jetty. The work began August 18, 1903, and the court found as a fact "that in December, when plaintiff had completed 200 feet of the core, he requested permission to lay the blocks. This was refused, on the ground that the core had not been consolidated. By the end of December he had completed 500 feet, and again requested permission to lay the blocks. The inspector refused and continued to refuse permission to lay the blocks until May 1, 1904, at which time 1,500 feet of the core had been repaired and completed."

"Commencing in October, 1903, the contractor began to lay the slope stones, and from December, 1903, until May, 1904, it was manifest that large parts of the work done by him were fully settled and consolidated. If the claimant had been permitted to lay the crest blocks from that time on, as the work progressed, there would have resulted an additional protection, which would have enabled him to work sixty days more within the period between that time and May 7, 1904, when the first crest block was laid."

"The total cost to claimant of performing the contract, exclusive of the cost of the granite and the cost of transport and fitting up and repairs to barges, was $63,-780. The total number of days from the beginning to the completion of said work was three hundred and ninety-two, making an average daily cost to the contractor of $162.70. The work was completed on September 17, 1904. The number of days of actual work performed was one hundred and thirty-one, of which fifty-eight was subsequent to the 30th day of April, 1904." "Claimant, under the requirements of the specification, personally superintended the work for the whole time. The value of his personal services while so doing was $750 per month, but it does not appear that at this particular time he had any other enterprise under way or any other employment."

The court entered judgment for plaintiff for $14,732.05,—made up of damage for difference between price of *large blocks[700 and riprap, delay caused by such rejection, value of ten days' services of plaintiff during the delay, remission of expenses for additional fifteen days during yellow fever epidemic, remission of expenses while tug was grounded on a sand bar, value of contractor's time during sixty days' delay occasioned by refusal to permit crest blocks to be laid, $1,500, and average daily expense, $162.70, and remission of inspection charges during the sixty days' delay.

After the case was argued here it was twice remanded (220 U. S. 491, 55 L. ed. 557, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 478, 222 U. S. 144, ante, 131, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 60), and the court of claims made the following additional findings of fact:

"When denying permission to the claimant to lay the crest blocks, as stated in finding 7, the assistant engineer, who was an experienced officer of the government in such work, and who was acting as inspector in immediate charge of the work, knew that large parts of the core theretofore completed by the claimant had fully settled and consolidated and were ready for the crest blocks to be laid thereon.

"2. The refusal of said assistant engineer, as inspector in immediate charge of the work, to allow crest blocks to be laid when he knew that parts of the core had settled and consolidated as aforesaid, was gross error and an act of bad faith on his part.

"3. There was no protest made to the engineer in charge, whose office was in Galveston, or to the Chief Engineer, whose office was in Washington, respecting the refusal of said assistant engineer to permit the laying of crest blocks as aforesaid. The claimant made frequent complaints to said assistant engineer about the delays so caused by his refusal to permit the laying of crest blocks.

"Claimant visited the office of the engineer in charge at Galveston about once a month, and while there complained generally that said assistant engineer, as inspector in immediate charge of the work, was too strict with him in construing the specifications and contract. No appeal, *either written or otherwise, was taken or asked by the claimant to either the engineer in charge or to the Chief of Engineers, because of the said refusal to permit the laying of crest blocks."

Messrs. William H. Robeson, Benjamin Carter, and F. Carter Pope submitted the cause for Ripley:

This claimant was entitled to the benefit of the honest judgment of the engineer in charge over him, and, if he did not get that honest judgment, he is entitled to recover his damages.

Kihlberg v. United States, 97 U. S. 402, 24 L. ed. 1108; United States v. Barlow, 184 U. S. 123, 46 L. ed. 463, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 468; Martinsburg & P. R. Co. v. March, 114 U. S. 555, 29 L. ed. 257, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1035; Bowe v. United States, 42 Fed. 761; Fletcher v. New Orleans & N. E. R. Co. 19 Fed. 731.

Where one party to a contract unlawfully interferes with the other's performance, the latter may recover the value of his lost time; especially where there is no allowance for the loss of prospective profits.

56 L. ed.

Kelly v. United States, 31 Ct. Cl. 375; United States v. Behan, 110 U. S. 338, 345, 28 L. ed. 168, 170, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 81.

Assistant Attorney General Thompson and Mr. Philip M. Ashford submitted the cause for the United States:

The decision of the engineer officer in charge as to "quality"—that is, the dimensions and other requirements as to the shape of the stones—was to be final, under the contract. Under these circumstances, the action of the officers and agents of the United States in the premises will not be disturbed by the court.

United States v. Barlow, 184 U. S. 123, 133, 46 L. ed. 463, 468, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 468; United States v. Gleason, 175 U. S. 588, 607, 44 L. ed. 284, 291, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 228; Chicago, S. F. & C. R. Co. v. Price, 138 U. S. 185, 195, 34 L. ed. 917, 919, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 290; Martinsburg & P. R. Co. v. Marsh, 114 U. S. 549, 553, 29 L. ed. 255, 256, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1035; Kihlberg v. United States, 97 U. S. 398, 401, 24 L. ed. 1106, 1107; McLaughlin v. United States, 37 Ct. Cl. 188; Electric Fire Proofing Co. v. United States, 39 Ct. Cl. 307; Zimmerman v. United States, 43 Ct. Cl. 564; Bowe v. United States, 42 Fed. 778; Ogden v. United States, 9 C. C. A. 251, 13 U. S. App. 615, 60 Fed. 725; Sweet v. Morrison, 116 N. Y. 19, 15 Am. St. Rep. 376, 22 N. E. 276; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Brydon, 65 Md. 198, 220, 57 Am. Rep. 318, 3 Atl. 306; Gilmore v. Courtney, 158 Ill. 437, 41 N. E. 1023; Sanders v. Hutchinson, 26 Ill. App. 638.

There was no mutual mistake made in reducing this contract to writing, consequently there was nothing to reform.

United States v. Milliken Imprinting Co. 202 U. S. 168, 177, 50 L. ed. 980, 984, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 572; South Boston Iron Works v. United States, 34 Ct. Cl. 174; Cullinane v. District of Columbia, 18 Ct. Cl. 577; Harvey v. United States, 13 Ct. Cl. 322; Ellicott Mach. Co. v. United States, 44 Ct. Cl. 130.

The terms of the specifications are plain and unambiguous. It is impossible to find anything therein, or anywhere in the contract, from which it can be inferred that any other meaning than that conveyed by the exact words and figures used was intended. If the contract did not express the agreement of the parties and the true intent or understanding of the claimant, it was "his folly to have signed it."

Brawley v. United States, 96 U. S. 168, 24 L. ed. 622.

There is no finding of fact by the court that the refusal of the inspector was ever appealed from, or that any attempt was made in any form whatever to have the engineer in charge overrule him in the matter. The absence of such a finding is conclusive of the fact that no objection, protest, or appeal was presented to the engineer in charge or to the chief of engineers.

Sun Mut. Ins. Co. v. Ocean Ins. Co. 107 U. S. 485, 500, 27 L. ed. 337, 342, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 582.

Failure to protest or to seek in any way to have the inspector overruled in the matter was an acquiescence in his conduct.

Lewman v. United States, 41 Ct. Cl. 475; Hawkins v. United States, 96 U. S. 689, 24 L. ed. 607; Bowe v. United States, 42 Fed. 778; Bray v. United States, 46 Ct. Cl. 132.

Mr. Justice Lamar, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

The plaintiff sued the United States in the court of claims for damages sustained by him while carrying out a contract to build a jetty in the harbor of Aransas Pass, Texas. There were nine items in his claim, which aggregated $45,950. The court rendered judgment in his favor for $14,732.05. Both parties appealed,—the contractor on the ground that he was awarded too little, and the United States on the ground that he was not entitled to recover anything whatever. The principal contention related to the right of the plaintiff to recover damages occasioned by the refusal of the inspector to permit blocks to be laid on the jetty as the work progressed. The contract provided that these blocks should be put in place when, "in the judgment of the United States agent in charge," the core or mound had sufficiently consolidated. Until the agent determined that the core had settled, the contractor had no right to do this part of the work. No matter how long the delay or how great the damage, he was entitled to no relief unless it appeared that the refusal was the result of "fraud, or of such gross mistake as would imply a fraud." Martinsburg & P. R. Co. v. March, 114 U. S. 549, 29 L. ed. 255, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1035; United States v. Mueller, 113 U. S. 153, 28 L. ed. 946, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 380.

But the very extent of the power and the conclusive character of his decision 702] raised a corresponding duty that *the agent's judgment should be exercised not capriciously or fraudulently, but reasonably, and with due regard to the rights of both the contracting parties. The finding by the court that the inspector's refusal was a gross mistake and an act of bad faith necessarily, therefore, leads to the conclusion that the contractor was entitled to recover the damages caused thereby.

The defendant claims that the plaintiff lost his right to recover because he failed to appeal to the engineer in charge, at Galveston, or to the Chief of Engineers, in Washington. But there was no requirement or provision for appeal in the contract. The clause relied on by the government relates to the duty of inspection and acceptance, making the decision of the engineer in charge conclusive as to the quality and quantity of work and material. That part of the agreement had no reference to the settlement of the core. Whether it had sufficiently consolidated involved the determination of a matter of fact, varying from day to day. The contractor had to act or refrain from acting when the decision was made. That matter was expressly left to "the judgment of the United States agent in charge." The contractor, in submitting to his decision, did not lose his right to recover damages occasioned by the refusal to permit the crest blocks to be laid, when, as found by the court, this refusal was gross error and an act of bad faith.

The court, therefore, declared in plaintiff's favor on this issue. He appeals, however, on the ground that the court only allowed him $11,908.90, being for expenses and loss of time for sixty days, insisting that he was entitled to recover $28,953 as damages directly caused by this delay.

This claim is based on the fact that there were three hundred and ninety-two days between the beginning and the completion of the work. But on account of Sundays, holidays, and storms, there were only one hundred and thirty-one working days. Of these, fifty-eight were after April 30, 1904, when, for the first time, the inspector permitted *the crest blocks to [703 be laid. The contractor contends that as it only took him fifty-eight days after May 1, when the permission was given, to complete the work, and as the court finds that he was delayed for sixty days before the permission was given, it is evident that he could have finished the work before May 1, and is therefore entitled to recover the value of his own time and all the expenses for inspection and labor which were incurred after that date.

The findings of fact do not require any such conclusion. Prior to May 1 the contractor worked seventy-three days out of two hundred and forty-seven. But it does not appear how many of these working days there were between August 18, 1903, when he began construction, and December, 1903, when he first applied for permission to lay the crest blocks. Neither is it shown how many working days there were between the date of the first refusal and the first permission to lay the blocks; nor on how many of such working days the contractor was able to do labor of another character on the jetty. In the absence of such data it is impossible to verify plaintiff's calculations. The burden was on the contractor. If the evidence would have sustained his present claim, he was bound to have applied, in due season, for additional findings of fact by the court. Our decision must be predicated on what appears in the present record. Inasmuch as the court found that $162.70 was the average daily expense, and assessed plaintiff's damage at sixty times that amount, it is evident that it considered that the contractor had been delayed for sixty average days, and not for sixty working days. He is therefore entitled to judgment for $9,762 expenses, $646.92 inspection charges, and $1,500 found to have been the value of his own time for that period of sixty days.

The other findings in his favor for items aggregating $2,822 must be reversed, and the cross appeal of the government sustained.

The greater part of this sum was for loss and delay arising from the inspector's 704] rejection of ninety large blocks *as not complying with the specifications. The fact that the court gave judgment in Ripley's favor indicates that it was of opinion that the agent had made an improper decision. But so far as appears, his only error was in construing the contract strictly, according to its terms, instead of adopting a method of mean or average measurement for which the contractor contended. The supplemental agreement was not retroactive, so as to give the plaintiff a cause of action for the prior rejection, even though thereafter a different method of measurement was permitted.

The balance of the amount allowed the plaintiff was by way of returning the expenses of inspection which had been charged against him, during the suspension of the work while the tug was grounded on the bar and the contractor's force disorganized on account of the yellow fever epidemic. The contract provided that the expenses of inspection might in some cases be remitted, but this could only be with the prior consent of the Chief of Engineers. There is no finding that such consent was given.

But the error in entering judgment in Ripley's favor as to any of these items, and the propriety of disallowing the others for which he sued, arises from the fact that the officer's decision was binding. All these claims relate to matters which, under the contract, were submitted to the engineer. There is no finding that he acted in bad faith. Indeed, it is not even found that the decisions were erroneous, though that is implied. But the contract did not contemplate that the opinion of the court should be substituted for that of the engineer. In the absence of fraud, or gross mistake implying fraud, his decision on all these matters was conclusive.

On the findings of fact the plaintiff is entitled to recover $11,908.90, with interest as provided in Rev. Stat. § 1090. The judgment of the Court of Claims must be so modified and affirmed.

Motion to modify judgment denied April 1, 1912.

MEMORANDA

OF

CASES DISPOSED OF WITHOUT OPINIONS.

705] *QUINCY, OMAHA, & KANSAS CITY RAILROAD COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. ORA T. SHOHONEY. [No. 497.]

Error to state court—Federal question—decision on non-Federal ground.

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Missouri to review a judgment which, on a second appeal, affirmed a judgment of the Grundy Circuit Court in favor of an employee in a suit for personal injuries.

See same case below, 231 Mo. 131, 132 S. W. 1059, Ann. Cas. 1912 A, p. 1143.

Mr. John A. Eaton for plaintiff in error.

Mr. I. N. Watson for defendant in error.

October 23, 1911. Per Curiam: Dismissed for the want of jurisdiction. Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. Texas, 212 U. S. 112, 116, 117, 53 L. ed. 431, 433, 434, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 227; Leathe v. Thomas, 207 U. S. 93, 52 L. ed. 118, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30; Giles v. Teasley, 193 U. S. 146, 48 L. ed. 655, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 359; Eustis v. Bolles, 150 U. S. 361, 37 L. ed. 1111, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 131.

YEUNG How, Sometimes Known as Yeung Chow, Appellant, v. Hart H. North, United States Commissioner of Immigration, etc., et al. [No. 524.]

Appeal—from circuit court—Federal question.

Appeal from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of California to review an order refusing relief by habeas corpus to an alien in custody under a warrant of deportation.

Messrs. Carroll Cook, Arthur A. Birney, and Henry F. Woodard for appellant.

Attorney General Wickersham, Solicitor General Lehmann, and Assistant Attorney General Harr for appellees.

October 23, 1911. Per Curiam: Dismissed for the want of jurisdiction. Farrell v. O'Brien (O'Callaghan v. O'Brien) 199 U. S. 100, 50 L. ed. 101, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 727; David Kaufman & Sons Co. v. Smith, 216 U. S. 610, 54 L. ed. 636, 30

Sup. Ct. Rep. 419; Fong Yue Ting v. United States, 149 U. S. 698, 716, 37 L. ed. 905, 914, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1016; § 14 of act of May 6, 1882 (22 Stat. at L. 61, chap. 126, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1333).

W. S. BRYAN, Appellant, v. BLISS-COOK OAK COMPANY et al. [No. 635.]

Appeal—from circuit court of appeals—Federal question.

Appeal from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth *Cir-[706] to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Circuit Court for the Western Division of the Eastern District of Arkansas in favor of defendants in a suit to quiet title.

See same case below, 101 C. C. A. 577, 178 Fed. 217.

Mr. Julian Laughlin for appellant.

Messrs. John B. Jones and George B. Rose for appellees.

October 23, 1911. Per Curiam: Dismissed for the want of jurisdiction. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Mottley, 211 U. S. 149, 53 L. ed. 126, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 42; Macfadden v. United States, 213 U. S. 288, 53 L. ed. 801, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 490.

W. S. BRYAN, Appellant, v. EDWIN S. LAYMAN. [No. 636.]

Appeal—from circuit court of appeals—Federal question.

Appeal from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Circuit Court for the Western Division of the Eastern District of Arkansas in favor of defendants in a suit to quiet title.

See same case below, 101 C. C. A. 577, 178 Fed. 217.

Mr. Julian Laughlin for appellant.

Messrs. U. M. Rose, W. E. Hemingway, George B. Rose, J. F. Loughborough, and E. H. Adams for appellee.

October 23, 1911. Per Curiam: Dismissed for the want of jurisdiction. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Mottley, 211 U. S. 149, 53 L. ed. 126, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 42; Macfadden v. United States, 213 U. S. 288, 53 L. ed. 801, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 490.

W. S. BRYAN, Appellant, v. WILLIAM BAGNELL. [No. 637.]

Appeal—from circuit court of appeals—Federal question.

Appeal from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Circuit Court for the Western Division of the Eastern District of Arkansas in favor of defendants in a suit to quiet title.

See same case below, 101 C. C. A. 577, 178 Fed. 217.

Mr. Julian Laughlin for appellant.

Messrs. U. M. Rose, W. E. Hemingway, George B. Rose, and J. F. Loughborough for appellee.

October 23, 1911. Per Curiam: Dismissed for the want of jurisdiction. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Mottley, 211 U. S. 149, 53 L. ed. 126, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 42; Macfadden v. United States, 213 U. S. 288, 53 L. ed. 801, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 490.

MARCUS G. RIDER, Appellant, v. BLISS-COOK OAK COMPANY et al. [No. 638.]

Appeal—from circuit court of appeals—Federal question.

707] Appeal from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Circuit Court for the Western Division of the Eastern District of Arkansas in favor of defendants in a suit to quiet title.

See same case below, 101 C. C. A. 577, 178 Fed. 217.

Mr. Julian Laughlin for appellant.

Messrs. John B. Jones and George B. Rose for appellees.

October 23, 1911. Per Curiam: Dismissed for the want of jurisdiction. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Mottley, 211 U. S. 149, 53 L. ed. 126, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 42; Macfadden v. United States, 213 U. S. 288, 53 L. ed. 801, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 490.

S. L. MOSER, Appellant, v. EDWIN S. LAYMAN. [No. 639.]

Appeal—from circuit court of appeals—Federal question.

Appeal from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Circuit Court for the Western Division of the Eastern District of Arkansas in favor of defendants in a suit to quiet title.

See same case below, 101 C. C. A. 577, 178 Fed. 217.

Mr. Julian Laughlin for appellant.

Messrs. U. M. Rose, W. E. Hemingway, George B. Rose, J. F. Loughborough, and E. H. Adams for appellee.

October 23, 1911. Per Curiam: Dismissed for the want of jurisdiction. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Mottley, 211 U. S. 149, 53 L. ed. 126, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 42; Macfadden v. United States, 213 U. S. 288, 53 L. ed. 801, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 490.

ELIZABETH CASSIDY et al., Plaintiffs in Error, v. PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF COLORADO ON THE RELATION OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL OF COLORADO. [No. 713.]

Error to state court—Federal question.

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Colorado to review a judgment of ouster in quo warranto proceedings.

See same case below, 50 Colo. 503, 117 Pac. 357.

Mr. Henry J. Hersey for plaintiffs in error.

Messrs. George Q. Richmond, Benjamin Griffith, Henry A. Lindsley, and Frederic D. McKenney for defendants in error.

October 23, 1911. Per Curiam: Dismissed for the want of jurisdiction. Farrell v. O'Brien (O'Callaghan v. O'Brien) 199 U. S. 100, 50 L. ed. 107, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 727; David Kaufman & Sons Co. v. Smith, 216 U. S. 610, 54 L. ed. 636, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 419; Elder v. Colorado, 204 U. S. 85, 51 L. ed. 381, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 223.

*J. A. SCRIVEN COMPANY, Appellant, [708 v. RICE-STIX DRY GOODS COMPANY. [No. 299.]

Appeal—from circuit court of appeals—diverse citizenship—trademark case.

Appeal from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit to review a decree which reversed a decree of the Circuit Court for the Eastern Division of the Eastern District of Missouri in favor of complainant, suing for infringement of a trademark, and for unfair competition, with directions to dismiss the bill.

See same case below, 91 C. C. A. 475, 165 Fed. 639.

Messrs. Arthur v. Briesen and Hans v. Briesen for appellant.

Messrs. Frederick W. Lehmann and S. L. Swarts for appellee.

October 23, 1911. Per Curiam: Dismissed for the want of jurisdiction. Farrell v. O'Brien (O'Callaghan v. O'Brien) 199 U. S. 100, 50 L. ed. 107, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 727; David Kaufman & Sons Co. v. Smith, 216 U. S. 610, 54 L. ed. 636, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 419; section 6 of act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. at L. 828, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 549). And see Hutchinson P. & Co. v. Loewy, 217 U. S. 457, 54 L. ed. 838, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 613.

MIKE BEECHAM, Plaintiff in Error, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 413.]

Error—to supreme court of Philippine Islands—frivolousness of Federal questions—criminal case.

In Error to the Supreme Court of the Philippine Islands to review a judgment which, on an appeal taken by the accused from a sentence to life imprisonment imposed by the Court of First Instance of the Province of Pampanga upon a conviction of murder, reversed the judgment and imposed sentence of death.

See same case below, 15 Philippine, 272.

Mr. William J. Rhode for plaintiff in error.

Attorney General Wickersham and Assistant General Harr for defendant in error.

October 23, 1911. Per Curiam: Dismissed for the want of jurisdiction. Farrell v. O'Brien (O'Callaghan v. O'Brien) 199 U. S. 100, 50 L. ed. 107, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 727; David Kaufman & Sons Co. v. Smith, 216 U. S. 610, 54 L. ed. 636, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 419; Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U. S. 244, 45 L. ed. 1088, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 770; Hawaii v. Mankichi, 190 U. S. 197, 47 L. ed. 1016, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 787, 12 Am. Crim. Rep. 465; Rasmussen v. United States, 197 U. S. 520, 49 L. ed. 863, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 514; Dorr v. United States, 195 U. S. 138, 49 L. ed. 128, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 808, 1 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 697; Grafton v. United States, 206 U. S. 333, 51 L. ed. 1084, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 749, 11 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 640; Trono v. United States, 199 U. S. 521, 50 L. ed. 292, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 121, 4 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 773.

MIKE BEECHAM, Plaintiff in Error, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 414.]

Error—to supreme court of Philippine Islands—frivolousness of Federal questions—criminal case.

In Error to the Supreme Court of the Philippine Islands to review a judgment which, on an appeal taken by the accused from a sentence to life imprisonment imposed by the Court of First Instance of the Province of Pampanga upon a conviction of murder, reversed the judgment and imposed sentence of death.

See same case below, 15 Philippine, 336.

Mr. William J. Rhode for plaintiff in error.

The Attorney General Wickersham and Assistant Attorney General Harr for defendant in error.

October 23, 1911. Per Curiam: Dismissed for the want of jurisdiction. Farrell v. O'Brien (O'Callaghan v. O'Brien) 199 U. S. 100, 50 L. ed. 107, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 727; David Kaufman & Sons Co. v. Smith, 216 U. S. 610, 54 L. ed. 636, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 419; Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U. S. 244, 45 L. ed. 1088, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 770; Hawaii v. Mankichi, 190 U. S. 197, 47 L. ed. 1016, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 787, 12 Am. Crim. Rep. 465; Rasmussen v. United States, 197 U. S. 520, 49 L. ed. 863, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 514; Dorr v. United States, 195 U. S. 138, 49 L. ed. 128, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 808, 1 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 697; Grafton v. United States, 206 U. S. 333, 51 L. ed. 1084, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 749, 11 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 640; Trono v. United States, 199 U. S. 521, 50 L. ed. 292, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 121, 4 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 773.

missed for the want of jurisdiction. Farrell v. O'Brien (O'Callaghan v. O'Brien) 199 U. S. 100, 50 L. ed. 107, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 727; David Kaufman & Sons Co. v. Smith, 216 U. S. 610, 54 L. ed. 636, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 419; Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U. S. 244, 45 L. ed. 1088, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 770; Hawaii v. Mankichi, 190 U. S. 197, 47 L. ed. 1016, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 787, 12 Am. Crim. Rep. 465; Rasmussen v. United States, 197 U. S. 520, 49 L. ed. 863, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 514; Dorr v. United States, 195 U. S. 138, 49 L. ed. 128, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 808, 1 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 697; Trono v. United States, 199 U. S. 521, 50 L. ed. 292, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 121, 4 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 773; Grafton v. United States, 206 U. S. 333, 51 L. ed. 1084, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 749, 11 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 640.

ROBERT GILLAND, Plaintiff in Error, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 361.]

In Error to the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of South Dakota.

Messrs. Louis W. Crofoot and Melvin Grigsby for plaintiff in error.

The Attorney General and the Solicitor General for defendant in error.

October 24, 1911. Per Curiam: Judgment reversed upon confession of error by counsel for defendant in error, and cause remanded for further proceedings in conformity to law.

EX PARTE: IN THE MATTER OF J. WESLEY GLASGOW, Petitioner. [No. —, Original.]

Habeas corpus—in Federal Supreme Court—substitute for writ of error.

Motion for leave to file a petition for a writ of habeas corpus on behalf of a person held in custody to answer to an indictment found in the District Court of the United States for the District of Delaware, charging an offense against the postal laws.

Mr. John C. Fay for petitioner.

October 30, 1911. Per Curiam: Denied. Ex parte Mirzan, 119 U. S. 584, 30 L. ed. 513, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341; Riggins v. United States, 199 U. S. 547, 50 L. ed. 303, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 147; Re Lincoln, 202 U. S. 178, 50 L. ed. 984, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 602.

JOSEPH R. MOORE et al., Plaintiffs in Error, v. STATE OF NEW JERSEY. [No. 14.]

Error to state court—Federal question.

In Error to the Court of Errors and Appeals of the State of New Jersey to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Supreme Court of that state, affirming a conviction for keeping a disorderly house.

See same case below, 75 N. J. L. 619, 68 Atl. 165.

Mr. Thomas P. Fay for plaintiffs in error.

Mr. Edmund Wilson for defendant in error.

710] *October 30, 1911. Per Curiam: Dismissed for the want of jurisdiction. Farrell v. O'Brien (O'Callaghan v. O'Brien) 199 U. S. 100, 50 L. ed. 107, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 727; David Kaufman & Sons Co. v. Smith, 216 U. S. 610, 54 L. ed. 636, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 419; Simon v. Craft, 182 U. S. 427, 45 L. ed. 1165, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 836; Twining v. New Jersey, 211 U. S. 111, 53 L. ed. 111, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 14; Felts v. Murphy, 201 U. S. 123, 50 L. ed. 689, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 366.

DAVID A. COLLIER et al., Plaintiffs in Error, v. J. G. SMALTZ and Iowa Railroad Land Company. [No. 571.]

Error to state court—frivolousness of Federal question.

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Iowa to review a decree which dismissed the petition in one suit to quiet title, and granted the relief sought in another such suit.

See same case below, 149 Iowa, 230, 128 N. W. 396.

Mr. F. T. Hughes for plaintiffs in error.

Messrs. Charles A. Clark and T. M. Zink for defendants in error.

October 30, 1911. Per Curiam: Dismissed for the want of jurisdiction. Hanis Distilling Co. v. Baltimore, 216 U. S. 285, 288, 54 L. ed. 482, 483, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 326, and cases cited; Turner v. New York, 168 U. S. 90, 42 L. ed. 392, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 38; Terry v. Anderson, 95 U. S. 628, 24 L. ed. 365.

MERCANTILE TRUST COMPANY et al., Appellants, v. TEXAS & PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY et al. [No. 12.]

Appeal from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Louisiana.

Messrs. Murphy J. Foster and William W. Green for appellants.

Messrs. John F. Dillon, Charles E. Fenner, W. B. Spencer, and Charles Payne Fenner for appellees.

Mr. Walter Guion as amicus curiæ.

October 30, 1911. Per Curiam: Decree affirmed with costs. Herndon v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 218 U. S. 135, 158, 54 L. ed. 970, 978, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 633, and cases cited.

*ROGER SHERMAN,† Successor in Trust, [711 and D. H. Pinney, Plaintiffs in Error, v. LIBBIE GOODWIN. [No. 23.]

Appeal—from territorial supreme court—mode of review—facts.

In Error to the Supreme Court of the Territory of Arizona to review a decree which, on rehearing, affirmed a decree of the District Court of Maricopa County in favor of defendant in an action to foreclose a mortgage.

See same case below, 12 Ariz. 42, 95 Pac. 121.

Messrs. Walter Bennett and D. H. Pinney for plaintiffs in error.

Mr. J. F. Wilson for defendant in error.

November 6, 1911. Per Curiam: Dismissed for the want of jurisdiction. Idaho & O. Land Improv. Co. v. Bradbury, 132 U. S. 509, 513, 33 L. ed. 433, 436, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 177; Garzot v. Rios de Rubio, 209 U. S. 284, 52 L. ed. 794, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 548.

W. H. TOLLIVER ET UX., Appellants, v. GREAT NORTHERN RAILWAY COMPANY. [No. 762.]

Appeal—from circuit court of appeals—jurisdiction below.

Appeal from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Circuit Court for the Eastern Division of the Eastern District of Washington in favor of complainant in a suit to enjoin interference with a water right.

See same case below, 109 C. C. A. 643, 187 Fed. 795.

Messrs. Miles Poindexter and O. C. Moore for appellants.

Mr. E. C. Lindley for appellee.

November 6, 1911. Per Curiam: Dismissed for the want of jurisdiction. Weir v. Rountree, 216 U. S. 607, 54 L. ed. 635, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418 and cases cited.

CHICAGO, ROCK ISLAND, & PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. C. W. BRADBURY. [No. 555.]

Error to state court—Federal question.

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Iowa to review a judgment which modified, and, as modified, affirmed a judgment of the District Court of Emmet County in favor of a railway employee in an action for personal injuries.

See same case below, 149 Iowa, 51, — L.R.A.(N.S.) —, 128 N. W. 1.

†Appearance of Roger Sherman, as successor in trust of P. L. Sherman, deceased, filed and entered October 9, 1911.

Mr. Carroll Wright for plaintiff in error.
Messrs. Horatio F. Dale and John G. Myerly for defendant in error.

November 13, 1911. Per Curiam: Dismissed for the want of jurisdiction. Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 188 U. S. 291, 308, 47 L. ed. 480, 484, 63 L.R.A. 33, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 375; Farrell v. O'Brien (O'Callaghan v. O'Brien) 199 U. S. 100, 50 L. ed. 107, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 727; Southern R. Co. v. United States, 222 U. S. 20, ante, 72, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 2; Schlemmer v. Buffalo, R. & P. R. Co. 205 U. S. 1, 51 L. ed. 681, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 407, and 220 U. S. 590, 55 L. ed. 596, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 561.

712]*CONRAD T. STRUCKMAN and Ernst C. H. W. Waage, Appellants, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 57.]

Duties—ratification of illegal collection.

Appeal from the Court of Claims to review a judgment dismissing a petition for the recovery of duties alleged to have been illegally collected upon imports to the Philippine Islands.

See same case below, 44 Ct. Cl. 202.

Messrs. Edward S. Hatch, Vincent P. Donihee, and Walter F. Welch for appellants.

Attorney General Wickersham and Solicitor General Lehmann for appellee.

December 4, 1911. Per Curiam: Judgment affirmed. United States v. Heinszen, 206 U. S. 370, 51 L. ed. 1098, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 742, 11 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 688.

WILLIAM BAIRD, Plaintiff in Error, v. ALLEN P. HOWISON et al. [No. 148.]

Error to state court—Federal question.

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Alabama to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Chancery Court for Jefferson County, dismissing the bill in a suit to establish a trust.

See same case below, 154 Ala. 359, 45 So. 668.

Mr. Alexander M. Garber for plaintiff in error.

Mr. John P. Tillman for defendants in error.

December 11, 1911. Per Curiam: Dismissed for the want of jurisdiction. Dewey v. Des Moines, 173 U. S. 193, 198, 43 L. ed. 665, 666, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 379; 56 L. ed.

Montana ex rel. Haire v. Rice, 204 U. S. 291, 301, 51 L. ed. 490, 491, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 281; Thomas v. Iowa, 209 U. S. 258, 52 L. ed. 782, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 487; Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. Texas, 212 U. S. 112, 118, 53 L. ed. 431, 434, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 227; Goodrich v. Ferris, 214 U. S. 71, 79, 53 L. ed. 914, 917, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 580.

C. L. VAN SICE, Appellant, v. IBEX MINING COMPANY. [No. 306.]

Appeal—from circuit court of appeals—Federal question.

Appeal from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Circuit Court for the District of Colorado, enjoining the prosecution of an action in ejectment.

See same case below, 97 C. C. A. 587, 173 Fed. 895.

Mr. Edwin H. Park for appellant.

Messrs. Charles Cavender and Gerald Hughes for appellee.

December 18, 1911. Per Curiam: Dismissed for the want of jurisdiction. Bagley v. General Fire Extinguisher Co. 212 U. S. 477, 53 L. ed. 605, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341; Macfadden v. United States, 213 U. S. 288, 293, 53 L. ed. 801, 802, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 490; Pope v. Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. 173 U. S. 573, 577, 43 L. ed. 814, 816, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 500 and cases cited.

WILSON-MOLINE BUGGY COMPANY, [713] Plaintiff in Error, v. C. B. E. HAWKINS [No. 106.]

Interstate commerce—state regulation—foreign corporations.

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Kansas to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Lyon District Court, denying the right of a foreign corporation to maintain an action upon a promissory note given in part payment of the purchase price of a buggy, because it had not first obtained a certificate from the Secretary of State.

See same case below, 80 Kan. 117, 101 Pac. 1009.

Messrs. Almon W. Bulkley and C. E. More for plaintiff in error.

No appearance for defendant in error.

December 18, 1911. Per Curiam: Judgment reversed. International Text-Book Co. v. Pigg, 217 U. S. 91, 54 L. ed. 678, 27 L.R.A.(N.S.) 493, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 481, 18 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1103.

PITTSBURGH, CINCINNATI, CHICAGO, & ST. LOUIS RAILWAY COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. STATE OF INDIANA. [No. 114.] Commerce—constitutional law—state regulation—full train crew.

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Indiana to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Criminal Court of Marion County, convicting a railway company of violating the full train crew act.

See same case below, 172 Ind. 147, 87 N. E. 1034.

Messrs. Lawrence Maxwell and Samuel O. Pickens for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. Thomas M. Honan, James Bingham, and Martin M. Hugg for defendant in error.

December 18, 1911. Per Curiam: Judgment affirmed with costs. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Arkansas, 219 U. S. 453, 55 L. ed. 290, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 275.

EX PARTE: IN THE MATTER OF LOUIS CELLA et al., Petitioners. [No. —, Original.]

Motion for leave to file petition for Writ of Prohibition.

Messrs. A. S. Worthington, Charles L. Frailey, and Howard Taylor for petitioners.

Attorney General Wickersham, Solicitor General Lehmann, and Messrs. Clarence R. Wilson, and Henry S. Robbins, opposed. January 9, 1912. Denied.

BOERN HAT COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 574.]

Witnesses—privilege—corporation.

714] In Error to the Circuit *Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York to review an order granting an application for subpoena duces tecum to compel a corporation to produce its books for the inspection of the grand jury.

See same case below, 184 Fed. 506.

Mr. Abram I. Elkus for plaintiff in error.

Attorney General Wickersham and Solicitor General Lehmann for defendant in error.

January 15, 1912. Per Curiam: Judgment affirmed on the authority of Wilson v. United States, 221 U. S. 361, 55 L. ed. 771, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 538; Dreier v. United States, 221 U. S. 394, 55 L. ed. 784, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 550; American Tobacco Co.

v. Werckmeister, 207 U. S. 284, 302, 52 L. ed. 208, 218, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 72, 12 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 595; Hale v. Henkel, 201 U. S. 43, 50 L. ed. 652, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 370, and cause remanded to the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York.

WILLIAM ANDERSON and Robert Barry, Partners, etc., Plaintiffs in Error, v. INHABITANTS OF THE CITY OF BORDENTOWN, New Jersey. [No. 803.]

Error to state court—Federal question—impairing contract obligation.

In Error to the Supreme Court of Errors and Appeals of the State of New Jersey to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Supreme Court of that State, affirming a judgment of the Burlington County Circuit Court in favor of a municipality in an action for water rents.

See same case below, 81 N. J. L. 434, 79 Atl. 281.

Mr. E. A. Armstrong for plaintiffs in error.

Mr. Frederic D. McKenney, Mr. J. Spalding Flannery, and Mr. William Hitz for defendants in error.

January 15, 1912. Per Curiam: Writ of error dismissed for the want of jurisdiction. St. Paul M. & M. R. Co. v. Todd County, 142 U. S. 282, 35 L. ed. 1014, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 281; St. Paul Gaslight Co. v. St. Paul, 181 U. S. 142, 45 L. ed. 788, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 575; New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Louisiana, 185 U. S. 336, 350, 46 L. ed. 936, 943, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 691; and cases cited; Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 147 U. S. 531, 37 L. ed. 267, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 353; Farrell v. O'Brien (O'Callaghan v. O'Brien) 199 U. S. 89, 100, 50 L. ed. 101, 107, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 727; Los Angeles Farming & Mill. Co. v. Los Angeles, 217 U. S. 217, 226, 54 L. ed. 736, 744, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 452.

EUGENE M. THAYER, Plaintiff in Error, v. ELIZA M. SCHABEN et al. [No. 65.]

Error to state court—Federal question.

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Texas to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Ness District Court in favor of the defendant in an action in ejectment involving title to school lands.

See same case below, 79 Kan. 856, 98 Pac. 1134.

Messrs. Arthur J. Eddy, Emil C. Wetten, and Charles H. Pegler, for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Fred S. Jackson for defendants in error.

715] January 22, 1912. *Per Curiam: Writ of error dismissed for want of jurisdiction. California Nat. Bank v. Thomas, 171 U. S. 441, 43 L. ed. 231, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 4; Appleby v. Buffalo, 221 U. S. 524, 529, 55 L. ed. 838, 840, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 699.

HORACE CHASE, Individually and as Administrator, etc., Plaintiff in Error, v. LEONARD H. PHILLIPS and Samuel C. Lawrence, Trustees. [No. 554.]

Error to state court—Federal question.

In Error to the Supreme Judicial Court of the State of Massachusetts to review a judgment which, on final hearing, dismissed, on the ground of res judicata, a bill seeking to revoke a decree of adoption.

See same case below, 208 Mass. 245, 94 N. E. 266.

Mr. Richard Y. Fitzgerald for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. J. L. Thorndike and E. R. Thayer for defendants in error.

February 19, 1912. Per Curiam: Dismissed for the want of jurisdiction. Farrell v. O'Brien (O'Callaghan v. O'Brien) 199 U. S. 100, 50 L. ed. 107, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 727; San Francisco v. Itsell, 133 U. S. 65, 33 L. ed. 570, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 241; Empire State-Idaho Min. & Developing Co. v. Hanley, 205 U. S. 225, 235, 236, 51 L. ed. 779, 783, 784, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 476; Chase v. Phillips, 216 U. S. 616, 54 L. ed. 639, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 577.

EX PARTE MATTHIAS RADIN, Petitioner. [No. —Original.]

Motion for leave to file a petition for a Writ of Habeas Corpus.

Mr. Harry Levor for petitioner.

March 11, 1912. Denied.

WALTER E. MEYERS, Trustee, etc., Plaintiff in Error, v. A. SAMUELS et al. [No. 198.]

Error to state court—finality of judgment.

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Ohio to review a judgment which 56 L. ed.

affirmed a judgment of the Circuit Court of Cuyahoga County, reversing a judgment of the Court of Common Pleas of said County, which had overruled demurrers to the petition in a suit for the recovery of money.

See same case below, 81 Ohio St. 535, 91 N. E. 1135.

Messrs. John G. White, Amos Burt Thompson, and W. B. Sanders for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. Francis J. Wing and Nathan Loeser for defendants in error.

March 11, 1912. Per Curiam: Dismissed for want of jurisdiction. Missouri & K. I. *R. Co. v. Olathe, 222 U. S. [716 185, 187, ante, 155, 156, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 46, 47, December 4, 1911, and cases cited.

BENJAMIN F. ROSELLE, Plaintiff in Error, v. COMMONWEALTH OF VIRGINIA. [No. 185.]

Commerce—state regulation—peddlers and drummers.

In Error to the Supreme Court of Appeals of the State of Virginia to review a judgment which affirmed a conviction in the Corporation Court of the City of Charlottesville for peddling without a license picture frames made by an Illinois corporation.

See same case below, 110 Va. 235, 65 S. E. 526.

Messrs. Daniel Harmon, H. W. Walsh, and J. T. Evans for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Samuel W. Williams for defendant in error.

March 18, 1912. Judgment affirmed with costs by a divided court.

WARREN OZRO KYLE et al., Appellants, v. JOHN C. HAMMOND. See post, p. —.

ÆTNA LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY, Petitioner, v. JOHN T. MOORE, Administrator, etc. [No. 619.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

Messrs. George S. Jones and Malcolm D. Jones *for petitioner. [717

Messrs. Minter Wimberly, Jesse C. Harris, and Alexander Akerman for respondent.

October 23, 1911. Granted.

RUBBER TIRE WHEEL COMPANY et al., Petitioners, v. GOODYEAR TIRE & RUBBER COMPANY. [No. 633.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

Messrs. Lawrence Maxwell, Chas. W. Stapleton, F. P. Fish, Paul A. Staley, and Border Bowman for petitioners.

Mr. H. A. Toulmin for respondent.

October 23, 1911. Granted.

PRUDENTIAL INSURANCE COMPANY OF AMERICA, PETITIONER, v. JOHN T. MOORE, Administrator, etc. [No. 670.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

Mr. Edward D. Duffield for petitioner.

Messrs. Minter Wimberly, Jesse C. Harris, and Alexander Akerman for respondent.

October 23, 1911. Granted.

GEORGE N. PIERCE COMPANY, Petitioner, v. WELLS-FARGO & COMPANY. [No. 802.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

Messrs. George E. Hamilton, John W. Yerkes, and John J. Hamilton for petitioner.

Messrs. Chas. W. Pierson and William W. Green for respondent.

October 23, 1911. Granted.

HAW MOY, Petitioner, v. HART H. NORTH, Commissioner of Immigration, etc. [No. 603.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the 718]United States Circuit *Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

See same case below, 105 C. C. A. 381, 183 Fed. 89.

Mr. Corry M. Stadden for petitioner.

Attorney General Wickersham, Solicitor General Lehmann, and Assistant Attorney General Harr for respondent.

October 23, 1911. Denied.

HOO CHOY, Petitioner, v. HART H. NORTH, Commissioner of Immigration, etc. [No. 604.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

See same case below, 105 C. C. A. 384, 183 Fed. 92.

Mr. Corry M. Stadden for petitioner.

Attorney General Wickersham, Solicitor General Lehmann, and Assistant Attorney General Harr for respondent.

October 23, 1911. Denied.

CHARLES D. HENDERSON, Petitioner, v. PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD COMPANY. [No. 605.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit.

See same case below, 29 L.R.A. (N.S.) 924, 103 C. C. A. 135, 179 Fed. 577.

Mr. James F. Campbell for petitioner.

Messrs. Frederic D. McKenney, J. Spalding Flannery, and William Hitz for respondent.

October 23, 1911. Denied.

JESSE WATSON, as Trustee, etc., Petitioner, v. EUROPEAN AMERICAN BANK. [No. 610.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 108 C. C. A. 196, 186 Fed. 84.

Mr. Clayton J. Heermance for petitioner.

Messrs. Philip Ashton Rollins and Alfred Adams Wheat for respondent.

October 23, 1911. Denied.

JOHNSON EDUCATOR FOOD COMPANY, Petitioner, v. SYLVANUS SMITH & COMPANY (INCORPORATED). [No. 620.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

See same case below, 37 App. D. C. 107.

Messrs. William A. Macleod and Henry Calver for petitioner.

No appearance for respondent.

*October 23, 1911. Denied.

FRANK C. MARRIN v. UNITED STATES. [No. 621.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit.

See same case below, 93 C. C. A. 351, 167 Fed. 951.

Messrs. J. H. Ralston, F. L. Siddons, and William E. Richardson for petitioner.

Attorney General Wickersham, Solicitor General Lehmann, and Assistant Attorney General Harr for respondent.

October 23, 1911. Denied.

JOHN I. McDUFFEE, Trustee, et al., Petitioners, v. HESTONVILLE, MANTUA, & FAIRMOUNT PASSENGER RAILWAY COMPANY et al. [No. 622.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit.

See same case below, 109 C. C. A. 606, 185 Fed. 798.

Messrs. Thomas F. Sheridan, Clifton V. Edwards, and Joseph C. Fraley for petitioners.

Messrs. F. P. Fish and Charles Neave for respondents.

October 23, 1911. Denied.

EDWARD ENDERS, Petitioner, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 629.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit.

See same case below, 109 C. C. A. 502, 187 Fed. 754.

Messrs. Frank R. Reid and John T. Evans for petitioner.

Attorney General Wickersham, Solicitor General Lehmann, and Assistant Attorney General Harr for respondent.

October 23, 1911. Denied.

720] *HENRY HINN, Petitioner, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 630.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit.

See same case below, 109 C. C. A. 502, 187 Fed. 754.

56 L. ed.

Messrs. Frank R. Reid and John T. Evans for petitioner.

Attorney General Wickersham, Solicitor General Lehmann, and Assistant Attorney General Harr for respondent.

October 23, 1911. Denied.

JAMES N. ALSOP, Petitioner, v. JOHN CONWAY et al. [No. 634.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

See same case below, 110 C. C. A. 366, 188 Fed. 568.

Mr. George W. Jolly for petitioner.

Mr. William T. Ellis for respondents.

October 23, 1911. Denied.

CHARLES E. HAMILTON, as Receiver, etc., Petitioner, v. FERDINAND L. LOEB. [No. 643.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit.

See same case below, 108 C. C. A. 109, 186 Fed. 7.

Mr. Frederick L. Siddons for petitioner.

Messrs. John G. Johnson and Abraham Israel for respondent.

October 23, 1911. Denied.

TITLE GUARANTY & SURETY COMPANY, Petitioner, v. UNITED STATES TO USE OF GENERAL ELECTRIC COMPANY. [No. 663.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit.

See same case below, 109 C. C. A. 106, 187 Fed. 98.

Messrs. James Russell Soley and Russell H. Robbins for petitioner.

Mr. H. B. Gill for respondent.

October 23, 1911. Denied.

*PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK, [721] Petitioners, v. CENTRAL TRUST COMPANY OF NEW YORK et al. [No. 706.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 110 C. C. A. 1, 186 Fed. 291.

Mr. William A. McQuaid for petitioners.

Messrs. William D. Guthrie and John M. Bowers for respondents.

October 23, 1911. Denied.

EDWARD RIMMERMAN et al., Petitioners, v. UNITED STATES OF AMERICA. [No. 709.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

See same case below, 108 C. C. A. 385, 186 Fed. 307.

Mr. Nathan A. Gibson for petitioners.

Attorney General Wickersham, and Solicitor General Lehmann for respondent.

October 23, 1911. Denied.

PRESSED STEEL CAR COMPANY, Petitioner, v. SIMPLEX RAILWAY APPLIANCE COMPANY. [No. 717:]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 110 C. C. A. 634, 189 Fed. 70.

Messrs. Alfred W. Kiddle and Clarence P. Byrnes for petitioner.

Messrs. Charles C. Linthicum and J. Edgar Bull for respondent.

October 23, 1911. Denied.

WILLIAM J. HAGADORN et al., Petitioners, v. STREET GRADING DISTRICT No. 60 OF LITTLE ROCK, ARKANSAS. [No. 752.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

See same case below, 108 C. C. A. 429, 186 Fed. 451.

Messrs. U. M. Rose, W. E. Hemingway, G. B. Rose, and J. F. Loughborough for petitioners.

No appearance for respondent.

October 23, 1911. Denied.

722] *JACOB YUNGBLUTH, Petitioner, v. JOHN H. SLIPPER et al. [No. 781.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

See same case below, 108 C. C. A. 106, 185 Fed. 773.

Mr. E. C. Million for petitioner.

Mr. Alfred L. Black for respondents.

October 23, 1911. Denied.

CITY OF NEW YORK, Petitioner, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 789.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 110 C. C. A. 184, 188 Fed. 46.

Messrs. Terence Farley and W. J. O'Sullivan for petitioner.

Attorney General Wickersham and Solicitor General Lehmann for respondent.

October 23, 1911. Denied.

F. A. GARRAMONE et al., Petitioners, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 790.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Court of Customs Appeals. Mr. James L. Gerry for petitioners.

Attorney General Wickersham and Solicitor General Lehmann for respondent.

October 23, 1911. Denied.

HENRY HEIDE, Petitioner, v. PANAYIOTIS PANOULIAS. [No. 792.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 110 C. C. A. 656, 188 Fed. 914.

Mr. George Whitefield Betts, Jr., for petitioner.

Mr. Ferdinand E. M. Bullowa for respondent.

October 23, 1911. Denied.

PENNSYLVANIA STEEL COMPANY, Petitioner, v. HENRY M. SUSSWEIN. [No. 793.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 108 C. C. A. 569, 186 Fed. 1023.

Mr. H. Snowden Marshall for petitioner.

Messrs. Roger Lewis and Bronson Winthrop for respondent.

October 23, 1911. Denied.

MARTHA BRION, Petitioner, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 804.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit.

See same case below, 192 Fed. 117.

Mr. Elijah N. Zoline for petitioner.

Attorney General Wickersham and Assistant Attorney General Harr for respondent.

October 23, 1911. Denied.

RAYMONDE CHOMEL, Petitioner, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 805.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit.

See same case below, 192 Fed. 117.

Mr. Elijah N. Zoline for petitioner.

The Attorney General Wickersham and Assistant Attorney General Harr for respondent.

October 23, 1911. Denied.

OCEANIC STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY, Petitioner, v. EDITH WATKINS. [No. 808.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 110 C. C. A. 543, 188 Fed. 909.

Mr. Charles C. Burlingham for petitioner.

No appearance for respondent.

October 23, 1911. Denied.

JOHN M. STONE GOTTON MILLS, Petitioner, v. F. T. FLEITMANN et al., etc. [No. 810.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the 724] United States Circuit *Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

See same case below, 108 C. C. A. 444, 186 Fed. 466.

Messrs. Charlton H. Alexander and William W. Magruder for petitioner.

Messrs. Marcellus Green and Arthur C. Rounds for respondents.

October 23, 1911. Denied.

RUBBER TIRE WHEEL COMPANY et al., Petitioners, v. GOODYEAR TIRE & RUBBER COMPANY et al. [No. 811.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

See same case below, 53 C. C. A. 583, 116 Fed. 363.

Messrs. Lawrence Maxwell, F. P. Fish, Chas. W. Stapleton, Paul A. Staley, and Border Bowman for petitioners.

Mr. H. A. Toulmin for respondents.

October 23, 1911. Denied.

ATLANTIC TRANSPORT COMPANY, Petitioner, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 824.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 110 C. C. A. 420, 186 Fed. 42.

Mr. William S. Montgomery for petitioner.

Attorney General Wickersham and Assistant Attorney General Harr for respondent.

October 23, 1911. Denied.

WASHINGTON, ALEXANDRIA, & MOUNT VERNON RAILWAY COMPANY, Petitioner, v. REAL ESTATE TRUST COMPANY OF PHILADELPHIA. [No. 831.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit.

See same case below, 191 Fed. 566.

56 L. ed.

Messrs. R. Walton Moore, John S. Barbour, George W. Pepper, and W. B. Bodine, Jr., for petitioner.

Messrs. Joseph de F. Junkin and John G. Johnson for respondent.

October 30, 1911. Denied.

*ELKINS ELECTRIC RAILWAY COMPANY, Petitioner, v. WESTERN MARYLAND RAILWAY COMPANY. [No. 834.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit.

See same case below, 108 C. C. A. 557, 186 Fed. 1022.

Messrs. W. B. Maxwell and Fred Beall for petitioner.

Messrs. George R. Gaither and Leon E. Greenbaum for respondent.

October 30, 1911. Denied.

WARNER-JENKINSON COMPANY, Petitioner, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 812.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

Mr. Charles Ray Dean for petitioner.

Attorney General Wickersham and Assistant Attorney General Denison for respondent.

November 6, 1911. Denied.

CENTRAL RAILROAD COMPANY OF NEW JERSEY, Owner, etc., Petitioner, v. PHILADELPHIA & READING COMPANY, Charterer, etc. [No. 842.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit.

See same case below, 108 C. C. A. 217, 186 Fed. 105.

Messrs. James J. Macklin and De Laguel Berier for petitioner.

Mr. James F. Campbell for respondent.

November 6, 1911. Denied.

CHARLES L. SMITH, Owner, etc., Petitioner, v. CORNELIUS A. DAVIS, Claimant, etc. [No. 827]; and CHARLES L. SMITH et al., Petitioners, v. CORNELIUS A. DAVIS et al. [No. 828].

Petition for Writs of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the First Circuit.

See same case below, 109 C. C. A. 94, 187 Fed. 40.

Messrs. Edward E. Blodgett and F. M. Brown for petitioners.

Mr. Edward S. Dodge for respondents.

November 13, 1911. Denied.

726] *ALLESANDRA BOLOGNESI et al., Petitioners, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 839.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 36 L.R.A.(N.S.) 143, 111 C. C. A. 67, 189 Fed. 335.

Mr. A. S. Gilbert for petitioners.

Attorney General Wickersham and Assistant Attorney General Harr for respondent. November 20, 1911. Denied.

WALTER BAKER & COMPANY, LIMITED, Petitioner, v. NESTLE & ANGLO-SWISS CONDENSED MILK COMPANY. [No. 840.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

See same case below, 37 App. D. C. 148.

Messrs. George Putnam, Horace A. Dodge, and Jas. L. Putnam for petitioner.

Mr. James Hamilton for respondent.

November 20, 1911. Denied.

S. C. LILLIS, Petitioner, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 843.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

See same case below, 111 C. C. A. 362, 190 Fed. 530.

Messrs. P. F. Dunne and Charles H. Bates for petitioner.

Attorney General Wickersham, Solicitor General Lehmann, and B. D. Townsend for respondent.

November 20, 1911. Denied.

COLTS PATENT FIRE ARMS MANUFACTURING COMPANY et al., Petitioners, v. NEW YORK SPORTING GOODS COMPANY. [No. 845.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 111 C. C. A. 405, 190 Fed. 553.

Mr. W. K. Richardson for petitioners.

Messrs. Edmund Wetmore and H. S. Knight for respondent.

November 20, 1911. Denied.

PEROLIN COMPANY OF AMERICA, Petitioner, 727]v. *COTTO-WAXO CHEMICAL COMPANY. [No. 848.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

See same case below, 107 C. C. A. 373, 185 Fed. 267.

Messrs. Hugh K. Wagner and John W. Hill for petitioner.

Mr. Paul Bakewell for respondent.

November 20, 1911. Denied.

AMERICAN TRUST COMPANY, Trustee, Petitioner, v. METROPOLITAN STEAMSHIP COMPANY et al. [No. 861.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the First Circuit.

See same case below, 111 C. C. A. 376, 190 Fed. 113.

Mr. J. Markham Marshall for petitioner. Messrs. Clarence A. Hight and William Hall Best for respondents.

December 4, 1911. Denied.

EXCELSIOR SUPPLY COMPANY et al., Petitioners, v. WEED CHAIN TIRE GRIP COMPANY et al. [No. 862.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit.

See same case below, 192 Fed. 35.

Mr. Thomas F. Sheridan for petitioners. Messrs. Edward Rector and Frederick S. Duncan for respondents.

December 4, 1911. Denied.

SECOND POOL COAL COMPANY, Petitioner, v. PEOPLE'S COAL COMPANY. [No. 873.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit.

See same case below, 110 C. C. A. 526, 188 Fed. 892.

Mr. Lowrie C. Barton for petitioner.

Mr. George E. Shaw for respondent.

December 11, 1911. Denied.

CITY BANK & TRUST COMPANY, Trustee, *Petitioner, v. F. W. WILLIAMS et al. [No. 850.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

See same case below, 108 C. C. A. 341, 186 Fed. 419.

Mr. Watson B. Robinson for petitioner.

Mr. G. Q. Hall for respondents.

December 18, 1911. Denied.

JACOB MAKI, as Administrator, etc., Petitioner, v. UNION PACIFIC COAL COMPANY. [No. 886.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

See same case below, 109 C. C. A. 221, 187 Fed. 389.

Mr. Wayne C. Williams for petitioner.

Messrs. Maxwell Evarts, N. H. Loomis, and C. C. Dorsey for respondent.

December 18, 1911. Denied.

THOMAS E. IRETON et al., Petitioners, v. PENNSYLVANIA COMPANY. [No. 756.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

See same case below, 107 C. C. A. 304, 185 Fed. 84.

Mr. Orville S. Brumback for petitioners. No appearance for respondent.

January 9, 1912. Denied.

LOUIS CELLA et al., Petitioners, v. UNITED STATES. [Nos. 891 and 892.]

Petition for Writs of Certiorari to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

See same case below, in 891, 37 App. D. C. 423; in 892, 37 App. D. C. 433.

Messrs. A. S. Worthington, Charles L. Frailey, and Howard Taylor for petitioners.

Attorney General Wickersham, Solicitor General Lehmann, and Messrs. Clarence R. Wilson, and Henry S. Robbins for respondent.

January 9, 1912. Denied.

FRIED. KRUPP AKTIEN GESELLSCHAFT, Petitioner, v. *MIDVALE STEEL COMPANY. [No. 901.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit.

See same case below, 191 Fed. 588.

Mr. James R. Sheffield for petitioner.

Mr. A. H. Wintersteen for respondent.

January 15, 1912. Denied.

DIETRICH E. LOEWE et al., Petitioners, v. MARTIN LAWLER et al. [No. 917.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 109 C. C. A. 288, 187 Fed. 522.

Messrs. Daniel Davenport and Walter Gordon Merritt for petitioners.

Messrs. Alton B. Parker, John K. Beach, and F. L. Mulholland for respondents.

January 15, 1912. Denied.

JACOB MEURER, Petitioner, v. GEORGE STURGISS et al. [No. 919.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit.

See same case below, 111 C. C. A. 551, 191 Fed. 9.

Mr. William Mason Smith for petitioner.

Mr. B. M. Ambler for respondents.

January 15, 1912. Denied.

56 L. ed.

OLCOTT C. COLT, Petitioner, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 932.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

See same case below, 111 C. C. A. 205, 190 Fed. 305.

Mr. Edward S. Duvall, Jr., for petitioner.

Attorney General Wickersham and Assistant Attorney General Harr for respondent.

January 22, 1912. Denied.

ALBERT B. CAMERON, Petitioner, v. *UNITED STATES. [No. 931.] [730

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

Mr. Howard S. Gans for petitioner.

Attorney General Wickersham and Solicitor General Lehmann for respondent.

January 29, 1912. Granted.

MCCRUM-HOWELL COMPANY, Petitioner, v. POPE AUTOMATIC MERCHANDISING COMPANY et al. [No. 938.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit.

See same case below, — L.R.A.(N.S.) —, 191 Fed. 979.

Mr. Hillary C. Messimer for petitioner.

No appearance for respondents.

January 29, 1912. Denied.

CHARLES R. HEIKE, Petitioner, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 936.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

Mr. John B. Stanchfield for petitioner.

Attorney General Wickersham and Solicitor General Lehmann for respondent.

February 19, 1912. Granted.

ERNEST W. GERBRACHT, Petitioner, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 937.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 192 Fed. 83.

Mr. George M. Mackellar for petitioner.

Attorney General Wickersham and Solicitor General Lehmann for respondent.

February 19, 1912. Denied.

GOULD STORAGE BATTERY COMPANY, Petitioner, v. *ELECTRIC STORAGE BATTERY COMPANY. [No. 942.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 192 Fed. 28.

Mr. William Houston Kenyon for petitioner.

Messrs. Augustus B. Stoughton and George S. Graham for respondent.

February 19, 1912. Denied.

HYMAN EPSTEIN, Petitioner, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 945.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit.

Mr. Benjamin C. Bachrach for petitioner.

Attorney General Wickersham and Solicitor General Lehmann for respondent.

February 19, 1912. Denied.

FRANK N. THOMAS, Petitioner, v. CONRAD H. MATTHIESSEN. [No. 948.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

Messrs. Alfred A. Wheat and Philip A. Rollins for petitioner.

Mr. Arthur C. Rounds for respondent.

February 26, 1912. Granted.

BEN BLANCHARD et al., Petitioners, v. G. W. AMMONS et al. [No. 867.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

See same case below, 106 C. C. A. 102, 183 Fed. 556.

Mr. Elias S. Clark for petitioners.

Messrs. John W. Griggs and Martin Convo for respondents.

February 26, 1912. Denied.

CHARLES BECKER, Petitioner, v. D. T. 732] *HUMPHREY et al. [No. 951.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 111 C. C. A. 666, 190 Fed. 1018.

Mr. Joseph N. Schultz for petitioner.

No appearance for respondents.

February 26, 1912. Denied.

ALPHONSE DUFAUR and Eva Dufaur, Petitioners, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 961.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit.

See same case below, 109 C. C. A. 572, 187 Fed. 812.

Messrs. A. B. Browne, Burton Hanson, Otis H. Waldo, and T. J. Fell for petitioners.

Attorney General Wickersham and Solicitor General Lehmann for respondent.

February 26, 1912. Denied.

WALTER BAKER & COMPANY, LIMITED, Petitioner, v. SIDNEY C. GRAY et al. [No. 963.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

See same case below, 192 Fed. 921.

Messrs. Frank F. Reed, J. L. Putnam, and E. S. Rogers for petitioner.

Mr. Dorr Raymond Cobb for respondents.

February 26, 1912. Denied.

MODEL BOTTLING MACHINERY COMPANY, Petitioner, v. ANHEUSER-BUSCH BREWING ASSOCIATION. [No. 975.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

See same case below, 111 C. C. A. 389, 190 Fed. 573.

Mr. Hugh K. Wagner for petitioner.

Mr. Charles C. Linthicum for respondent.

February 26, 1912. Denied.

WILLIAM A. PIERCE, Petitioner, v. UNITED STATES OF AMERICA. [No. 980.]

Petition *for a Writ of Certiorari [733 to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

See same case below, 37 App. D. C. 582.

Mr. A. S. Worthington for petitioner.

Attorney General Wickersham and Assistant Attorney General Harr for respondent.

February 26, 1912. Denied.

WILLIAM ADLER, Petitioner, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 981.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

See same case below, 111 C. C. A. 664, 191 Fed. 1003.

Messrs. E. D. Saunders, Charles Rosen, J. D. Rause, William Grant, and Gustave Lemle for petitioner.

Attorney General Wickersham and Solicitor General Lehman for respondent.

February 26, 1912. Denied.

MITCHELL COAL & COKE COMPANY, Petitioner, v. PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD COMPANY. [No. 985.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit.

See same case below, 192 Fed. 475.

Mr. George S. Graham for petitioner.

No appearance for respondent.

February 26, 1912. Denied.

THADDEUS DAVIDS COMPANY, Petitioner, v. CORTLANDT I. DAVIDS et al., etc. [No. 969.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

Mr. W. P. Preble for petitioner.

No appearance for respondents.

March 4, 1912. Granted.

FRED J. BLISS, Petitioner, v. WASHOE COPPER COMPANY et al. [No. 772.]

734 Petition for a *Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

Messrs. Hannis Taylor, Robert Lee Clinton, and Caleb M. Sawyer for petitioner.

Messrs. John Garver, James M. Beck, and L. O. Evans for respondents.

March 4, 1912. Granted.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, Plaintiff in Error, v. AMERICAN DRUGGIST SYNDICATE. [No. 819.]

In Error to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of New York.

Mr. Chas. J. Murphy for defendant in error.

October 9, 1911. Docketed and dismissed on motion of Mr. Charles J. Murphy for the defendant in error.

ILLINOIS CENTRAL RAILROAD COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 94.]

In Error to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

Messrs. Edmund F. Trabue, Attilla Cox, Jr., and John C. Doolan for plaintiff in error.

Attorney General Wickersham for defendant in error.

October 9, 1911. Dismissed on motion of Mr. Edmund F. Trabue for the plaintiff in error.

56 L. ed.

CUDAHY PACKING COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. C. E. DENTON, as Secretary of State of the State of Kansas. [No. 16.] In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Kansas.

See same case below, 79 Kan. 368, 97 Pac. 439, 99 Pac. 601.

Messrs. Alexander New and Edwin A. Krauthoff for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Fred S. Jackson for defendant in error.

October 9, 1911. Dismissed per *stipulation of counsel. [735]

GRANTS PASS LAND & WATER COMPANY, Appellant, v. CITY OF LOS ANGELES. [No. 55.]

Appeal from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of California.

Mr. Oscar A. Trippet for appellant.

Mr. Leslie R. Hewitt for appellee.

October 9, 1911. Dismissed per stipulation of counsel.

WILLIAM A. GUNTER, JR., Plaintiff in Error, v. EVANS HINSON et al. [No. 143.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Alabama.

Mr. W. A. Gunter for plaintiff in error.

No appearance for defendants in error.

October 9, 1911. Dismissed with costs on motion of counsel for the plaintiff in error.

HERBERT S. HADLEY et al., Petitioners, v. ARTHUR C. HUIDEKOPER. [No. 270.]

On Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

See same case below, — L.R.A.(N.S.) —, 100 C. C. A. 395, 177 Fed. 1.

Messrs. Elliott W. Major and John M. Atkinson for petitioners.

Messrs. John L. Thomas and Reginald S. Huidekoper for respondent.

October 19, 1911. Dismissed per stipulation of counsel.

MUTUAL BENEFIT LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. SUSAN M. MORGAN *et al., as Surviving Trus-[736 tees, etc. [No. 302.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of New York.

Mr. Chas. L. Frailey for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Norris Morey for defendants in error.

October 9, 1911. Dismissed per stipulation of counsel.

635

JESSE L. CARLTON et al., Plaintiffs in Error, v. FRANK W. RUSHING, Judge, etc., et al. [No. 358.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Oklahoma.

Messrs. Amos L. Beaty and William H. H. Clayton for plaintiffs in error.

Mr. William A. Collier for defendants in error.

October 9, 1911. Dismissed with costs, on motion of counsel for the plaintiffs in error.

WILLIAM LEWIN et al., as the Lewin-Scrap Iron Company, Plaintiffs in Error, v. KATE CASPAR, Administratrix, etc. [No. 365.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Kansas.

Mr. Jules C. Rosenberger for plaintiffs in error.

Mr. Henry L. Alden for defendant in error.

October 9, 1911. Dismissed per stipulation of counsel.

C. A. TILLES, Appellant, v. E. F. REGENHARDT, United States Marshal, etc., et al. [No. 522.]

Appeal from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Missouri.

Mr. Henry S. Priest for appellant.

No appearance for appellees.

October 9, 1911. Dismissed with costs on motion of counsel for the appellant.

737] *UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, Plaintiff in Error, v. ST. LOUIS NATIONAL STOCKYARDS. [No. 330.]

In Error to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit.

Attorney General Wickersham for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Luther M. Walter for defendant in error.

October 18, 1911. Judgment affirmed per stipulation, on motion of Mr. Solicitor General Lehmann for the plaintiff in error.

RUSSELL B. HERRIMAN, Appellant, v. C. T. Elliot, U. S. Marshal, etc. [No. 200.]

Appeal from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of California.

Messrs. A. A. Birney and Henry F. Woodard for appellant.

Attorney General Wickersham for appellee.

October 19, 1911. Death of appellant suggested by Mr. Henry F. Woodard, counsel for appellant, and case abated.

WARNER VALLEY STOCK COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. J. L. MORROW and W. H. Cooper. [No. 458.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Oregon.

Mr. James B. Kerr for plaintiff in error.

Mr. A. M. Crawford for defendants in error.

November 1, 1911. Dismissed without costs to either party, per stipulation, on motion of Mr. A. M. Crawford for the defendants in error.

BLAS AUSINA PI, Plaintiff in Error, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 35.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the Philippine Islands.

Messrs. A. B. Browne, Alex. Britton, and W. A. Kincaid for plaintiff in error.

Attorney General Wickersham for defendant in error.

November 1, 1911. Dismissed pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

*J. A. SCRIVEN COMPANY, Appellant, [738 v. FERGUSON-MCKINNEY DRY GOODS COMPANY. [No. 301.]

Appeal from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

Mr. Arthur v. Briesen for appellant.

Mr. George W. Winstead for appellee.

November 6, 1911. Dismissed for the want of jurisdiction, per stipulation to abide decision in case No. 299 [223 U. S. 708, ante, 622, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 518], on motion of Mr. George W. Winstead for the appellee.

WESTERN UNION TELEGRAPH COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. STATE OF MINNESOTA. [No. 369.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Minnesota.

Messrs. Rome G. Brown and Charles S. Albert for plaintiff in error.

Mr. George T. Simpson for defendant in error.

November 7, 1911. Dismissed, per stipulation, clerk's costs to be paid by the plaintiff in error.

BANKS LAW PUBLISHING COMPANY, Appellant, v. LAWYERS CO-OPERATIVE PUBLISHING COMPANY. [No. 82.]

Appeal from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 94 C. C. A. 642, 169 Fed. 386, 17 Ann. Cas. 957.

Mr. William Hepburn Russell for appellant.

Messrs. Frederick F. Church, Frank F. Reed, and Edward S. Rogers for appellee.

November 9, 1911. Dismissed, per stipulation, each party to pay its own costs in this court.

JOHN C. HAMILTON, Plaintiff in Error, v. JOHN A. ROEBLING'S SONS COMPANY et al. [No. 59.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Ohio.

739] *Mr. George Hoadly for plaintiff in error.

No appearance for defendants in error.

November 9, 1911. Dismissed with costs, pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

DORSET CARTER et al., Appellants, v. J. GEORGE WRIGHT, Commissioner, etc. [No. 62.]

Appeal from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Oklahoma.

Mr. William H. Robeson for appellants. No appearance for appellee.

November 10, 1911. Dismissed with costs, pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

AMERICAN RAILROAD COMPANY OF PORTO RICO, Appellant, v. CENTRAL SAN CHRISTOBAL. [No. 58.]

Appeal from the District Court of the United States for Porto Rico.

See same case below, on motion for a new trial, 4 Porto Rico Fed. Rep. 245; on second trial, 4 Porto Rico Fed. Rep. 422.

Mr. Francis H. Dexter for appellant.

Mr. Henry P. Blair for appellee.

November 13, 1911. Dismissed with costs, pursuant to the Sixteenth Rule, on motion of Mr. Henry P. Blair for the appellee.

CATHERINE LEHMAN et al., Plaintiffs in Error, v. STATE OF INDIANA ON RELATION OF CHARLES W. MILLER, Attorney General. [No. 592.]

In Error to the Appellate Court of the State of Indiana.

Mr. Ferdinand Winter for plaintiffs in error.

Mr. Thos. M. Honan for defendant in error.

November 14, 1911. Dismissed with costs, on motion of counsel for plaintiffs in error.

56 L. ed.

H. L. DENOON et al., Plaintiffs in Error, v. TAX TITLE COMPANY OF RICHMOND. [No. 67.]

In Error to the *Supreme Court of [740 Appeals of the State of Virginia.

Mr. S. S. P. Patteson for plaintiffs in error.

No appearance for defendant in error.

November 14, 1911. Dismissed with costs, pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

UNITED STATES EX REL. LOUIS F. ALLARDT, Appellant, v. MATTHEW J. LONG, Criminal Sheriff, etc. [No. 78.]

Appeal from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Louisiana.

Mr. William Grant for appellant.

Messrs. St. Clair Adams and Albert D. Henriques, Jr., for appellee.

November 16, 1911. Dismissed with costs, pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

TERRITORY OF NEW MEXICO EX REL. ORA BUTLER MEECE, Appellant, v. IRA A. ABBOTT, Associate Justice, etc. [No. 135.]

Appeal from the Supreme Court of the Territory of New Mexico.

Mr. Neill B. Field for appellant.

No appearance for appellee.

December 4, 1911. Dismissed with costs, on motion of counsel for the appellant.

FRANK A. MCCOMBER et al., Appellants, v. ALVA A. NICHOLSON et al. [No. 459.]

Appeal from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of Iowa.

Mr. Benjamin I. Salinger for appellants.

Mr. George Cosson for appellees.

December 4, 1911. Dismissed with costs, on motion of counsel for the appellants.

PULLMAN COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. *DAISY B. CALDER. [No. 768.] [741

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of South Carolina.

See same case below, — S. C. —, 71 S. E. 841.

Mr. W. Huger FitzSimons for plaintiff in error.

Mr. J. P. Kennedy Bryan for defendant in error.

December 4, 1911. Dismissed with costs, per stipulation.

MUNICIPAL COUNCIL OF SAN JUAN et al.,
Appellants, v. JOSÉ E. SALDANA et al.
[No. 91.]

Appeal from the Supreme Court of Porto Rico.

Mr. C. M. Boerman for appellants.

No appearance for appellees.

December 7, 1911. Dismissed with costs, pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

WESTERN UNION TELEGRAPH COMPANY,
Plaintiff in Error, v. HENRY GIBBS. [No. 142.]

In Error to the Circuit Court of Nelson County, State of Virginia.

Messrs. George H. Fearons, Henry D. Estabrook, and Francis Raymond Stark for plaintiff in error.

No appearance for defendant in error.

December 12, 1911. Dismissed with costs, on motion of counsel for the plaintiff in error.

BETTIE LIGON et al., Appellants, v. DOUGLAS H. JOHNSTON et al. [No. 101.]

Appeal from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

Mr. Webster Ballinger for appellants.

No appearance for appellees.

December 12, 1911. Dismissed with costs, pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

PAUL H. KATZ, Appellant, v. MATTHEW J. 742] *LONG, Criminal Sheriff, etc. [No. 105.]

Appeal from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Louisiana.

Mr. James J. McLoughlin for appellant.

Messrs. St. Clair Adams and Albert B. Henriquez, Jr., for appellee.

December 13, 1911. Dismissed with costs, pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

J. A. SCRIVEN COMPANY, Appellant, v. EDWARD MORRIS et al., Trading as Morris & Company. [No. 110.]

Appeal from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit.

Messrs. Arthur v. Briesen and George W. Case, Jr., for appellant.

Messrs. Edgar H. Gans and W. Calvin Chesnut for appellees.

December 14, 1911. Dismissed with costs, pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

JAMES VAUGHAN, Plaintiff in Error, v. LYDIA STARR TABOR. [No. 116.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Michigan.

Mr. William L. Carpenter for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Herschel H. Hatch for defendant in error.

December 15, 1911. Dismissed without costs to either party, per stipulation.

JAMES VAUGHAN, Plaintiff in Error, v. LYDIA STARR TABOR. [No. 117.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Michigan.

Mr. William L. Carpenter for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Herschel H. Hatch for defendant in error.

December 15, 1911. Dismissed without costs to either party, per stipulation.

*CHICAGO, BURLINGTON, & QUINCY [743] RAILWAY COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. CHARLES A. HAMILTON. [No. 229.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Iowa.

Mr. Hale Holden for plaintiff in error.

No appearance for defendant in error.

December 18, 1911. Dismissed with costs, on motion of counsel for the plaintiff in error.

CIENEGUITA COPPER COMPANY, Appellant, v. THOMAS FARISH, JR., et al. [No. 126.]
Appeal from the Supreme Court of the Territory of Arizona.

Mr. Eugene S. Ives for appellant.

Messrs. John F. Wilson and Walter Bennett for appellees.

December 18, 1911. Dismissed with costs, pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

BELT RAILWAY COMPANY OF CHICAGO, Petitioner, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 144.]

On Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit.

See same case below, 22 L.R.A. (N.S.) 582, 93 C. C. A. 666, 168 Fed. 542.

Messrs. William J. Henley and William L. Reed for petitioner.

The Attorney General Wickersham for respondent.

December 19, 1911. Dismissed, pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

AMERICAN SUGAR REFINING COMPANY,
Plaintiff in Error, v. UNITED STATES.
[No. 275.]

In Error to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York.

See same case below, 178 Fed. 109.

Mr. James M. Beck for plaintiff in error.

Attorney General Wickersham and Solicitor General Lehmann for defendant in error.

December 21, 1911. Dismissed on motion of counsel for the plaintiff in error.

744] *UNITED STATES, Plaintiff in Error, v. ROBERT JAMIESON. [No. 587.]

In Error to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York.

See same case below, 185 Fed. 165.

Attorney General Wickersham for plaintiff in error.

Mr. George Whitefield Betts, Jr., for defendant in error.

January 9, 1912. Dismissed on motion of Mr. Solicitor General Lehmann for the plaintiff in error, and cause remanded to the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York.

W. J. McNAUGHTON, Plaintiff in Error, v. STATE OF GEORGIA. [No. 829.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Georgia.

See same case below, 136 Ga. 600, 71 S. E. 1038.

Mr. William Wallace Lambdin for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Thomas S. Felder for defendant in error.

January 9, 1912. Dismissed with costs, pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

JOHN CHEMGAS, Plaintiff in Error, v. THOMAS J. TYNAN, Warden of the Colorado State Penitentiary. [No. 943.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Colorado.

Mr. Archibald A. Lee for defendant in error.

January 22, 1912. Docketed and dismissed with costs, on motion of Mr. Archibald A. Lee for the defendant in error.

PETER HORONS, Plaintiff in Error, v. THOMAS J. TYNAN, Warden of the Colorado State Penitentiary. [No. 944.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Colorado.

Mr. Archibald A. Lee for defendant in error.

January 22, 1912. Docketed and dismissed with costs, on motion of Mr. Archibald A. Lee for the defendant in error.

56 L. ed.

*BOARD OF CHOSEN FREEHOLDERS OF [745] THE COUNTY OF BURLINGTON et al., Appellants, v. PROVIDENT LIFE & TRUST COMPANY OF PHILADELPHIA, Trustee. [No. 278.]

Appeal from the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of New Jersey.

Mr. Alan H. Strong for appellants.

Messrs. Samuel Dickson and Thomas E. French for appellee.

January 22, 1912. Dismissed without costs to either party, per stipulation, and cause remanded to the District Court of the United States for the District of New Jersey.

ST. LOUIS, IRON MOUNTAIN, & SOUTHERN RAILWAY COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. GRACE WATSON, Administratrix, etc. [No. 158.]

In Error to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Arkansas.

See same case below, 169 Fed. 942.

Messrs. Lewis Rhoton, James H. Stevenson, Joseph W. Canada, and E. B. Kinsworthy for plaintiff in error.

Mrs. Grace Watson, in propria persona, for defendant in error.

January 26, 1912. Judgment affirmed with costs, but without interest, per stipulation, and cause remanded to the District Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Arkansas.

BUD BROWN, Plaintiff in Error, v. STATE OF TEXAS. [No. 167.]

In Error to the Court of Criminal Appeals of the State of Texas.

Messrs. Charles K. Bell and George G. Clough for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. Jewell P. Lightfoot and James D. Walthall for defendant in error.

January 26, 1912. Dismissed with costs, pursuant to the Sixteenth Rule, on motion of Mr. J. P. Lightfoot for the defendant in error.

*ROBERT P. STEWART et al., Appellants, v. W. W. MITCHELL et al. [No. 175.]

Appeal from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Western District of Tennessee.

Mr. Caruthers Ewing for appellants.

Mr. W. C. Caldwell for respondents.

January 29, 1912. Dismissed with costs, on motion of counsel for the appellants, and cause remanded to the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Tennessee.

MARGARET KOPP et al., Appellants, v. MARIA WATERS. [No. 298.]

Appeal from the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

See same case below, 34 App. D. C. 575.

Mr. Wilton J. Lambert for appellants.

No appearance for respondent.

February 19, 1912. Dismissed with costs on motion of counsel for the appellants.

E. E. TAENZER & COMPANY, Petitioner, v. CHICAGO, ROCK ISLAND, & PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY. [No. 959.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

See same case below, 191 Fed. 543.

Mr. Caruthers Ewing for petitioner.

No appearance for respondent.

February 19, 1912. Dismissed on motion of counsel for the petitioner.

NORTHERN PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY et al., Appellants, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 258.]

Appeal from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

See same case below, 101 C. C. A. 117, 176 Fed. 706.

Messrs. Charles W. Bunn and Charles Donnelly for appellants.

Attorney General Wickersham for respondent.

February 23, 1912. Dismissed on motion of counsel for the appellants.

747] *MINNEAPOLIS, ST. PAUL & SAULT STE. MARIE RAILWAY COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. WILLIAM H. LADD. [No. 319.]

In Error to the Circuit Court of Rusk County, State of Wisconsin.

Mr. John A. Erdall for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Samuel A. Anderson for defendant in error.

February 23, 1912. Dismissed without costs to either party, per stipulation.

MARY J. LEESNITZER et al., Appellants, v. MARGARET E. TAYLOR in Her Own Right and as Executrix of Thomas Taylor, Deceased. [No. 995.]

Appeal from the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

Mr. J. J. Darlington for appellee.

February 26, 1912. Docketed and dismissed with costs, on motion of Mr. J. J. Darlington for the appellee.

CHARLES W. McCONNEL, Appellant, v. GEORGE H. BURR et al. [No. 536.]

Appeal from the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Massachusetts.

Mr. Robert C. Cooley for appellant.

No appearance for appellees.

February 26, 1912. Dismissed with costs, on motion of counsel for appellant.

J. A. SCRIVEN COMPANY, Appellant, v. PREMIUM MANUFACTURING COMPANY. [No. 300.]

Appeal from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

Mr. Arthur v. Briesen for appellant.

Messrs. F. W. Lehmann and S. L. Swarts for appellee.

February 28, 1912. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction, per stipulation, on motion of Mr. F. W. Lehmann for the appellee.

*HOMER WALT et al., Plaintiffs in Error, v. PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF COLORADO. [No. 182.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Colorado.

Mr. Robert W. Bonyngue for plaintiffs in error.

No appearance for defendant in error.

February 29, 1912. Dismissed with costs, pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

WASHINGTON WATER POWER COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. WALTER S. GASKILL. [No. 186.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Idaho.

Mr. F. T. Post for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. John C. Gittings and Justin Morrill Chamberlain, for defendant in error.

March 1, 1912. Dismissed with costs, pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

ALEXANDER D. MCKNIGHT, Plaintiff in Error, v. ROBERT T. HODGE, Sheriff, etc. [No. 189.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Washington.

See same case below, 55 Wash. 289, — L.R.A.(N.S.) —, 104 Pac. 504.

Messrs. Lawrence Maxwell and Charles D. Fullen for plaintiff in error.

Mr. J. H. Forney for defendant in error.

March 5, 1912. Dismissed with costs on motion of Mr. Lawrence Maxwell for the plaintiff in error.

CAROLINE LESLIE CARTER PAYNE, also known as Mrs. Leslie Carter, Plaintiff in Error, v. ANLISS E. HEERMAN. [No. 205.]

In Error to the City Court of the City of New York, State of New York.

Mr. Nathaniel Levy for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Max D. Josephson for defendant in error.

March 7, 1912. Dismissed with costs, pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

749] *MONEYWEIGHT SCALE COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. FELIX C. McBRIDE. [No. 211.]

In Error to the Supreme Judicial Court of the State of Massachusetts.

Sec same case below, 199 Mass. 503, 85 N. E. 870.

Messrs. Charles F. Morse & John M. Zane for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. Edmund A. Whitman and Albert H. Meads for defendant in error.

March 7, 1912. Dismissed with costs, on motion of counsel for the plaintiff in error.

56 L. ed.

PERFECTO DIMAGUILA and Buenaventura Dimaguila, Appellants, v. INTERNATIONAL BANKING CORPORATION et al. [No. 429.]

Appeal from the Supreme Court of the Philippine Islands.

Mr. William Henry White for appellants.

No appearance for appellees.

March 11, 1912. Dismissed with costs on motion of counsel for the appellants.

AGNES W. B. SHEPARD et al., Plaintiffs in Error, v. THE CITY OF SEATTLE. [No. 461.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Washington.

Messrs. Thomas R. Shepard and Alfred J. Daly for plaintiffs in error.

Mr. Harold Preston for defendant in error.

July 31, 1911. Dismissed, pursuant to the Twenty-eighth Rule.

CASES

ARGUED AND DECIDED

IN THE

S U P R E M E C O U R T

OF THE

UNITED STATES

AT

OCTOBER TERM, 1911.

Vol. 224.

REFERENCE TABLE

OF SUCH CASES
DECIDED IN U. S. SUPREME COURT,
OCTOBER TERM, 1911.

AND REPORTED HEREIN,

VOLUME 224,

AS ALSO APPEAR IN OFFICIAL REPORTER'S EDITION.

Off. Rep. 224 U. S.	Title.	Here in.	Off. Rep. 224 U. S.	Title.	Here in.
1	Henry v. A. B. Dick Co.	645	121-124	Schodde v. Twin Falls Land & Water Co.	692
11	" "	649		" "	693
11-14	" "	650	124-126	" "	693
14-16	" "	651	126	Gonzales v. Buist	694
16-19	" "	652	127-129	" "	695
19-22	" "	653	129-131	" "	696
22-24	" "	654	131	" "	696
24-27	" "	655	132-134	Wood v. United States	697
27-30	" "	656	134-137	" "	697
30-32	" "	657	137	Plummer v. United States	700
32-35	" "	658	138-140	" "	701
35-37	" "	659	140-143	" "	702
37-40	" "	660	143-145	" "	702
40-42	" "	661	145	J. W. Calnan Co. v. Do- herty	702
42-45	" "	662		" "	703
45-48	" "	663	146-147	Consumers' Co. v. Hatch	703
48-50	" "	664	148	" "	705
50-53	" "	665	149-151	" "	706
53-56	" "	666	151-152	Guarantee Title & T. Co. v. Title Guaranty & S. Co.	706
56-58	" "	667	152	" "	707
58-61	" "	668		" "	708
61-63	" "	669	153	" "	709
63-66	" "	670	153-156	" "	710
66-69	" "	671	156-159	" "	710
69-71	" "	672	159-160	" "	710
71-73	" "	673		Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Richmond	710
73	Thomas v. Taylor	673	160	" "	714
77-78	" "	676		" "	715
78-81	" "	677	165-166	" "	716
81-84	" "	678	166-169	" "	717
84	" "	679	169-171	" "	717
85	Bentler v. Grand Trunk Junction R. Co.	679	171-173	World's Fair Min. Co. v. Powers	717
88-89	" "	680	173	" "	719
89	San Juan Light & Transit Co. v. Requena	680	176	" "	720
94-95	" "	682	176-179	" "	721
95-97	" "	683	179-180	Swanson v. Sears	721
97-99	" "	684	180	" "	724
99	Campbell v. United States	684	181-182	" "	725
104-105	" "	685	182	Matter of Loving	725
105-106	" "	686	183-185	" "	726
107	Schodde v. Twin Falls Land & Water Co.	686	185-188	" "	727
114-116	" "	689	188	Brown v. Selfridge	727
116-118	" "	690	189-190	" "	728
118-121	" "	691	190-192	" "	729
			102-193	" "

REFERENCE TABLE.

Off. Rep. 24 U. S.	Title.	Here in.	Off. Rep. 24 U. S.	Title.	Here in.
194	Interstate Commerce Com- mission v. Goodrich Tran- sit Co.	729	345-346	Pomona v. Sunset Teleph. & Teleg. Co.	795
203-205	" "	733	346	Title Guaranty & S. Co. v. Nichols	795
205-207	" "	734	349	" "	797
207-210	" "	735	349-352	" "	798
210-212	" "	736	352-353	" "	799
212-215	" "	737	354	St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Wynne	799
215-216	" "	738	358-359	" "	800
217	Haskell v. Kansas Natural Gas Co.	738	359-361	" "	801
218-220	" "	739	362	Gromer v. Standard Dred- ging Co.	801
220-222	" "	740	363-364	" "	802
222-224	" "	741	364-366	" "	803
224	Johnson v. Washington Loan & T. Co.	741	366-369	" "	804
232-234	" "	744	369-371	" "	805
234-237	" "	745	371-374	" "	806
237-239	" "	746	374-376	" "	807
240-241	" "	747	376-379	" "	808
241	Sharpe v. Bonham	747	379-382	" "	809
241-242	" "	748	382-383	" "	810
242-243	" "	749	383	United States v. Terminal R. Assn.	810
243	Converse v. Hamilton	749	390-392	" "	812
251-253	" "	752	392-395	" "	813
253-255	" "	753	395-397	" "	814
255-258	" "	754	397-400	" "	815
258-260	" "	755	400-403	" "	816
260-261	" "	756	403-405	" "	817
262	Holt v. Crucible Steel Co.	756	405-408	" "	818
264-266	" "	757	408-410	" "	819
266-267	" "	758	410-413	" "	820
268	Brinkmeier v. Missouri P. R. Co.	758	413	Heckman v. United States	820
268-269	" "	759	415-416	" "	821
269-270	" "	760	416-419	" "	822
270	Standard Oil Co. v. Mis- souri ex rel. Hadley	760	419-420	" "	823
272-273	" "	761	426-427	" "	825
273-275	" "	762	427-429	" "	826
280-281	" "	767	429-432	" "	827
281-284	" "	768	432-435	" "	828
284-287	" "	769	435-437	" "	829
287-289	" "	770	437-440	" "	830
289-290	" "	771	440-442	" "	831
290	Crozier v. Fried. Krupp Aktiengesellschaft	771	442-445	" "	832
297-298	" "	773	445-447	" "	833
298-301	" "	774	447-448	" "	834
301-303	" "	775	448	Mullen v. United States	834
303-306	" "	776	449	" "	837
306-308	" "	777	450-452	" "	838
308-309	" "	778	452-455	" "	839
309	United States v. Societe Anonyme des Anciens Etablissements Cail	778	455-457	" "	840
310-311	" "	780	457-458	" "	841
311-313	" "	781	458	Goat v. United States	841
313-316	" "	782	459-461	" "	843
316-319	" "	783	461-464	" "	844
319-321	" "	784	464-467	" "	845
321-324	" "	785	467-469	" "	846
324-326	" "	786	469-471	" "	847
326-329	" "	787	471	Denning Invest. Co. v. United States	847
329-330	" "	788	472	" "	849
330	Pomona v. Sunset Teleph. & Teleg. Co.	788	472-473	" "	849
342	" "	793	474	Interstate Commerce Com- mission v. United States ex rel. Humboldt S. S. Co.	849
342-345	" "	794	477-478	" "	851
			478-481	" "	852

REFERENCE TABLE.

Off. Rep. 24 U. S.	Title.	Here in.	Off. Rep. 24 U. S.	Title.	Here in.
481-483	Interstate Commerce Commission v. United States ex rel. Humboldt S. S. Co.	853	577	Texas & P. R. Co. v. Howell	892
483-485	" "	854	581-583	" "	894
486	Washington Home for Incurables v. American Security & T. Co.	854	583	B. Altman & Co. v. United States	894
489-490	" "	855	593-594	" "	904
490	" "	856	594	" "	905
491-494	American Security & T. Co. v. District of Columbia	855	594-595	" "	906
494-495	" "	856	595-596	" "	907
496	Herndon-Carter Co. v. James N. Norris, Son & Co.	857	596-597	" "	908
497-498	" "	857	597-599	" "	909
498-501	" "	858	599-601	" "	910
501-503	" "	858	601-602	" "	911
503	Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Dennis	859	603	Philadelphia, B. & W. R. Co. v. Schubert	911
504-506	" "	860	606 608	" "	914
506-509	" "	860	608-611	" "	915
509	" "	861	611-613	" "	916
510	Washington ex rel. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. v. Fairchild	862	613-616	" "	917
511-513	" "	863	616	Graham v. West Virginia	917
513-515	" "	864	620-623	" "	920
515-517	" "	864	623 625	" "	921
523-526	" "	865	625-628	" "	922
526-528	" "	866	628 630	" "	923
528-531	" "	868	630-631	" "	924
531-533	" "	869	632	Cross Lake Shooting & Fishing Club v. Louisiana	924
534-535	Nielson v. Steinfeld	870	632-635	" "	926
535-538	" "	871	635-638	" "	927
538-541	" "	872	638-640	" "	928
541	" "	873	640	Gritts v. Fisher	928
542-544	Missouri P. R. Co. v. Castle	874	641-643	" "	931
544-546	" "	875	643-646	" "	932
547	American R. Co. v. Birch	875	646-648	" "	933
551-552	" "	875	648	" "	934
552-555	" "	875	650-652	Louisville v. Cumberland Teleph. & Teleg. Co.	934
555-557	" "	875	653-654	" "	935
557-558	" "	875	654-659	" "	936
558	McCaughy v. Lyall	878	659-661	" "	938
561	" "	879	661-664	" "	939
561-563	" "	879	664-665	" "	940
564	Waskey v. Chambers	880	665	" "	941
564-566	" "	881	667	Choate v. Trapp	941
566-567	" "	882	667-670	" "	942
567	Leary v. United States	883	670-672	" "	943
573-575	" "	883	672-675	" "	944
575-576	" "	884	675-677	" "	945
		885	677-679	" "	946
		885	679	" "	947
		888	679-680	Gleason v. Wood	947
		889	680	" "	949
		889	680-681	English v. Richardson	949
		891	681	" "	951
		892		" "	952

THE DECISIONS

OF THE

Supreme Court of the United States

AT

OCTOBER TERM, 1911.

1] *SIDNEY HENRY et al.

v.

A. B. DICK COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 1-73.)

Federal courts — jurisdiction — contracts affecting patents.

1. An agreement arising from the purchase of a Rotary mimeograph subject to a license restriction that the machine may be used only with the stencil paper, ink, and other supplies made by the patentee, none of which are patented, is not collateral, so as to make its validity dependent on principles of general law, of which a Federal court will have no jurisdiction.

[For other cases, see Courts, 556-561, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Courts — rules of decision.

2. The Supreme Court of the United States will not refrain from ruling that a patentee may sell a patented machine subject to restrictions as to its use, and predicate infringement on a use in violation of such restrictions, on the ground that such a ruling might draw to the Federal courts cases which otherwise would not come to them.

[For other cases, see Courts, 1613-1615, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Federal courts — jurisdiction — infringement of patent.

3. An action by the patentee of a Rotary mimeograph sold under a license restriction that such machine should be used only with the stencil paper, ink, and other supplies made by the patentee, none of which are patented, against one selling ink to the purchaser with the expectation that it would be used in connection with such mimeograph, is one arising under the patent laws, of which a Federal court has jurisdiction. [For other cases, see Courts, 562-568, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Election of remedies — violation of license restriction.

4. A patentee selling a Rotary mimeograph under a license restriction that it shall be used only with stencil paper, ink, and other supplies made by the patentee, may elect to sue for an infringement by the sale of ink to the purchaser with the expectation that it would be used in connection with such mimeograph, although he might have sued on the broken contract, or brought a bill to declare a forfeiture of the licensee's rights for breach of the implied covenant to operate it only in connection with the materials supplied by the patentee.

[As to choice of remedies, see Election of Remedies, III., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Federal courts — jurisdiction — infringement of patents.

5. Whether a patentee selling a Rotary mimeograph under a license restriction that it shall be used only with the stencil paper, ink, and other supplies made by the patentee, none of which are patented, thereby reserves to himself as patentee the exclusive right to all unpermitted uses which may be made of his invention as embodied in the machine sold, is a question arising under the patent laws, of which a Federal court has jurisdiction.

[For other cases, see Courts, 562-568, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Patents — license restrictions.

6. A license restriction may lawfully be

NOTE.—On the right of purchaser of patented article to sell or use it free from restrictions affecting it in the hands of the vendor—see note to Garst v. Hall & L. Co. 55 L.R.A. 633.

On the validity of contract provision seeking to control price at which an article shall be resold—see note to Grogan v. Chaffee, 27 L.R.A. (N.S.) 395.

On contributory infringement of patents—see notes to Edison Electric Light Co. v. Peninsular Light, Power & Heat Co. 43 C. C. A. 485, and Æolian Co. v. Harry H. Juelg Co. 86 C. C. A. 206.

imposed on the purchaser of a rotary mimeograph, that the machines sold may be used only with the stencil paper, ink, and other supplies made by the patentee, although they are all unpatented.

[For another case, see Patents, 840, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Statutes — patents — monopoly — liberal construction.

7. The statute creating and guarantying to an inventor the exclusive right to his patent will be so construed as to give effect to the broad public policy intended to be subserved in granting the monopoly.

[For other cases, see Statutes, 463-470, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Patents — contributory infringement.

8. The sale of ink to a purchaser of a Rotary mimeograph sold with a license restriction that it could be used only with the ink supplied by the patentee, with the expectation that the ink sold would be used in connection with such mimeograph, constitutes contributory infringement of the patent.

[As to what constitutes infringement of patent generally, see Patents, XIV. a, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Cases certified.

9. Defendants in an action for contributory infringement of a patented Rotary mimeograph by a sale of ink to the purchaser in violation of a license restriction that it should be used only with the ink made by the patentee cannot, where the facts certified to the United States Supreme Court state that they made a direct sale of the ink to the user of the patented article with knowledge that, under the license from the patentee, she could not use such ink in connection with the machine without infringement of the monopoly of the patent, and that the sale was made with the expectation that it would be used in connection with such mimeograph, claim that the sale of the ink was not an infringement as it might be used in a noninfringing way.

[As to scope of inquiry in cases certified, see Cases Certified, 108-115, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 20.]

Argued October 27, 1911. Decided March 11, 1912.

ON A CERTIFICATE from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit, presenting a question as to whether a sale of ink to a purchaser of a Rotary mimeograph, with license restricting its use only with ink made by the patentee, with the expectation that it would be used in connection with such mimeograph, constitutes contributory infringement of a patent. Answered in the affirmative.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Arthur v. Briesen argued the cause and filed a brief for Henry:

The doctrine of contributory infringement should not be extended beyond those articles which are either parts of a patented combination or device, or which are produced for the sole purpose of being so used, and should not be applied to the staple articles of commerce.

A. B. Dick Co. v. Roper, 126 Fed. 966; Cortelyou v. Charles Eneu Johnson & Co. 207 U. S. 196, 52 L. ed. 167, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 105.

If the defendant had maliciously induced Miss Skou to violate her contract, to the injury of complainant, the defendant should have been proceeded against for procurement of the violation of the contract.

1 Addison, Torts, 1876 ed. 11, 37; Angle v. Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. 151 U. S. 1, 13, 38 L. ed. 55, 62, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 240.

If the defendant Henry, in selling the can of ink to Miss Skou, affected the rights of the complainant injuriously and maliciously he did so by inducing Miss Skou to violate her contract, and not by inducing Miss Skou to infringe upon the patent.

Bloomer v. McQuewan, 14 How. 539-549, 14 L. ed. 532-537; Wilson v. Sandford, 10 How. 99, 13 L. ed. 344; Keeler v. Standard Folding Bed Co. 157 U. S. 659, 39 L. ed. 848, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 738; Bobbs-Merrill Co. v. Straus, 210 U. S. 339, 52 L. ed. 1086, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 722; Scribner v. Straus, 210 U. S. 352, 52 L. ed. 1094, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 735.

Contributory infringement of a patent involves a primary infringement of a patent, to which the party defendant contributes.

Rupp & W. Co. v. Elliott, 65 C. C. A. 544, 131 Fed. 730; Morgan Envelope Co. v. Albany Perforated Wrapping Paper Co. 152 U. S. 425, 38 L. ed. 500, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 627.

A court of equity should never by injunction imply obligations on one party when there are no clear and definite obligations imposed upon the other party to the contract.

Chicago & G. E. R. Co. v. Dane, 43 N. Y. 240; Rafolovitz v. American Tobacco Co. 73 Hun, 87, 25 N. Y. Supp. 1036; Jackson v. Alpha Portland Cement Co. 122 App. Div. 345, 106 N. Y. Supp. 1052; Lawrence v. Dixey, 119 App. Div. 295, 104 N. Y. Supp. 516.

The contract on its face is one which is condemned by the Sherman law.

Blount Mfg. Co. v. Yale & T. Mfg. Co. 166 Fed. 555; E. Bement & Sons v. National Harrow Co. 186 U. S. 70, 88, 46 L. ed. 1058, 1067, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747:

Rubber Tire Wheel Co. v. Milwaukee Rubber Works Co. 83 C. C. A. 336, 154 Fed. 358; Indiana Mfg. Co. v. J. I. Case Threshing Mach. Co. 83 C. C. A. 343, 154 Fed. 365; Chesapeake & O. Fuel Co. v. United States, 53 C. C. A. 256, 115 Fed. 610; John D. Park & Sons Co. v. Hartman, 12 L.R.A.(N.S.) 135, 82 C. C. A. 158, 153 Fed. 24.

Where one comes into court to seek to enforce an unlawful contract, he does not come into equity with clean hands.

American Biscuit & Mfg. Co. v. Klotz, 44 Fed. 721; Continental Wall Paper Co. v. Louis Voight & Sons Co. 212 U. S. 227, 53 L. ed. 486, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 280.

The law on patents is based upon one provision of the Constitution, and the Sherman act is based upon another provision of the Constitution. If the later act modifies the former in obedience to the Constitutional provision relating to the regulation of interstate commerce, it effectuates such regulation under the established theory that a later act of Congress supercedes or modifies a former.

Chinese Exclusion Case, 130 U. S. 581, 32 L. ed. 1068, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 623; Fong Yue Ting v. United States, 149 U. S. 698, 37 L. ed. 905, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1016.

Congress has the exclusive right to limit the time for which monopolies shall be granted. It follows that the patentee himself has no right to create additional terms, or so to arrange matters that there shall be no time limitation.

Pennock v. Dialogue, 2 Pet. 1, 7 L. ed. 327; Evans v. Robinson, Brunner, Col. Cas. 400, Fed. Cas. No. 4,571.

Mr. Antonio Knauth also filed a brief for Henry:

The attempted restriction on the sale of the article is void at common law.

2 Kent, Com. 14th ed. p. 347; 2 Bl. Com. 4th ed. pp. 1, 389, 446; Benjamin, Sales, 6th ed. p. 746; Taddy v. Sterious [1904] 1 Ch. 354, 73 L. J. Ch. N. S. 191, 89 L. T. N. S. 628, 52 Week. Rep. 152, 20 Times L. R. 102; McGruther v. Pitcher [1904] 2 Ch. 306, 73 L. J. Ch. N. S. 653, 91 L. T. N. S. 678, 53 Week. Rep. 138, 20 Times L. R. 652; Dr. Miles Medical Co. v. John D. Park & Sons Co. 220 U. S. 373, 55 L. ed. 502, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 376.

The patent statute does not interfere with the working of the rule of the common law as applied to patented articles which have been sold by the patentee by an absolute sale passing the title, not conditionally, but absolutely.

Wilson v. Rousseau, 4 How. 646, 11 L. ed. 1141; Bloomer v. McQuewan, 14 How. 539-549, 14 L. ed. 532-537; Chaffee v. 56 L. ed.

Boston Belting Co. 22 How. 217-222, 16 L. ed. 240-242; Goodyear v. Beverly Rubber Co. 1 Cliff. 354, Fed. Cas. No. 5,557; Mitchell v. Hawley, 16 Wall. 544-547, 21 L. ed. 322, 323; Adams v. Burke, 17 Wall. 453, 21 L. ed. 700; Webber v. Virginia, 103 U. S. 344, 348, 26 L. ed. 565, 566; Paper-Bag Mach. Cases, 105 U. S. 766, 26 L. ed. 959; Hobbie v. Jenkinson, 149 U. S. 355, 37 L. ed. 766, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 879; Morgan Envelope Co. v. Albany Perforated Wrapping Paper Co. 152 U. S. 425, 38 L. ed. 500, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 627; Keeler v. Standard Folding Bed Co. 157 U. S. 659, 39 L. ed. 848, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 738; Bloomer v. Millinger, 1 Wall. 340, 17 L. ed. 581.

If the patentee desires to secure to himself the continued control over the use of the patented article in the hands of others, he may do so by leasing it upon suitable conditions, terminating the lease in case of a breach of the condition, or by selling it under conditional sale, providing that upon breach of the condition, the title to the article will revert to the patentee. In that case a use of the article in violation of the condition may terminate the lease or sale of the article which, in the case of such a sale, would become the property of the patentee again, and a use thereof by the lessee or purchaser may constitute a violation of the patent for which an infringement suit may lie.

Henry Bill Pub. Co. v. Smythe, 27 Fed. 914.

In trying to enforce the license restriction by a suit which has for its object to prevent the use contracted against, the patentee is not rescinding the contract at all, but is enforcing the right given to him by the contract, implied from the terms of the restricted license. A rescission would have as an object to obtain the article again, but that is not what he seeks. He leaves the purchaser in possession of the article which the purchaser has paid for, and asks the courts to enforce the agreement which he has made with the purchaser, and which is expressed in the license restriction attached to the article. That this is not a suit arising under the patent statute, but a suit arising from the contract, and having for its object the enforcement of the contract, seems manifest both on principle and on authority.

Excelsior Wooden Pipe Co. v. Pacific Bridge Co. 185 U. S. 282, 46 L. ed. 910, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681.

The license restriction is void because unreasonable and tending to create an unlawful, permanent monopoly in the patentee in something which is not protected by his patent.

Cortelyou v. Johnson, 76 C. C. A. 455, 145 Fed. 935; Morgan Envelope Co. v. Albany Perforated Wrapping Paper Co. 152 U. S. 425, 38 L. ed. 500, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 627.

Mr. Frederick P. Fish argued the cause, and, with Mr. Samuel Owen Edmonds, filed a brief for the A. B. Dick Company:

Complainant has the exclusive control over the manufacture, the use, and the sale of the patented Rotary mimeographs. Included herein is the right to prescribe within what limits and under what conditions these machines may be used by its vendees.

Mitchell v. Hawley, 16 Wall. 544, 21 L. ed. 322; E. Bement & Sons v. National Harrow Co. 186 U. S. 70, 46 L. ed. 1058, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747; Providence Rubber Co. v. Goodyear, 9 Wall. 788, 19 L. ed. 566; Birdsell v. Shaliol, 112 U. S. 485, 28 L. ed. 768, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 244; Hobbie v. Jennison, 149 U. S. 355, 37 L. ed. 766, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 879; Victor Talking Mach. Co. v. The Fair, 61 C. C. A. 58, 123 Fed. 424; Morgan Envelope Co. v. Albany Perforated Wrapping Paper Co. 40 Fed. 580; Steam Cutter Co. v. Sheldon, 10 Blatchf. 1, Fed. Cas. No. 13,331; American Cotton-Tie Co. v. Simmons, 3 Bann. & Ard. 320, Fed. Cas. No. 293; Rupp & W. Co. v. Elliott, 65 C. C. A. 544, 131 Fed. 730; American Cotton-Tie Supply Co. v. Bullard, 17 Blatchf. 160, Fed. Cas. No. 294; Dorsey Revolving Harvester Rake Co. v. Bradley Mfg. Co. 12 Blatchf. 202, Fed. Cas. No. 4,015.

The rights of vendees or licensees of Rotary mimeographs are fixed and determined by the restriction borne by the machines themselves. The machines so restricted having been accepted by the vendees, they are bound to use them only within the authority so conferred.

Providence Rubber Co. v. Goodyear, 9 Wall. 788, 19 L. ed. 566; E. Bement & Sons v. National Harrow Co. 186 U. S. 70, 46 L. ed. 1058, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747; Heaton-Peninsular Button-Fastener Co. v. Eureka Specialty Co. 35 L.R.A. 728, 25 C. C. A. 267, 47 U. S. App. 146, 77 Fed. 288; Victor Talking Mach. Co. v. The Fair, 61 C. C. A. 58, 123 Fed. 427; Robinson, Patents, §§ 809, 812; National Phonograph Co. v. Menck, 27 Times L. R. 239; American Cotton-Tie Supply Co. v. Bullard, 17 Blatchf. 160, Fed. Cas. No. 294; American Cotton-Tie Co. v. Simmons, 3 Bann. & Ard. 320, Fed. Cas. No. 293; Edison Phonograph Co. v. Kaufmann, 105 Fed. 960; Edison Phonograph Co. v. Pike, 116 Fed. 863; Rupp & W. Co. v. Elliott, 65 C. C. A. 544, 131 Fed. 730.

The use of a Rotary mimeograph with ink not made by complainant is a use outside of the license or authority granted to the licensee. Such a use is unlawful and an infringement upon the patent in suit.

Magic Ruffle Co. v. Elm City Co. 13 Blatchf. 151, Fed. Cas. No. 8,949; Robinson, Patents, § 1250; Goodyear v. Union India Rubber Co. 4 Blatchf. 63, Fed. Cas. No. 5,586; Pope Mfg. Co. v. Owsley, 27 Fed. 104; Commercial Acetylene Co. v. Autolux Co. 181 Fed. 387; New Jersey Patent Co. v. Weinberg, 183 Fed. 588 (Fed. Adv. Sheets, March 2, 1911); The Fair v. Dover Mfg. Co. 92 C. C. A. 43, 166 Fed. 117; Victor Talking Mach. Co. v. The Fair, 61 C. C. A. 58, 123 Fed. 424; Willis v. McCullen, 29 Fed. 641; Rupp & W. Co. v. Elliott, 65 C. C. A. 544, 131 Fed. 730.

Such a use being an infringement, he who makes the ink and sells it to the licensee, with intent that it shall be put to the infringing use, is a party to the infringement, and liable as a contributor thereto.

Heaton-Peninsular Button-Fastener Co. v. Eureka Specialty Co. 35 L.R.A. 728, 25 C. C. A. 267, 47 U. S. App. 146, 77 Fed. 296; Wilkins Shoe-Button Fastener Co. v. Webb, 89 Fed. 996; Morgan Envelope Co. v. Albany Perforated Wrapping Paper Co. 40 Fed. 581; American Cotton-Tie Supply Co. v. McCready, 17 Blatchf. 291, Fed. Cas. No. 295; Rupp & W. Co. v. Elliott, 65 C. C. A. 544, 131 Fed. 730; Travers v. Beyer, 23 Blatchf. 423, 26 Fed. 450; Commercial Acetylene Co. v. Autolux Co. 181 Fed. 387; New Jersey Patent Co. v. Weinberg, 183 Fed. 588 (Fed. Adv. Sheets, March 2, 1911); Celluloid Mfg. Co. v. American Zylonite Co. 30 Fed. 437; Wallace v. Holmes, 9 Blatchf. 65, Fed. Cas. No. 17,100; Renwick v. Pond, 10 Blatchf. 39, Fed. Cas. No. 11,702; Richardson v. Noyes, 10 Off. Gaz. 507, Fed. Cas. No. 11,792; Bowker v. Dows, 3 Bann. & Ard. 518, Fed. Cas. No. 1,734.

Complainant's remedy is in equity, for infringement of its patents, and not at law, for violation of the license contract.

Littlefield v. Perry, 21 Wall. 205, 21 L. ed. 577; Excelsior Wooden Pipe Co. v. Pacific Bridge Co. 185 U. S. 282, 46 L. ed. 910, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681; Atherton Mach. Co. v. Atwood-Morrison Co. 43 C. C. A. 72, 102 Fed. 949; Victor Talking Mach. Co. v. The Fair, 61 C. C. A. 58, 123 Fed. 424; Wilson v. Sandford, 10 How. 99, 13 L. ed. 344; Ball & Socket Fastener Co. v. Ball Glove Fastening Co. 7 C. C. A. 498, 5 U. S. App. 588, 58 Fed. 818; Seibert Cylinder Oil-Cup Co. v. Manning, 32 Fed. 625; Dunham v. Bent, 72 Fed. 61; Indiana Mfg. Co. v. J. I. Case Threshing Mach. Co. 83 C. C. A. 343, 154 Fed. 366.

Apparently, although this is somewhat beside the point, under the facts here presented complainant was at liberty to sue either under the patents (for infringement), or under the license contract (for the breach), or under both.

Heaton-Peninsular Button Fastener Co. v. Eureka Specialty Co. 35 L.R.A. 728, 25 C. C. A. 267, 47 U. S. App. 146, 77 Fed. 288; Victor Talking Mach. Co. v. The Fair, 61 C. C. A. 58, 123 Fed. 424; John D. Park & Sons Co. v. Hartman, 12 L.R.A. (N.S.) 135, 82 C. C. A. 158, 153 Fed. 24; Rupp & W. Co. v. Elliott, 65 C. C. A. 544, 131 Fed. 732.

The gravamen of the tort of contributory infringement is the unlawful intent of the infringer. This may be proved in two ways. If the thing which he produces be incapable of lawful use, mere proof that he produced it at all carries with it the presumption of unlawful intent. If, on the other hand, that thing be capable of a lawful use as well as an unlawful use, mere proof of its production is insufficient. His evil intent must otherwise be made to appear, and until it has been, the patentee is without remedy.

Thompson-Houston Electric Co. v. Ohio Brass Co. 26 C. C. A. 170, 54 U. S. App. 1, 80 Fed. 721; Harper v. Kalem Co. 94 C. C. A. 429, 169 Fed. 61; Rupp & W. Co. v. Elliott, 65 C. C. A. 544, 131 Fed. 732; Cutler-Hammer Mfg. Co. v. Union Electric Mfg. Co. 147 Fed. 266; Bullock Electric & Mfg. Co. v. Westinghouse Electric & Mfg. Co. 63 C. C. A. 607, 129 Fed. 105; John R. Williams Co. v. Miller, D. B. & P. Mfg. Co. 107 Fed. 290.

A contract is not to be assumed to contemplate unlawful results unless a fair construction requires it upon the established facts.

Cincinnati, P. B. S. & P. Packet Co. v. Bay, 200 U. S. 184, 50 L. ed. 432, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 208; Oregon Steam Nav. Co. v. Winsor, 20 Wall. 64, 22 L. ed. 315; Hobbs v. McLean, 117 U. S. 567, 29 L. ed. 940, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 870; United States v. Central P. R. Co. 118 U. S. 235, 30 L. ed. 173, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1038.

The patent laws give the patentee the right to impose upon his licensee any legal conditions, no matter what their character; and if the licensee sufficiently desires a share of the patent monopoly to bind himself not to use a public commodity, it is of no concern to the public that he has thus limited his activities, if for no other reason than because the rights of the public are thereby in nowise affected.

Rubber Tire Wheel Co. v. Milwaukee Rubber Works Co. 83 C. C. A. 336, 154 Fed. 358; American Cotton Tie Co. v. Simmons, 56 L. ed.

3 Bann. & Ard. 320, Fed. Cas. No. 293; American Cotton-Tie Supply Co. v. Bullard, 17 Blatchf. 160, Fed. Cas. No. 294; Hartman v. John D. Park & Sons Co. 145 Fed. 370.

The "self-interest" of the patentee acts as an automatic governor, guarantying the public in most emphatic manner against abuse of the doctrine of contributory infringement.

Under the authorities it is unnecessary to prove that the machine ever was, in fact, actually used with the defendant's ink.

Rupp & W. Co. v. Elliott, 65 C. C. A. 544, 131 Fed. 733; Thompson-Houston Electric Co. v. Kelsey Electric R. Specialty Co. 22 C. C. A. 1, 45 U. S. App. 95, 75 Fed. 1008; Thompson-Houston Electric Co. v. Ohio Brass Co. 26 C. C. A. 107, 54 U. S. App. 1, 80 Fed. 721; German-American Filter Co. v. Loew Filter Co. 103 Fed. 306, affirmed in 47 C. C. A. 94, 107 Fed. 949; Stearns v. Phillips, 43 Fed. 795; Samuel Bros. & Co. v. Hostetter Co. 55 C. C. A. 111, 118 Fed. 257; Gannert v. Rupert, 62 C. C. A. 594, 127 Fed. 962.

If the license agreement between complainant and its licensees is "valid" (John D. Park & Sons Co. v. Hartman, 12 L.R.A. (N.S.) 135, 82 C. C. A. 158, 153 Fed. 27), if the "conditions" thereof are "reasonable and legal" (E. Bement & Sons v. National Harrow Co. 186 U. S. 70, 46 L. ed. 1058, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747), the Sherman act has nothing to do with the matter.

Rubber Tire Wheel Co. v. Milwaukee Rubber Works Co. 83 C. C. A. 336, 154 Fed. 358.

Mr. Justice Lurton delivered the opinion of the court:

This cause comes to this court upon a certificate under the 6th section of the court of appeals act of March 3, 1891. [26 Stat. at L. 828, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 550.]

The facts and the questions certified, omitting the terms of the injunction awarded by the circuit court, are these:

"This action was brought by the complainant, an Illinois corporation, for the infringement of two letters patent, owned by the complainant, covering a stencil-duplicating machine known as the 'Rotary Mimeograph.' The defendants are doing business as copartners in the city of New York. The complainants sold to one Christina B. Skou, of New York, a Rotary mimeograph embodying the invention described and claimed in said patents under license which was attached to said machine, as follows:

"License Restriction.

"This machine is sold by the A. B. Dick

Company with the license restriction that it may be used only with the stencil paper, ink, and other supplies made by A. B. Dick Company, Chicago, U. S. A.

"The defendant Sidney Henry sold to Miss Skou a can of ink suitable for use upon said mimeograph, with knowledge of the said license agreement, and with the expectation that it would be used in connection [12] with *said mimeograph. The ink sold to Miss Skou was not covered by the claims of said patent."

"Question Certified.

"Upon the facts above set forth the question concerning which this court desires the instruction of the Supreme Court is:

"Did the acts of the defendants constitute contributory infringement of the complainant's patents?"

There could have been no contributory infringement by the defendants unless the use of Miss Skou's machine with ink not made by the complainants would have been a direct infringement. It is not denied that she accepted the machine with notice of the conditions under which the patentee consented to its use. Nor is it denied that thereby she agreed not to use the machine otherwise. What defendants say is that this agreement was collateral, and that its validity depended upon principles of general law, and that if valid the only remedy is such as is afforded by general principles of law. Therefore, they say that the suit is not one arising under the patent law, and one not cognizable in a Federal court, unless diversity of citizenship exists.

But before coming to the question whether this is a suit of which the circuit court had jurisdiction as a suit arising under the patent law, it may be well to notice an argument against jurisdiction, based upon the suggestion that if a breach of such a license restriction will support a suit for infringement, direful results will follow. Chief among the results suggested are, an encroachment upon the authority of the state courts and an extension of the jurisdiction of the Federal courts. And to swell the grievance it is said that if it be held that a breach of such a restriction will support a suit for infringement, parties will be deprived of the right to have the validity and import of the license restriction determined [13] by the general law, *and be compelled to have their rights determined by the patent law.

We are unable to assent to these suggestions. We do not prescribe the jurisdiction of courts, Federal or state, but only give effect to it as fixed by law. If a bill asserts a right under the patent law to sell a patented machine subject to restrictions as to its use, and alleges a use in violation of the restrictions as an infringement of the patent, it presents a question of the extent of the patentee's privilege, which, if determined one way, brings the prohibited use within the provisions of the patent law, or, if determined the other way, brings into operation only principles of general law. Obviously, a suit for infringement, which must turn upon the scope of the monopoly or privilege secured to a patentee, presents a case arising under the patent law. The jurisdiction of the circuit court over such cases has, for more than a century, been exclusive, by the express terms of the statute, although, for the most part, its jurisdiction over other kinds of suits arising under the Constitution and laws of the United States is only concurrent with that of the state courts.

The suggestion, therefore, that we should refrain from ruling that a patentee may sell a patented machine subject to restrictions as to its use, and may predicate infringement upon a use in violation of the restrictions, lest such a ruling may draw to the Federal courts cases which otherwise would not come to them, cannot be sustained without placing our decision upon considerations which are quite apart from the law. This, of course, we may not do. In determining questions of jurisdiction, this court has never shirked the responsibility of maintaining the lines of separation defined in the Constitution and the laws made in pursuance thereof, but, on the contrary, has been ever watchful to maintain those lines as obligatory alike upon all courts and all suitors.

*We come, then, to the question [14] whether a suit for infringement is here presented.

That the license agreement constitutes a contract not to use the machine in a prohibited manner is plain. That defendants might be sued upon the broken contract, or for its enforcement, or for the forfeiture of the license, is likewise plain. But if, by the use of the machine in a prohibited way, Miss Skou infringed the patent, then she is also liable to an action under the patent law for infringement. Now that is primarily what the bill alleged, and this suit is one brought to restrain the defendants as aiders and abettors to her proposed infringing use.

That the patentee may waive the tort and sue upon the broken contract, or in assumpsit, is elementary. 3 Robinson, Patents, §§ 1225, 1250, and notes; Steam Stone Cutter Co. v. Sheldon, 21 Blatchf. 260, 15 Fed. 608; Pope Mfg. Co. v. Owsley, 27 Fed. 100; Button-Fastener Case, 35 L.R.A. 728, 25 C. C. A. 267, 47 U. S. App. 146, 77 Fed. 288, 291; Wilson v. Sandford, 10 How. 99, 13 L. ed. 344. But if the patentee elect to waive the tort, and sue upon the covenants, or for a breach of contract, the suit would not be one dependent upon or arising out of the patent law, and a Federal court would have no jurisdiction unless diversity of citizenship existed. 3 Robinson, Patents, § 1250; Magic Ruffle Co. v. Elm City Co. 13 Blatchf. 151, Fed. Cas. No. 8,949; Goodyear v. Union India Rubber Co. 4 Blatchf. 63, Fed. Cas. No. 5,586; Goodyear v. Congress Rubber Co. 3 Blatchf. 449, Fed. Cas. No. 5,565. This would be so although the damages for a breach would be measured by the loss resulting from the infringement. Magic Ruffle Co. v. Elm City Co. 13 Blatchf. 151, Fed. Cas. No. 8,949. After such a recovery in assumpsit, no further damages for the infringement can be claimed. Steam Stone Cutter Co. v. Sheldon, 21 Blatchf. 260, 15 Fed. 608.

The remedy which the complainant seeks may often determine whether the suit is one arising under the patent law, and cognizable only in a court of the United States, or one upon a contract between the patentee and his assigns or licensees, and therefore 15]cognizable only in a state court, unless there be diversity of citizenship. Thus, a bill to enforce a contract concerning the title to a patent, or an interest therein, or to declare a forfeiture of an assignment of an interest in a patent, or even a license, to make, sell, or use the patented thing, or an action to recover damages for a breach of a contract relating to a patent or a license thereunder, would not because of the character of remedy or relief sought, be a suit cognizable in a United States court, although the facts stated might have justified a suit for infringement in a United States court, if the complainant had elected that remedy. To sustain the contention that a breach of the implied agreement not to use the machine in question except in a particular way might have supported a suit to forfeit the license, or an action for damages upon the broken contract, counsel have cited and commented at great length upon the cases of Wilson v. Sandford, 10 How. 99, 13 L. ed. 344; Dale Tile Mfg. Co. v. Hyatt, 125 U. S. 46, 31 L. ed. 683, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 756; Albright v. Teas, 106 U. S. 613, 27 L. ed. 295, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 550; Hartell v. Tilghman, 99 U. S. 547, 25 L. ed. 357; Pratt v. Paris Gaslight & Coke Co. 168 U. S. 255, 42 L. ed. 458, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 62; Keeler v. Standard Folding Bed Co. 157 U. S. 659, 39 L. ed. 848, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 738; and E. Bement & Sons v. National Harrow Co. 186 U. S. 70, 46 L. ed. 1058, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747; but an examination of these cases will disclose that while in some of them a suit for infringement might have been brought, the complainants had in fact 56 L. ed.

brought suits to set aside or enforce contracts relating to patents, or licenses under patents. They were therefore not "patent cases," but cases determinable upon principles of general law. In Excelsior Wooden Pipe Co. v. Pacific Bridge Co. 185 U. S. 282, 46 L. ed. 910, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681, Mr. Justice Brown reviews the cases and shows so plainly why they were not patent cases that we shall only refer to that opinion.

To support their contention that the only remedy for a violation of the license under which Miss Skou acquired her machine is one in the state courts, counsel quote a paragraph from the same opinion in these words: "Now, it may be freely conceded that if the licensee had failed to ob-[16 serve any one of the three conditions of the license, the licensor would have been obliged to resort to the state courts, either to recover the royalties or to procure a revocation of the license. Such suit would not involve any question under the patent law." But the three conditions of the license there referred to were: First, to pay royalties; second, that the transferee would not transfer or assign the license without consent of the licensor; third, that the failure to use the license in the manufacture of pipe should operate to revoke it. It is evident that the licensee would not have infringed the patent by either failing to pay royalties, by assigning the license, or by neglecting to use his privilege. The licensor would clearly have been compelled to rely wholly upon his contract, as such, in any suit for the violation of any of the conditions named.

The test of jurisdiction is this: Does the complainant "set up some right, title, or interest under the patent laws of the United States, or make it appear that some right or privilege will be defeated by one construction, or sustained by another, of those laws?" Excelsior Wooden Pipe Co. v. Pacific Bridge Co. 185 U. S. 282, 46 L. ed. 910, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681; Pratt v. Paris Gaslight & Coke Co. 168 U. S. 255, 259, 42 L. ed. 458, 460, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 62; White v. Rankin, 144 U. S. 628, 36 L. ed. 569, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 768.

The bill alleges that the complainant's patent has been infringed by the breach of the conditions upon which the patented machine was sold. The remedy it seeks is an injunction against indirect infringement by the defendants. The facts stated upon the face of the bill may be insufficient to show an infringement of the patent; but the right to treat the conduct of the defendants as an indirect infringement is a right which the complainant sets up as arising under the patent law. One construction of the scope of the grant will sustain the rights asserted, if the facts be as alleged, and another will defeat those rights.

17] *Whether a patentee may lawfully impose such restrictions, and whether their violation constitutes an infringement, are obviously questions arising under the patent law. In Littlefield v. Perry, 21 Wall. 205, 222, 22 L. ed. 577, 579, this court said: "An action which raises a question of infringement is an action arising 'under the law;' and one who has the right to sue for the infringement may sue in the circuit court. Such a suit may involve the construction of a contract as well as the patent, but that will not oust the court of its jurisdiction. If the patent is involved, it carries with it the whole case."

Although the complainant might have sued upon the broken contract, or brought a bill to declare a forfeiture of the licensee's rights for breach of the implied covenant to operate it only in connection with materials supplied by it, it has elected to sue for infringement. To quote from Judge Shipman's opinion in Magic Ruffle Co. v. Elm City Co. supra: "It was competent for the complainants to take either one of the two remedies. . . . They could bring a bill alleging an injury to their exclusive rights under the laws of the United States, or, as the residence of the parties gave this court jurisdiction, could bring a proper suit setting up the breach of the contract as the gravamen of their action."

That a patentee may effectually restrict the time, place, or manner of using a patented machine, so that a prohibited use will constitute an infringement of the patent, is fully conceded. Thus, in the printed brief, counsel for defendants say: "Aside from such special contracts, an agreement that the article shall be used only in a certain manner can be made only by way of lease of the article, terminating the lease upon condition broken, or by way of conditional sale, by breach of which the title reverts to the seller." In either such case, counsel say, "a use of the article in violation of the condition may terminate the lease or sale of 18] the article * (which) would become the property of the patentee again, and a use thereof by the lessee or purchaser may constitute a violation of the patent, for which an infringement may lie. . . . He cannot make a sale with the condition attached that the article shall be used or disposed of in a certain manner, leaving the title, however, in the purchaser in case of a breach of the condition."

The books abound in cases upholding the right of a patentee owner of a machine to license another to use it, subject to any qualification in respect of time, place, manner, or purpose of use which the licensee agrees to accept. Any use in excess would obviously be an infringing use and the license would be no defense. 3 Robinson, Patents, §§ 915, 916, and notes. This is so elementary we shall not stop to cite cases.

The contention is not that a patentee may not permit the use of a patented thing, with such qualifications as he sees fit to impose, and that a prohibited use will be an infringing one, but that he can only keep the article within the control of the patent by retaining the title. To put the contention in another form,—it is, that any transfer of the patentee's property right in a patented machine carries with it the right to use the entire invention so long as the identity of the machine is preserved, irrespective of any restrictions placed by the patentee upon the use of the article, and accepted by the buyer. It is said that by such a sale the patentee "disposes of all his rights under his patent, and thereby removes the article from the operation of the patent law." If he attempts to sell the machine for specified uses only, and prohibit all others, the restriction is disposed of as constituting a collateral agreement such as any vendor of personal property might impose, and enforceable, if valid at all, only as a collateral contract.

The issue is a plain one. If it be sound, it concludes the case, and our response should be a negative one, since *the vio-[19] lation of a mere collateral contract, which is not also an infringement of the patent, would not be a case arising under the patent law. But is it true that where a patentee sells his patented machine for a specific and limited use, he does not thereby reserve to himself, as patentee, the exclusive right to all unpermitted uses which may be made of his invention as embodied in the machine sold? Obviously, this is a question arising under the patent law. By a sale of a patented article subject to no conditions, the purchaser undeniably acquires the right to use the article for all the purposes of the patent, so long as it endures. He may use it where, when, and how he pleases, and may dispose of the same unlimited right to another. This has long been the settled doctrine of this and all patent courts. Mitchell v. Hawley, 16 Wall. 544, 21 L. ed. 322; Livingston v. Woodworth, 15 How. 546, 550, 14 L. ed. 809, 811; Adams v. Burke, 17 Wall. 453, 456, 21 L. ed. 700, 703; Folding Bed Case, 157 U. S. 659, 666, 39 L. ed. 848, 850, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 738. By such an unconditional sale of the thing patented it is said to be "no longer within the limits of the monopoly. It passes outside of it, and is no longer under the protection of the act of Congress."

In the cases cited above, as well as in the leading case of Bloomer v. McQuewan, 14 How. 539, 14 L. ed. 532, the statement that a purchaser of a patented machine has an unlimited right to use it for all the purposes of the invention, so long as the identity of the machine is preserved, was made of one who bought unconditionally; that is, subject to no specified limitation upon his right of use. The question of the effect of limitations upon the right of use arose, however, in Mitchell v. Hawley, and there we find the distinction was deemed material and the effect declared.

In that case one Taylor was the patentee, under a grant for a term of fourteen years, for a machine for felting hats. By what Mr. Justice Clifford calls "a conveyance or license, subject to certain restrictions or 20]limitations," *one Bayley was given the "exclusive right to make and use and to license to others the right to use the said machines in the states of Massachusetts and New Hampshire, during the remainder of the original term of said letters patent," subject to a stipulation that "the licensee shall not in any way or form dispose or sell or grant any license to use the said machines beyond the expiration of the original term." There was also a provision that if the term of the patent should be extended, Bayley should have the right to control the same in those two states, upon paying a reasonable compensation, etc.

Bayley, as such licensee, made and sold four machines to the appellant Mitchell, with the right to use them for felting hats in the town of Haverhill, Massachusetts, "under Taylor's patent bearing date May 3, 1864." Before the patent expired it was extended for the further term of seven years, the benefits of which extension for the said two states were assigned to the appellee Hawley. Hawley then filed his bill to restrain Mitchell from using the four identical machines which had been sold to him by Bayley. From a decree restraining their further use Mitchell appealed. Mr. Justice Clifford, before stating the facts upon which the judgment must rest as to the right of Mitchell as the purchaser of the machines to continue their use after the expiration of the original term of Taylor's patent, and after directing attention to what he termed "the well-grounded distinction between the grant of the right to make and vend the patented machine and the grant of the right to use it," which, he says, "was first satisfactorily pointed out by the late Chief Justice Taney, with his accustomed clearness and precision," says:

"Purchasers of the exclusive privilege of making or vending the patented machine hold the whole or a portion of the franchise which the patent secures, depending upon the nature of the conveyance, and, of course, 56 L. ed.

the interest *which the purchaser ac-[21 quires terminates at the time limited for its continuance by the law which created the franchise, unless it is expressly stipulated to the contrary. But the purchaser of the implement or machine for the purpose of using it in the ordinary pursuits of life stands on different grounds, as he does not acquire any right to construct another machine, either for his own use or to be vended to another for any purpose. Complete title to the implement of machine purchased becomes vested in the vendee by the sale and purchase, but he acquires no portion of the franchise, as the machine, when it rightfully passes from the patentee to the purchaser, ceases to be within the limits of the monopoly."

In the succeeding paragraph he, in effect, limits what was above said to unconditional sales of such patented machines by adding this:

"Patented implements or machines sold to be used in the ordinary pursuits of life become the private individual property of the purchasers, and are no longer specifically protected by the patent laws of the state where the implements or machines are owned and used. Sales of the kind may be made by the patentee with or without conditions, as in other cases; but where the sale is absolute, and without any conditions, the rule is well settled that the purchaser may continue to use the implement or machine purchased until it is worn out, or he may repair it or improve upon it as he pleases, in same manner as if dealing with property of any other kind."

The force and bearing of this opinion cannot be escaped by suggesting that the court was referring to mere common-law contractual conditions, for the suit was to restrain infringement by the use of four machines which had been sold, not leased.

That the bill was one alleging and seeking to enjoin further use as an infringement of the patent is shown by the statement that "they," referring to the purchaser *Mitchell and those associated with him, [22 "appeared to the suit and filed an answer setting up as a defense to the charge of infringement that they are by law authorized to continue to use the four machines just the same under the extended letters patent as they had the right to do under the original patent, when the purchase was made by those under whom they claim, which is the only question in the case."

The question argued, as shown by the brief, as set out in the report, was there, as here, that by a sale of the machines "they were taken out of the reach of the patent law altogether, and that as long as the machines themselves lasted, the owner could use them." For the patentee it was urged that "the right to make and use and to license others to use was expressly limited by apt words, showing clearly an intent that it should not survive the original term of the patent." This latter was the argument which prevailed. Mr. Justice Clifford, after referring to the principle of law that one cannot convey a better title or right than he has, said, touching the restriction imposed by Bayley on the machines sold by him to Mitchell: "The form of the license which he gave to the purchaser shows conclusively that he understood that he was not empowered to give a license which should extend beyond that limitation." Later, referring to this sale with license to use, the learned Justice says: "The terms of the license which the seller gave to the purchasers were sufficient to put them upon inquiry, and it is quite obvious that the means of knowledge were at hand, and that if they had made the least inquiry they would have ascertained that their grantor could not give them any title to use the machine beyond the period of fourteen years from the date of the original letters patent, as he was only a licensee, and never had any power to sell a machine so as to withdraw it indefinitely from the operation of the franchise secured by the patent."

23] *The distinction between the sale of a machine free from specific restrictions upon the right of use and a sale subject to such limitations becomes the more evident, in view of the fact that but for the license to use only for the remainder of the original patent term the purchaser would have acquired the right to continue the use during an extended term of the same patent. This was the express holding in the two prior cases of Wilson v. Rosseau, 4 How. 646, 11 L. ed. 1141, and Bloomer v. McQuewan, 14 How. 539, 14 L. ed. 532, where the unlimited right of use by an unconditional purchaser was laid down in the strongest terms, and which cases are now relied upon by counsel in this case as equally applicable to a sale subject to a restricted use.

It is obvious that if Taylor, the patentee, could authorize Bayley to make and sell the patented machines, subject to the restriction that he should not sell for use beyond the terms of the original patent, and that a purchaser of the machines so made and sold by Bayley, with notice, would infringe the extended patent by a use after the original term had expired, it is because the exclusive right of the patentee embraces the right to make and sell patented machines subject to restrictions upon the right of use, which, if not observed, will support an action for infringement.

An absolute and unconditional sale operates to pass the patented thing outside the boundaries of the patent, because such a sale implies that the patentee consents that the purchaser may use the machine so long as its identity is preserved. This implication arises, first, because a sale without reservation, of a machine whose value consists in its use, for a consideration, carries with it the presumption that the right to use the particular machine is to pass with it. The rule and its reason is thus stated in Robinson on Patents, vol. 2, § 824: "The sale must furthermore be unconditional. Not only may the patentee impose conditions limiting the use of the patented article, *upon his grantees and express[24] licensees, but any person having the right to sell may, at the time of sale, restrict the use of his vendee within specific boundaries of time or place or method, and these will then become the measure of the implied license arising from the sale."

The argument for the defendants ignores the distinction between the property right in the materials composing a patented machine, and the right to use for the purpose and in the manner pointed out by the patent. The latter may be and often is the greater element of value, and the buyer may desire it only to apply to some or all of the uses included in the invention. But the two things are separable rights. If sold unreservedly the right to the entire use of the invention passes, because that is the implied intent; but this right to use is nothing more nor less than an unrestricted license presumed from an unconditional sale. A license is not an assignment of any interest in the patent. It is a mere permission granted by the patentee. It may be a license to make, sell, and use, or it may be limited to any one of these separable rights. If it be a license to use, it operates only as a right to use without being liable as an infringer. If a licensee be sued, he can escape liability to the patentee for the use of his invention by showing that the use is within his license. But if his use be one prohibited by the license, the latter is of no avail as a defense. As a license passes no interest in the monopoly, it has been described as a mere waiver of the right to sue by the patentee. 2 Robinson, Patents, §§ 806, 808.

We repeat. The property right to a patented machine may pass to a purchaser with no right of use, or with only the right to use in a specified way, or at a specified place, or for a specified purpose. The unlimited right of exclusive use which is possessed by and guaranteed to the patentee will be granted if the sale be unconditional. But if the right of use be confined by specific restriction, the use not permitted is necessarily reserved to the patentee. *If that reserved control of use of the machine be violated, the patent is thereby invaded. This right to sever ownership and use is deducible from the nature of a patent monopoly and is recognized in the cases.

In Sawin v. Guild, 1 Gall. 485, Fed. Cas. No. 12,391, Mr. Justice Story, as far back as 1813, recognized the distinction by holding that a sale of patented machines under an execution against the patentee did not render the sheriff liable under a statute which made any person liable who should sell a patented device without consent of the patentee, because the sheriff had merely sold the materials, and had not undertaken to pass any right of use. But in Wilder v. Kent, 15 Fed. 217, it was held that under such an execution sale there passed whatever right of use the debtor had if the sale was unconditional.

Judge Lowell, in Porter Needle Co. v. National Needle Co. 17 Fed. 536, after saying that an absolute and unqualified sale of a patented machine carried with it the right of use, said: "But the mere value of a patented machine is often, and is proved to be in this case, insignificant in comparison with the value of its use; and the courts have permitted a severance of ownership and right of use, if the patentee has chosen to dis sever them, and if his intent is not doubtful."

It is plain from the power of the patentee to subdivide his exclusive right of use that when he makes and sells a patented device, that the extent of the license to use which is carried by the sale must depend upon whether any restriction was placed upon the use and brought home to the person acquiring the article.

That here the patentee did not intend to sell the machine made by it subject to an unrestricted use is, of course, undeniable from the words upon the machine, viz.:

License Restriction.

This machine is sold by the A. B. Dick 26]Company, with the *license restriction that it may be used only with the stencil, paper, ink, and other supplies made by A. B. Dick Company.

The meaning and purpose of this restriction was that while the property in the machine was to pass to the purchaser, the right to use the invention was restricted to use with other articles required in its practical operation, supplied by the patentee. It was stated at the bar, and 56 L. ed.

appears fully in the opinion of Judge Ray (149 Fed. 424), who decided the case in the circuit court, that the patentee sold its machines at cost, or less, and depended upon the profit realized from the sale of other nonpatented articles adapted to be used with the machine, and that it had put out many thousands of such machines under the same license restriction. Such a sale, while transferring the property right in the machine, carries with it only the right to use it for practising the invention according to the terms of the license. To no other or greater extent does the patentee consent to the use of the machine. When the purchaser is sued for infringement by using the device, he may defend by pleading, not the general and unlimited license which is carried by an unconditional sale, but the limited license indicated by the metal tablet annexed to the machine. If the use is not one permitted, it is plainly an infringing use.

If, then, we assume that the violation of restrictions upon the use of a machine made and sold by the patentee may be treated as infringement, we come to the question of the kind of limitation which may be lawfully imposed upon a purchaser.

To begin with, the purchaser must have notice that he buys with only a qualified right of use. He has a right to assume, in the absence of knowledge, that the seller passes an unconditional title to the machine, with no limitations upon the use. Where, then, is the line between a lawful and an unlawful qualification upon the use? This is a question of statutory construction. But with what eye *shall we read a[27 meaning into it? It is a statute creating and protecting a monopoly. It is a true monopoly, one having its origin in the ultimate authority, the Constitution. Shall we deal with the statute creating and guaranteeing the exclusive right which is granted to the inventor with the narrow scrutiny proper when a statutory right is asserted to uphold a claim which is lacking in those moral elements which appeal to the normal man? Or shall we approach it as a monopoly granted to subserve a broad public policy, by which large ends are to be attained, and therefore to be construed so as to give effect to a wise and beneficial purpose? That we must neither transcend the statute, nor cut down its clear meaning, is plain. In E. Bement & Sons v. National Harrow Co. 186 U. S. 70, 89-92, 46 L. ed. 1058, 1068, 1069, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747, this court quoted with approval the language of Chief Justice Marshall in Grant v. Raymond, 6 Pet. 218, 241, 8 L. ed. 376, 384. Concerning the favorable view which the law takes as to the protection extended to the exclusive right, the court, through Chief Justice Marshall, said:

"It is the reward stipulated for the advantages derived by the public for the exertions of the individual, and is intended as a stimulus to those exertions. The laws which are passed to give effect to this purpose ought, we think, to be construed in the spirit in which they have been made; and to execute the contract fairly on the part of the United States, where the full benefit has been actually received, if this can be done without transcending the intention of the statute, or countenancing acts which are fraudulent or may prove mischievous. The public yields nothing which it has not agreed to yield, it receives all which it has contracted to receive. The full benefit of the discovery, after its enjoyment by the discoverer for fourteen years, is preserved; and for his exclusive enjoyment of it during that time the public faith is pledged."

If the patent be for a machine, the monopoly extends to the right of making, selling, and using, and these are *separable and substantial rights. In Bloomer v. McQuewan, 14 How. 539, 547, 14 L. ed. 532, 536, it is said that the grant is of "the right to exclude everyone from making, using, or vending the thing without the permission of the owner." In E. Bement & Sons v. National Harrow Co. 186 U. S. 70, 90, 46 L. ed. 1058, 1068, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747, there was involved the legality of certain contracts between patentees of and dealers in patented harrows. The purpose and effect of the combination and of the contracts between the parties was to fix and keep up the prices at which licensees might sell the patented harrows. It was claimed that the combination and contracts were obnoxious to the Sherman act; but, upon the other side, it was said that as the contracts concerned only the sale of patented articles, that that act did not apply. The character of the monopoly granted under the patent act was therefore involved. Touching the right of the patentee to exclude all others from the use of his invention, the court quoted with approval what was said in the Button-Fastener Case, 35 L.R.A. 728, 25 C. C. A. 267, 47 U. S. App. 146, 77 Fed. 288, as follows:

"If he see fit, he may reserve to himself the exclusive use of his invention or discovery. If he will neither use his device nor permit others to use it, he has but suppressed his own. That the grant is made upon the reasonable expectation that he will either put his invention to practical use, or permit others to avail themselves of it upon reasonable terms, is doubtless true. This expectation is based alone upon the supposition that the patentee's interest will induce him to use, or let others use, his invention. The public has retained no other security to enforce such expectations. A suppression can endure but for the life of the patent, and the disclosure he has made will enable all to enjoy the fruit of his genius. His title is exclusive, and so clearly within the constitutional provisions in respect of private property that he is neither bound to use his discovery himself nor permit others to use it."

*In the Paper Bag Case, 210 U. S. 405, [29 52 L. ed. 1122, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 748, this right to exclude others from all use of the invention was held to be so comprehensive that a patentee was allowed to restrain, by injunction, one who was infringing his patent, although he had, during a long term of years, neither used his invention himself, nor allowed others to use it.

That there are limitations upon the right of vending and using a patented machine may be conceded. Thus, if the thing patented belong to a class of things which, on account of their inherent danger to the public safety or health, cannot be sold or used, because prohibited by an exertion of the police power of a state, they will not be immune to such a law because patented. Upon this ground a patent for "an improved burning oil" was held not to take the article without the operation of a state statute forbidding the sale of oil which was unsafe for illuminating purposes. Patterson v. Kentucky, 97 U. S. 501, 24 L. ed. 1115. And so in the Bement Case, the court said of this exclusive grant of privilege:

"It is true that in certain circumstances the sale of articles manufactured under letters patent may be prevented when the use of such article may be subject, within the several states, to the control which they may respectively impose in the legitimate exercise of their powers over their purely domestic affairs, whether of internal commerce or of police regulation."

In that case the question was not one of infringement, but one arising in a suit to enforce certain contracts directly restraining commerce in patented articles which were claimed to violate the Sherman law, although the agreements covered only patented articles. The court, after referring to the exceptions to the patentee's monopoly resulting from conflict with the police power of the state, said:

"Notwithstanding these exceptions, the general rule is absolute freedom in the use or sale of rights under the *patent laws [30 of the United States. The very object of these laws is monopoly, and the rule is, with few exceptions, that any conditions which are not in their very nature illegal with regard to this kind of property, imposed by the patentee and agreed to by the licensee for the right to manufacture or use or sell the article, will be upheld by the courts. The fact that the conditions in the contracts keep up the monopoly or fix prices does not render them illegal."

Now, if this was a suit to recover damages upon the contract not to use the machine except in connection with other articles proper in its use, made by the patentee, the only possible defense would be that the agreement was one contrary to public policy, in that it affected freedom in the sale of such articles to the user of such machines. But that was the nature of the defense made to the suit to enforce the agreements under consideration in the Bement Case. The court in that case found that the contracts did include interstate commerce within their provisions and restrained interstate trade, but with reference to the Sherman act [26 Stat. at L. 209, chap. 647, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3200] said:

"But that statute clearly does not refer to that kind of a restraint of interstate commerce which may arise from reasonable and legal conditions imposed upon the assignee or licensee of a patent by the owner thereof, restricting the terms upon which the article may be used and the price to be demanded therefor. Such a construction of the act, we have no doubt, was never contemplated by its framers."

As to whether the restrictions upon sales imposed by the agreements were "legal and reasonable conditions," the court said:

"The provision in regard to the price at which the licensor would sell the article manufactured under the license was also an appropriate and reasonable condition. It tended to keep up the price of the im-31]plements manufactured *and sold, but that was only recognizing the nature of the property dealt in, and providing for its value so far as possible. This the parties were legally entitled to do. The owner of a patented article can, of course, charge such price as he may choose, and the owner of a patent may assign it or sell the right to manufacture and sell the article patented upon the condition that the assignee shall charge a certain amount for such article."

If the stipulation in an agreement between patentees and dealers in patented articles, which, among other things, fixed a price below which the patented articles should not be sold, would be a reasonable and valid condition, it must follow that any other reasonable stipulation, not inherently violative of some substantive law, imposed by a patentee as part of a sale of a patented machine, would be equally valid and enforceable. It must also follow that if the stipulation be one which qualifies the right of use in a machine sold subject thereto, so that a breach would give rise to a right of action upon the contract, it would be at the same time an act of infringement giving to the patentee his choice of remedies.

But it has been very earnestly said that a condition restricting the buyer to use it only in connection with ink made by the patentee is one of a character which gives to a patentee the power to extend his monopoly so as to cause it to embrace any subject, not within the patent, which he chooses to require that the invention shall be used in connection with. Of course, the argument does not mean that the effect of such a condition is to cause things to become patented which were not so without the requirement. The stencil, the paper, and the ink made by the patentee, will continue to be unpatented. Anyone will be as free to make, sell, and use like articles as they would be without this restriction, save in one particular,—namely, they may not be sold to a user of one of the patentee's machines with intent that they *shall[32 be used in violation of the license. To that extent competition in the sale of such articles, for use with the machine, will be affected; for sale to such users for infringing purposes will constitute contributory infringement. But the same consequence results from the sale of any article to one who proposes to associate it with other articles to infringe a patent, when such purpose is known to the seller. But could it be said that the doctrine of contributory infringement operates to extend the monopoly of the patent over subjects not within it because one subjects himself to the penalties of the law when he sells unpatented things for an infringing use? If a patentee says, "I may suppress my patent if I will. I may make and have made devices under my patent, but I will neither sell nor permit anyone to use the patented things," he is within his right, and none can complain. But if he says, "I will sell with the right to use only with other things proper for using with the machines, and I will sell at the actual cost of the machines to me, provided you will agree to use only such articles as are made by me in connection therewith,"—if he chooses to take his profit in this way, instead of taking it by a higher price for the machines, has he exceeded his exclusive right to make, sell, and use his patented machines? The market for the sale of such articles to the users of his machine, which, by such a condition, he takes to himself, was a market which he alone created by the making and selling of a new invention. Had he kept his invention to himself, no ink could have been sold by others for use upon machines embodying that invention. By selling it subject to the restriction, he took nothing from others and in no wise restricted their legitimate market.

A like objection has been made against injunctions restraining the sale for infringing purposes of a single element in a patent combination. It was said that to enjoin such sales, although the thing sold was in-33]tended *to be used with other elements to complete an infringing combination, was to extend the scope of the patent so as to give to the patentee the same advantage as if the element had been claimed alone. But in Davis Electrical Works v. Edison Electric Light Co. 8 C. C. A. 615, 619, 21 U. S. App. 74, 83, 60 Fed. 276, 280, Judge Putnam answered this, saying:

"Neither in such instances, nor in the case at bar, is the course of the law to be turned aside because the practical result may be to give a patentee for the time being more than the Patent Office contemplated, nor is the patentee to be deprived of his just rights because under some circumstances he gets incidental advantages beyond what he expressly bargained for. We do not in terms give the patentee the benefit of a claim for the filament alone, nor prohibit its use in some other combination than that set out in the second claim if some ingenious way of making such other combination is ever discovered."

In Thomson-Houston Electric Co. v. Kelsey Electric R. Specialty Co. 72 Fed. 1016, the language was adopted by Judge Townsend.

Neither can we see that the liability of the defendants for aiding and abetting an infringing use by Miss Skou would be different whether she had made her machine in open defiance of the rights of the patentee, or had bought it under conditions limiting her right of use. If she had made it, she would have been liable to an action for infringement for making; and if she used it, she would become liable for such infringing use. But if the defendants knew of the patent and that she had unlawfully made the patented article, and then sold her ink or other supplies without which she could not operate the machine, with the intent and purpose that she should use the infringing article by means of the ink supplied by them, they would assist in her infringing use.

"Contributory infringement," says Judge Townsend in Thomson-Houston Electric Co. v. Kelsey Electric R. Specialty Co. supra, 34] *"has been well defined as the intentional aiding of one person by another in the unlawful making, or selling, or using of the patented invention." To the same effect are Wallace v. Holmes, 9 Blatchf. 65, Fed. Cas. No. 17,100; Risdon Iron & Locomotive Works v. Trent, 92 Fed. 375; Thomson-Houston Electric Co. v. Ohio Brass Co. 26 C. C. A. 107, 54 U. S. App. 1, 80 Fed. 721; American Graphophone Co. v. Hawthorne, 92 Fed. 516.

In the Risdon Case, a member of the firm which made the plans for the construction of certain mining machinery to be made in the owner's shop, and then superintended its erection at the mine, was held to be guilty of infringement, though he neither personally made nor used the machines which were found to be an infringement of valid patents. In American Graphophone Co. v. Hawthorne, one who sold a machine with knowledge that it was to be used to produce an infringing article was held to be liable as an infringer.

For the purpose of testing the consequence of a ruling which will support the lawfulness of a sale of a patented machine for use only its connection with supplies necessary for its operation, bought from the patentee, many fanciful suggestions of conditions which might be imposed by a patentee have been pressed upon us. Thus it is said that a patentee of a coffee pot might sell on condition that it be used only with coffee bought from him, or, if the article be a circular saw, that it might be sold on condition that it be used only in sawing logs procured from him. These and other illustrations are used to indicate that this method of marketing a patented article may be carried to such an extent as to inconvenience the public and involve innocent people in unwitting infringements. But these illustrations all fail of their purpose, because the public is always free to take or refuse the patented article on the terms imposed. If they be too onerous or not in keeping with the benefits, the patented article will not find a market. The public, by permitting the invention to go unused, loses nothing *which it had before, and when[35 the patent expires will be free to use the invention without compensation or restriction. This was pointed out in the Paper Bag Case, where the inventor would neither use himself nor allow others to use, and yet was held entitled to restrain infringement because he had the exclusive right to keep all others from using during the life of the patent. This larger right embraces the lesser of permitting others to use upon such terms as the patentee chooses to prescribe. It must not be forgotten that we are dealing with a constitutional and statutory monopoly. An attack upon the rights under a patent because it secures a monopoly to make, to sell, and to use, is an attack upon the whole patent system. We are not at liberty to say that the Constitution has unwisely provided for granting a monopolistic right to inventors, or that Congress has unwisely failed to impose limitations upon the inventor's exclusive right of use. And if it be that the ingenuity of patentees in devising ways in which to reap the benefit of their discoveries requires to be restrained, Congress alone has the power to determine what restraints shall be imposed. As the law now stands it contains none, and the duty which rests upon this and upon every other court is to expound the law as it is written. Arguments based upon suggestions of public policy not recognized in the patent laws are not relevant. The field to which we are invited by such arguments is legislative, not judicial. The decisions of this court, as we have construed them, do not so limit the privilege of the patentee, and we could not so restrict a patent grant without overruling the long line of judicial decisions from circuit courts and circuit courts of appeal, heretofore cited, thus inflicting disastrous results upon individuals who have made large investments in reliance upon them.

The conclusion we reach is that there is no difference, in principle, between a sale subject to specific restrictions as to the time, place, or purpose of use, and restrictions 36] *requiring a use only with other things necessary to the use of the patented article purchased from the patentee. If the violation of the one kind is an infringement, the other is also. That a violation of any such restriction annexed to a sale by one with notice constitutes an infringing use has been decided by a great majority of the circuit courts and circuit courts of appeal, and has come to be a well-recognized principle in the patent law, in accordance with which vast transactions in respect to patented articles have been conducted. But it is now said that the numerous decisions by the lower courts have been erroneous in respect to the proper construction of the limit of the monopoly conferred by a patent, and that they should now be overruled. To these courts has been committed the duty of interpreting and administering the patent law. There is no power in this court to review their judgments, except upon a writ of certiorari, or to direct their decisions, save through a certified interrogatory for direction upon a question of law. This power to review by certiorari is one which has been seldom exercised in patent cases. A line of decisions which has come to be something like a rule of property, under which large businesses have been conducted, should at least not be overruled except upon reasons so clear as to make any other construction of the patent law inadmissible.

The earliest of the reported cases in which the precise question here presented arose were cases arising in suits for the infringement of a patent upon an iron band connected by a buckle, intended for binding cotton bales. The band and this buckle were of iron. The buckle was so adjusted as that the band could be removed from the bale only by cutting. Upon the buckle were stamped the words: "Licensed to use only once." When cut from the bale the band and buckle were sold to persons who used the buckles either upon a new band, or one repaired, and these bands were sold to planters to be used again in baling *cotton. The question arose in a 37 number of cases as to whether such second use of the buckles by one with notice was an infringing use. In American Cotton-Tie Co. v. Simmons, 3 Bann. & Ard. 320, Fed. Cas. No. 293, Judge Shepley dismissed the bill. The case, upon appeal to this court, was reversed, upon the ground that that which had been done after the first use was a reconstruction, and not a repair, and was therefore an infringement. 106 U. S. 89, 27 L. ed. 79, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 52. The court did not pass upon the question whether a second use of the buckles would be an infringing use. Another case arising under the same patent was that of American Cotton Tie Supply Co. v. Bullard, 4 Bann. & Ard. 520, Fed. Cas. No. 294, decided by Judge Blatchford, who gave the question great consideration. "It is manifest," says Judge Blatchford, "that the owners of the patents intended, by the stamps on the buckles and the imprints on the billheads, to grant a restricted license for the use of the ties and the buckles, and that the intended restriction was to a use of them once only as baling ties. The words, 'Licensed to use once only,' stamped on each buckle, was notice to everyone who handled it that there was attached to it a restriction in the shape of a license, and of a license merely to use, and of a license to use only once. This was a lawful restriction." Concerning the question of the effect of this restriction upon subsequent buyers of the cotton with its bands and buckles, the court said: "It is difficult to see how, in view of the facts of the case, the owners of these patents can properly be said to have sold the buckles for the purpose of allowing them to be used in the ordinary pursuits of life, and to pass into the markets of the country as an ordinary article of commerce. . . . The original license is fairly a license to have the buckle and the band confine a bale until the consumer needs to confine the bale no longer, and a license for no longer time. There is no purchase of buckle and band by a purchaser of the baled cotton, except as he purchases them confining the cotton, 38] *and to confine it till it reaches the consumer, and such purchase of buckle and band is, in effect, only a purchase of them subject to such original license. It is quite as reasonable to say that the purchaser of the cotton buys subject to such license as it is to say that the licensor, having imposed the restricted license, permits it to be instantly destroyed. The former view is consistent with the original intention, and the latter view is inconsistent with it."

As indicating the trend of judicial opinion that such license restrictions annexed to patented articles, when sold, constitute licenses under the patent, and that their violation by persons having notice constitutes an infringement of the patent, we here set out in the margin a number of the reported cases.†

It would lengthen this opinion unreasonably to make *quotations from these opinions to show either the grounds upon which they go or their applicability. Some of them concern sales subject to a restriction upon the price upon resale, and others relate to a requirement that the article sold shall be used only in connection with certain other things to be bought from the patentee. We deem it well, however, to refer to the opinion of the circuit court of appeals of the eighth circuit, delivered by Judge (now Mr. Justice) Van Devanter in National Phonograph Co. v. Schlegel, cited above, because it draws so clearly the distinction between a conditional and an unconditional sale of a patented article. Speaking for the court, Judge Van Devanter said:

"An unconditional or unrestricted sale by the patentee, or by a licensee authorized to make such sale, or an article embodying the patented invention or discovery, passes the article without the limits of the monopoly, and authorizes the buyer to use or sell it without restriction; but to the extent that the sale is subject to any restriction upon the use or future sale, the article has not been released from the monopoly, but is within its limits, and, as against all who have notice of the restriction, is subject to the control of whoever retains the monopoly. This results from the fact that the monopoly is a substantial property right conferred by law as an inducement or stimulus to useful invention and discovery, and that it rests with the owner to say what part of this property he will reserve to himself and what part he will transfer to others, and upon what terms he will make the transfer."

There is no collision between the rule against restrictions upon the alienation or use of chattels not made under the protection of a patent and the right of the patentee through his control over his invention. The distinction is pointed out by Mr. Justice Hughes in Dr. Miles Medical Co. v. John D. Park & Sons Co. 220 U. S. 373, 401, 55 L. ed. 502, 516, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 376.

The English patent law, like our own, grants to the *patentee the exclusive[40 right to make, to sell, and to use. The decisions of the English courts upon the subject are therefore worthy of examination, and weight should be attached not only because of the respect due by reason of the similarity of statutes, but because many English patentees take out American patents, and the converse. The English opinions which we shall refer to have to do with the sale of patented articles with restrictions upon the use.

The cases of Incandescent Gaslight Co. v. Cantelo, 12 Rep. Pat. Cas. 262, decided †Dickerson v. Matheson, 6 C. C. A. 466, 14 U. S. App. 569, 57 Fed. 524, second circuit court of appeals; Heaton-Peninsular Button-Fastener Co. v. Eureka Specialty Co. 35 L.R.A. 728, 25 C. C. A. 267, 47 U. S. App. 146, 77 Fed. 288, sixth circuit court of appeals; Tubular Rivet & Stud Co. v. O'Brien, 93 Fed. 200; Cortelyou v. Lowe, 49 C. C. A. 671, 111 Fed. 1005, second circuit court of appeals; Edison Phonograph Co. v. Kaufmann, 105 Fed. 960; Edison Phonograph Co. v. Pike, 116 Fed. 863; Victor Talking Mach. Co. v. The Fair, 61 C. C. A. 58, 123 Fed. 424, seventh circuit court of appeals; National Phonograph Co. v. Schlegel, 64 C. C. A. 594, 128 Fed. 733; The Fair v. Dover Mfg. Co. 92 C. C. A. 43, 166 Fed. 117; Æolian Co. v. Hary H. Juelg Co. 86 C. C. A. 205, 155 Fed. 119, second circuit court of appeals; A. B. Dick Co. v. Milwaukee Office Specialty Co. 168 Fed. 930; Crown Cork & Seal Co. v. Brooklyn

Bottle Stopper Co. 172 Fed. 225; Rupp & W. Co. v. Elliott, 65 C. C. A. 544, 131 Fed. 730, sixth circuit court of appeals; Commercial Acetylene Co. v. Autolux Co. 181 Fed. 387; Boesch v. Gräff, 133 U. S. 697, 33 L. ed. 787, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 378, where articles made in Germany under a German patent, and imported to this country, were held to infringe a United States patent for the same article; and Dickerson v. Tinling, 28 C. C. A. 139, 55 U. S. App. 217, 84 Fed. 192, where it was held that one purchasing a patented article in Germany from the owners of a United States patent, having marked on it a condition that it should not be imported into the United States, was held guilty of infringement by bringing it into the United States.

See also Curtis on Patents, §§ 218, 218a; Walker on Patents, §§ 300-302; Wilson v. Sherman, 1 Blatchf. 536, Fed. Cas. No. 17,833.

in 1895, and Incandescent Gaslight Co. v. Brogden, 16 Rep. Pat. Cas. 179, decided in 1899, were actions for the infringement of the Welsbach mantle patent for incandescent gas lighting. The mantles were sold subject to a license restriction, printed on the box containing them, that they should be used in connection with burners or apparatus sold or supplied by the patentee. In the Cantelo Case Mr. Justice Wills said:

"The sale of a patented article carries with it the right to use it in any way that the purchaser chooses to use it, unless he knows of restrictions. Of course, if he knows of restrictions and they are brought to his mind at the time of the sale, he is bound by them. He is bound by them on this principle: The patentee has the sole right of using and selling the articles, and he may prevent anybody from dealing with them at all. Inasmuch as he has the right to prevent people from using them or dealing in them at all, he has the right to do the lesser thing; that is to say, to impose his own conditions. It does not matter how unreasonable or how absurd the conditions are. It does not matter what they are, if he says at the time when the purchaser proposes to buy or the person to take a license: 'Mind, I only give you this license on this condition,' and the purchaser is free to take it or leave it, as he likes. If he takes it, he must be bound by the condition. It seems 41] *to be common sense, and not to depend upon any patent law or any other particular law."

Upon the evidence it was held that Cantelo not having bought direct, he did not have actual knowledge of the restriction, and he was given judgment for costs upon that defense.

In the subsequent case against Brogden, the complainants were given an injunction against future infringement, and an accounting for damages for past infringement, upon the second point in the claim; namely, that the defendant had sold, being a dealer, with notice of the restriction, for use upon a burner not made or supplied by the patentee. As to the effect of the sale subject to the license restriction as to the use, Lord Justice Kennedy said: "A patentee has a right, not merely by sale without reserve, to give an unlimited right to the purchaser to use, and thereby to make a grant from which he cannot derogate, but may attach to it conditions, and if these conditions are broken, then there is no license, because the licensee is bound up with the observance of the conditions."

In British Mutoscope & Biograph Co. v. Homer, 17 Times L. R. 213 [1901] 1 Ch. 671, 70 L. J. Ch. N. S. 279, 49 Week. Rep. 56 L. ed.

277, 84 L. T. N. S. 26, 18 Rep. Pat. Cas. 177, decided in 1901, it was held that the purchaser of a mutoscope under a rent distress warrant obtained no greater right to the use of the patented machine than that which pertained to the execution debtor, and that if the debtor had no right other than a strictly personal right to use, the purchaser obtained no right to the use. Mr. Justice Farwell, who delivered the opinion, cited and quoted with approval from the case of the Incandescent Gaslight Co. v. Brogden, supra, where it was said that a purchaser who buys with knowledge of the conditions under which his vendor is authorized to use a patented invention is bound by such conditions, and that such conditions are not contractual, but are incident to and a *limitation of the grant[42 of the licensee to use, so that if the conditions are broken there is no grant at all.

In McGruther v. Pitcher, 20 Times L. R. 652 [1904] 2 Ch. 306, 73 L. J. Ch. N. S. 653, 53 Week. Rep. 138, 91 L. T. N. S. 678, it is held that the purchaser of an article made under a patent and sold originally subject to restrictions as to place or method of use is not bound by such restrictions unless he buys with notice of them, as such restrictions do not run with the goods, and are obligatory only upon those persons who take the article with knowledge of the conditions.

In the very late case of the National Phonograph Co. v. Menck, decided in 1911 by the judicial committee of the Privy Council, and reported in 27 Times L. R. 239, the cases were cited and reviewed. Referring to the distinction between the principles applicable to sales of unpatented and patented articles, Lord Shaw, in delivering the opinion of the court, said: "To begin with, the general principle, that is to say, the principle applicable to ordinary goods bought and sold, is not here in question. The owner may use and dispose of these as he thinks fit. He may have made a certain contract with the person from whom he bought, and to such a contract he must answer. Simply, however, in his capacity as owner, he is not bound by any restrictions in regard to the use or sale of the goods, and it is out of the question to suggest that restrictive conditions run with the goods." Referring to former cases, he proceeds: "All that is affirmed is that the general doctrine of absolute freedom of disposal of chattels of an ordinary kind is, in the case of patented chattels, subject to the restriction that the person purchasing them, and in the knowledge of the conditions attached by the patentee, which knowledge is clearly brought home to himself at the time of sale, shall be bound by that knowledge and accept the situation of ownership subject to the limitations. These limitations are merely the respect paid and the effect given to those [43] conditions of transfer of the *patented article which the law, laid down by statute, gave the original patentee a power to impose. Whether the law on this head should be changed and the power of sale sub modo should be withdrawn or limited is not a question for a court. It may be added that where a patented article has been acquired by sale, much, if not all, may be implied as to the consent of the licensee to an undisturbed and unrestricted use thereof. In short such a sale negatives in the ordinary case the imposition of conditions and the bringing home to the knowledge of the owner of the patented goods that restrictions are laid upon him." Lord Shaw then referred to the case of the Incandescent Gas-light Co. v. Cantelo, cited above, saying that the judgment in that case by Mr. Justice Wills forms undoubtedly a leading authority in the law of England. The passage above set out is then quoted in full.

The precise question here involved has never been decided by this court. It was raised in the Cotton-Tie Case, 106 U. S. 89, 27 L. ed. 79, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 52, but was passed by and the case decided upon the single ground that the defendants had infringed by a reconstruction of the bands after they had been cut. It was again presented in Cortelyou v. Johnson, 207 U. S. 199, 52 L. ed. 167, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 105, but was not decided, because it did not appear that the defendants, charged as contributory infringers as in the present case, had notice of the restriction upon the use of the patented machine.

In Bobbs-Merrill Co. v. Straus, 210 U. S. 345, 52 L. ed. 1091, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 722, it was urged that the analogy between the right of one under the copyright statute to fix the price at which a copyrighted book might be sold by retailers by a mere notice accompanying the book, and the right of one selling a patented article subject to a condition that it should not be sold at less than a prescribed minimum price was such as to entitle the owner of the copyright to treat a sale contrary to the notice as an infringing sale. But this court declined to consider the rule applicable to restrict- [44]ive *licenses accompanying the sale of a patented article, saying: "If we were to follow the course taken in the argument, and discuss the rights of a patentee, under letters patent, and then, by analogy, apply the conclusions to copyrights, we might greatly embarrass the consideration of a case under letters patent, when one of that character shall be presented to this court.

"We may say in passing, disclaiming any intention to indicate our views as to what would be the rights of parties in circumstances similar to the present case under the patent laws, that there are differences between the patent and copyright statutes in the extent of the protection granted by them. This was recognized by Judge Lurton, who wrote a leading case on the subject in the Federal courts (Button-Fastener Case, 35 L.R.A. 728, 25 C. C. A. 267, 47 U. S. App. 146, 77 Fed. 288), for he said in the subsequent case of John D. Park & Sons Co. v. Hartman, 12 L.R.A.(N.S.) 135, 82 C. C. A. 158, 153 Fed. 24:

"There are such wide differences between the right of multiplying and vending copies of a production protected by the copyright statute, and the rights secured to an inventor under the patent statutes, that the cases which relate to the one subject are not altogether controlling as to the other."

Touching the question there involved, the court said:

"The precise question, therefore, in this case, is, Does the sole right to vend (named in Rev. Stat. § 4952, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3406) secure to the owner of the copyright the right, after a sale of the book to a purchaser, to restrict future sales of the book at retail, to the right to sell it at a certain price per copy, because of a notice in the book that a sale at a different price will be treated as an infringement, which notice has been brought home to one undertaking to sell for less than the named sum? We do not think the statute can be given such a construction, and it is to be remembered that this is purely a question of statutory construction. There is *no claim[45 in this case of contract limitation, nor license agreement controlling the subsequent sales of the book.

"In our view the copyright statutes, while protecting the owner of the copyright in his right to multiply and sell his production, do not create the right to impose, by notice, such as is disclosed in this case, a limitation at which the book shall be sold at retail by future purchasers, with whom there is no privity of contract. This conclusion is reached in view of the language of the statute, read in the light of its main purpose to secure the right of multiplying copies of the work,—a right which is the special creation of the statute. True, the statute also secures, to make this right of multiplication effectual, the sole right to vend copies of the book, the production of the author's thought and conception. The owner of the copyright in this case did sell copies of the book in quantities and at a price satisfactory to it. It has exercised the right to vend. What the complainant contends for embraces not only the right to sell the copies, but to qualify the title of a future purchaser by the reservation of the right to have the remedies of the statute against an infringer because of the printed notice of its purpose so to do unless the purchaser sells at a price fixed in the notice. To add to the right of exclusive sale the authority to control all future retail sales, by a notice that such sales must be made at a fixed sum, would give a right not included in the terms of the statute, and, in our view, extend its operation, by construction, beyond its meaning, when interpreted with a view to ascertaining the legislative intent in its enactment."

Though the Constitution gives to Congress power to promote "science and useful acts," by securing for a limited time to writers and inventors "the exclusive right to their respective writings and discoveries," the legislation for this purpose had to be adapted to the difference between a "discovery" and a [46] "writing." To secure to "the author an exclusive right to his "writings" Congress provided that he should have "the sole liberty of printing, reprinting, publishing, completing, copying, executing, finishing, and vending the same." Rev. Stat. § 4952. This is, in short, the sole right to multiply and vend copies of his production. While there are resemblances between the right of the author to "vend" his copyrighted production, and of the patentee to "vend" the patented thing, the inherent difference between the production of an author, be it a book, music, or a picture, and that of an inventor, be it a machine, a process, or an article, is so manifest that the exclusive right of one to multiply and sell was declared sufficient to give him that exclusive right to his writings purposed by the Constitution. To the inventor, by § 4884, Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3381), there is granted "the exclusive right to make, use, and vend the invention or discovery." This grant, as defined in Bloomer v. McQuewan, 14 How. 549, 14 L. ed. 537, "consists altogether in the right to exclude every one from making, using, or vending the thing patented." Thus, there are several substantive rights, and each is the subject of subdivision, so that one person may be permitted to make, but neither to sell nor use, the patented thing. To another may be conveyed the right to sell, but within a limited area, or for a particular use, while to another the patentee may grant only the right to make and use, or to use only for specific purposes. Adams v. Burke, 17 Wall. 453, 21 L. ed. 700; Mitchell v. Hawley, 16 Wall. 544, 21 L. ed. 322; Providence Rubber Co. v. Goodyear, 9 Wall. 788, 798, 19 L. ed. 566, 569. Thus, in the case last cited, the license was "to use the said Goodyear gum-elastic composition for coating cloth for the purpose of japanning, marbling, and variegate japanning, at his own establishment, but not to be disposed of to others for that purpose without the consent of the said Charles Goodyear, . . . the right and license hereby conferred being limited to the United States, and not extending to any foreign country, and not being "intended to[47 convey any right to make any contract with the government of the United States." Of this license, this court said:

"It authorizes Chaffee to use it himself. It gave him no right to authorize others to use it in conjunction with himself, or otherwise, without the consent of Goodyear, which is not shown, and not to be presumed. It was to be used at his own establishment, and not at one occupied by himself and others. Looking at the terms of the instrument, and the testimony in the record, we are satisfied that its true meaning and purpose were to authorize the licensee to make and sell India-rubber cloth, to be used in the place, and for the purposes, of patent or japanned leather. In our judgment it conveyed authority to this extent and nothing more."

The licensees were held to have infringed the license by uses not permitted.

We have already pointed out that in the Bement Case, 186 U. S. 91, 46 L. ed. 1068, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747, it was said in respect of the power of a patentee that, in the sale of rights under a patent, "with few exceptions that any conditions which are not in their very nature illegal with regard to this kind of property, imposed by the patentee and agreed to by the licensee, for the right to manufacture, or use, or sell the article, will be upheld by the courts." (Italics ours.) The question, as was said in reference to the copyright, is one of statutory construction. The kinds of property rights sought to be guaranteed and the terms of the two statutes are so different that very different constructions have been placed upon them. There is no collision whatever between the decision in the Bobbs-Merrill Case and the present opinion. Each rests upon a construction of the applicable statute, and the special facts of the cases.

The Paper Roll Case, 152 U. S. 425, 38 L. ed. 500, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 627, has been relied upon by the defendants. We do not question that case, nor anything it decides.[48 But it has no application to the question here presented. This is manifest when that case is attentively examined. First, because here the ink and other supplies used in the operation of the complainant's rotary mimeograph patent were not made elements of the patent, as in the Paper Roll Case: and second, the toilet paper fixture in the Paper

Roll Case was not sold with the license restriction that it was not to be used except in connection with paper supplied by the patentee. There was some evidence of a practice to sell the fixture only to those who used the patentee's paper; but this was far from proof of a specific license annexed to the sale of the fixtures that they were sold only to be used with paper supplied by the patentee. One who bought subject to no such restriction acquired the right to use the fixture with any paper. The opinion in that case is considered and analyzed in all of its aspects in the Button-Fastener Case, 35 L.R.A. 728, 25 C. C. A. 267, 47 U. S. App. 146, 77 Fed. 288, 298, 299.

We come, then, to the question as to whether "the acts of the defendants constitute contributory infringement of the complainants' patent."

The facts upon which our answer must be made are somewhat meager. It has been urged that we should make a negative reply to the interrogatory as certified, because the intent to have the ink sold to the licensee used in an infringing way is not sufficiently made out. Undoubtedly a bare supposition that by a sale of an article which, though adapted to an infringing use, is also adapted to other and lawful uses, is not enough to make the seller a contributory infringer. Such a rule would block the wheels of commerce. There must be an intent and purpose that the article sold will be so used. Such a presumption arises when the article so sold is only adapted to an infringing use. Rupp & W. Co. v. Elliott, 65 C. C. A. 544, 131 Fed. 730. It may also be inferred where its most conspicuous use is one which will co-operate in an infringement when sale to such user is invoked by advertisement. 49] Kalem Co. v. Harper Bros. decided at this term [222 U. S. 55, ante, 92, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 20].

These defendants are, in the facts certified, stated to have made a direct sale to the user of the patented article, with knowledge that under the license from the patentee she could not use the ink, sold by them directly to her, in connection with the licensed machine, without infringement of the monopoly of the patent. It is not open to them to say that it might be used in a noninfringing way, for the certified fact is that they made the sale, "with the expectation that it would be used in connection with said mimeograph." The fair interpretation of the facts stated is that the sale was with the purpose and intent that it would be so used.

So understanding the import of the question in connection with the facts certified, we must answer the question certified affirmatively.

Mr. Justice Day did not hear the argument, and took no part in the decision of this case.

Mr. Chief Justice White, with whom concurred Mr. Justice Hughes and Mr. Justice Lamar, dissenting:

My reluctance to dissent is overcome in this case: First, because the ruling now made has a much wider scope than the mere interest of the parties to this record, since, in my opinion, the effect of that ruling is to destroy, in a very large measure, the judicial authority of the states by unwarrantedly extending the Federal judicial power. Second, because the result just stated, by the inevitable development of the principle announced, may not be confined to sporadic or isolated cases, but will be as broad as society itself, affecting a multitude of people, and capable of operation upon every conceivable subject of human contract, interest, or activity, however intensely local and exclusively within [50] state authority they otherwise might be. Third, because the gravity of the consequences which would ordinarily arise from such a result is greatly aggravated by the ruling now made, since that ruling not only vastly extends the Federal judicial power, as above stated, but as to all the innumerable subjects to which the ruling may be made to apply, makes it the duty of the courts of the United States to test the rights and obligations of the parties, not by the general law of the land, in accord with the conformity act, but by the provisions of the patent law, even although the subjects considered may not be within the embrace of that law, thus disregarding the state law, overthrowing, it may be, the settled public policy of the state, and injuriously affecting a multitude of persons. Lastly, I am led to express the reasons which constrain me to dissent, because of the hope that if my forebodings as to the evil consequences to result from the application of the construction now given to the patent statute be well founded, the statement of my reasons may serve a twofold purpose: First, to suggest that the application in future cases of the construction now given be confined within the narrowest limits, and, second, to serve to make it clear that if evils arise, their continuance will not be caused by the interpretation now given to the statute, but will result from the inaction of the legislative department in failing to amend the statute so as to avoid such evils.

Let me briefly recapitulate the facts and the rulings based thereon. A machine styled a rotary mimeograph was covered by a patent. The claims of the patent, however, did not embrace the ink or other materials used in working the machine, nor were they covered by independent patents. The Dick Company, owner of the patent, sold one of the machines to a Miss Skou. The entire title was parted with; in other 51] words, there *was no condition imposed affecting the title or the uses to which the machine might be applied, or the duration of the use. Upon the machine, however, was inscribed a notice, styled a License Restriction, reciting that the machine "may be used only with the stencil paper, ink, and other supplies made by the A. B. Dick Company, Chicago, U. S. A." The Henry Company, dealers in ink, sold to Miss Skou, for use in working her machine, ink not made by the Dick Company. The court now decides that a use of such ink by Miss Skou would have been "a use of the machine in a prohibited way" and would have rendered her "liable to an action under the patent law for infringement," and that the seller of the ink was liable as an infringer of the patent on the machine because of the aiding and abetting a proposed infringing use.

I cannot bring my mind to assent to the conclusion referred to, and shall state in the light of reason and authority why I cannot do so. As I have said, the ink was not covered by the patent; indeed, it is stated in argument, and not denied, that a prior patent which covered the ink had expired before the sale in question. It therefore results that a claim for the ink could not have been lawfully embraced in the patent, and if it had been by inadvertence allowed, such claim would not have been enforceable. This curious anomaly, then, results, that that which was not embraced by the patent, which could not have been embraced therein, and which, if mistakenly allowed and included in an express claim, would have been inefficacious, is now, by the effect of a contract, held to be embraced by the patent and covered by the patent law. This inevitably causes the contentions now upheld to come to this: that a patentee, in selling the machine covered by his patent, has power by contract to extend the patent so as to cause it to embrace things which it does not include; in other words, to exercise legislative power 52] *of a far-reaching and dangerous character. Looking at it from another point of view, and testing the contention by a consideration of the rights protected by the patent law and the rights which an inventor who obtains a patent takes under that law, the proposition reduces itself to the same conclusion. The natural right of anyone to make, vend, and use his invention which, but for the patent law, might be invaded by others, is by that law made exclusive; and hence the power is conferred to exclude others from making, using, or vending the patented invention. Paper Bag Case, 210 U. S. 424, 425, 52 L. ed. 1130, 1131, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 748, and cases cited.

The exclusive right of use of the invention embodied in the machine which the patent protected was a right to use it anywhere and everywhere, for all and every purpose of which the machine, as embraced by the patent, was susceptible. The patent was solely upon the mechanism which, when operated, was capable of producing certain results. A patent for this mechanism was not concerned in any way with the materials to be used in operating the machine, and certainly the right protected by the patent was not a right to use the mechanism with any particular ink or other operative materials. Of course, as the owner of the machine possessed the ordinary right of an owner of property to use such materials as he pleased in operating his patented machine, and had the power in selling his machine to impose such conditions in the nature of covenants not contrary to public policy as he saw fit, I shall assume that he had the power to exact that the purchaser should use only a particular character of materials. But as the right to employ any desired operative materials in using the patented machine was not a right derived from or protected by the patent law, but was a mere right arising from the ownership of property, it cannot be said that the restriction concerning the use of the materials was a restriction upon the use of the machine protected *by the 53] patent law. When I say it cannot be said, I mean that it cannot be so done in reason, since the inevitable result of so doing would be to declare that the patent protected a use which it did not embrace. And this, after all, serves to demonstrate that it is a misconception to qualify the restriction as one on the use of the machine, when in truth, both in form and substance, it was but a restriction upon the use of materials capable of being employed in operating the machine. In other words, every use which the patent protected was transferred to Miss Skou, and the very existence of the particular restriction under consideration presupposes such right of complete enjoyment, and because of its possession there was engrafted a contract restriction, not upon the use of the machine, but upon the materials. And these considerations are equally applicable to the exercise of the exclusive right to vend protected by the patent unless it can be said that, by the act of selling a patented machine, and disposing of all the use of which it is capable, a patentee is endowed with the power to amplify his patent by causing it to cover in the future things which, at the time of the sale, it did not embrace.

But the result of this analysis serves at once again to establish, from another point of view, that the ruling now made in effect is that the patentee has the power, by contract, to extend his patent rights so as to bring within the claims of his patent things which are not embraced therein, thus virtually legislating by causing the patent laws to cover subjects to which, without the exercise of the right of contract, they could not reach, the result not only to multiply monopolies at the will of an interested party, but also to destroy the jurisdiction of the state courts over subjects which, from the beginning, have been within their authority.

The vast extent to which the results just stated may be carried will be at once apparent by considering the facts *of this case, and bearing in mind that this is not the suit of patentee against one with whom he has contracted to enforce, as against such person, an act done in violation of a contract as an infringement, but it is against a third person who happened to deal in an ordinary commodity of general use with a person with whom the patentee had contracted. And this statement shows that the effect of the ruling is to make the virtual legislative authority of the owner of a patented machine extend to every human being in society, without reference to their privy to any contract existing between the patentee and the one to whom he has sold the patented machine. It is worthy of observation that the vast power which the ruling confers upon the holders of patented inventions does not alone cause controversies which otherwise would be subject to the state jurisdiction to become matters of exclusive Federal cognizance, but subjects the rights of the parties when in the Federal forum to the patent law to the exclusion of the state law which otherwise would apply, and it may be to the overthrow of the settled public policy of the state wherein the dealings involved take place. All these results are in a measure comprehensively portrayed by the decree of the circuit court. They are, moreover, vividly shown by a reference made by the court to, and the putting aside as inapplicable of, a previous decision of this court (Dr. Miles Medical Co. v. John D. Park & Sons Co. 220 U. S. 373, 55 L. ed. 502, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 376), which, if here applied, would cause the alleged license to be held void as against public policy. As the theory upon which the Miles Medical Company Case is treated as inapplicable is that this case is one governed by the patent laws, and therefore not within the rule of public policy which the Miles Case applied, it is made indubitably clear that the ruling now announced endows the patentee with a right by contract not only to produce the fundamental change as to jurisdiction of the state and Federal courts to which I have referred, but also to bring about the overthrow *of the public policy, both of [55] the state and nation, which I at the outset indicated was a consequence of the ruling now made.

I do not think it necessary to stop to point out the innumerable subjects which will be susceptible of being removed from the operation of state judicial power, and the fundamental and radical character of the change which must come as a result of the principle decided. But nevertheless let me give a few illustrations:

Take a patentee selling a patented engine. He will now have the right by contract to bring under the patent laws all contracts for coal or electrical energy used to afford power to work the machine, or even the lubricants employed in its operation. Take a patented carpenter's plane. The power now exists in the patentee by contract to validly confine a carpenter purchasing one of the planes to the use of lumber sawed from trees grown on the land of a particular person, or sawed by a particular mill. Take a patented cooking utensil. The power is now recognized in the patentee to bind by contract one who buys the utensil to use in connection with it no other food supply but that sold or made by the patentee. Take the invention of a patented window frame. It is now the law that the seller of the frame may stipulate that no other material shall be used in a house in which the window frames are placed except such as may be bought from the patentee and seller of the frame. Take an illustration which goes home to everyone,—a patented sewing machine. It is now established that, by putting on the machine, in addition to the notice of patent required by law, a notice called a license restriction, the right is acquired, as against the whole world, to control the purchase by users of the machine of thread, needles, and oil lubricants or other materials convenient or necessary for operation of the machine. The illustrations might be multiplied indefinitely. That they are not imaginary is now a matter of common *knowledge, for, as the result of a [56] case decided some years ago by one of the circuit courts of appeal, which has been followed by cases in other circuit courts of appeal, to which reference will hereafter be made, what prior to the first of those decisions on a sale of a patented article was designated a condition of sale, governed by the general principles of law, has come in practice to be denominated a license restriction; thus, by the change of form, under the doctrine announced in the cases referred to, bring the matters covered by the restriction within the exclusive sway of the patent law. As the transformation has come about in practice since the decisions in question, the conclusion is that it is attributable as an effect caused by the doctrine of those cases. And, as I have previously stated, it is a matter of common knowledge that the change has been frequently resorted to for the purpose of bringing numerous articles of common use within the monopoly of a patent when otherwise they would not have been embraced therein, thereby tending to subject the whole of society to a widespread and irksome monopolistic control.

But I need not reason further, since, in my opinion, many adjudications of this court directly refute the existence of a supposed right of extension by contract of the patent laws, and are therefore, as I understand them, in conflict with the ruling now made. In Wilson v. Sandford (1850) 10 How. 99, 13 L. ed. 344, the facts were these: Wilson granted to Sandford and the other defendants the right to use a patented planing machine, the consideration to be paid in instalments. Each note contained a provision that the title should revert in case of nonpayment. Upon the theory that the refusal to pay an instalment forfeited the rights of the licensees, Wilson sued to restrain the further use of the machine on the ground that such use was an infringement of his patent rights. It was, however, decided that the matter in controversy arose 57] *upon contract, and that the requisite jurisdictional value was not involved. The claim that jurisdiction could be exercised because the case arose under the patent laws was thus disposed of (p. 101):

"Now, the dispute in this case does not arise under any act of Congress; nor does the decision depend upon the construction of any law in relation to patents." It arises out of the contract stated in the bill, and there is no act of Congress providing for or regulating contracts of this kind. The rights of the parties depend altogether upon common law and equity principles. The object of the bill is to have this contract set aside and declared to be forfeited; and the prayer is, 'that the appellant's reinvestiture of title to the license granted to the appellees, by reason of the forfeiture of the contract, may be sanctioned by the court,' and for an injunction. But the injunction he asks for is to be the consequence of the decree of the court sanctioning the forfeiture. He alleges no ground for an injunction unless the contract is set aside. And if the case made in the bill was a fit one for relief in equity, it is very clear that whether the contract ought to be declared forfeited or not, in a court of chancery, depended altogether upon the rules and principles of equity, and in no degree whatever upon any act of Congress concerning patent rights. And whenever a contract is made in relation to them which is not provided for and regulated by Congress, the parties, if any dispute arises, stand upon the same ground with other litigants as to the right of appeal; and the decree of the circuit court cannot be revised here, unless the matter in dispute exceeds $2,000."

The foregoing views were reiterated in Bloomer v. McQuewan (1852) 14 How. 539, 14 L. ed. 532.

In Hartshorn v. Day (1856) 19 How. 211, 15 L. ed. 605, the court, in commenting upon the effect upon a license, of the nonperformance, by the licensee of a patent right, of covenants *made by him, and speak-[58 ing in particular of a covenant to pay an annuity to one Chaffee, the patentee, said (p. 222):

"The payment of the annuity was not a condition to the vesting of the interest in the patent in Judson, and, of course, . . . the omission or refusal to pay did not give to Chaffee a right to rescind the contract, nor have the effect to remit him to his interest as patentee. The right to the annuity rested in covenant. . . . The remedy for the breach could rest only upon the personal obligation of . . . [the covenantor]."

The cases just referred to and others in accord with them were reviewed in the opinion in Albright v. Teas, 106 U. S. 613, 27 L. ed. 295, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 550, decided in 1883. The case was this: A patentee sold and assigned all his title and interest in the invention covered by his patents, and the purchasers covenanted to use their best efforts to introduce the invention, to pay specified royalties for the use of the patented improvements, etc. The assignor sued in a state court for a discovery and account and a decree for the amount of royalties found due, and for general relief. On the application of the defendants the cause was removed into a circuit court, upon the theory that the suit was one arising under the patent laws of the United States, and, in consequence, exclusively within the cognizance of the courts of the United States. On final hearing, however, the circuit court remanded the cause as being one for the settlement of controversies under a contract, of which the state court had full cognizance.

This court held that as the transfer of title was absolute, no rights secured by the patent under any act of Congress remained in the patentee, and that the case arose solely upon the contract, and not upon the patent laws of the United States.

The prior cases on the subject were again reviewed by Mr. Justice Gray in Dale Tile Mfg. Co. v. Hyatt (1888) 125 U. S. 46, 31 L. ed. 683, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 756. The plaintiff [59] sued in a state court to recover *from one who had been licensed by a patentee to make and use certain patented articles, to recover royalties due under the contract. The defendant contended in the state court that the subject-matter was one exclusively cognizable in the courts of the United States because the case was one arising under the patent laws, citing Rev. Stat. §§ 629, cl. 9, 711, cl. 5, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 504, 577. The contention was held untenable, and in the course of the opinion the court said (p. 52):

"It has been decided that a bill in equity in a circuit court of the United States by the owner of letters patent, to enforce a contract for the use of the patent right, or to set aside such a contract because the defendant has not complied with its terms, is not within the acts of Congress, by which an appeal to this court is allowable in cases arising under the patent laws, without regard to the value of the matter in controversy. Act of July 4, 1836, chap. 357, § 17, 5 Stat. at L. 124; Rev. Stat. § 699; Wilson v. Sandford, 10 How. 99, 13 L. ed. 344; Brown v. Shannon, 20 How. 55, 15 L. ed. 826."

Reviewing the decisions in Hartell v. Tilghman, 99 U. S. 547, 25 L. ed. 357 and Albright v. Teas, supra, the court said (p. 53):

"It was said by Chief Justice Taney in Wilson v. Sandford and repeated by the court in Hartell v. Tilghman and in Albright v. Teas: 'The dispute in this case does not arise under any act of Congress; nor does the decision depend upon the construction of any law in relation to patents. It arises out of the contract stated in the bill, and there is no act of Congress providing for or regulating contracts of this kind. The rights of the parties depend altogether upon common law and equity principles.' 10 How. 101, 192, 13 L. ed. 345, 99 U. S. 552, 25 L. ed. 359; 106 U. S. 619, 27 L. ed. 298, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 550.

"Those words are equally applicable to the present case, except that, as it is an action at law, the principles of equity have no bearing. This action, therefore, was within the jurisdiction, and, the parties being citizens of the same state within the [60] exclusive jurisdiction of the *state courts; and the only Federal question in the case was rightly decided."
668

The case of Keeler v. Standard Folding Bed Co. 157 U. S. 659, 39 L. ed. 848, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 738, touches upon the precise question before us. In the course of the opinion, the court said—italics mine—(p. 666):

"Upon the doctrine of these cases we think it follows that one who buys patented articles of manufacture from one authorized to sell them becomes possessed of an absolute property in such articles, unrestricted in time or place. Whether a patentee may protect himself and his assignees by special contract brought home to the purchaser is not a question before us, and upon which we express no opinion. It is, however, obvious that such a question would arise as a question of contract, and not as one under the inherent meaning and effect of the patent laws."

A reference to the foregoing and other decided cases is contained in the opinion in Excelsior Wooden Pipe Co. v. Pacific Bridge Co. 185 U. S. 282, 46 L. ed. 910, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681. The suit was by a licensee authorized to manufacture and sell wooden pipe under certain letters patent, against two defendants, one of whom was the licensor and owner of the patent. The covenants of the licensee were (1) to pay a license fee or royalty; (2) not to transfer or assign the license without the consent of the patentee; and (3) that the license might be revoked for failure to manufacture. While, because of peculiar conditions present in the case, the suit was held to be one arising under the patent laws, the court yet observed (p. 290):

"Now, it may be freely conceded that if the licensee had failed to observe any one of the three conditions of the license, the licensor would have been obliged to resort to the state courts either to recover the royalties or to procure a revocation of the license. Such suit would not involve any question under the patent law."

The court, after reciting the facts in the case of *Pratt v. Paris Gaslight & Coke [61 Co. 168 U. S. 255, 42 L. ed. 458, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 62, said (pp. 286, 287):

"It was held that the action was not one arising under the patent laws of the United States, and that to constitute such a cause the plaintiff must set up some right, title, or interest under the patent laws, or at least make it appear that some right or privilege will be defeated by one construction or sustained by the opposite construction of those laws. That '§ 711 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 577) does not deprive the state courts of the power to determine questions arising under the patent laws, but only of assuming jurisdiction of cases arising under those laws. There is a complete distinction between a case and a question arising under the patent laws. The former arises when the plaintiff in his opening pleadings—be it a bill, complaint, or declaration—sets up a right under the patent laws as ground for a recovery. Of such the state courts have no jurisdiction. The latter may appear in the plea or answer or in the testimony. The determination of such question is not beyond the competency of the state tribunals.”

The case of E. Bement & Sons v. National Harrow Co. [186 U. S. 70, 46 L. ed. 1058, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747], decided at the same term as the Wooden Pipe Case, illustrates the doctrine. In that case the National Harrow Company, the patentee, commenced the action in a state court of New York to recover damages for the violation of license contracts pertaining to the manufacture and sale of a patent harrow, and also sought to restrain the future violation of the contracts, and compel their specific performance. If, in consequence of the subject-matter, the case was one arising under the patent laws, as it would have been if the question of infringement of the patent was involved, the jurisdiction of the courts of the United States was exclusive. The case was disposed of on its merits in the state courts, and came to this court by writ of error upon the question as to whether the agreements between the licensor and licensee violated the Federal anti-trust law, and jurisdiction was entertained and the Federal question was passed upon.

Finally, it seems to me the rulings made in the Morgan Envelope Case, 152 U. S. 425, 38 L. ed. 500, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 627, are so apposite here as practically in reason to foreclose all controversy on the question. In that case suit was brought on three patents, one for an oval roll of paper, the other two for apparatus for holding the paper. The patentee sold the fixtures or apparatus only to purchasers of his paper, with the understanding that the paper would be subsequently purchased of the plaintiff company. It was held that the patent for the roll of paper was invalid, but the validity of the apparatus claims, or, at least, of some of them, was not challenged. The defendant sold the paper with full knowledge of the restriction imposed by the patentee. Mr. Justice Brown, after quoting from Chaffee v. Boston Belting Co. 22 How. 217, 223, 16 L. ed. 240, 242, says (p. 432):

“The real question in this case is whether, conceding the combination of the oval roll with the fixture to be a valid combination, the sale of one element of such combination, with the intent that it shall be used with the other element, is an infringement. We are of opinion that it is not. . . . Of course, if the product itself is the subject of a valid patent, it would be an infringement of that patent to purchase such product of another than the patentee; but if the product be unpatentable, it is giving to the patentee of the machine the benefit of a patent upon the product, by requiring such product to be bought of him.”

Earlier in the opinion it was said (p. 431):

“The first defense raises the question whether, when a machine is designed to manufacture, distribute, or serve out to users a certain article, the article so dealt with can be said to be a part of the combination of which the machine itself is another part. If this be so, then it would seem to follow that the log which is sawn in the mill the wheat which is ground by the rollers, the pin which is produced by the patented machine, the paper which is folded and delivered by the printing press, may be claimed as an element of a combination of which the mechanism doing the work is another element. The motion of the hand necessary to turn the roll and withdraw the paper is analogous to the motive power which operates the machinery in the other instances.”

Nor when accurately appreciated is there any conflict between the principles so long and firmly established by the cases to which I have just referred and the doctrine upheld in the Goodyear Rubber Case, 9 Wall. 788, 19 L. ed. 566, and Mitchell v. Hawley, 16 Wall. 544, 21 L. ed. 322. In the Goodyear Case the facts were these: The right was conferred upon one Chaffee by license “to use the said Goodyear’s gum elastic composition for coating cloth for the purpose of japanning, marbling, and variegate japanning, at his own establishment, but not to be disposed of to others for that purpose without the consent of the said Charles Goodyear; . . . the right and license hereby conferred being limited to the United States and not extending to any foreign country, and not being intended to convey any right to make any contract with the government of the United States.” Looking at the terms of the license and the testimony in the record, the court considered the instrument only “to authorize the licensee to make and sell India-rubber cloth, to be used in the place, and for the purpose, of patent or japanned leather.” The patent was held to be infringed because a right of use of the invention not granted to the licensee, but reserved by the patentee or his assignee to himself, viz., “the exclusive right to manufacture and sell army and navy equipments made of vulcanized India rubber," etc., had been invaded by the defendants.

In Mitchell v. Hawley this was the controversy: A patentee of certain machines, 64] whose original patent had *still between six and seven years to run, conveyed to another person the "right to make and use, and to license to others the right to make and use, four of the machines" in two states "during the remainder of the original term of the letters patent, provided, that the said grantee shall not in any way or form dispose of, sell, or grant any license to use the said machines beyond the said term." The licensee constructed and sold four machines to persons who, as found by the court, had knowledge of the limited title of the licensee. After the patent had expired, and during an extended term of the patent, the persons to whom the licensee had transferred the machines made use of the machines in violation of the limitation, and the owner of the patent sued to prevent the infringement, and his right to do so was upheld. Stating it to be unquestioned that a patentee who had absolutely parted with the title to the machine and with the use which the patent protected must be understood to have parted with all his exclusive right, and hence ceased to have any interest in the machine protected by the patent law, the court maintained the contentions of the complainant, on the ground that the rule just stated did not apply where the patentee did not grant the entire right covered by the patent, but retained a part thereof in himself, and therefore a violation of such reserved right was in conflict with a right still protected by the patent, and an infringement of the patent. The difference between the rule applied in that case and the doctrine of the many other cases which we have cited, and which also exists between the controversy presented in Mitchell v. Hawley and the one here under consideration, was simply as follows: (a) That which exists between the conveyance of all one's rights covered by a patent and a transfer of only a part of such rights; (b) that which obtains between the ability of a patentee to protect the right which he enjoys under the patent law from infringement, 65] and his *want of power, on parting with all his rights under the patent, to contract so as to secure rights never embraced in his patent, and to bring such newly acquired contract rights under the protection of the patent law. That the sale here in question was one of all the rights which the patent protected has, it seems to me, at the outset been demonstrated beyond reasonable dispute. I mean, of course, within the limit of my powers of understanding, since, looking at the so-called license restriction again and again with a purpose, if possible, to bring my mind to assent to the view which the court takes of it, I find it impossible to do so. And in this connection it is to be observed that the real nature of the transaction is, in the argument of counsel for the Dick Company, stated to be directly the opposite of that which the court now holds it to be. Thus, counsel say:

"In the license plan in issue, the licensor, by limiting the market at which supplies may be purchased, is merely insuring to himself a royalty based upon the output of the machine. The licensor, by requiring the purchase of ink of him, in fact exacting a royalty (infinitesimal in amount) for every copy of the original produced by the mimeograph. The very nature of the work of these machines forbids the use of a fixed money royalty upon the work produced, since the money value is so small that the expense of the accounting would be prohibitive of such a method."

A construction of the restriction which, by speaking of license and licensor, obscures the fact that the restriction itself states the transaction to have been a sale of the machine and its right of use, yet, by the very force of the nature of the so-called restriction, describes it as being in essence and effect but a consideration for the rights parted with, and thus brings the case within the doctrine of Wilson v. Sandford, Albright v. Teas, and other cases which I have referred to.

*The distinction between the two rules [66 and the absolute harmony and co-operation between them had been pointed out before the decision in Mitchell v. Hawley, and has been since so clearly indicated as to my mind to leave no room for contention or evasion. Let me quote from some of the cases. In one of the early cases, Bloomer v. McQuewan, 14 How. 539, 14 L. ed. 532, after referring to previous cases which had marked the distinction between the grant of the right to make and vend a patented machine and the grant of the right to use it, the court said (p. 549):

"The distinction is a plain one. The franchise which the patent grants consists altogether in the right to exclude everyone from making, using, or vending the thing patented, without the permission of the patentee. This is all that he obtained by the patent. And when he sells the exclusive privilege of making or vending it for use in a particular place, the purchaser buys a portion of the franchise which the patent confers. He obtains a share of the monopoly, and that monopoly is derived from, and exercised under, the protection of the United States. . . .

"But the purchaser of the implement or machine for the purpose of using it in the ordinary pursuits of life stands on different ground. In using it, he exercises no rights created by the act of Congress, nor does he derive title to it by virtue of the franchise or exclusive privilege granted to the patentee. The inventor might lawfully sell it to him, whether he had a patent or not, if no other patentee stood in his way. And when the machine passes to the hands of the purchaser, it is no longer within the limits of the monopoly. It passes outside of it, and is no longer under the protection of the act of Congress. And if his right to the implement or machine is infringed, he must seek redress in the courts of the state, according to the laws of the state, and not in the courts of the United States, nor under the law of Congress granting the patent. The implement or machine becomes his private, individual *property, not protected by the laws of the United States, but by the laws of the state in which it is situated. Contracts in relation to it are regulated by the laws of the state, and are subject to state jurisdiction."

Likewise in Adams v. Burke, 17 Wall. 453, 21 L. ed. 700, the court, speaking through Mr. Justice Miller, said (p. 456):

"In the essential nature of things, when the patentee, or the person having his rights, sells a machine or instrument whose sole value is in its use, he receives the consideration for its use and he parts with the right to restrict that use. The article, in the language of the court, passes without the limit of the monopoly. That is to say, the patentee or his assignee having, in the act of sale, received all the royalty or consideration which he claims for the use of his invention in that particular machine or instrument, it is open to the use of the purchaser without further restriction on account of the monopoly of the patentees."

Yet, again, in the Folding Bed Co. Case, 157 U. S. 666, 39 L. ed. 850, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 738, this court, reiterating the doctrine, said:

"Upon the doctrine of these cases we think it follows that one who buys patented articles of manufacture from one authorized to sell them becomes possessed of an absolute property in such articles, unrestricted in time or place. Whether a patentee may protect himself and his assignees by special contracts brought home to the purchasers is not a question before us, and upon which we express no opinion. It is, however, obvious that such a question would arise as a question of contract, and not as one under the inherent meaning and effect of the patent laws.

"The conclusion reached does not deprive a patentee of his just rights, because no article can be unfettered from the claim of his monopoly without paying its tribute. The inconvenience and annoyance to the public that an opposite conclusion would occasion are too obvious to require illustration."

*In view of the settled rule of this [68 court, established by so many decisions, I might well refrain from referring to the English cases and the decisions of lower Federal courts relied on as persuasively supporting the doctrine now announced. But, nevertheless, I shall briefly notice the cases.

I pass by the English decisions relied upon with the remark that it is not perceived how they can have any persuasive influence on the subject in hand, in view of the distinction between state and national power which here prevails, and the consequent necessity, if our institutions are to be preserved, of forbidding a use of the patent laws which serves to destroy the lawful authority of the states and their public policy. I fail also to see the application of English cases in view of the possible difference between the public policy of Great Britain concerning the right, irrespective of the patent law, to make contracts with the monopolistic restriction which the one here recognized embodies and the public policy of the United States on that subject, as established, after great consideration, by this court in Dr. Miles Medical Co. v. John D. Park & Sons Co. 220 U. S. 373, 55 L. ed. 502, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 376. See especially on this subject the grounds for dissent in that case expressed by Mr. Justice Holmes, referring to the English law, on page 413.

So far as the various decisions of circuit courts of appeals which the court refers to are concerned, as they conflict with the many adjudications of this court to which I have referred, it seems to me they ought not to be followed, but should be overruled. It is undoubted that the leading one of the cases, which all the others but follow and reiterate, is the Button-Fastener Case [35 L.R.A. 728, 25 C. C. A. 267, 47 U. S. App. 146, 77 Fed. 288] to which I have previously referred. I shall not undertake to review that case elaborately, because in substance and effect the theory upon which it proceeds is in absolute conflict with the many adjudications of this court to which I have referred, and the reasoning which was employed in the case, in my *opin-[69 ion, in its ultimate aspect rests upon a failure to distinguish between the principle announced in Wilson v. Sandford, and followed and applied in the many cases which I have reviewed, and the doctrine announced and applied in Mitchell v. Hawley. In other words, the Button-Fastener Case and the confusion which has followed the application of the ruling made in that case was but the consequence of failing to observe the difference between the rights of a patentee which were protected by the patent, and those which arose from contract, and therefore were subject alone to the general law. In addition it may be well to observe that the very groundwork upon which the case proceeded has been since authoritatively declared by this court to be without foundation. For instance, it will become apparent for an analysis of the opinion in the case that it proceeded upon the theory that the doctrine upheld had been virtually sanctioned in previous adjudications of this court. Since the decision, however, this court, in Bobbs-Merrill Co. v. Straus, 210 U. S. 345, 52 L. ed. 1091, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 722, has expressly declared that the doctrine had never been upheld by this court. Moreover, also, in the Bobbs-Merrill Case this court, in considering one of the cases principally relied upon, in the opinion in the Button-Fastener Case—the Cotton-Tie Case—expressly pointed out that that case had been misconceived in the opinion in the Button-Fastener Case, and did not have the significance which had there been attributed to it.

But even if I were to put aside everything I have said, and were to concede, for the sake of argument, that the power existed in a patentee, by contract, to accomplish the results which it is now held may be effected, I nevertheless would be unable to give my assent to the ruling now made. If it be that so extraordinary a power of contract is vested in a patentee, I cannot escape the conclusion that its exercise, like every other power, should be subject to the law of the land. To conclude otherwise 70] *would be but to say that there was a vast zone of contract lying between rights under a patent and the law of the land, where lawlessness prevailed and wherein contracts could be made whose effect and operation would not be confined to the area described, but would be operative and effective beyond that area, so as to dominate and limit rights of everyone in society, the law of the land to the contrary notwithstanding.

Again, a curious anomaly would result from the doctrine. The law, in allowing the grant of a patent to the inventor, does not fail to protect the rights of society; on the contrary, it safeguards them. The power to issue a patent is made to depend upon considerations of the novelty and utility of the invention. and the presence of these prerequisites must be ascertained and sanctioned by public authority; and although this authority has been favorably exerted, yet, when the rights of individuals are concerned, the judicial power is then open to be invoked to determine whether the fundamental conditions essential to the issue of the patent existed. Under the view now maintained of the right of a patentee by contract to extend the scope of the claims of this patent, it would follow that the incidental right would become greater than the principal one, since by the mere will of the party rights by contract could be created, protected by the patent law, without any of the precautions for the benefit of the public which limit the right to obtain a patent.

I have already indicated how, since the decision in the Button-Fastener Case, the attempt to increase the scope of the monopoly granted by a patent has become common by resorting to the device of license restrictions manifested in various forms, all of which tend to increase monopoly and to burden the public to the exercise of their common rights. My mind cannot shake off the dread of the vast extension of such practices which must come from the decision of the court now rendered. Who, I submit, *can put 71 a limit upon the extent of monopoly and wrongful restriction which will arise, especially if by such a power a contract which otherwise would be void as against public policy may be successfully maintained?

What could more cogently serve to point to the reality and conclusiveness of these suggestions than do the facts of this case? It is admitted that the use of the ink to work the patented machine was not embraced in the patent, and yet it is now held that by contract the use of materials not acquired from a designated source has become an infringement of the patent, and exactly the same law is applied as though the patent in express terms covered the use of ink and other operative materials. It is not, as I understand it, denied, and if it were, in the face of the decision in the Miles Medical Co. Case, supra, in reason it cannot be denied, that the particular contract which operates this result, if tested by the general law, would be void as against public policy. The contract, therefore, can only be maintained upon the assumption that the patent law and the issue of a patent is the generating source of an authority to contract to procure rights under the patent law not otherwise within that law, and which could not be enjoyed under the general law of the land. But here, as upon the main features of the case, it seems to me this court has spoken so authoritatively as to leave no room for such a view. In Pope Mfg. Co. v. Gormully, 144 U. S. 224, 36 L. ed. 414, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 632, the validity of certain stipulations contained in a license to use patented inventions came under consideration. It was decided that contracts of that character, like all others, were to be measured by the law of the land, and were non-enforceable if they were contrary to general rules of public policy. And it was further held that even if contracts of that character were not void as against general principles of public policy, the aid of a court of equity would not be given to their enforcement if the stipulations were unconscionable and *oppressive, as are, in my judgment, aside from the rule of public policy, the stipulations of the contract here involved.

Indeed, when the decree rendered by the lower court which is now affirmed and which is excerpted in the margin† is considered,

†The circuit court granted a decree in favor of the complainant for an accounting of profits and damages and for an injunction restraining the defendants from infringing upon the said letters patent, and "from directly or indirectly procuring or attempting to procure, inducing or attempting to induce, or causing, any breach or violation of the covenant, condition, or obligation now existing or which may hereafter exist on the part of vendees or licensees of said patented and restricted Rotary mimeographs to the complainant by reason of the license restrictions hereinbefore set out, and particularly from directly or indirectly making or causing to be made, or selling or causing to be sold, or offering or causing to be offered, to any person or concern whatsoever, any supplies adapted for use or capable of being used on said patented or restricted mimeographs with design or intent that the same shall be so used in violation of such license restriction; from directly or indirectly persuading or inducing such persons or concerns to purchase any such supplies not of the complainant's manufacture and sale, designed or adapted for use in such machines for use thereon in violation of such license; from advertising or causing to be advertised in any manner any supplies intended or designed for use in said Rotary mimeographs in violation of such license; from publishing or causing to be published any offer, promise, or inducement designed or intended to procure licensees or vendees of the said patented and restricted Rotary mimeographs to use or purchase for use in such machine supplies not of the manufacture of the complainant, in violation of such license, and from doing and performing any and all other acts or things designed or intended to persuade or induce said licensees or vendees to violate the condition or covenant binding upon them with respect to the use of said Rotary mimeograph, and from in any way further interfering with the business of the said complainant of marketing said machines and supplies therefor under license restrictions limiting such machines to use only in conjunction with supplies made by or procured from said complainant.

56 L. ed.

it seems to me the conclusion cannot be escaped that although in the mental process by which it was held that relief under the patent law could *be afforded, the contract was treated as a restriction upon the use of the machine covered by the patent, so inexorable was the contrary result of the contract that in framing the decree it became necessary to give relief upon the theory that the gravamen of the suit was the violation of a contract stipulation in regard to unpatented materials.

For these reasons I therefore dissent.

CASSIUS B. THOMAS, William D. Eddy, and Edgar D. Starbuck, Plffs. in Err.,

v.

WILLIAM C. TAYLOR.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 73-84.)

Pleading — national bank act.

1. The facts pleaded in an action for attesting as directors a false report of the condition of a national bank, in reliance upon which plaintiff was induced to purchase some of its stock, determine the rights of plaintiff, so that a recovery is not prevented by the designation of the action as one for deceit, instead of as one arising under the national bank act.

[For other cases, see Pleading, 3-5, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

National banks — liability of directors for making false report.

2. The act of directors of a national bank in including as a part of the resources in a report of the condition of the bank, pursuant to a call of the Comptroller of the Currency, assets which had previously been called to their attention by the Comptroller as doubtful, with directions for their immediate collection or removal from the bank, is in effect an intentional violation of the national bank act, knowingly committed, so as to render them liable for a loss resulting to one purchasing, in reliance on such report, stock of the bank on which an assessment is soon after made on announcement by the Comptroller that its capital stock has become totally impaired.

[For other cases, see Banks, 325a-326, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — change of theory — liability of national bank directors.

3. Directors of a national bank, in an action against them for attesting a false report of the condition of the bank, in reliance upon which plaintiff purchased stock of the bank, cannot urge on appeal that if the action in the trial court had not been based on deceit, instead of on a violation of the national bank act, they would have been able to make a showing under which they would have been acquitted of knowingly violating such act, where the action was tried on the theory that, to maintain an action for deceit, knowledge of the falsity of the representations must be shown, and their defense was that the requirements of the national bank act had not been violated.

NOTE.—On the personal liability of national bank directors—see notes to Robinson v. Hall, 12 C. C. A. 680, and Warner v. Penoyer, 33 C. C. A. 230

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, VIII. J. 3, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — change of theory.

4. A judgment cannot be reversed in the appellate court on the mere suggestion that, upon some other theory than that on which the case was tried, evidence might have been introduced which might have changed the result.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, VIII. J. 3, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 171.]

Argued February 28, 1912. Decided March 18, 1912.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of New York in and for the County of Saratoga, to review a judgment entered pursuant to the mandate of the Court of Appeals of that state, which had affirmed a judgment of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court, Third Department, modifying a judgment of the Supreme Court, finding defendants liable for attesting, as directors of a national bank, a false report as to its condition, in reliance upon which plaintiff was induced to purchase some of its stock. Affirmed.

See same case below, in Appellate Division, 124 App. Div. 53, 108 N. Y. Supp. 454; in Court of Appeals, 195 N. Y. 590, 89 N. E. 1113.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Nash Rockwood argued the cause, and, with Mr. L. B. McKelvey, filed a brief for plaintiffs in error:

The remedy prescribed by the statute is exclusive; no common-law action for deceit will lie.

Yates v. Jones Nat. Bank, 206 U. S. 158, 51 L. ed. 1002, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 638.

It is of the very essence of a common-law action for deceit that the representation charged to have been made fraudulently must have been a voluntary statement made with the intent and for the purpose of deceiving. On the other hand, the report described in U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5211, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3498, is not, and cannot be, a voluntary statement, because it is exacted by the mandatory provisions of the statute, and is made for no other purpose. It is a statement which must be made,—a report required by law to be filed and published. It is not made for the benefit of any private person, nor as a representation to him, but rather to the Comptroller of the currency, for the protection of the state.

Utley v. Hill, 155 Mo. 232, 49 L.R.A. 323, 78 Am. St. Rep. 569, 55 S. W. 1091; Yates v. Jones Nat. Bank, 206 U. S. 180, 51 L. ed. 1015, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 638.

Again, in a common-law action for deceit it is not always necessary to establish that the party charged actually knew the representation to be false, and actually intended to defraud; very often the action is maintained upon circumstances which do not disclose actual knowledge and scienter, but lead rather to the assumption that the defendant knew or ought to have known of the falsity of the statement, and he is charged with liability upon the theory that his want of care or reckless inattention has made the injury possible.

Kountze v. Kennedy, 147 N. Y. 129, 29 L.R.A. 360, 49 Am. St. Rep. 651, 41 N. E. 414.

On the other hand, however, it is expressly declared by the provisions of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5239, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3515, that the directors shall be liable only in case they shall knowingly violate, or knowingly permit any of the officers, agents, or servants of the association to violate, any of the provisions of this title. And this statute has been so strictly construed as to require proof of something more than mere negligence and recklessness; nothing short of an intentional violation will suffice.

Yates v. Jones Nat. Bank, 206 U. S. 180, 51 L. ed. 1015, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 638; Utley v. Hill, 155 Mo. 264, 49 L.R.A. 323, 78 Am. St. Rep. 569, 55 S. W. 1091; McDonald v. Williams, 174 U. S. 397, 43 L. ed. 1022, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 743.

Again, in certain actions for fraud, parties are often held liable for the deceit of agents in whom they have vested authority to act, although no actual knowledge of the agents' fraud is shown; and this upon the theory that of two innocent persons, he who makes the injury possible must suffer. But this could not be possible under the statute, where the only ground upon which a director could be held liable for a violation by an agent or servant must be that he knowingly permitted the wrong.

The proceedings by virtue of which it is sought to impose upon these plaintiffs in error a severe penalty and to mulct them in heavy damages do not in any sense constitute that due process of law to which every citizen is entitled under the Constitution, and which has been his dearest right since Magna Charta. Due process of law means a legal proceeding appropriate to the case and just to the parties,—a proceeding instituted and pursued in the ordinary manner prescribed by law, and which, above all else, gives the party to be affected a full opportunity to be heard respecting the justice of the judgment proposed to be rendered against him.

Burton v. Platter, 4 C. C. A. 95, 10 U. S. App. 663, 53 Fed. 904; Gentry v. United States, 41 C. C. A. 185, 101 Fed. 51; Re Rosser, 41 C. C. A. 497, 101 Fed. 567; Galpin v. Page, 18 Wall. 350-368, 21 L. ed. 959-963; Windsor v. McVeigh, 93 U. S. 274, 23 L. ed. 914; Hovey v. Elliott, 167 U. S. 409-414, 42 L. ed. 215-220, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 841; Simon v. Craft, 182 U. S. 427-436, 46 L. ed. 1165-1170, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 836; Holden v. Hardy, 169 U. S. 366-391, 42 L. ed. 780-790, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383; Merrill v. Rokes, 4 C. C. A. 433, 12 U. S. App. 183, 54 Fed. 450; Garfield v. United States, 211 U. S. 249-262, 53 L. ed. 168-174, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 62; Bailey v. Alabama, 219 U. S. 219-238, 55 L. ed. 191-200, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 145; Moyer v. Peabody, 212 U. S. 78-84, 53 L. ed. 410-416, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 235.

No violation of the statute was shown even if the proper remedy had been invoked.

Yates v. Jones Nat. Bank, 206 U. S. 158-180, 51 L. ed. 1002-1015, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 638; United States v. Graves, 53 Fed. 634; Potter v. United States, 155 U. S. 438, 39 L. ed. 214, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 144; Coffin v. United States, 156 U. S. 446, 39 L. ed. 488, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 394; Graves v. United States, 165 U. S. 324, 41 L. ed. 732, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 393; Twining v. United States, 72 C. C. A. 529, 141 Fed. 41; United States v. Young, 128 Fed. 111.

The court of appeals of the state of New York erred in affirming the decision of the supreme court, to the effect that the notice from the Comptroller of the Currency on the 27th day of June, 1904, was an adjudication or notice that the capital of the said bank was impaired in March, 1904. The said court also erred in affirming the decision of the supreme court to the effect that the letter from the Comptroller of the Currency to the bank that a certain list of notes therein mentioned was considered doubtful, and that immediate steps must be taken to collect or remove them from the bank, was evidence that such assets were in fact doubtful.

Lord v. Goddard, 13 How. 198, 14 L. ed. 111; Penn Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Mechanics' Sav. Bank & T. Co. 38 L.R.A. 70, 19 C. C. A. 316, 43 U. S. App. 75, 73 Fed. 653; Brady v. Evans, 24 C. C. A. 236, 47 U. S. App. 416, 78 Fed. 560.
56 L. ed.

Until the board of directors had declared these assets worthless, or had directed them to be charged off, they had to be included in the statement, and the plaintiffs in error had no alternative. The report was the report of the bank, and was attested by the plaintiffs in error, as required by U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5211. And had the statement omitted these assets, the plaintiffs in error in attesting the report, would have been guilty of making a false entry in the report, under § 5209, and would have been liable to the bank and the stockholders, under § 5239, for the damages which would have resulted from omitting them.

Hanna v. Lyon, 179 N. Y. 107, 71 N. E. 778.

Defendant in error has mistaken his forum, as this action cannot be maintained in a state court.

Re Eno, 54 Fed. 669; State v. Tuller, 34 Conn. 280; Com. v. Felton, 101 Mass. 204; People v. Fonda, 62 Mich. 401, 29 N. W. 26; Com. ex rel. Torrey v. Ketner, 92 Pa. 372, 37 Am. Rep. 692; United States v. Buskey, 38 Fed. 99; State v. Fields, 93 Iowa, 748, 62 N. W. 653; State v. Bardwell, 72 Miss. 535, 18 So. 377, 10 Am. Crim. Rep. 71.

Mr. Edgar T. Brackett argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

At the time of the commencement of the action the facts here proved and before recited made out against the defendants a case of deceit at common law.

Arthur v. Griswold, 55 N. Y. 410, 7 Mor. Min. Rep. 46; Brackett v. Griswold, 112 N. Y. 467, 20 N. E. 376; Kley v. Healy, 127 N. Y. 561, 28 N. E. 593; Kuelling v. Roderick Lean Mfg. Co. 183 N. Y. 85, 2 L.R.A.(N.S.) 303, 111 Am. St. Rep. 691, 75 N. E. 1098, 5 Ann. Cas. 124; Kingsland v. Haines, 62 App. Div. 148, 70 N. Y. Supp. 873; Ettlinger v. Weil, 94 App. Div. 294, 87 N. Y. Supp. 1049; Mason v. Moore, 73 Ohio St. 275, 4 L.R.A.(N.S.) 605, 76 N. E. 932, 4 Ann. Cas. 240.

It was not necessary, in such an action, that the representations should be made directly to the party injured, personally, nor that the fraudulent intent related to the plaintiff, or had in view a design to defraud him in particular. If the representations were made publicly, and the plaintiff became one of the victims, then the law gives him a remedy against any one, or all, of the parties who set the machinery by which he was misled in motion.

Brackett v. Griswold, 112 N. Y. 467, 20 N. E. 376, reversing 14 N. Y. S. R. 451;

Morse v. Swits, 19 How. Pr. 287; Barber v. Morgan, 51 Barb. 116.

But the case of Yates v. Jones Nat. Bank, 206 U. S. 158, 51 L. ed. 1002, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 638; decided by this court in May, 1907, holds that an action cannot be maintained at common law for deceit practised by means of a false report under the national banking act, the remedies provided by the act being exclusive.

Conceding, then, that in no case an action at common law can be maintained against directors for a false report under the banking act, since the decision in Yates v. Jones Nat. Bank, it still stands that the action is well brought and the recovery right under the terms of such banking act.

It is contended that this is sustaining a recovery here upon a theory different from that upon which the judgment was based by the special term. The answer to such contention is that a correct decision will not be reversed because founded on a wrong reason.

Marvin v. Universal L. Ins. Co. 85 N. Y. 284, 39 Am. Rep. 657; Ward v. Hasbrouck, 169 N. Y. 420, 62 N. E. 434; Siefke v. Siefke, 6 App. Div. 474, 39 N. Y. Supp. 601; Penny v. Rochester, 7 App. Div. 606, 40 N. Y. Supp. 172; Cullinan v. Furthmann, 70 App. Div. 112, 75 N. Y. Supp. 90.

It does not matter that the view of the case taken here differs from that of the court below; the judgment is justified by undisputed facts, and will therefore be affirmed.

Arnot v. Erie R. Co. 67 N. Y. 321.

This court will only look to see whether the Federal question has been decided erroneously. If that question has been decided right, it will look no further for errors.

McLaughlin v. Fowler, 154 U. S. 663, 26 L. ed. 176, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1192.

If this rule is applied, the evidence fully makes out a case under the Federal statute. And a judgment will not be reversed when it is clear that the error could not have prejudiced, and did not prejudice, the party seeking reversal.

Lancaster v. Collins, 115 U. S. 222, 227, 29 L. ed. 373, 375, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 33.

A statement made in a report required to be published by the banking act must be true, and, if false, liability follows.

Yates v. Jones Nat. Bank, 206 U. S. 158, 51 L. ed. 1002, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 638.

An assertion that one had reason to believe that another had stolen a watch is equivalent to a charge that such other had stolen it.

Miller v. Miller, 8 Johns. 75.

And a statement recklessly made, without knowledge of its truth, which is, in reality, false, is a false statement knowingly made.

Cooper v. Schlesinger, 111 U. S. 148, 155, 28 L. ed. 382, 384, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 360; Moline Plow Co. v. Carson, 18 C. C. A. 606, 36 U. S. App. 449, 72 Fed. 392; Boddy v. Henry, 113 Iowa, 468, 53 L.R.A. 769, 85 N. W. 771; Rothschild v. Mack, 115 N. Y. 7, 21 N. E. 726; Haddock v. Osmer, 153 N. Y. 609, 47 N. E. 923.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

Action against plaintiffs in error for attesting as directors a false report, as it is alleged, of the condition of the Citizens' National Bank of Saratoga Springs, New York, whereby the plaintiff in the action (defendant in error) *was deceived and [78 induced to purchase thirty shares of the stock of the bank for the sum of $160 per share, which would have been worth that sum had the report been true, but, on account of its being false, he was compelled to pay 100 per cent assessment on his shares, which was required to be made by the Comptroller of the Currency. Damages were laid in the sum of $4,800, for which, with interest, judgment was prayed.

The action was framed in deceit under the common law, the trial court stating that "the defendant claims, and the plaintiff concedes, that this is not an action to recover upon any liability stated in the national banking act against a director or officer of a national bank." And this was the ground of judgment, the trial court rejecting the contention of defendants (plaintiffs in error) that the only action, if any, available to the plaintiff (defendant in error), was under the national bank act. The court said: "But here the liability set forth in the complaint is not created by statute; the action is not a statutory action. It is the common-law action to recover damages for deceit affecting the plaintiff only, not the bank or the stockholders generally, and must be considered as such. In the complaint the plaintiff has set forth a cause of action for deceit, and not a cause of action under the statute." [55 Misc. 414, 106 N. Y. Supp. 538.] The court was also of the view that there was nothing in the statutes of the United States "that destroys the common-law action for deceit practised by the directors of a national bank;" and said, further, that if the plaintiff were attempting to enforce a liability under the statute against the directors of a national bank, there would be a different case. Considering that the evidence established all the elements necessary for the recovery in an action for deceit, the court rendered judgment against defendants (plaintiffs in error) for the sum of $4,800 and interest.

The appellate division, where the case was carried by defendants, and also the 79] court of appeals, gave a broader *effect to the action, and decided that its requirements under the common law of the state coincided with the requirements of the statutes of the United States, and satisfied the measure of responsibility of those statutes as expressed in Yates v. Jones Nat. Bank, 206 U. S. 158, 51 L. ed. 1002, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 638. "The case," the court said, "both as to pleadings and proofs, meets the statutory requirements."

The court, however, decided that by the realization of $97,000 of the assets condemned by the Comptroller, defendant in error's stock was not a total loss, as found by the trial court, but had a value of nearly $2,000, and required him to stipulate to deduct from the judgment the sum of $2,000 and interest, in which case the judgment so reduced was to be affirmed. The stipulation was filed.

The judgment was affirmed by the court of appeals, "on opinion of Cochrane, J., in the appellate division." We shall refer to the opinion as that of the appellate division, although it was adopted by the court of appeals.

A consideration of the pleadings need not detain us long. How the action should be denominated or regarded was for the appellate division and the court of appeals to decide, and those courts, considering the laws of the state, decided that it was the facts pleaded, and not the technical designation of the action, which constituted grounds of recovery; and we accept their decision. There is nothing in the national banking laws which precludes such view. Those laws are not concerned with the form of pleadings. They only require that the rule of responsibility declared by them shall be satisfied.

The attack made by the plaintiffs in error is as much directed against the evidence as against the ruling of the court; and it is well to consider the facts. They are stated in a general way in the opinion of the appellate division as follows:

80]*"The defendants [plaintiffs in error here] are directors of the Citizens' National Bank, organized under the national bank law, and doing business in the village of Saratoga Springs, New York. Prior to March 1, 1904, the Comptroller of the Currency informed the directors of the bank by letter that certain specified assets, amounting to $194,107.02, must be regarded as doubtful, and that immediate steps should be taken for their collection or removal from the 56 L. ed.

bank. Of such letter the defendants had knowledge. On April 8, 1904, pursuant to a call of the Comptroller, a report of the condition of the bank at the close of business on March 28th, 1904, made in regular form, verified by the cashier of the bank, and attested to be correct by each of the defendants, was published as required by law. In such report were included as a part of the resources of the bank the doubtful assets to which the attention of the defendants had been called by the Comptroller. The report also stated that the capital stock of the bank was $100,000; that there was a surplus of $50,000; and that there were undivided profits of $13,456.75. This published report was not seen by plaintiff, but its contents were communicated to him, and relying on the same he purchased, in the early part of June, 1904, thirty shares of the stock of said bank for the sum of $4,800. On June 27th, 1904, the bank received notice from the Comptroller that its capital had become totally impaired, and that the same must be supplied by assessment upon the stockholders. Immediately thereafter such assessment was ordered, and the plaintiff paid $3,000 on account of the stock he had recently purchased." [124 App. Div. 54, 108 N. Y. Supp. 454.]

All through the argument of plaintiffs in error runs the insistence that the common-law action of deceit does not lie against the directors of a national bank, and that the only measure of their responsibility is laid down in the national banking laws. This is admitted. It was conceded by the appellate division as having been established *by Yates v. Jones Nat. Bank, [81 supra, and the question in the case comes to the simple one, whether the appellate division rightly decided that the findings in the case at bar satisfied the test of liability declared in the Yates Case.

In that case a broad consideration of the national banking laws was given, and it was deduced from them that the report which § 5211 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3498) required must contain a "true" statement of the condition of the bank, and that "the making and publishing of a false report is prohibited." These, however, it was said, were implications, but that the liability of the directors was fixed by the express provisions of the laws, and its extent was measured "by the promise not to 'knowingly violate, or willingly permit to be violated, any of the provisions of'" the title relating to national banks.

This test is the foundation of the action. The complaint charges plaintiffs in error with actual knowledge. The allegation is that when plaintiffs in error attested the report "they knew the same was not correct, and was false, and said statement was thus attested by them with the intention of deceiving the public, and, among others, the plaintiff" (defendant in error). And the appellate division says: "That the report was false, and known to the defendants to be false, they do not deny, nor do they attempt to explain their conduct." This would seem like a finding of fact of knowledge of the falsity of the report on the part of plaintiffs in error. Indeed, in distinguishing the case from the Yates Case the court did so on the ground that in that case "there had been a recovery against directors without proof of scienter, which proof the statute requires," and added: "Such proof has been supplied in the present case."

But, not insisting on this, let us consider the argument of plaintiffs in error. It is that the statement was not voluntary, having been made under the command of 82]the *national banking act, and therefore an element of the action of deceit is wanting; and that such act requires "proof of something more than mere negligence and recklessness; nothing short of an intentional violation will suffice." Yates v. Jones Nat. Bank and other cases are cited to support the contention. The contention goes beyond what was said in Yates v. Jones Nat. Bank. The language there is "that where by law a responsibility is made to arise from the violation of a statute knowingly, proof of something more than negligence is required,—that is, that the violation must in effect be intentional." Not, therefore, that as a condition of liability there should be proof of something more than recklessness,—not that there should be an intentional violation,—but a violation "in effect" intentional. There is "in effect" an intentional violation of a statute when one deliberately refuses to examine that which it is his duty to examine. And such was the conduct of plaintiffs in error in this case. They had notice from the Comptroller of the Currency that $194,000 of the items counted as assets of the bank were doubtful and should be collected or charged off. This "was a direct warning to them," as the trial court said, "by the bank examiner and Comptroller, that assets to nearly twice the amount of the capital stock were considered doubtful." They, notwithstanding, represented the assets to be good. Such disregard of the direction of the officers appointed by the law to examine the affairs of the bank is a violation of the law. Their directions must be observed. Their function and authority cannot be preserved otherwise and be exercised to save the banks from disaster and the public who deal with them and support them from deception.

It is further urged that it is unjust to sustain against plaintiffs in error the view of the action entertained by the appellate division, because they say that their defense in the trial court was addressed and adapted to the case made *against them.[83 "Had the action," they say, "been considered as based upon a Federal statute, there were many matters of defense which they could have interposed to such a charge, but which they had a right to omit, and were justified in omitting, at the time." In specialization of this it is said that they might have shown their relation to the bank and the confidence they had and were justified in having in the statements of certain of its officers, the cashier being instanced as one upon whom they might have relied "to prepare and correct a legal statement." And they contend that by such showing they would have been acquitted of having "knowingly violated the statute."

This contention does not seem to have been urged in any of the courts below. It is stated in the opinion of the appellate division that "there is no pretense by defendants that they have been prejudiced by the theory followed in the court below." It is somewhat late now to urge it, but, however, we think it is without merit. There was an issue of knowledge tendered by the pleadings, and to sustain their side of the issue plaintiffs in error offered testimony of the correctness of the books, and to show that the report was a true copy of them, as it was alleged in their answer to be. No attempt was or is made to show why the notice from the Comptroller was disregarded (we have seen it was known to plaintiffs in error prior to the attesting of the report), except that they point to the fact that $97,000 of the items mentioned by the Comptroller were subsequently collected, and that they should have been given time to collect the other assets. But the fact of the false representation remains, and the assessment of 100 per cent upon the stock purchased by defendant in error, which increased the cost of his stock $3,000.

The plaintiffs in error, indeed, are quite at pains to show that a representation, to be actionable for deceit, *must not only[84 be false, but must be known to be false. In other words, to quote from their brief, "To sustain an action for deceit, not only falsity but knowledge of falsity of representation must be shown;" and for this New York cases are cited. In another part of their argument they say actual knowledge is not necessary, but that the action may be supported if reckless inattention has made the injury possible.

It is manifest, therefore, that plaintiffs in error did not refrain from showing want of knowledge because of the theory upon which the case was tried, and such showing was obviously relevant to support that theory and the defense that the requirement of the national banking act had not been violated, which was their explicit contention.

Besides, judgment cannot be reversed upon the mere suggestion that, upon some other theory than that upon which the case was tried, evidence might have been introduced which might have changed the result. But we are extending the discussion unnecessarily. The courts of New York have decided that the requirements of the local law of deceit are identical with what we have decided are the requirements of the national banking act.

Judgment affirmed.

85] *OTTO H. BEUTLER, Administrator of the Estate of John Fetta, Deceased.
v.

GRAND TRUNK JUNCTION RAILWAY COMPANY and Grand Trunk Railway.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 85-89.)

Courts — power to change laws — fellow-servant rule.

1. The established fellow-servant doctrine cannot be done away with by the courts, but the legislature must act if any change is to be made.

[For other cases, see Courts, I. e. 3, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Trial — questions of law for court — who are fellow servants.

2. The Federal courts will, in cases tried in them, follow their own understanding of the common law, when no settled rule of property intervenes, in determining who are fellow servants, and will determine that question without submitting it to the jury. [For other cases, see Trial, 193-196, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Master and servant — fellow servants — railroad employees.

3. An employee at work in the repair yard of a railroad is a fellow servant of members of an engine and switching crew by whose negligence in running a car needing repair from the general tracks into the special yard the former is killed.

[For other cases, see Master and Servant, 131-147, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 194.]

NOTE.—As to what servants are deemed to be in the same common employment, apart from statutes, where no questions as to vice-principalship arise—see note to Sofield v. Guggenheim Smelting Co. 50 L.R.A. 417.

56 L. ed.

Submitted March 6, 1912. Decided March 18, 1912.

ON A CERTIFICATE from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit, presenting the question whether members of an engine and switching crew were fellow servants of an employee killed by the negligence of the former in running a car needing repair into a special yard for repairs where the latter was at work. Answered in the affirmative.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. James J. Barbour submitted the cause for Beutler, administrator. Messrs. Raymond W. Beach and Elmer E. Beach were on the brief:

A car repairer exclusively employed under a separate and special foreman in the car repair department of a railroad company, whose duties never bring him in relation to or in contact with the persons comprising an engine and switching crew,—exclusively engaged in a separate and distinct department, known as the operating department,—is not a fellow servant with the members of such engine or switching crew.

Gilmore v. Northern P. R. Co. 9 Sawy. 558, 18 Fed. 870; Pike v. Chicago & A. R. Co. 41 Fed. 99; Northern P. R. Co. v. Herbert, 116 U. S. 642, 29 L. ed. 755, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 590; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Baugh, 149 U. S. 368, 383, 37 L. ed. 772, 779, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 914; Santa Fe Pacific R. Co. v. Holmes, 202 U. S. 438, 50 L. ed. 1094, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 676; McCabe & S. Constr. Co. v. Wilson, 209 U. S. 275, 280, 52 L. ed. 788, 792, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 558; Northern P. R. Co. v. Hambly, 154 U. S. 349, 38 L. ed. 1009, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 983.

The case at bar arose in the state of Illinois, and the supreme court of Illinois has held in cases similar to the one at bar that the doctrine of fellow servant does not apply. Although the state decisions are not binding on this court, the reasoning therein may well be adopted as the law covering this particular case.

Northern P. R. Co. v. Hambly, 154 U. S. 361, 38 L. ed. 1014, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 983; Indiana, I. & I. R. Co. v. Otstot, 212 Ill. 429, 72 N. E. 387; North Chicago Rolling Mill Co. v. Johnson, 114 Ill. 57, 29 N. E. 186; Peoria, D. & E. R. Co. v. Rice, 144 Ill. 227, 33 N. E. 951; Haas v. St. Louis & Suburban R. Co. 111 Mo. App. 713, 90 S. W. 1155; Gathman v. Chicago, 236 Ill. 15, 19 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1178, 86 N. E. 152, 15 Ann. Cas. 830; Lake Erie & W. R. Co. v. Middleton, 142 Ill. 550, 32 N. E. 453; Duffy v. Kivilin, 195 Ill. 634, 63 N. E. 503.

Mr. George W. Kretzinger submitted the cause for the railway companies:

Persons in the service of the same employer, and bearing such relations to each other and to the business they are jointly engaged in, as a switching crew and a car repairer in the railroad yards of the master, are fellow servants, and the master is not liable for an injury to one through the negligence of the other.

Randall v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 109 U. S. 478, 27 L. ed. 1003, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 322; Quebec S. S. Co. v. Merchant, 133 U. S. 375, 33 L. ed. 656, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 397; Central R. Co. v. Keegan, 160 U. S. 267, 40 L. ed. 422, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 269; Northern P. R. Co. v. Dixon, 194 U. S. 345, 48 L. ed. 1009, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 683; Northern P. R. Co. v. Peterson, 162 U. S. 355, 40 L. ed. 997, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 843; New England R. Co. v. Conroy, 175 U. S. 328, 44 L. ed. 184, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 85; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Bourman, 212 U. S. 536, 53 L. ed. 641, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 319.

88] *Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

The deceased, Fetta, was at work in the repair yard of a railroad; other servants of the road, an engine and switching crew, ran a car needing repair from the general tracks into the special yard, and by their negligence killed him. There was no further relation between the parties than these facts disclose, and the question is certified whether they were fellow servants within the rule that would exempt the railroad from liability in that case.

The doctrine as to fellow servants may be, as it has been called, a bad exception to a bad rule, but it is established, and it is not open to courts to do away with it upon their personal notions of what is expedient. So it has been decided that in cases tried in the United States courts we must follow our own understanding of the common law when no settled rule of property intervenes. Kuhn v. Fairmont Coal Co. 215 U. S. 349, 54 L. ed. 228, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 140; Northern P. R. Co. v. Hambly, 154 U. S. 349, 360, 38 L. ed. 1009, 1013, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 983.

The precedents in this court carry the doctrine as far as it is necessary to carry it in this case to show that the two persons concerned were engaged in a common employment. No testimony can shake the obvious fact that the character of their respective occupations brought the people engaged in them into necessary and frequent contact, although they may have had no personal relations. Every time that a car was to be repaired it had to be switched into the repair yard. There is no room for the exception to the rule that exists where the negligence consists in the undisclosed failure to furnish a safe place to work in,—an exception that perhaps has been pushed to an extreme in the effort to limit the rule. Santa Fe Pacific R. Co. v. Holmes, 202 U. S. 438, 50 L. ed. 1094, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 676; McCabe & S. Constr. Co. v. Wilson, 209 U. S. 275, 52 L. ed. 788, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 558. The head of the switching crew and the deceased were as *clearly fellow[89 servants as the section hand and engineer in Texas & P. R. Co. v. Bourman, 212 U. S. 536, 53 L. ed. 641, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 319; Northern P. R. Co. v. Hambly, 154 U. S. 349, 38 L. ed. 1009, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 983. It may be that in the state court the question would be left to the jury (Gathman v. Chicago, 236 Ill. 9, 19 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1178, 86 N. E. 152, 15 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 830; Indiana, I. & I. R. Co. v. Otstot, 212 Ill. 429, 72 N. E. 387) but whether certain facts do or do not constitute a ground of liability is in its nature a question of law. To leave it uncertain is to leave the law uncertain. If the law is bad, the legislature, not juries, must make a change. We answer the certificate, Yes.

SAN JUAN LIGHT & TRANSIT COMPANY, Piff. in Err.,
v.
BELEN REQUENA.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 89-99.)

Appeal — refusal to strike out pleading — harmless error.

1. Refusal to strike from the complaint, in an action for negligence causing the death of plaintiff's husband, a paragraph relating to exemplary damages, if erroneous, is harmless, where the jury are instructed that there can be no recovery of exemplary damages.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 5012-5015, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — sufficiency of pleading — first raising question on appeal.

2. An objection that the complaint in an action for negligence causing the death of plaintiff's husband did not sufficiently charge the negligence which was found to have caused the accident is not available in an appellate court, where the case was tried on the theory that such negligence was within the issues, and both parties introduced evidence bearing on that question, without objection.

NOTE.—On the applicability of the rule res ipsa loquitur to accident on private property, due to escape of electricity from disordered electrical appliances—see notes to Western Coal & Min. Co. v. Garner, 22 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1183, and Turner v. Southern Power Co. 32 L.R.A.(N.S.) 848.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, VIII. J. 4, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Evidence — res ipsa loquitur — injury by electric current.

3. The doctrine of res ipsa loquitur is properly applied where a customer of a company supplying electricity for lighting purposes, engaging to deliver a suitable current for such purpose, was killed without fault on his part, while the secondary wire carrying the current to his residence conveyed an excessive and dangerous current which could only come from the primary wire of such company, which carried a current of high and deadly voltage, which dangerous current would not have been communicated to the secondary wire if its wires and converters, which were exclusively under its control, had been in proper condition, and the converters were found, immediately after the accident, to be out of order, one being heated and its insulation charred, and the protecting ground wire of the other being severed.

[For other cases, see Evidence, II. h, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 96.]

Argued December 13, 1911. Decided March 18, 1912.

IN ERROR to the District Court of the United States for Porto Rico to review a judgment awarding damages to a widow for the death of her husband by an electric shock received while adjusting an incandescent light in his residence. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Hugo Kohlmann argued the cause, and, with Messrs. F. Kingsbury Curtis, H. H. Scoville, and H. P. Leake, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The doctrine of res ipsa loquitur was not applicable, and the court below erred in applying it in the case at bar.

Peters v. Lynchburg Light & Traction Co. 108 Va. 333, 22 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1188, 61 S. E. 745; Minneapolis General Electric Co. v. Cronon, 20 L.R.A.(N.S.) 816, 92 C. C. A. 345, 166 Fed. 651; Memphis Consol. Gas & Electric Co. v. Speers, 113 Tenn. 83, 81 S. W. 595; National F. Ins. Co. v. Denver Consol. Electric Co. 16 Colo. App. 86, 63 Pac. 949; Harter v. Colfax Electric Light & P. Co. 124 Iowa, 500, 100 N. W. 508; McGrath v. St. Louis Transit Co. 197 Mo. 97, 94 S. W. 872.

The doctrine of res ipsa loquitur, even if applicable, was incorrectly applied by the court below.

Lyles v. Branno Carbonating Co. 140 N. C. 26, 52 S. E. 233; Ross v. Double Shoals Cotton Mills, 140 N. C. 119, 1 L.R.A.(N.S.) 298, 52 S. E. 121; Chenall v. Palmer Brick Co. 117 Ga. 108, 43 S. E. 443; Buckland v. 56 L. ed.

New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 181 Mass. 3, 62 N. E. 955; De Glopper v. Nashville R. & Light Co. 123 Tenn. 633, 33 L.R.A.(N.S.) 913, 134 S. W. 609; Zahniser v. Pennsylvania Torpedo Co. 190 Pa. 353, 42 Atl. 707; Dean v. Tarrytown, W. P. & M. R. Co. 113 App. Div. 439, 99 N. Y. Supp. 250; Dentz v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 75 N. J. L. 893, 70 Atl. 164.

Plaintiff's cause of action being based upon alleged negligence of defendant in respect to the interior wiring of deceased's house, there could be no recovery in this action if such wiring was not under the defendant's control.

McGrath v. St. Louis Transit Co. 197 Mo. 97, 94 S. W. 872; Batterson v. Chicago & G. T. R. Co. 49 Mich. 184, 13 N. W. 508; Toledo, W. & W. R. Co. v. Foss, 88 Ill. 551; Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Caple, 110 Va. 514, 66 S. E. 855; Long v. Doxey, 50 Ind. 385; Murphy v. North Jersey Street R. Co. 71 N. J. L. 5, 58 Atl. 1018.

The burden of showing that negligence or other wrong was the proximate cause of the injury is upon the plaintiff. The plaintiff must not only prove negligence, but he must also prove that such negligence was the proximate cause of the injury.

Kelsey v. Jewett, 28 Hun, 51.

And he must show this by sufficient evidence; a mere surmise or conjecture that the negligence was the proximate cause of the injury is not sufficient.

Larson v. St. Paul & D. R. Co. 43 Minn. 488, 45 N. W. 1096.

Proximate cause was a question for the jury.

Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co. v. Kellogg, 94 U. S. 469, 24 L. ed. 256; St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Needham, 16 C. C. A. 457, 32 U. S. App. 635, 69 Fed. 823.

The question of proximate cause should have been submitted to the jury under proper instructions from the court.

1 Thomp. Negl. § 161; Pittsburgh C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Carlson, 24 Ind. App. 559, 56 N. E. 251.

The proximate cause is the efficient cause, and one that necessarily sets the other causes in operation. The causes that are merely incidental, or instruments of a superior or controlling agency, are not the proximate causes and the responsible ones.

Ætna F. Ins. Co. v. Boon, 95 U. S. 130, 24 L. ed. 398.

Unavoidable accident means that the accident could not have been avoided by the defendant by the use of ordinary caution and care.

Clyde v. Richmond & D. R. Co. 59 Fed. 394; Hodgson v. Dexter, 1 Cranch, C. C. 109, Fed. Cas. No. 6,565; Dreyer v. People, 188 Ill. 40, 58 L.R.A. 869, 58 N. E. 620, 59 N. E. 424; Dygert v. Bradley, 8 Wend. 469; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Patton, 9 C. C. A. 487, 23 U. S. App. 319, 61 Fed. 259; Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Caple, 110 Va. 514, 66 S. E. 855.

Although bound to exercise extraordinary care in the maintenance of its electric wires, defendant was not an insurer, especially in view of the fact that it did not own or control the installations of the plaintiff. There was sufficient evidence showing that a proper inspection was made a short time before the accident, and that the inspection disclosed no defect.

Smith v. East End Electric Light Co. 198 Pa. 19, 47 Atl. 1123; Denver Consol. Electric Co. v. Simpson, 21 Colo. 371, 31 L.R.A. 570, 41 Pac. 499; Cosgrove v. Kennebec Light & Heat Co. 98 Me. 477, 57 Atl. 841.

The Court declined to hear Messrs. Willis Sweet and George H. Lamar, who filed a brief for defendant in error:

A prima facie case of negligence was made out.

15 Cyc. 447, 448; Inland & Seaboard Coasting Co. v. Tolson, 139 U. S. 551, 555, 35 L. ed. 270, 271, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 653; Alton R. & Illuminating Co. v. Foulds, 81 Ill. App. 322; Alexander v. Nanticoke Light Co. 209 Pa. 571, 67 L.R.A. 475, 58 Atl. 1068; 2 Cooley, Torts, 3d ed. 1424; Denver Consol. Electric Co. v. Lawrence, 31 Colo. 301, 73 Pac. 39; Clements v. Louisiana Electric Light Co. 44 La. Ann. 692, 16 L.R.A. 43, 32 Am. St. Rep. 348, 11 So. 51; Giraudi v. Electric Improv. Co. 107 Cal. 120, 28 L.R.A. 596, 48 Am. St. Rep. 114, 40 Pac. 108; Perham v. Portland General Electric Co. 33 Or. 451, 40 L.R.A. 799, 72 Am. St. Rep. 730, 53 Pac. 14; Suburban Electric Co. v. Nugent, 58 N. J. L. 658, 32 L.R.A. 700, 34 Atl. 1069; Harrison v. Kansas City Electric Light Co. 195 Mo. 606, 7 L.R.A.(N.S.) 293, 93 S. W. 951; Brown v. Edison Electric Illuminating Co. 90 Md. 400, 46 L.R.A. 745, 78 Am. St. Rep. 442, 45 Atl. 182; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. State, 82 Md. 311, 31 L.R.A. 572, 51 Am. St. Rep. 464, 33 Atl. 763.

The court properly instructed the jury that no verdict could be rendered herein against the defendant unless it had been shown by a preponderance of the evidence that it was guilty of the negligence which was the approximate cause of the death of the deceased.

Denver Consol. Electric Co. v. Lawrence, 31 Colo. 301, 73 Pac. 39; Clements v. Louisiana Electric Light Co. 44 La. Ann. 692, 16 L.R.A. 43, 32 Am. St. Rep. 348, 11 So.

51; Alexander v. Nanticoke Light Co. 209 Pa. 571, 67 L.R.A. 475, 58 Atl. 1068.

There was no room for an instruction as to inevitable accident.

Alton R. & Illuminating Co. v. Foulds, 81 Ill. App. 322; Mitchell v. Charleston Light & P. Co. 45 S. C. 146, 31 L.R.A. 557, 22 S. E. 767.

There was no possible interposition of the negligence of a third party which could relieve the plaintiff in error.

Harrison v. Kansas City Electric Light Co. 195 Mo. 606, 7 L.R.A.(N.S.) 293, 93 S. W. 951.

*Mr. Justice Van Devanter deliv[94] ered the opinion of the court:

The judgment here to be reviewed is one awarding damages to a widow for the death of her husband, caused by an electric shock received while he was adjusting an incandescent light in his residence in San Juan, Porto Rico. The case presented by the evidence produced upon the trial, which was to the court and a jury, was this:

The defendant was supplying the inhabitants of San Juan with electricity for lighting purposes, and had engaged to deliver at the deceased's residence a current suitable for lighting it. The electricity was conveyed along the street in front of his residence by a primary wire carrying a current of 2,200 volts, and by means of parallel or multiple converters the current was reduced to 110 volts and then carried to his residence and those of his neighbors by a secondary wire. These wires and converters were owned and controlled by the defendant, and the wiring and fixtures in the residence of the deceased were owned and controlled by him. On the occasion in question, the current carried by the secondary wire, and by it communicated to the wiring in the residence of the deceased, became in some way greatly and dangerously increased in voltage, and it was because of this that he received the fatal shock. Had this current been maintained at substantially its normal standard, as was contemplated, it would not, in the circumstances, have done him any injury. He was not responsible for the increased voltage, and neither did he have reason to expect it.

There were no outside electric wires in that vicinity save those of the defendant, and the increased and dangerous current could only have come from its primary wire. About the time of the shock to the deceased, two of his neighbors had trouble with a like current in their houses. One received a shock which felled him to the *floor and[95] rendered him unconscious, and the other found the wires in his shop flashing, and on coming in contact with one of them was made unconscious and burned so that he was taken to a hospital for treatment. Shortly thereafter it was found that the ground or protecting wire leading from one of the converters to the earth was broken or severed, and that the other converter was heated and out of order, the insulation being charred.

There was testimony tending to show that on the day preceding these shocks the primary and secondary wires and the converters had been examined by the defendant's inspector and found in good condition; but this testimony was greatly impaired upon the cross-examination of the inspector, who then said: "My inspection consisted in seeing that the poles and overhead trolley lines were in good condition. I just walked along and examined each pole, but did not climb them. When I came to the transformer [converter] I did not climb the pole and didn't look at the fuses. . . . No, sir; on that day I didn't look at the transformer any closer than I could see it from the ground. . . . There is no way you can tell from looking at the outside of the transformer whether it is in good condition or not."

There was also testimony tending to show that the wiring in the deceased's residence was not properly insulated or in good condition, but there was no claim that the defendant was responsible for this, and neither was there any evidence that the fatal shock resulted therefrom.

Much of the testimony was addressed to the questions whether a current of unusual and dangerous voltage was communicated from the defendant's wires to the wiring in the residence of the deceased, and, if so, whether this resulted from negligence of the defendant in failing to exercise appropriate care in the maintenance and inspection of its wires and converters. This testimony was *admitted without objection, both parties tacitly treating it as within the issues.

That the fatal shock resulted, without fault of the deceased, from an unusual and dangerous current carried to his residence by the wires of the defendant, was so conclusively established by the evidence that that part of the case might well have been covered by a peremptory direction to the jury, leaving them to determine, under appropriate instructions, the question of the defendant's negligence, and the amount, if any, which the plaintiff was entitled to recover.

With this statement of the case presented upon the trial, we come to the rulings which are assigned as error.

1. A motion to strike from the complaint a paragraph relating in part to exemplary damages was denied, because not all of the paragraph was deemed objectionable, and complaint is made of that ruling. But it is not necessary to consider its propriety. Even if wrong, it did the defendant no harm, because the court instructed the jury that there could be no recovery of exemplary damages, but only such as were compensatory.

2. It is urged that the negligence charged in the complaint related only to the condition of the wiring inside the residence of the deceased, and therefore that the court erred in permitting a recovery on the theory that the defendant was negligent in respect of the maintenance and care of the wires and converters outside. This contention must fail. While the complaint was not drafted with commendable precision, and, if critically examined, might be regarded as leaving it uncertain whether the negligence charged related to the wiring inside or to that outside, whereby the current was supplied, there was no objection to this uncertainty in the court below. On the contrary, the trial proceeded, as we have seen, upon the theory that the question whether the defendant had failed to exercise appropriate care in the maintenance and inspection *of its outside[97 wires and converters was within the issues. Each party, without objection from the other, introduced evidence bearing upon that question; and when it was submitted to the jury there was no exception upon the ground of a variance. Effect must therefore be given to the well-settled rule that where the parties, with the assent of the court, unite in trying a case on the theory that a particular matter is within the issues, that theory cannot be rejected when the case comes before an appellate court for review.

3. In its charge to the jury the court explained, in substance, that a company supplying electricity for lighting purposes, and engaging with individuals to deliver a suitable current at their residences and places of business, over its own system of wires and appliances, is bound to exercise such control over the subtle and perilous agency with which it is dealing, and to take such precautions in the maintenance and inspection of its wires and appliances, as are reasonably essential to prevent an excessive and dangerous current from passing from its supply wires to the service wires of its patrons, and then said:

"And you are further instructed that if you believe from a preponderance of the evidence that the deceased came to his death while innocently and without knowledge of any danger using an incandescent light, the current for which was furnished,

"And you are further instructed that if you believe from a preponderance of the evidence that the deceased came to his death while innocently and without knowledge of any danger using an incandescent light, the current for which was furnished, or to which the electricity was supplied, by the defendant company, the presumption is that the electric company was negligent; and it devolves upon it to show that the surplus and dangerous current that came over the wires did not occur from any negligent act on its part."

Exception to this instruction was taken upon the ground that it erroneously applied the doctrine of res ipsa loquitur. While recognizing that that doctrine is of restricted scope, and when misapplied is calculated to operate prejudicially, we think there was no error in its application in this instance. 98] *The deceased was without fault. The defendant's primary wire was carrying a current of high and deadly voltage. Its secondary wire conveyed to his residence an excessive and dangerous current which could only have come from its primary wire. Had its wires and converters been in proper condition, the excessive and dangerous current would not have been communicated to its secondary wire, and the injury would not have occurred. These wires and converters were exclusively under its control, and it was charged with the continuing duty of taking reasonable precautions, proportioned to the danger to be apprehended, to maintain them in proper condition. In the ordinary or usual course of things, the injury would not have occurred had that duty been performed. Not only did the injury occur, but immediately thereafter both converters were found to be out of order; one being heated and its insulation charred, and the protecting ground wire of the other being broken or severed. Besides, the defendant engaged to supply a current of low voltage, reasonably safe and suitable for lighting, while the current delivered on this occasion was of high voltage, extremely dangerous and unsuitable for lighting purposes. These circumstances pointed so persuasively to negligence on its part that it was not too much to call upon it for an explanation. Of course, if the cause of the injury was one which it could not have foreseen and guarded against, it was not culpable; but in the absence of that or some other explanation there was enough to justify the jury in finding it culpable. This was all that was meant by the instruction, reasonably interpreted. It was not a model, and, if it stood alone, might be subject to criticism. But, if read in the light of what preceded and followed it, and of the case before the jury, it was unobjectionable. When so read it rightly declared and applied the doctrine of res ipsa loquitur, which is, when a thing which causes injury, without fault of the injured person, is 99] shown to be under *the exclusive control of the defendant, and the injury is such as, in the ordinary course of things, does not occur if the one having such control uses proper care, it affords reasonable evidence, in the absence of an explanation, that the injury arose from the defendant's want of care. Inland & Seaboard Coasting Co. v. Tolson, 139 U. S. 551, 554, 35 L. ed. 270, 271, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 653; Zahniser v. Pennsylvania Torpedo Co. 190 Pa. 350, 42 Atl. 707; Alexander v. Nanticoke Light Co. 209 Pa. 571, 67 L.R.A. 475, 58 Atl. 1068; Trenton Passenger R. Co. v. Cooper, 60 N. J. L. 219, 38 L.R.A. 637, 64 Am. St. Rep. 592, 37 Atl. 730; Newark Electric Light & P. Co. v. Ruddy, 62 N. J. L. 505, 57 L.R.A. 624, 41 Atl. 712; 2 Cooley, Torts, 3d ed. 1424; 4 Wigmore, Ev. § 2509.

4. Complaint is made of the court's refusal to give several instructions requested by the defendant. All have been examined, and we find no error in their refusal. Some were in substance incorporated in the charge, some were inapplicable to the case before the jury, and others did not correctly state the law.

Judgment affirmed.

LAFAYETTE E. CAMPBELL et al., Pliffs.
in Err.,
v.

UNITED STATES

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 99-106.)

Appeal — review of finding in circuit court of appeals.

1. The circuit court of appeals has no power to consider the sufficiency of the facts found by the district court to support the judgment in an action at law, tried without a jury, contrary to U. S. Rev. Stat. § 566, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 461, since such a trial was in the nature of an unauthorized submission to an arbitrator, and the court's determination was not a judicial one, the provisions of §§ 649, 700 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 525, 570), for such a trial and review, being in terms limited to cases in the circuit courts.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 4852-4878, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — sufficiency of pleading — first raising question on appeal.

2. The objection that an answer alleging that defendants, who were sureties on the official bond of a receiver of public moneys, had not and could not obtain "sufficient information" upon which to base a belief as to the default of their principal, set up in the complaint, and that they therefore denied the same, is not a sufficient denial,

NOTE.—On the jurisdiction of the circuit courts of appeals—see notes to Lau Ow Bew v. United States, 1 C. C. A. 6, and United States Freehold Land & Emigration Co. v. Gallegos, 32 C. C. A. 475.

under Colo. Code, § 56, requiring such a denial to be based upon a disavowal of "sufficient knowledge or information," cannot be first raised in an appellate court. [For other cases, see Appeal and Error, VIII. J, 4, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 161.]

Argued March 6, 1912. Decided March 18, 1912.

IN ERROR to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit to review a judgment which, reversing the judgment of the District Court for the District of Colorado, directed the entry of a judgment for plaintiff in an action against sureties on the official bond of a receiver of public moneys, to recover for a default of their principal. Reversed.

See same case below, — L.R.A. (N.S.) —, 95 C. C. A. 114, 170 Fed. 318.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Aldis B. Browne argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Gerald Hughes, Alexander Britton, Evans Browne, Clayton C. Dorsey, and Barnwell S. Stuart, filed a brief for plaintiffs in error.

Messrs. Gerald Hughes, Clayton C. Dorsey, and Barnwell S. Stuart filed a separate brief for plaintiffs in error:

In actions at law in the courts of the United States, if the questions of fact are, by the consent of the parties, determined by the court without a jury, no ruling made upon or in connection with the trial can be reviewed by the court of appeals upon writ of error, in the absence of a statute providing otherwise.

Rogers v. United States, 141 U. S. 548, 35 L. ed. 853, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 91; United States v. Cleage, 88 C. C. A. 249, 161 Fed. 86; United States v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 93 C. C. A. 58, 167 Fed. 308; United States v. St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. 94 C. C. A. 441, 169 Fed. 74.

The question of jurisdiction is one which the court will determine regardless of whether it was raised or suggested by the parties.

Cutler v. Rae, 7 How. 729, 730, 12 L. ed. 890, 891; Mansfield, C. & L. M. R. Co. v. Swan, 111 U. S. 379, 382-386, 28 L. ed. 463-465, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 510; Parker v. Ormsby, 141 U. S. 81, 85, 86, 35 L. ed. 654, 656, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 912; Perez v. Fernandez, 202 U. S. 80, 100, 50 L. ed. 942, 949, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 561; Dones v. Urrutia, 202 U. S. 614, 50 L. ed. 1172, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 767; Henrie v. Henderson, 76 C. C. A. 196, 145 Fed. 316; Fred Macey Co. v. Macey, 68 C. C. A. 363, 135 Fed. 725; Cochran v. Childs, 49 C. C. A. 421, 56 L. ed.

111 Fed. 433; Wetherby v. Stinson, 10 C. C. A. 243, 18 U. S. App. 714, 62 Fed. 173; Tinsley v. Hoot, 3 C. C. A. 612, 2 U. S. App. 548, 53 Fed. 682.

Assistant Attorney General Denison argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

The judgment of the district court being plainly contrary to law on any view of the facts, the court of appeals had the power to reverse.

Rogers v. United States, 141 U. S. 548, 35 L. ed. 853, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 91; Campbell v. Boyreau, 21 How. 223, 226, 227, 16 L. ed. 96, 97; O'Reilly de Camara v. Brooke, 209 U. S. 45, 52 L. ed. 676, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 439; Lyons v. Lyons Nat. Bank, 19 Blatchf. 287, 8 Fed. 369; Doty v. Jewett, 22 Blatchf. 65, 19 Fed. 337; Bond v. Dustin, 112 U. S. 604, 28 L. ed. 835, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 296; Andes v. Slauson, 130 U. S. 435, 32 L. ed. 989, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 573; Paine v. Central Vermont R. Co. 118 U. S. 152, 30 L. ed. 193, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1019; Wayne County v. Kennicott, 103 U. S. 554-556, 26 L. ed. 486, 487; Low v. United States, 94 C. C. A. 1, 169 Fed. 86; United States v. St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. 94 C. C. A. 441, 169 Fed. 73; United States v. Cleage, 88 C. C. A. 249, 161 Fed. 85; United States v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 93 C. C. A. 58, 167 Fed. 306; Rush v. Newman, 7 C. C. A. 136, 12 U. S. App. 635, 58 Fed. 158; Prentice v. Zane, 8 How. 470, 12 L. ed. 1160; Guild v. Frontin, 18 How. 135, 15 L. ed. 290; Suydam v. Williamson, 20 How. 427, 433, 15 L. ed. 978, 980; Madison County v. Warren, 106 U. S. 622, 27 L. ed. 311, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 86; Glenn v. Fant, 134 U. S. 398, 33 L. ed. 969, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 583; Flanders v. Tweed, 9 Wall. 425, 19 L. ed. 678; Norris v. Jackson, 9 Wall. 125, 19 L. ed. 608; Blair v. Allen, 3 Dill. 101, Fed. Cas. No. 1,483; Wear v. Mayer, 2 McCrary, 172, 6 Fed. 658.

Mr. Justice Van Devanter delivered the opinion of the court:

This was an action at law against the sureties on the official bond of a receiver of public moneys to recover for a default of their principal. The answer set forth that the defendants had not and could not obtain sufficient information upon which to base a belief respecting the default charged, and therefore denied the same, and also interposed an affirmative defense, which need not be *specially noticed. The action[105 was begun in the district court, and was tried to the court without a jury. There was a special finding of the facts, accompanied by conclusions of law, and upon these there was a judgment for the defendants. The plaintiff took the case on writ of error to the circuit court of appeals, which held that the facts found were insufficient to support the judgment, and reversed the latter, with a direction to enter a judgment for the plaintiff upon the finding. — L.R.A.(N.S.) —, 95 C. C. A. 114, 170 Fed. 318. The defendants then sued out the present writ of error.

At the outset we are confronted with the question of the power of the circuit court of appeals to consider the sufficiency of the facts found to support the judgment. Section 566, Rev. Stat. (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 461) provided that the trial of issues of fact in the district courts, in all cases except cases in equity and cases of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction, and except as otherwise provided in proceedings in bankruptcy, should be by jury. This was not one of the excepted cases. Sections 649 and 700, Rev. Stat. (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 525, 570), made special provision for the trial by the court, without a jury, of the issues of fact in actions at law in the circuit courts, and for the review of the rulings of the court in the progress of such a trial, including the question of the sufficiency of the facts found to support the judgment; but those sections were in terms limited to cases in the circuit courts, and there was no similar provision in respect of cases in the district courts. In this state of the statute law, the trial to the district court without a jury was in the nature of a submission to an arbitrator,—a mode of trial not contemplated by law, and the court's determination of the issues of fact and of the questions of law supposed to arise upon its special finding was not a judicial determination, and therefore was not subject to re-examination in an appellate court. Campbell v. Boyreau, 21 How. 223, 16 L. ed. 96; Rogers v. United States, 141 U. S. 548, 35 L. ed. 853, 12 Sup. Ct. 106] Rep. 91. It follows that the circuit court of appeals was without power to consider the sufficiency of the facts found to support the judgment.

The power of that court was limited to a consideration of such questions of law as may have been presented by the record proper, independently of the special finding; such as whether the pleadings were sufficient to support the judgment. It is now said that such a question was presented, and that its right solution required that the judgment of the district court be reversed. If the answer did not put in issue the allegation of the complaint respecting the default of the principal in the bond, this claim is well founded; otherwise it is not. The denial of that allegation was predicated upon a statement that the defendants had not and could not obtain "sufficient information" upon which to base a belief respecting its truth. This, it is said, was not an adequate denial, because the state statute (Colo. Code, § 56) required that such a denial be based upon a disavowal of "sufficient knowledge or information." But of this it is enough to say that no such objection was raised in the district court, but, on the contrary, the answer was treated as sufficient in that respect. This being so, the plaintiff was not at liberty to raise the objection in an appellate court. Had it been made seasonably, it could, and doubtless would, have been avoided by an amendment. Roberts v. Graham, 6 Wall. 578, 581, 18 L. ed. 791, 792; Nashua Sav. Bank v. Anglo-American Land, Mortg. & Agency Co. 189 U. S. 221, 231, 47 L. ed. 782, 786, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 517.

It results that the Circuit Court of Appeals erred in not affirming the judgment of the District Court.

Judgment reversed.

*MINNIE SCHODDE, Executrix of [107
Henry Schodde, Deceased, Petitioner,
v.

TWIN FALLS LAND & WATER COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 107-126.)

Waters — incidental appropriation — current of stream.

1. The current of a river cannot be appropriated by a riparian proprietor in Idaho to the extent necessary to operate the water wheels used by him to divert the water actually appropriated for a beneficial use, so as to give him a right of action for the destruction of the current by subsequent appropriators, when exercising their right, under Idaho Const. art. 15, § 3, to apply the unused water to beneficial uses,—even assuming the coexistence in that state of a system of riparian rights and the doctrine of appropriation.

[For other cases, see Waters, II. c., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Waters — appropriation — riparian rights.

2. The license given by Idaho Rev. Stat. § 3184, to the owners of land adjacent to any stream, "to place in the channel of, or upon the banks or margin of, the same, dams or other machines for the purpose of raising the waters thereof to a level above the banks requisite for the flow thereof to and upon such adjacent lands," does not confer any power to appropriate, without reference to beneficial use, the entire volume of a river or its current, to the destruction of the rights of others to make appropriations of the unused water.

NOTE.—On the right of prior appropriation of water—see notes to Isaacs v. Barber, 30 L.R.A. 665, and Atchison v. Peterson, 22 L. ed. U. S. 414.

[For other cases, see Waters, II. c, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 2.]

Argued March 7 and 8, 1911. Decided April 1, 1912.

ON WRIT of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Circuit Court for the District of Idaho, sustaining a demurrer to and dismissing a complaint seeking to enforce the right to appropriate the current of a river as an incident to an appropriation for limited beneficial use. Affirmed.

See same case below, — L.R.A.(N.S.) —, 88 C. C. A. 207, 161 Fed. 43.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Kirtland I. Perky argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Joseph R. Webster and John F. MacLane, filed a brief for petitioner:

The doctrine of appropriation, which is claimed to have overthrown the common-law doctrine in many of the western states, Idaho among the number, had its historical origin in the customs of the California miners, and its legal justification in necessity.

Irwin v. Phillips, 5 Cal. 140, 63 Am. Dec. 113, 15 Mor. Min. Rep. 178; Conger v. Weaver, 6 Cal. 548, 65 Am. Dec. 528, 1 Mor. Min. Rep. 594; Hill v. King, 8 Cal. 336, 4 Mor. Min. Rep. 533; Bear River & A. Water & Min. Co. v. New York Min. Co. 8 Cal. 327, 68 Am. Dec. 325, 4 Mor. Min. Rep. 526.

While the doctrine of appropriation is established as independent of that of riparian rights, its principles come to be assimilated to the latter doctrine.

Phoenix Water Co. v. Fletcher, 23 Cal. 481, 15 Mor. Min. Rep. 185; Hill v. Smith, 27 Cal. 476, 4 Mor. Min. Rep. 597.

The doctrines of riparian rights and of appropriation are independent in California, but not destructive of each other; prior to vesting of title to riparian lands, the water is subject to appropriation, but after title to the land has vested, no hostile appropriation of the water can be made.

Lux v. Haggin, 69 Cal. 255, 10 Pac. 674.

The law of riparian rights in Idaho may be thus summarized:

1. The owner of riparian land has all the common-law riparian rights to the use and flow of the stream.

56 L. ed.

2. These rights are property which he may protect in the courts, and for which one depriving him thereof must compensate him.

3. These rights may be lost to an appropriator, who may subsequently acquire them, or the right to destroy them, without compensation, simply by complying with the law of appropriation.

4. The riparian owner may claim or "fix" his right in such a way as to prevent its subsequent appropriation. This is accomplished by "appropriating" that right in the manner prescribed by the statute.

Drake v. Earhart, 2 Idaho, 750, 23 Pac. 541; Powell v. Springston Lumber Co. 12 Idaho, 723, 88 Pac. 97; Johnson v. Johnson, 14 Idaho, 561, 24 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1240, 95 Pac. 499; Shephard v. Coeur d'Alene Lumber Co. 16 Idaho, 293, 101 Pac. 591; Hutchinson v. Watson Slough Ditch Co. 16 Idaho, 484, 133 Am. St. Rep. 125, 101 Pac. 1059.

A riparian owner has the right to the current flow of the stream.

Tyler v. Wilkinson, 4 Mason, 397, Fed. Cas. No. 14,312; Weiss v. Oregon Iron & Steel Co. 13 Or. 496, 11 Pac. 255; Gould v. Boston Duck Co. 13 Gray, 442; Head v. Amoskeag Mfg. Co. 113 U. S. 19, 28 L. ed. 893, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 441; Shamleffer v. Council Grove Peerless Mill Co. 18 Kan. 33; Lux v. Haggin, 69 Cal. 255, 10 Pac. 753; McCalmont v. Whitaker, 3 Rawle, 84, 23 Am. Dec. 102.

This riparian right to the flow is a valuable property right, of which the riparian owner cannot be deprived without his consent, or compensation being paid therefor, when it is desired to devote the right to a public use.

Yates v. Milwaukee, 10 Wall. 497, 19 L. ed. 984; Pine v. New York, 103 Fed. 337; Kaukauna Water Power Co. v. Green Bay & M. Canal Co. 142 U. S. 276, 35 L. ed. 1011, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 173.

There is an appropriable element in the current of the stream.

Weiss v. Oregon Iron & Steel Co. 13 Or. 496, 11 Pac. 255; Bear River & A. Water & Min. Co. v. New York Min. Co. 8 Cal. 327; Ortman v. Dixon, 13 Cal. 33; Salt Lake City v. Salt Lake City Water & Electrical Power Co. 24 Utah, 249, 61 L.R.A. 648, 67 Pac. 672; Isaacs v. Barber, 10 Wash. 124, 30 L.R.A. 665, 45 Am. St. Rep. 772, 38 Pac. 871; Basey v. Gallagher, 20 Wall. 670, 22 L. ed. 452, 1 Mor. Min. Rep. 683.

The diversion of the current was sufficient, if any was required.

Weil, Water Rights, 2d ed. 110; Hill v. Standard Min. Co. 12 Idaho, 223, 85 Pac. 907; Van Camp v. Emery, 13 Idaho, 202, 89 Pac. 752; Idaho Power & Transp. Co. v. Stephenson, 16 Idaho, 418, 101 Pac. 821; Salt Lake City v. Salt Lake City Water & Electrical Power Co. 24 Utah, 249, 61 L.R.A. 648, 67 Pac. 672.

The use is not unreasonable.

Mason v. Hoyle, 56 Conn. 255, 14 Atl. 786; Basey v. Gallagher, 20 Wall. 670, 22 L. ed. 452, 1 Mor. Min. Rep. 683; Rio Grande Western R. Co. v. Telluride Power & Transmission Co. 16 Utah, 137, 51 Pac. 146; Roeder v. Stein, 23 Nev. 92, 42 Pac. 867; Barnes v. Sabron, 10 Nev. 243, 4 Mor. Min. Rep. 673; Nevada Ditch Co. v. Bennett, 30 Or. 59, 60 Am. St. Rep. 787, 45 Pac. 472; Atchison v. Peterson, 20 Wall. 507, 22 L. ed. 414, 1 Mor. Min. Rep. 583; Weil, Water Rights, 2d ed. § 170, p. 266; Kirk v. Bartholomew, 3 Idaho, 367, 29 Pac. 40.

An appropriator was not deprived of his rights by the fact that he did not describe a definite measurement of what he used, nor furnish clear and satisfactory evidence of the amount required to satisfy his right.

Longmire v. Smith, 26 Wash. 439, 58 L.R.A. 308, 67 Pac. 246; Van Camp v. Emery, 13 Idaho, 202, 89 Pac. 752.

The means of utilizing his admittedly valid water appropriation was an incident of, or appurtenant to, that appropriation.

1 Words & Phrases, 477, 479; Carpenter v. Leonard, 5 Minn. 155, Gil. 119; Dauphin County v. St. Stephens Church, 3 Phila. 189; Leonard v. White, 7 Mass. 6, 5 Am. Dec. 19; Jackson ex dem. Jones v. Striker, 1 Johns. Cas. 284; Lawrence v. Hennessy, 165 Mo. 659, 65 S. W. 717; Bouvier's Law Dict. 159, title "Appurtenance;" Daniels v. Citizens' Sav. Inst. 127 Mass. 534.

Mr. Edward B. Critchlow argued the cause, and, with Mr. William J. Barrette, filed a brief for respondent:

Each state may determine for itself whether the common-law rule in respect to riparian rights or the rule of appropriation shall be enforced as to waters within its boundaries.

Kansas v. Colorado, 206 U. S. 46, 94, 51 L. ed. 956, 973, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 655.

Generally, the arid states and territories, Idaho included, have adopted the rule that water may be appropriated for beneficial uses.

Hammond v. Rose, 11 Colo. 524, 7 Am. St. Rep. 258, 19 Pac. 466; Chandler v. Austin, 4 Ariz. 346, 42 Pac. 483; Drake v. Earhart, 2 Idaho, 750, 23 Pac. 541; Hutchinson v. Watson Slough Co. 16 Idaho, 484, 133 Am. St. Rep. 125, 101 Pac. 1059; Trambley v. Luteran, 6 N. M. 15, 27 Pac. 312; Albuquerque Land & Irrig. Co. v. Gutierrez, 10 N. M. 177, 61 Pac. 357; Reno Smelting, Mill. & Reduction Works v. Stevenson, 20 Nev. 269, 4 L.R.A. 60, 19 Am. St. Rep. 364, 21 Pac. 317; Walsh v. Wallace, 26 Nev. 299, 99 Am. St. Rep. 962, 67 Pac. 914; Morris v. Bean, 146 Fed. 431; Willey v. Decker, 11 Wyo. 496, 100 Am. St. Rep. 939, 73 Pac. 210; Cole v. Richards Irrig. Co. 27 Utah, 205, 101 Am. St. Rep. 962, 75 Pac. 376.

The common-law rights of riparian owners and the rights acquired under the doctrine of appropriation are distinct and antagonistic, and cannot both be recognized or enforced.

Clark v. Nash, 198 U. S. 361, 49 L. ed. 1085, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 676, 4 Ann. Cas. 1171; Boquillas Land & Cattle Co. v. Curtis, 213 U. S. 339, 53 L. ed. 822, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493; United States v. Rio Grande Dam & Irrig. Co. 174 U. S. 690, 43 L. ed. 1136, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 770; Hutchinson v. Watson Slough Co. 16 Idaho, 484, 133 Am. St. Rep. 125, 101 Pac. 1059; Stowell v. Johnson, 7 Utah, 225, 26 Pac. 290.

Appropriation involves these several elements:

(a) An intent to apply to some beneficial use.

(b) An actual diversion, such as gives physical control of the stream, or such part as is appropriated.

(c) An application within a reasonable time to some useful industry.

Low v. Rizer, 25 Or. 551, 37 Pac. 84; Black's Pom. Water Rights, 48-51.

The manner of use, so far as it affects the quantity of water sought to be appropriated, must be reasonable and with due regard to the rights of others. An unreasonable claim of appropriation is a void claim.

Basey v. Gallagher, 20 Wall. 670, 22 L. ed. 452, 1 Mor. Min. Rep. 683; Atchison v. Peterson, 20 Wall. 507, 22 L. ed. 414, 1 Mor. Min. Rep. 583; Rio Grande Western R. Co. v. Telluride Power & Transmission Co. 16 Utah, 137, 51 Pac. 146; Roeder v. Stein, 23 Nev. 92, 42 Pac. 867; Barnes v. Sabron, 10 Nev. 243, 4 Mor. Min. Rep. 673; Nevada Ditch Co. v. Bennett, 30 Or. 59, 60 Am. St. Rep. 787, 45 Pac. 472; Van Camp v. Emery, 13 Idaho, 202, 89 Pac. 752; Hough v. Porter, 51 Or. 318, 95 Pac. 732, 98 Pac. 1083, 102 Pac. 728; Farmers' Co-op. Ditch Co. v. Riverside Irrig. Dist. 16 Idaho, 525, 102 Pac. 481; Fitzpatrick v. Montgomery, 20 Mont. 187, 63 Am. St. Rep. 622, 50 Pac. 416.

But even if we were to concede the application in the state of Idaho of the common-law rule as to riparian rights, plaintiff's claim must fail because, under the circumstances, it is unreasonable. The right of a riparian proprietor at common law is not unlimited. It must be reasonable. The maxim, sic utere tuo ut alienum non lædas, is constantly invoked.

2 Farnham, Waters, §§ 465, 466; Baltimore v. Appold, 42 Md. 442; Howard v. Ingersoll, 13 How. 426, 14 L. ed. 208; Union Mill & Min. Co. v. Ferris, 2 Sawy. 176, Fed. Cas. No. 14,371, 8 Mor. Min. Rep. 90; Crawford Co. v. Hathaway (Crawford Co. v. Hall) 67 Neb. 325, 60 L.R.A. 902, 93 Pac. 781.

And since the use of the Snake river by the defendant is for the benefit of the lands contiguous to the river below plaintiff's wheels, just as the use by the government on the Minidoka project is for the benefit of lands above the wheels, the most that can be claimed for plaintiff in behalf of the current wheels is just and reasonable use of the river in common with other riparian proprietors, and not an exclusive use.

Clark v. Allaman, 71 Kan. 206, 70 L.R.A. 971, 80 Pac. 571.

114] *Mr. Chief Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

Since the writ of certiorari in this case was granted, the petitioner died, and his executrix was substituted. The writ was allowed to enable us to review the action of the court below in affirming a judgment of the circuit court of the United States for the district of Idaho. The judgment of the circuit court sustained a demurrer to the complaint of the petitioner, who was plaintiff, on the ground that it stated no cause of action. An absolute judgment of dismissal was entered, consequent on the election by the plaintiff to stand on the complaint as filed. The court below summarized the averments of the three counts of the complaint, and as that summary accurately and sufficiently states the case, we adopt and reproduce it, as follows:

"Plaintiff's complaint contains three counts. Briefly stated, the cause of action as set out in the three counts of the complaint is as follows: Plaintiff is the owner of three tracts of land on the banks of Snake river, containing in the aggregate 429.96 acres. Two of these tracts, containing 263.96 acres, are on the south bank, and one tract of 160 acres is on the north bank. One of the tracts on the south bank is agricultural land and the other is partly agricultural land and partly mining ground. The tract of land on the north bank is agricultural. In the year 1889 plaintiff's predecessors in interest, and in 1895, the plaintiff himself, appropriated certain quantities of water of the flow of Snake river for use on said lands. In the first count the quantity is stated in cubic feet per second; in the second and third counts the quantities are stated in miner's inches. The aggregate of water appropriated as alleged in the three counts is referred to in the briefs as 1,250 miner's inches. Soon after this water was appropriated the parties in interest erected *water wheels in the river to lift the water to a sufficient height for distribution over the land. Nine of these wheels were erected opposite or near the tracts on the south side of the river, and two near the tract on the north side of the river. These wheels vary in height from 24 to 34 feet. The parties also constructed wing dams in the river, adjoining or in front of the lands owned by them, for the purpose of confining the flow of the water of the river, and raising it at such points above the natural flow of the river, so that the current would drive the water wheels and cause them to revolve and carry the water in buckets attached to the wheels to a height where it would be emptied into flumes and distributed over the lands by ditches, and used thereon to irrigate and cultivate the agricultural land and work the mining ground. It is not alleged in the complaint, but it is assumed, that the river at this point runs between high banks, and that the water is lifted by the wheels at least 20 feet before it is emptied into the flumes for distribution over plaintiff's lands. In the year 1903, while plaintiff was using the appropriated water of the river upon the described premises, the defendant commenced the construction of a dam across Snake river at a point about nine miles westerly from and below the lands of the plaintiff. The work was prosecuted on said dam until its completion in March, 1905. This dam is so constructed as to impound all the water of Snake river flowing at said point, and to raise the water about 40 feet in height. It is alleged that when defendant's dam was filled with water, the water was turned into a canal known as the 'Twin Falls canal,' owned by the defendant and located on the north side of the river; that this canal was constructed at a cost, as plaintiff is informed and believes, of $1,500,000, for the purpose of supplying water for irrigation and domestic purposes to the settlers on about 300,000 acres of arable and arid lands situated below the dam; that for *said lands and for [116 a great number of people, being, as plaintiff is informed and believes, five thousand in number, there is no other supply available for irrigation, stock, domestic, or manufacturing purposes, except the water from said canal. It is alleged that by reason of this dam the waters of Snake river have been backed up from said dam and to and beyond plaintiff's premises, and have destroyed the current in the river by means of which plaintiff's water wheels were driven and made to revolve and raise the water to the elevation required for distribution over plaintiff's lands. It is alleged that it is now impossible for plaintiff to so arrange or change his said dams or water wheels or flumes, or to build or construct other dams or water wheels or flumes that will raise any water whatever from said stream that can be used upon the plaintiff's lands, and by reason thereof plaintiff has not been able to irrigate said lands or any part thereof, or to raise profitable crops thereon, or to use the same as pasture lands, and will not in the future be able to irrigate said lands or to raise profitable crops or any crops thereon as long as defendant's dam is maintained; that there is no other supply of water available for use upon said lands except the waters of Snake river; that by reason of the backing up of said water and stopping the plaintiff from using said water wheels to raise the waters of Snake river to and upon said lands, and cutting off the water supply from plaintiff's lands, he has been damaged in the aggregate sum of $56,650.

"In the first count of the complaint a separate and distinct cause of action is alleged in an averment that about 12 acres of plaintiff's land has been covered by the waters of Snake river, backed up by defendant's dam, but the land is not described or its boundaries given, or any particulars stated, so that the land can be identified or ascertained. To this cause of action defendant interposed a special demurrer on 117]the ground of uncertainty *and the improper joinder of two separate causes of action. This special demurrer appears to be admitted.

"The defendant also interposed a general demurrer on the ground that the facts stated in the complaint do not constitute a cause of action against the defendant as to either or any of said counts. The demurrer was sustained by the circuit court, and the plaintiff has brought the cause to this court upon a writ of error." [— L.R.A.(N.S.) —, 88 C. C. A. 207, 161 Fed. 43.]

The trial court recognized fully the right of the plaintiff to the volume of water actually appropriated for a beneficial purpose. It nevertheless dismissed the complaint on the ground that there was no right under the Constitution and laws of the state of Idaho to appropriate the current of the river so as to render it impossible for others to apply the otherwise unappropriated waters of the river to beneficial uses. The court did not find it necessary to deny that power might be one of the beneficial purposes for which appropriations of water might be made, but in substance held that to uphold as an appropriation the use of the current of the river to the extent required to work the defendant's wheels would amount to saying that a limited taking of water from the river by appropriation for a limited beneficial use justified the appropriation of all the water in the river as incident to the limited benefit resulting from the use of the water actually appropriated. The court said:

"It is conceded and is beyond question, that the statute law as well as judicial authority directly protects plaintiff in all the water he has actually appropriated, diverted, and used; but there is no statute, nor, so far as known, any judicial rulings, protecting him in the establishment and in the use of his water wheels, as he claims to, and must, use them for the diversion of water to his land."

Again:

"As by art. 15, § 3, Constitution of Idaho, all unappropriated waters are subject to appropriation, it follows *that all water [118]er that plaintiff has legally appropriated belongs to him, but all other is subject to appropriation. It is unquestioned that what he has actually diverted and used upon his land, he has appropriated; but can it be said that all the water he uses or needs to operate his wheels is an appropriation? As before suggested, there is neither statutory nor judicial authority that such a use is an appropriation. Such use also lacks one of the essential attributes of an appropriation,—it is not reasonable."

After pointing out the limited right of appropriation for beneficial use which had been exercised, considering the quantity of water actually appropriated and the use to which that water was put, the court came to state the vast extent of the incidental appropriation, having no proper relation to beneficial use, which would result from admitting the theory that the plaintiff, because of his limited appropriation for a named beneficial use, had the power to appropriate the entire current of the river for the purpose of making his actual and limited appropriation and meager beneficial enjoyment fruitful. The court said:

"The only way in which his wheels can be used for the purpose he intended them is to preserve the river in the condition it was when he erected them. And with what result? it may be asked. It may be stated as a fact that the banks of the river and the adjacent country sustain such relations to each other that the latter cannot be irrigated by ditches cut from the river in its natural state, and the erection of dams becomes a necessity, which, of course, changing the surface elevation of the water, affects the plaintiff's premises and all others similarly situated. Then, without the dam, the Twin Falls scheme, with all its present great promise, fails. Not only this, but the government is now constructing a dam across the river some distance above plain-119]tiff for *another extensive irrigating scheme, known as Minidoka Project, which will take a large amount of the water, and so much that probably there will not be enough left, especially at low stages of the river, for the full operation of the plaintiff's wheels. . . . "

Illustrating the subject, the court said:

"Suppose from a stream of 1,000 inches a party diverts and uses 100, and in some way uses the other 900 to divert his 100; could it be said that he had made such a reasonable use of the 900 as to constitute an appropriation of it? Or, suppose that when the entire 1,000 inches are running, they so fill the channel that by a ditch he can draw off to his land his 100 inches; can he then object to those above him appropriating and using the other 900 inches, because it will so lower the stream that his ditch becomes useless? This would be such an unreasonable use of the 900 inches as will not be tolerated under the law of appropriation. In effect this is substantially the principle that plaintiff is asking to have established."

The court of appeals, in affirming the decree of dismissal, did so for substantially the reasons which controlled the trial court. The court of appeals said:

"The assignments of error present the single question whether the facts stated in the complaint constitute a cause of action against the defendant. It is not denied that the plaintiff has the right by appropriation to divert 1,250 miner's inches of waters of the Snake river, mainly for irrigation purposes, and it is not charged by plaintiff that this amount of water is not still in the river, subject to his right of appropriation and diversion. His claim is that he cannot divert it by the means he first adopted for taking the waters from the river, and that the defendant, by placing a dam across the river, has deprived him of the right to the current of the river which, prior to the erection of the dam, rendered his means of 120]diversion *available. Is this current and the means adopted for the diversion of the appropriated water part of or attached to plaintiff's right of appropriation? It is contended on the part of the plaintiff that the current of the river is necessarily appurtenant to the water location, and that the means of utilizing that current is attached as an appurtenance to the appropriation. We have not been referred to any case—and we know of none—where either of these propositions has been upheld."

56 L. ed.

After elaborately reviewing the general principles upon which the law of appropriation rested, and referring to provisions of the Constitution and statute law of Idaho, and the decisions interpreting and enforcing the same, it was held that the extent of beneficial use was an inherent and necessary limitation upon the right to appropriate. Pointing out the disastrous results which would follow from any other view, the court said:

"If the plaintiff were permitted to own the current of the stream as appurtenant to his right of appropriation and diversion, he would be able to add indefinitely to the water right he would control and own. There might be a great surplus of water in the stream at and above plaintiff's premises, and an urgent demand for a portion of this surplus for beneficial uses, but if an appropriator above should divert a sufficient quantity to lower the current under plaintiff's water wheels so that they would not revolve, the plaintiff would have a cause of action to prevent such an appropriation. It is clear that in such a case the policy of the state to reserve the waters of the flowing streams for the benefit of the public would be defeated."

And in this connection, in conclusion, it was observed:

"There is, furthermore, the general principle that the right of appropriation must be exercised with some regard to the rights of the public. It is not an unrestricted right. *In Basey v. Gallagher, 20 Wall. 670, [121 683, 22 L. ed. 452, 454, 1 Mor. Min. Rep. 683, the Supreme Court of the United States said: 'Water is diverted to propel machinery in flour mills and saw mills, and to irrigate land for cultivation, as well as to enable miners to work their mining claims; and in all such cases the right of the first appropriator, exercised within reasonable limits, is respected and enforced. We say within reasonable limits, for this right to water, like the right by prior occupancy to mining ground or agricultural land, is not unrestricted. It must be exercised with reference to the general condition of the country and the necessities of the people, and not so as to deprive a whole neighborhood or community of its use, and vest an absolute monopoly in a single individual.'

"In Fitzpatrick v. Montgomery, 20 Mont. 181, 187, 63 Am. St. Rep. 622, 50 Pac. 416, 417, the supreme court of the state of Montana, after referring to what has been just quoted from Basey v. Gallagher, said: 'While any person is permitted to appropriate water for a useful purpose, it must be used with some regard for the rights of the public. The use of water in this state is declared by the Constitution to be a public use. Const. art. 3. § 15. It is easy to see that, if persons, by appropriating the waters of the streams of the state, became the absolute owners of the waters, without restriction in the use and disposition thereof, such appropriation and unconditional ownership would result in such a monopoly as to work disastrous consequences to the people of the state. The tendency and spirit of legislation and adjudication of the northwestern states and territories have been to prevent such a monopoly of the waters of this large section of the country, dependent so largely for prosperity upon an equitable, and, as far as practical, free, use of water by appropriations.'"

We have freely excerpted from the opinions of the courts below because, in our judgment, they so clearly portray the situation, and correctly apply the law to that [122]*situation as resulting from the Constitution and statutes of Idaho and the reiterated decisions of the court of last resort of that state, which are referred to in the margin,† that we might place our decree of affirmance upon the reasons which controlled the courts below. We, however, refer to a contention urged by the petitioner as to the existence of riparian rights in Idaho, and the sanction which those rights, as there recognized, are deemed to give to the asserted power to appropriate the whole current of the river for the purpose of making fruitful the limited appropriation of water which was made. It is not urged that the law of appropriation does not prevail in Idaho, but it is supposed that a system of riparian rights goes hand in hand with the doctrine of appropriation, and that the two coexist and may harmoniously cooperate. But the best demonstration of the error which the proposition involves results from a consideration of the effort made to apply it in this case, and the reasons advanced to sustain it. We say this because it may not be doubted that the application here sought to be made of the doctrine of riparian rights would be absolutely destructive of the fundamental conceptions upon which the theory of appropriation for beneficial use proceeds, since it would allow the owner of a riparian right to appropriate the entire volume of the water of the river, without regard to the extent of his beneficial use. And the incongruity of the proposition is aptly illustrated by the arguments *advanced to sustain it; since those [123] arguments recur to and rest upon the common-law doctrine of riparian rights, of the duty to allow a stream to flow as it was wont, and of the relative rights of all persons bordering upon the stream, arising from their riparian ownership. The misapprehension upon which the contention rests is the assumption that because a certain character of riparian rights may exist in Idaho, therefore such rights as are absolutely incompatible with the rule of prior appropriation for beneficial use may coexist with that system. For instance, the case of Shephard v. Coeur d'Alene Lumber Co. 16 Idaho, 293, 101 Pac. 591, which upheld the right of a riparian proprietor to prevent another from wrongfully virtually taking his water front and cutting him off from ingress to and egress from such water front affords no ground for holding that such riparian rights exist as are wholly incompatible with, and, indeed, destructive of, the system of appropriation for beneficial use. So, again, the license given by the terms of § 3184 of the Revised Statutes of Idaho, excerpted in the margin† as pointed out by the court below does not confer upon such riparian owner the power to appropriate, without reference to beneficial use, the entire volume of a river or its current, to the destruction of rights of others, to make appropriations of the unused water. But the precise question we are considering has been so completely foreclosed by a ruling of the supreme court of the state of Idaho as to leave no room for discussion. Thus, in Van Camp v. Emery, 13 Idaho, 202, 89 Pac. 752, *the facts were these: [124

†Constitution of Idaho, art. 14, § 3; Rev. Stat. of Idaho, §§ 3155 et seq.; Laws of Idaho 1903, p. 223.

Malad Valley Irrigating Co. v. Campbell, 2 Idaho, 411, 18 Pac. 52; Geerston v. Barrack, 3 Idaho, 344, 29 Pac. 42; Conant v. Jones, 3 Idaho, 606, 32 Pac. 250; Wilterding v. Green, 4 Idaho, 773, 45 Pac. 134; Boise Irrig. & Land Co. v. Stewart, 10 Idaho, 38, 77 Pac. 25, 321; Sand Point Water & Light Co. v. Panhandle Development Co. 11 Idaho, 405, 83 Pac. 347; Van Camp v. Emery, 13 Idaho, 202, 89 Pac. 752; Hutchinson v. Watson Slough Ditch Co. 16 Idaho, 484, 133 Am. St. Rep. 125, 101 Pac. 1059; Farmers' Co-op. Ditch Co. v. River side Irrig. Dist. 16 Idaho, 525, 102 Pac. 481; Speer v. Stephenson, 16 Idaho, 707, 102 Pac. 365.

†All persons, companies, and corporations owning or having the possessory title or right to lands adjacent to any stream have the right to place in the channel of or upon the banks or margin of the same, rams or other machines for the purpose of raising the waters thereof to a level above the banks, requisite for the flow thereof to and upon such adjacent lands; and the right of way over and across the lands of others, for conducting said waters, may be acquired in the manner prescribed in the last two sections.

The defendant lived above the plaintiff on a stream, and was assumed as a prior appropriator to be entitled to 45 inches of the water of the stream. The plaintiff, who also was an appropriator, but subordinate to the rights of the defendant, complained that the latter had not only diverted his 45 inches, but had erected a dam in the stream so as to impede the flow to his (plaintiff's) intake, and deprive him of his right of appropriation, the dam being put in place by the defendant for the purpose of holding the water so as to give him the benefit of sub-irrigation of certain meadow lands which he owned. It was held that the defendant, while he had a full right to draw off the 45 inches to which he was entitled as an appropriator for beneficial use, could not, by damming the stream, get more than his beneficial appropriation entitled him to, so as to injure the right of others to appropriate from the stream. In the course of the opinion the court said:

"If the defendant, who lives above plaintiff, is entitled to a priority for 45 inches of water, he may unquestionably divert that quantity; but, when he has once done so, he may not dam the stream below, or hinder or impede the flow of the remaining stream to the plaintiff's headgate. The fact that such dams and impediments hold the water and cause a subirrigation of the adjacent meadows cannot of itself justify the maintenance of such obstructions. Whatever amount of water defendant shows himself entitled to for the irrigation of his meadows or other lands as a prior right over the plaintiff, the judgment should so decree; but beyond that he cannot go under any other pretext or claims for the natural condition of the stream. In this arid country, where the largest duty and the greatest use must be had from every inch of water, in the interest of agriculture and home building, it will not do to say that a stream may be dammed so as to cause sub-irrigation of a few acres, at a loss of enough [125]*water to surface irrigate ten times as much by proper application."

And the absolute untenability of the contention here made as to riparian rights was again foreclosed by the supreme court of Idaho in Hutchinson v. Watson Slough Ditch Co. 16 Idaho, 484, 133 Am. St. Rep. 125, 101 Pac. 1059. Indeed, in that case the court referred to and adversely disposed of the view taken of the authorities here relied on as sustaining the coexistence of the asserted riparian rights and the doctrine of appropriation. After making a full reference to authorities, in the course of its opinion the court said:

"A riparian proprietor in the state of Idaho has no right in or claim to the waters of a stream flowing by or through his lands that he can successfully assert as being prior or superior to the rights and claims of one who has appropriated or diverted the water of the stream and is applying it to a beneficial use. To this extent, therefore, the common-law doctrine of riparian rights is in conflict with the Constitution and statutes of this state, and has been abrogated thereby.
56 L. ed.

"Sight should not be lost of the correct principle involved in such cases; namely, that a riparian owner, as such, acquires no right to the waters flowing by or through his lands that is prior or superior to that of a locator, appropriator, and used of such waters. In other words, there is no such thing in this state as a riparian right to the use of waters, as against an appropriator and used of such waters who has pursued the constitutional and statutory method in acquiring his water right. In order to acquire a prior or superior right to the use of such water, it is as essential that a riparian owner locate or appropriate the waters, and divert the same, as it is for any other user of water to do so."

As we have pointed out, the court below did not question the right of the plaintiff to take by proper means *from the [126] river the quantity of water actually appropriated by him for beneficial use, and our decree of affirmance will therefore not in any way affect such rights.

Affirmed.

JUAN MARTINO GONZALES, Appt.,
v.

LEON RAMOS BUIST, Antonio Ramos Buist, Jesus Ramos Buist, et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 126-131.)

Appeal — exceptions — necessity.

1. The objection that a judgment of the district court of the United States for Porto Rico, sustaining a plea of res judicata, and, upon that ground, dismissing the complaint, was erroneous because plaintiff was not accorded a proper hearing, is not available on an appeal to the Federal Supreme Court, where there was no formal exception taken to any ruling or decision on the subject.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 3659-3700, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — record — findings of fact.

2. The findings of fact made by the district court of the United States for Porto Rico are not such as will enable the Federal Supreme Court to determine whether or not they support the judgment on an appeal which, under the act of April 12, 1900 (31 Stat. at L. 85, chap. 191), § 35, is governed by the rules applicable to appeals from the territorial supreme courts, where, instead of stating the ultimate facts, the findings merely embody conflicting statements of counsel concerning the facts as they suppose them to be, and their appreciation of the law which they deem applicable.

NOTE.—On the appellate jurisdiction of the Federal Supreme Court over Porto Rican courts—see note to Garrozi v. Dastas, 51 L. ed. U. S. 369.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 3342-3368, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 181.]

Submitted March 4, 1912. Decided April 1, 1912.

A PPEAL from the District Court of the United States for Porto Rico to review a decree sustaining a plea of res judicata to, and dismissing, the complaint in a suit over the possession of real property. Affirmed.

See same case below, 4 Porto Rico Fed. Rep. 243.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. H. H. Scoville and J. R. F. Savage submitted the cause for appellant.

Mr. Willis Sweet submitted the cause for appellees.

Mr. Chief Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

Gonzales, the appellant, sued in the court below to be declared the owner and entitled to the possession of a tract of land valued at $6,000, situated in the district of Porto Rico, from the possession of which he claimed to have been unlawfully ousted by the defendants in March, 1907. In addition to specifically denying the averments of the complaint, the defendants, by an amended answer, pleaded that, as the result of a controversy between them and the grantor of the plaintiff, concerning the land in dispute, the title and right of possession was adjudicated in their favor, and in virtue of the judgment they were put in possession of the property, which was the ouster complained of. Averments were also made which tended to show that the conveyance under which plaintiff asserted his ownership was made and received in bad faith, after the commencement of the action the judgment in which was pleaded as res judicata, in order to deprive the plaintiffs in that action of the benefit to result from a recovery therein.

On July 9, 1908, the case was called for trial, a jury was waived, and after the allowance of amendments to the pleadings, the following took place, according to recitals in the journal of the court:

"Whereupon the court, not being satisfied with the situation of the pleadings, calls upon the respective counsel for argument as to the question whether or not the plea as to the matters in issue being res judicata should not be sustained. Thereupon such argument is proceeded with, and the court, after having heard counsel for the *re-[128] spective sides in that behalf, gave them until Monday, the 13th instant, to file briefs and memoranda of authorities, after which the issue will be passed upon."

On July 31, 1908, the court filed a written opinion sustaining the plea of res judicata, and ordering the complaint to be dismissed. An entry of dismissal was made on the same day. The next step in the litigation was the filing on October 12, 1909, of a petition for the allowance of an appeal to this court, and the granting of the same on October 26, 1909. Contemporaneous with the allowance of the appeal there was filed with the papers in the cause a document styled, "Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law." The opening paragraphs contained recitals of the taking of the appeal, and that the court, upon the application of the appellant, "makes the following findings of fact upon which it based its final decree." The written agreement of the parties to waive a trial by jury was next stated, as also that argument was heard "as to the question whether or not the plea as to the matters in issue being res judicata should not be sustained," and the statement contained in the excerpt heretofore made from the journal as to granting leave to file briefs, etc., was reiterated.

It was next recited, in the opening sentence of the paragraph of findings numbered III.: "That thereupon counsel for defendants, on July 13, 1908, filed, without first submitting the same to the inspection of counsel for the plaintiff, the following brief and statement of facts, with annexed exhibit." The remainder of paragraph III., found on pages 17 to 25 of the printed transcript of record, consists of a copy of the "defendants' brief on res judicata and the translation of what purport to be findings made in the judgment in the action pleaded as res judicata."

Paragraph IV. of the findings opens with the following statement:

"That thereupon, on July 27, 1908, counsel for plaintiff *filed, without first[129] submitting the same to the inspection of the counsel for defendants, the following brief and statement of facts with annexed exhibit."

Next follows a copy of a document entitled in the action, and styled, "Statements and Brief on Plea of Res Judicata," found on pages 25 to 38 of the printed transcript, subdivided into headings entitled "Facts," "Documentary Proof No. 1," "Documentary Proof No. 2," and "Translation of Exhibit A," an alleged cautionary notice of the institution of the prior suit.

The findings of fact thus concluded:

"V.

"That with the exception of said briefs and statements so filed as aforesaid, and the exhibit attached thereto, no other or further evidence was received, submitted, or considered in this cause, and no further hearing of this cause was had.

"IV.

"That counsel for plaintiff requested the court for a further hearing, and that evidence be taken by the court in support of the statements made by counsel for plaintiff and counsel for defendant in their respective briefs, and that the court refused to allow any further evidence in the premises other than that contained in the exhibits attached to said briefs and the relief map presented at the hearing."

Declaring that it had sufficient evidence before it to pass upon the question of res judicata, the court, thereupon, as a conclusion of law, found that the prior judgment was res judicata of the claims set up in the complaint, and concluded as follows:

"The foregoing statement of facts, in the nature of a special verdict, and the above conclusions of law, having been submitted by counsel for the respective parties and 130]*approved by the court, the same is signed and certified, at San Juan, Porto Rico, this 26th day of October, 1909, and the same, with a copy of the court's opinion in the case, will be transmitted to the Honorable the Supreme Court of the United States, according to law."

The assignments of error are eleven in number, and state in various forms of expression the contention that the judgment entered was erroneous because plaintiff was not accorded a proper hearing upon the issue of res judicata. The appellant did not, however, formally except to any ruling or decision of the court on the subject, and in consequence, even upon the assumption that the objection that want of regularity in the practice pursued might, under some circumstances, be available here (Salina Stock Co. v. Salina Creek Irrig. Co. 163 U. S. 109, 41 L. ed. 90, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1036), it cannot on this record be availed of (Apache County v. Barth, 177 U. S. 538, 542, 44 L. ed. 878, 879, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 718).

There is nothing shown by the record which we can review, since what is denominated findings of fact is not such in legal effect, and the record does not contain any rulings of the court, excepted to, upon the admission or rejection of evidence. By § 35 of the Porto Rican act of April 12, 1900, 31 Stat. at L. 85, chap. 191, writs of error and appeals from final decisions of the supreme court for the district of Porto Rico shall be allowed and may be taken to this court "in the same manner and under the same regulations . . . as from the supreme courts of the territories of the United States." Now, as held in Young v. Amy, 171 U. S. 179, 183, 43 L. ed. 127, 128, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 802:

"It is settled that, on error or appeal to the supreme court of a territory, this court is without power to re-examine the facts, and is confined to determining whether the court below erred in the conclusions of law deduced by it from the facts by it found, and to reviewing errors committed as to the admission or rejection of testimony, when the action of the court in this regard has been duly excepted *to, and the right[131 to attack the same preserved on the record."

But whether the court adopts an agreed statement of facts or itself finds the facts, the agreed statement or findings must be of the ultimate facts, and if they be merely a recital of testimony or evidentiary facts, it brings nothing before this court for consideration. Thompson v. Ferry, 180 U. S. 484, 45 L. ed. 633, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 453; United States Trust Co. v. New Mexico, 183 U. S. 535, 540, 46 L. ed. 315, 319, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 172. As said in Crowe v. Trickey, 204 U. S. 228, 235, 51 L. ed. 454, 458, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 275, the statement of facts required by the statute should present clearly and precisely the ultimate facts, although, as further observed in the same case, a mere incorporation of unnecessary details may not be fatal if "a sufficient statement finally emerges." Under no possible view, however, of the findings we are considering, can they be held to constitute a compliance with the statute, since they merely embody conflicting statements of counsel concerning the facts as they suppose them to be, and their appreciation of the law which they deem applicable; there being, therefore, no attempt whatever to state the ultimate facts by a consideration of which we would be able to conclude whether or not the judgment was warranted. The case is analogous to that presented by the record in Glenn v. Fant, 134 U. S. 398, 33 L. ed. 969, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 583, where it was held that an agreement that the parties might refer to and rely upon all the grounds of action or defense to be found in the voluminous records of two equity cases in other courts, including the pleadings and findings and orders and decrees therein, could not take the place of a special verdict of a jury or the special findings of fact by the court, so as to enable this court to determine the questions of law thereon arising.

No error being apparent on the record, the judgment of the District Court of Porto Rico must be and it is affirmed.

132]*SPENCER S. WOOD, Appt.,

v.

UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 132-137.)

Navy — pay of aids to Admiral — assimilative statute.

The revival of the office of General of the Army, and the incidents relating thereto, made by the act of June 1, 1888 (25 Stat. at L. 165, chap. 338), which declared that such grade should cease upon the death of General Sheridan, did not have the effect of continuing after his death the provisions of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 1096, relating to aids to the General and their pay, so that upon the recreation of the office of Admiral by the act of March 2, 1899 (30 Stat. at L. 995, chap. 378, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 981), such provisions could operate by virtue of the assimilative features of the Navy personnel act of March 3, 1899 (30 Stat. at L. 1007, chap. 413, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1072), § 13, in favor of aids to the Admiral.

[For other cases, see Army and Navy, 60-83, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 71.]

Argued November 16 and 17, 1911. Decided April 1, 1912.

APPEAL from the Court of Claims to review a judgment dismissing the claim of an aid to the Admiral for increased pay and allowances. Affirmed.

See same case below, 44 Ct. Cl. 611.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. George A. King argued the cause, and, with Mr. William B. King, filed a brief for appellant.

Assistant Attorney General Thompson argued the cause, and, with Mr. Frederick De C. Faust, filed a brief for appellee.

Mr. Chief Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

The office of Admiral of the Navy was re-established by the act of March 2, 1899, 30 Stat. at L. 995, chap. 378, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 981, re-enacted in identical terms by a portion of the naval appropriation act of March 3, 1899, 30 Stat. at L. 1045, chap. 421. By another provision of the same act (30 Stat. at L. 1024, 1025, chap. 421, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1073), the Admiral was given the same pay and allowances as had been received by the last General of the United States Army.

From October 17, 1904, until February 29, 1908, the claimant performed the duties prescribed by an order of the Secretary of the Navy, dated October 1, 1904, which directed him to "report to the Admiral of the Navy, . . . President of the General Board, . . . for duty as aid to the Admiral of the Navy, and for duty in connection with the General Board." During the period within which these services were performed the claimant received the pay belonging to his rank in the Navy, which, for the earlier portion of the time, was that of Lieutenant Commander, and during the remainder of the time that of Commander. He demanded the pay and allowances *of a Captain of the Navy, upon the theory that the Admiral of the Navy corresponded in rank with the General of the Army; that by Rev. Stat. § 1096, the General of the Army was entitled to aids, who received increased compensation as such aids by reason of the pay attached to the higher rank conferred upon them while serving as aids to the General, which higher pay the aid to the Admiral became entitled to receive by virtue of the clause of § 13 of the naval personnel act of March 3, 1899, 30 Stat. at L. 1007, chap. 413, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1072, assimilating the pay of officers of the Navy to that of officers of the Army.

Section 1096, Rev. Stat., relied upon in connection with the assimilating provision just referred to, is as follows:

"Sec. 1096. The General may select from the Army such number of aids, not exceeding six, as he may deem necessary, who shall have, while serving on his staff, the rank of colonel of cavalry."

This appeal was taken from a judgment of the court of claims dismissing the claim.

Putting aside immaterial considerations, the question upon which the controversy turns is this: In March, 1899, when the office of Admiral was re-created, were the provisions of § 1096, Rev. Stat., existing, or had they been repealed, thereby causing it to come to pass that there was no law concerning aids to the General of the Army upon which the assimilating provisions of the act of 1899 could operate? We say this is the fundamental question, because it is patent that the act of 1899, which re-created the office of Admiral, did not, in and of itself, provide for aids to that officer, or fix extra compensation for such services. and therefore the right here asserted must depend exclusively upon the existence of some law providing for aids to the General of the Army and their pay, which, in virtue of the application of the assimilating statute, became operative as to aids to the Admiral.

135] *While by § 1094, Rev. Stat., it was provided that the Army of the United States should consist, among other officers, of "one General," the section concluded with the following:

"Provided. That when a vacancy occurs in the office of General or Lieutenant General, such office shall cease, and all enactments creating or regulating such offices shall, respectively, be held to be repealed."

It is not questioned that § 1096, Rev. Stat., was a regulation concerning the office of General of the Army, and it is not disputed that that section was repealed prospectively by the proviso to § 1094, above quoted,—a repeal which became operative when the event provided for the cessation of the office of General occurred. It is, further, not disputed that years before the re-creation of the office of Admiral, in 1899, the result provided for in the proviso to § 1094 had taken place, and hence that § 1096, concerning aids to the General of the Army, had ceased to exist, as the result of the nonexistence of the grade of General of the Army to which the provisions of that section applied.

The primary contention is that § 1096 was revived as the result of the act of June 1, 1888, 25 Stat. at L. 165, chap. 338, by virtue of which Lieutenant General Sheridan was made for life the General of the Army. The secondary proposition is that the provisions of the section which it is contended were thus revived remained in force (although in abeyance) after the death of General Sheridan, and despite the fact that the act of 1888, which provided for his appointment as General, declared that the grade should cease on his death. The contention, however, in reason rests upon a plain misconception of the act of 1888, since it but insists that while the provisions of that act only revived the grade of General for a limited and specified purpose, nevertheless the effect of the act was to revive incidental provisions of law 136] concerning that *office, so as to cause them to continue to exist after the period during which alone the statute contemplated they should be in existence. But so to construe the statute would divide it against itself,—would presuppose that it contemplated that an effect should arise from its enactment plainly at war with the purpose which its text manifests Congress intended to accomplish by its adoption. When it is considered that the grade of General of the Army had ceased to exist long prior to the act of 1888, and that the statutory incidents regulating that office, including 1096, Rev. Stat., had also passed out of existence, we think it results that the provisions of the act of 1888, reviving the office of General, and the incidents relating to that office, were all controlled by the limitation of time which that act imposed. In other words, we think that the office and its incidents were but revived for the sole purposes and for the limited period specified, and none other, and therefore no subject to which that act related can be said to have been generally re-enacted so as to survive the limitations which the act itself expressly contemplated.

The failure by Congress during the many years which have elapsed since the re-creation of the office of Admiral to make any provision concerning the pay of aids to that officer gives rise to the assumption of a legislative construction in accord with the view which we have expressed. The matter is not, however, left to mere inference resulting from silence, since, although Congress, in what is known as the new Navy pay act of May 13, 1908, 35 Stat. at L. 128, chap. 166, in terms specifically provided for the pay of every officer in the Navy, including the Admiral, and embracing extra compensation to aids to Rear Admirals, made no provision whatever for compensation for services which might be rendered by an officer acting as aid to the Admiral. The incongruity, if any, which it is suggested must result from providing for extra compensation *for an aid to[137 a Rear Admiral and none for aids to the higher officer, the Admiral, if admitted, would be but the consequence of legislative omission, and would not justify the exertion of judicial power for the purpose of re-creating a provision of law concerning aids to the General of the Army, which has long since ceased to exist, in order to afford a subject upon which the assimilating provision of the naval personnel act of 1899 might operate.

Affirmed.

GEORGE R. PLUMMER, Appt.,

v.

UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 137-145.)

Navy — pay of officers — acting assistant surgeon.

1. The changes in rank and pay of assistant surgeons in the Navy, made by the Navy personnel act of March 3, 1899 (30 Stat. at L. 1007, chap. 413, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1072), § 13, and the acts of June 7, 1900 (31 Stat. at L. 697, chap.

859, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 990), March 2, 1907 (34 Stat. at L. 1167, chap. 2511), and May 13, 1908 (35 Stat. at L. 127, chap. 166, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1909, p. 359), inured to the benefit of acting assistant surgeons appointed under the act of May 4, 1898 (30 Stat. at L. 380, chap. 234, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 990), which expressly gives to such appointees the relative rank and compensation of assistant surgeons,—although the Navy personnel act may be conceded to deal only with the standard of pay of the regular naval establishment. [For other cases, see Army and Navy, 60-70, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Navy — longevity pay.

2. Congress, in using the words, "current yearly pay," as the basis of the computation of the longevity pay provided for by the act of May 13, 1908, must be deemed to have adopted its construction of those words as used in U. S. Rev. Stat. § 1262, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 896, giving a 10 per cent longevity increase on "current yearly pay," which it declared by the act of June 30, 1882 (22 Stat. at L. 118, chap. 254, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 896), should be computed on the yearly pay of the grade. [For other cases, see Army and Navy, 89-105, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 177.]

Argued February 29 and March 1, 1912.
Decided April 1, 1912.

APPEAL from the Court of Claims to review a judgment dismissing the petition of an acting assistant surgeon in the Navy for additional pay. Reversed and remanded for entry of judgment in favor of claimant.

See same case below, 45 Ct. Cl. 614.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. George A. King argued the cause, and, with Messrs. William B. King, William E. Harvey, and Archibald King, filed a brief for appellant:

The compensation of acting assistant surgeons appointed at any given time must be determined by the law in force for assistant surgeons at the same time.

Kugler's Appeal, 55 Pa. 123; De Lima v. Bidwell, 182 U. S. 1, 197, 45 L. ed. 1041, 1056, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 743.

Congress used the words "assistant surgeon" in the act of June 7, 1900, as descriptive of the whole class of assistant surgeons. This means acting assistant surgeons, as well as passed assistant surgeons.

United States v. Farenholt, 206 U. S. 226, 51 L. ed. 1036, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 629.

The fact that the commission was only for a limited period does not affect the status of the claimant as an officer in the Navy. Very few officers of the government hold for anything but a limited period.

Shurtleff v. United States, 189 U. S. 311, 316, 47 L. ed. 828, 831, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 535.

The title of an act furnishes little aid in the construction of its provisions. It is only when the meaning of these is doubtful that resort may be had to the title, and even then it has little weight. It is seldom the subject of special consideration by the legislature.

Hadden v. The Collector (Hadden v. Barney) 5 Wall. 107, 110, 18 L. ed. 518, 519.

The appointment of officers having the word "acting" preceding their official title has several times been authorized in the Army or the Navy, sometimes by Executive action only, sometimes with legislative authority. In all such cases an officer lawfully so appointed has had conceded to him the full rank and compensation of the office to which he was appointed as "acting."

United States v. White, Taney, 152, Fed. Cas. No. 16,684.

The government is bound by a species of equitable estoppel not to shift the ground and insist that a mistake was committed in the offer of compensation by its authorized officer.

Thurber v. United States, 40 Ct. Cl. 489; United States v. Alabama G. S. R. Co. 142 U. S. 615, 621, 35 L. ed. 1134, 1136, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 306, affirming 25 Ct. Cl. 30.

The computation of the increase should be not merely upon the base pay of the grade, but upon that pay as increased by previous increases for length of service.

United States v. Tyler, 105 U. S. 244, 246, 26 L. ed. 985, 986; United States v. Mills, 197 U. S. 223, 49 L. ed. 732, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 434.

In enacting the new pay statute of 1908, Congress has employed the same words which were construed by this court in the Tyler Case, approved and followed in the Mills Case. As a matter of course, they must receive the same construction.

25 Ops. Atty. Gen. 309; Sewing Mach. Cos. Case (Grover & B. Sewing Mach. Co. v. Florence Sewing Mach. Co.) 18 Wall. 553, 584, 21 L. ed. 914, 921; The Abbotsford, 98 U. S. 440, 444, 25 L. ed. 168, 169.

Messrs. George A. King and William B. King also filed a separate brief for appellant:

There is no room for inference or construction when the same expression is repeated in a subsequent statute.

Dewey v. United States, 178 U. S. 510, 521, 44 L. ed. 1170, 1174, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 981; United States v. Bowen, 100 U. S. 508, 25 L. ed. 631, affirming 14 Ct. Cl. 162;

United States v. Goldenberg, 168 U. S. 95, 42 L. ed. 394, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 3; Sewing Mach. Cos. Case (Grover & B. Sewing Mach. Co. v. Florence Sewing Mach. Co.) 18 Wall. 553, 584, 21 L. ed. 914, 921.

Both reports and debates in Congress are either so inapplicable or so conflicting as to throw no light on the question.

Bates Refrigerating Co. v. Sulzberger, 157 U. S. 1, 41, 42, 39 L. ed. 601, 612, 613, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 508; United States v. Union P. R. Co. 91 U. S. 72, 79, 23 L. ed. 224, 228; United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Asso. 166 U. S. 290, 318, 319, 41 L. ed. 1007, 1019, 1020, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 540.

Messrs. Hilary A. Herbert, Benjamin Micou, and Richard P. Whiteley filed a brief for parties interested with appellant:

While the intent of the legislature should be ascertained and determined by the court, it is equally true that in so doing the court should first look to the language used by the legislature, which, if plain, clear, and unambiguous, is the best evidence of legislative intent, and renders it the duty of the court to give effect to this language according to its plain and natural signification. If there be no inconsistency in the language used, no extraneous rules of construction can be resorted to either to extend or limit the plain meaning of the words employed.

Thornley v. United States, 113 U. S. 310, 28 L. ed. 999, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 491; Beall v. Harwood, 2 Harr. & J. 167, 3 Am. Dec. 532; Dwarris, Stat. 144; Denn ex dem. Scott v. Reid, 10 Pet. 524, 9 L. ed. 519; Cearfoss v. State, 42 Md. 403, 1 Am. Crim. Rep. 460; Ohio Nat. Bank v. Berlin, 26 App. D. C. 218; Martin v. Martin & B. Co. 27 App. D. C. 59; Lake County v. Rollins, 130 U. S. 662, 32 L. ed. 1060, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 651; United States v. Goldenberg, 168 U. S. 95, 42 L. ed. 394, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 3; Southern R. Co. v. United States, 222 U. S. 20, ante, 72, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 2.

But one construction has ever been put by the courts upon the words "current yearly pay," and that construction must be given here.

United States v. Tyler, 105 U. S. 244, 26 L. ed. 985; Bowie v. United States, 45 Ct. Cl. 47; United States v. Mills, 197 U. S. 227, 49 L. ed. 734, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 434; Irwin v. United States, 38 Ct. Cl. 102.

Counsel has asked this court to go far beyond what is permissible, where the intention of the legislature, expressed or implied, in a statute, is doubtful, and to seek the intent not from prior and contemporaneous acts, but from expressions of individual members of the legislature and the motives assigned by them for supporting the measure.

Aldridge v. Williams, 3 How. 24, 11 L. ed. 475; United States v. Union P. R. Co. 91 U. S. 72, 23 L. ed. 224.

Where the words of a statute prescribing compensation to a public officer are loose and obscure and admit of two interpretations, they should be construed in favor of the officer.

Sutherland, Stat. Constr. § 419; United States v. Morse, 3 Story, 87, Fed. Cas. No. 15,820.

Mr. Frederick De Courcy Faust argued the cause, and, with Assistant Attorney General Thompson, filed a brief for appellee:

It cannot be assumed from the pay provision of the act of 1898, which contains no words or phrase of anticipation, that Congress intended to prescribe a rule for the future, and thereby to disable itself from increasing the rank and pay of officers in the permanent service, without increasing to the same extent the pay of the limited number of officers thus temporarily employed.

United States v. Thomas, 195 U. S. 418, 421, 49 L. ed. 260, 261, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 102.

The provisions of the Navy personnel act do not apply to an acting assistant surgeon appointed for temporary service in the Navy.

Taylor v. United States, 38 Ct. Cl. 155; Nelson v. United States, 41 Ct. Cl. 162.

The propriety of a reference to the title of an act to assist in determining the intent and meaning of the legislature is sustained by repeated decisions of this court.

Church of the Holy Trinity v. United States, 143 U. S. 462, 36 L. ed. 229, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 511; Price v. Forest, 173 U. S. 427, 43 L. ed. 755, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 434.

The law under which the appellant was appointed had been authoritatively and definitely construed by the court of claims in the case of Taylor v. United States, 38 Ct. Cl. 155, on January 5, 1903, or six months before the appellant accepted his first appointment, and he was, of course, charged not merely with full notice of the scope and effect of that decision, but also with knowledge of the compensation he would be entitled to receive under the law as therein construed.

The authority of the Secretary to issue orders, regulations, and instructions, with the approval of the President, in reference to matters connected with the naval es-establishment, is subject to the condition necessarily implied, that they must be consistent with the statutes which have been enacted by Congress in reference to the Navy. He may, with the approval of the President, establish regulations in execution of, or supplementary to, but not in conflict with, the statutes defining his powers or conferring rights upon others.

United States v. Symonds, 120 U. S. 49, 30 L. ed. 558, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 411.

The personnel act was passed in 1899 for the express purpose of equalizing the pay of naval officers (theretofore generally below that of officers of corresponding rank in the Army) with that of officers of the Army of equal rank, and Congress intended to make the act prospective in its application to future legislation.

United States v. Thomas, 195 U. S. 420, 49 L. ed. 260, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 102.

Mr. Chief Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

This appeal is from a judgment of the court of claims denying the right to recover from the United States an alleged balance of compensation claimed to be due for services rendered as an acting assistant surgeon at the Naval Station, Key West, Florida, from July 1, 1903, to July 1, 1909.

[139]*By an act approved May 4, 1898, 30 Stat. at L. 380, chap. 234, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 990, the president was authorized "to appoint for temporary service twenty-five acting assistant surgeons, who shall have the relative rank and compensation of assistant surgeons." When the act of 1898 was passed, the pay of officers in the naval service was generally regulated by § 1556, Rev. Stat. (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1067), and the pay of an assistant surgeon for shore duty was fixed at $1,400 a year. By § 13 of the naval personnel act of March 3, 1899, 30 Stat. at L. 1007, chap. 413, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1072, it was provided that commissioned officers of the line of the Navy and of the medical and pay corps "shall receive the same pay and allowances, except forage, as are or may be provided by or in pursuance of law, for the officers of corresponding rank in the Army;" and in a proviso it was declared: "That such officers, when on shore, shall receive the allowances, but fifteen per centum less pay than when on sea duty." The effect of this act was to increase the pay of naval officers generally, and therefore to enhance the pay of assistant surgeons.

The act of June 7, 1900, 31 Stat. at L. 697, chap. 859, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 990, raised the rank of assistant surgeons in the Navy by providing that "assistant surgeons shall rank with assistant surgeons in the Army." We say that this act raised the rank of assistant surgeons in the Navy for the following reasons: Prior to that act the rank of assistant surgeon in the Navy, upon entrance into the service, was that of ensign. Rev. Stat. § 1474, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1032. As by Rev. Stat. § 1168, the lowest rank of an assistant surgeon in the Army during the first three years of service was that of a lieutenant of cavalry, the effect of the act of 1900 was therefore to give to assistant surgeons in the Navy a higher rank; that is, to raise them from the rank of ensign to that of lieutenant, junior grade.

On December 29, 1902, the Surgeon General of the Navy published a circular soliciting applications for appointment "as acting assistant surgeons for three years *of service," and in the circular, [140 among other things, it was stated as follows:

"The Secretary of the Navy, in order to meet the exigencies of the service, has authorized the appointment of twenty-five acting assistant surgeons for three years' service, to have the same rank and pay as assistant surgeons in the regular service.

"The pay is as follows:

At sea..... $1,650.00 a year
On shore, with quarters.... 1,402.50 a year
On shore, without quarters. 1,690 50 a year

Plummer applied for appointment, and was commissioned by the President as an acting assistant surgeon in the naval service, to serve for three years from July 1, 1903. After the expiration of the first appointment he was reappointed for another term of three years, and his commission under the first and second appointment stated his rank to be that of lieutenant, junior grade.

During Plummer's second three-year period of service two acts were passed which it is claimed enhanced the compensation of assistant surgeons, viz.: An act approved March 2, 1907, 34 Stat. at L. 1167, chap. 2511, and an act approved May 13, 1908, 35 Stat. at L. 127, 128, chap. 166, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 359. By the act of 1907 assistant surgeons were allowed heat and light for quarters and commutation for the same. By the act of 1908, the pay of a lieutenant, junior grade, the relative rank of an assistant surgeon, was fixed at $2,000.

During the term of both services Plummer was paid not at the rate provided by law for the pay of assistant surgeons at the time his services as acting assistant surgeon were rendered, but at the rate of pay which was fixed for assistant surgeons at the time the act of 1898 was passed. That is to say, despite the change in rank and pay of assistant surgeons in the Navy, brought about by the legislation subsequent to 1898, Plummer was paid *upon the theory that those changes had no effect upon the pay of acting assistant surgeons, and therefore they were entitled only to the sum which was allowed by law (Rev. Stat. § 1556) at the time the appointment of acting assistant surgeons was provided for.

By an express finding of the court below, as to which there is no dispute, if Plummer had been paid at the rate fixed by law for assistant surgeons at the time his services as acting assistant surgeon were rendered, he would have been entitled, irrespective of the question of longevity pay, as to which there is dispute, to $1,814.78 more pay than he received; to $2,007.20 as commutation of quarters, and to $341.88 for heat and light for quarters, under the act of March 2, 1907; in all, $4,213.86. Whether, therefore, an acting assistant surgeon under the legislation to which we have referred was entitled to be paid as his services were performed at the rate then fixed by law as the pay and allowance of an assistant surgeon, and what was the proper basis for the calculation of longevity pay, are the two questions requiring solution.

The court below based its conclusion that the acting assistant surgeon was only entitled to the pay which was allowed assistant surgeons at the time of the passage of the act authorizing the appointment of acting assistant surgeons, and, hence, that acting assistant surgeons got no benefit from subsequent increases of the pay of assistant surgeons, upon two previous decisions to that effect,—James S. Taylor (38 Ct. Cl. 155) and Hugh T. Nelson (41 Ct. Cl. 157).

The reasoning of the court was thus expressed in the Taylor Case:

"In the act of March 3, 1899, we fail to find any express provision applying to officers of the Navy in the temporary service. That was 'An Act to Reorganize and Increase the Efficiency of the Personnel of the Navy and the Marine Corps of the United States,' evidently referring *to the officers of the regular Navy, as it certainly could not be contended that the Congress had in view the reorganization of the officers in the temporary service, or that by that act they intended to incorporate them into the permanent service. On the contrary, it was not until the act of June 7, 1900, that provision was made for continuing them in the service by permanent commissions. Those who received commissions in the permanent service prior to that act did so presumably after a proper examination and approval by the board of naval surgeons designated by the Secretary of the Navy under the act of May 4, 1898."

But conceding the correctness of the premise upon which the reasoning just quoted rests,—that is, the purpose of the naval personnel act to deal with the standard of pay of the regular naval establishment,—we think it is not conclusive or even in any degree persuasive of the question here for decision, which is not what was the purpose of Congress in fixing a standard for the pay of the regular naval establishment, but whether that standard, as fixed, must be resorted to for the purpose of determining the pay of acting assistant surgeons. The solution of that question must primarily be found within the text of the act of 1898, and as that text expressly gives to the acting assistant surgeons whose appointment it provides for the relative rank and compensation allowed by law to assistant surgeons, it must follow that, in the absence of an express provision or a necessary implication to the contrary in the statute fixing the pay of assistant surgeons, such standard became the measure by which the pay of the officers provided for in the act of 1898 was to be ascertained and allowed. In other words, as the act of 1898 provided for a standard by which to determine the rank and pay of the acting assistant surgeons,—that is, the rank and compensation allowed assistant surgeons,—in the nature of things it provided not for the application *of a nonexisting[143 or obsolete standard, but for an existing standard,—that is, the rank and pay in force at the time when the services of the acting assistant surgeons were rendered. Looked at from a broader point of view,—that is, testing the subject from a consideration of the obvious intent and purpose of the act of 1898,—the same conclusion becomes necessary. It may not be doubted that the relation which the act of 1898 established between the rank and pay of acting assistant surgeons and assistant surgeons in reason must rest upon the substantial identity of the services to be rendered by the incumbents of both offices. This being true, it of course necessarily also is true that a mere increase of the compensation of assistant surgeons without any change between the duties of those officers and the duties of acting assistant surgeons cannot justify the implication, unless there was a clear manifestation of the purpose to do so, that it was the intention of Congress to create an inequality of compensation while leaving unmodified equality of rank and duty.

That the view which we take of the act of 1898 was also the contemporaneous administrative construction given to the act plainly results from the circular of the Surgeon General under which Plummer was appointed, since the pay stated in that circular was not that fixed in § 1556, Rev. Stat., but was the sum fixed as the pay of assistant surgeons in the Navy at the time the circular was issued. Indeed, that such also must have been the view entertained by the President when Plummer was commissioned obviously is shown by the fact that Plummer was commissioned as a lieutenant, junior grade, the rank of an assistant surgeon at the time of his appointment, and not as an ensign, the rank accorded to assistant surgeons at the time when the act of 1898 was adopted.

The controversy as to the sum of longevity pay arises from a portion of the text of the act of May 13, 1908, 35 Stat. at L. 128, chap. 166, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1909, p. 359, reading as follows:

144] "There shall be allowed and paid to each commissioned officer below the rank of rear admiral ten per centum of his current yearly pay for each term of five years' service in the Army, Navy, and marine corps. The total amount of such increase for length of service shall in no case exceed forty per centum on the yearly pay of the grade as provided by law."

It is insisted that as the words "current yearly pay," as employed in Rev. Stat. § 1262, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 896, were construed in United States v. Tyler, 105 U. S. 244, 26 L. ed. 985, to require that the calculation of the longevity pay should be made not upon the sum of the base pay, but on the base pay and previous increases thereof, that the same rule must be applied to the words as used in the provision of the statute above quoted. But, subsequent to the Tyler Case, by the act of June 30, 1882, 22 Stat. at L. 118, chap. 254, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 896, Congress expressly directed that the 10 per cent longevity increase provided for in § 1262, Rev. Stat., should be "computed on the yearly pay of the grade" That this act was passed for the express purpose of commanding a method of computation which would render inapplicable the construction adopted in the Tyler Case is not open to controversy. United States v. Miller, 208 U. S. 32, 38, 52 L. ed. 376, 379, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 199. Indeed, that from the date of the act of 1882 down to the present time the longevity pay of Army officers has been computed by the method directed by the act of 1882 is not controverted. In view of the purpose of Congress to equalize as far as possible the pay of Army and Navy officers, manifested by the adoption of the navy personnel act of 1899, and in all subsequent legislation as to such pay, we think it plainly results that the provision relied upon must be held to have been adopted with reference to the settled rule prevailing for so many years,—a rule consequent upon the act of 1882. In other words, we think it may not be doubted that the intention of Congress in the provision relied upon was that the longevity pay therein prescribed should be computed "according to the methods then prevailing, and which had resulted from the enactment of the statute of 1882."

Judgment reversed and cause remanded, with a direction to enter judgment in favor of claimant for $4,213.86.

J. W. CALNAN COMPANY, Appt.,

v.

HENRY A. DOHERTY et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 145-147.)

Appeal — from circuit court of appeals —bankruptcy case.

1. A decision of a circuit court of appeals which affirmed a ruling of the bankruptcy court, made in the course of the determination of an issue as to the alleged bankruptcy, upon a subordinate issue as to whether or not the petitioning creditors held "provable" claims, is not a final decision allowing or rejecting a claim within the meaning of the provisions of the bankrupt act of July 1, 1898 (30 Stat. at L. 553, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3432), § 25 b, governing appeals to the Federal Supreme Court.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 804, 805, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — from circuit court of appeals —bankruptcy case.

2. The right to a review in the Federal Supreme Court of a decision of a circuit court of appeals which affirmed the ruling of the bankruptcy court, made in the course of the determination of an issue as to the alleged bankruptcy, upon a subordinate issue as to whether or not the petitioning creditors held "provable" claims, must be found in the bankrupt act, and no such right is given by the provisions of the act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. at L. 828, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 549), § 6, governing the general appellate jurisdiction of the Federal Supreme Court over the circuit courts of appeals.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 804, 805, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 212.]

NOTE.—On the appellate jurisdiction of the Federal Supreme Court over circuit courts of appeals—see note to Bagley v. General Fire Extinguisher Co. 53 L. ed. U. S. 605.

On appeal and review in bankruptcy proceedings—see note to Re Eggert, 43 C. C. A. 9.

Argued March 14, 1912. Decided April 1, 1912.

A PPEAL from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the First Circuit to review a decree which affirmed a ruling of the District Court for the District of Massachusetts, that the petitioning creditors in a bankruptcy proceeding held provable claims. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

See same case below, 98 C. C. A. 130, 174 Fed. 222.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Clarence F. Eldredge argued the cause and filed a brief for appellant.

The court declined to hear Messrs. John H. Blanchard and Hugh C. Blanchard for appellees.

146] *Memorandum opinion by direction of the court. By Mr. Chief Justice White: Involuntary proceedings in bankruptcy were commenced against the J. W. Calnan Company, appellant here, in the district court of the United States for the district of Massachusetts, by a creditor, owning claims aggregating $713.86. After the filing of an answer by the alleged bankrupt, two creditors—one owning a judgment for $1,038.71 and the other asserting a claim of $963.75—intervened and joined in the petition.

The Calnan Company was adjudicated a bankrupt on May 13, 1909. Eight days afterwards an appeal was prayed for and allowed from that decision. In the assignment of errors, in addition to alleging that the court erred in adjudicating it a bankrupt, the Calnan Company alleged that the court erred in finding that the alleged creditors owning claims for $713.86 and $963.75, respectively, were creditors holding valid provable claims against it. In many forms of statement it was also alleged that the court erred in finding that the company had made an unlawful preferential payment to a creditor. The circuit court of appeals affirmed the judgment. 98 C. C. A. 130, 174 Fed. 222. Within thirty days after the denial of a petition for a rehearing this appeal was taken.

Section 25b and subparagraph 1 of the bankruptcy act [30 Stat. at L. 553, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3432] are mainly relied upon by counsel for the appellant as conferring jurisdiction upon this court to review the judgment of the court of appeals. The clauses referred to authorize an appeal to this court in bankruptcy proceedings from any final decision of a court of appeals allowing or rejecting a claim "where the amount in controversy exceeds the sum of two thousand dollars and the question involved is one which might have been taken on appeal or writ of error from the highest court of a state" to this court. The contention, however, is untenable. By § 25 (a) of *the bankruptcy [147 act appeals in bankruptcy proceedings are authorized to the circuit courts of appeals in three specified cases, two being: "(1) From a judgment adjudging or refusing to adjudge the defendant a bankrupt;" and, "(3) from a judgment allowing or rejecting a debt or claim of $500 or over." It is manifest that the ruling made in the course of the determination of an issue as to alleged bankruptcy upon a subordinate issue as to whether or not the petitioning creditors held "provable" claims is not a judgment allowing or rejecting a debt or claim within the meaning of the section, and it is also evident that a decision by the court of appeals upon such a ruling is not a "final decision . . . allowing or rejecting a claim under this act," within the meaning of § 25b. See, in this connection, Duryea Power Co. v. Sternbergh, 218 U. S. 299, 300, 54 L. ed. 1047, 1048, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 25. Aside, however, from these considerations, the prerequisites for an appeal to this court, specified in subparagraph 1 of § 25 (b) do not exist, nor could the appeal be entertained, inasmuch as the court of appeals did not make the findings of fact and conclusions of law required by clause 3 of general order 36. Chapman v. Bowen, 207 U. S. 89, 90, 52 L. ed. 116, 117, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 32.

The further contention that jurisdiction may be exercised by virtue of § 6 of the judiciary act of March 3, 1891 [26 Stat. at L. 828, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 549], is shown to be without merit by our recent decision in Tefft v. Munsuri, 222 U. S. 114, ante, 118, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 67.

Appeal dismissed.

*CONSUMERS' COMPANY, Limit-[148
ed, Plff. in Err.,
v.

ALBERT L. HATCH.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 148-152.)

Constitutional law — impairing contract obligation — judicial decision.

1. The obligations of the charter of a water company are not unconstitutionally impaired by construing the charter in the light of the statute law and the decisions of the courts at the time the charter was granted, as requiring the company to bear the cost of making service connections.

NOTE.—As to what constitutes due process of law—see notes to People v. O'Brien, 2 L.R.A. 255; Kuntz v. Sumption, 2 L.R.A. 655; Re Gannon, 5 L.R.A. 359; Ulman v.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 1295-1307, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — due process of law — confiscation.

2. Requiring a water company, upon the theory of an implied contract, to bear the cost of making the service connections which it was its duty, under its charter, to make, does not amount to confiscation and the consequent taking of the company's property without due process of law.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 458-479, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — impairing contract obligations — corporate charter.

3. A clause in the charter of a water company that it shall not be required to extend its distributing system in any ungraded street is not unconstitutionally impaired by requiring the company to make service connections to residents of such a street at its own expense, where it has voluntarily laid its mains in the street, and is supplying water therefrom.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 1435-1439, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 184.]

Argued and submitted March 4, 1912. Decided April 1, 1912.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Idaho to review a judgment requiring a water company to make service connections to consumers at its own expense. Affirmed.

See same case below, 17 Idaho, 204, — L.R.A. (N.S.) —, 104 Pac. 670.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Myron A. Folsom argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Edward S. Elder and Robert H. Elder, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

There is no foundation in law for the conclusion that the Consumers Company is compelled to lay service pipes and make service connections at its own expense for Hatch, and a reasonable regulation requiring all applicants for water to pay for the service connection and for the service pipes is proper.

McClougherty v. Bluefield Waterworks & Improv. Co. 67 W. Va. 285, 32 L.R.A. (N.S.) 229, 68 S. E. 28; Dill. Mun. Corp. § 56; Vinton-Roanoke Water Co. v. Roanoke, 110 Va. 661, 66 S. E. 835; Gleason v.

Baltimore, 11 L.R.A. 224; Gilman v. Tucker, 13 L.R.A. 304; Pearson v. Yewdall, 24 L. ed. U. S. 436; and Wilson v. North Carolina, 42 L. ed. U. S. 865.

As to what laws are void as impairing obligation of contracts—see notes to Franklin County Grammar School v. Bailey, 10 L.R.A. 405; Fletcher v. Peck, 3 L. ed. U. S. 162; McCanna & F. Co. v. Citizens' Trust & Surety Co. 24 C. C. A. 20; and Montana

Waukesha County, 103 Wis. 225, 79 N. W. 249; Allentown v. Henry, 73 Pa. 404; Allen v. Drew, 44 Vt. 174; State ex rel. Foley v. Hillyard Water Co. 49 Wash. 232, 94 Pac. 1080; Jonas v. Cincinnati, 18 Ohio, 318; Creighton v. Scott, 14 Ohio St. 438; Ex parte Goodrich, 160 Cal. 410, 117 Pac. 451.

A right can no more be taken away by subsequent judicial decision than by subsequent legislation.

Butz v. Muscatine, 8 Wall. 575, 19 L. ed. 490.

To compel the water company to make private connections with its mains and laterals at its own expense is clearly a confiscation of its property.

Missouri P. R. Co. v. Nebraska, 164 U. S. 403, 41 L. ed. 489, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 130; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 226, 41 L. ed. 979, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Nebraska, 217 U. S. 205, 54 L. ed. 730, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 461, 18 Ann. Cas. 989.

Mr. Eugene V. Boughton submitted the cause for defendant in error. Mr. Frank W. Reed was on the brief:

Plaintiff in error is not being deprived of its property without due process of law. Simon v. Craft, 182 U. S. 427, 45 L. ed. 1165, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 836.

The constitutional provision regarding the impairment of any alleged contract refers to state legislation or to an enactment of a legislative character, though by a municipal corporation, made subsequent to the contract, and which impairs its obligation.

New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Louisiana, 185 U. S. 336, 46 L. ed. 937, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 691; New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Louisiana Sugar Ref. Co. 125 U. S. 18, 31 L. ed. 607, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 741; St. Paul Gaslight Co. v. St. Paul, 181 U. S. 142, 45 L. ed. 788, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 575.

This court does not obtain jurisdiction to review a judgment of a state court because that judgment impairs or fails to give effect to a contract. The state court must give effect to some subsequent statute or state Constitution which impairs the obligation of the contract, and the judgment of that court must rest on the statute, either expressly or by necessary implication.

New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Louisi-

Ore-Purchasing Co. v. Boston & M. Consol. Copper & S. Min. Co. 35 C. C. A. 12.

As to change of decision of state court as impairing obligation of contract—see notes to Los Angeles v. Los Angeles City Water Co. 44 L. ed. U. S. 886; Mitchell v. Burlington, 18 L. ed. U. S. 351; Allen v. Allen, 16 L.R.A. 646; Swanson v. Ottumwa, 5 L.R.A. (N.S.) 860; and Crigler v. Shepherd, 23 L.R.A. (N.S.) 500.

ana, 185 U. S. 336, 46 L. ed. 937, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 691; Mississippi & M. R. Co. v. Rock, 4 Wall. 177, 18 L. ed. 381; Mississippi & M. R. Co. v. McClure, 10 Wall. 511, 19 L. ed. 997; Knox v. Exchange Bank, 12 Wall. 379, 20 L. ed. 414; Lehigh Water Co. v. Easton, 121 U. S. 388, 30 L. ed. 1059, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 916.

149] *Mr. Chief Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

Omitting reference to matters not pertinent to the alleged Federal questions relied upon, the facts are these: Although it was optional with it to do so, the plaintiff in error, a water supply corporation, operating under a franchise granted in 1903, laid a water main in Third street, an ungraded street within the corporate limits of the then village—now city—of Cœur d'Alene, Idaho. While the company was supplying residents on the street with water for domestic use, upon payment of the regular monthly rates established by the water commission provided for by the statutes of Idaho, Albert L. Hatch, defendant in error, erected a dwelling upon a lot situated on the street, and laid a water pipe to the curb in front of his property. He then applied to the water company to connect the pipe at the curb line with its service main, so that a regular supply of water might be obtained. The water company, however, declined to make the desired connection because of the refusal to Hatch to pay, as required by the regulations of the company, $8.50, the cost of making the connection, or to comply with alternative regulations adopted for the purpose of enabling the water company to recover such cost. This action in mandamus was then commenced in the supreme court of Idaho, and culminated in a judgment in substance finding the regulations requiring a consumer to pay for service connections unreasonable, and ordering the water company to make the connection at its own cost, and to supply water to the premises of Hatch upon payment of the established monthly rate. 17 Idaho, 204, — L.R.A. (N.S.) —, 104 Pac. 670. This writ of error was then prosecuted upon the assumption that rights of the water company, protected by the Constitution of the United States, had been wrongfully invaded.

The grounds for the claim in question 150] are in substance *that, as the water company was not required by its charter in express terms to make a service connection, and the benefits of such connection would inure solely to the house owner, to compel the water company to bear the cost of the connection would amount to a confiscation of its property, in violation of the 56 L. ed.

due-process clause of the 14th Amendment, and also would be to impair the obligation of its contract. A further claim of impairment of contract is based upon the contention that, as it was optional with the water company, under its franchise, to lay mains in ungraded streets, there was no duty to supply water from a main voluntarily placed in an ungraded street.

The contentions are devoid of merit. The charter of the company was construed by the court below in connection with the statutes in force at the time of the grant of the franchise, in the light of the construction given to those statutes in decisions made prior to such grant. We excerpt in the margin† a passage from the opinion in one of those cases.

*By thus interpreting the charter by[151 applying the settled meaning of the statutes which had been announced at the time the charter was granted to the water company, the court held that it was the duty of the company, under its charter, to make the service connections for Hatch at its own cost. This was based upon the view that, as it was clearly settled by both the statute law and decisions at the time the charter was granted that it was the duty of

†In Pocatello Water Co. v. Standley (1900) 7 Idaho, 155, 61 Pac. 518, considering obligations of a water supply company, and construing § 2712 of 1887 Revised Statutes of Idaho, substantially re-enacted in Revised Code of Idaho 1910, as § 2840, the supreme court of Idaho said:

"Under the said franchise the respondent has been granted the right to lay its mains and pipes 'over, along, and under' the streets, alleys, and highways of said city, for the purpose of supplying said city and its inhabitants with a sufficiency of pure water. It had the authority to lay all of the mains and pipes in said streets and alleys necessary to accomplish the purposes for which said franchise was granted. It is obliged to lay its mains and pipes in said streets and alleys, and deliver water to the consumers at its franchise limits, and to the line of the premises of the consumer, if such premises border on said franchise limits. The respondent has been granted a valuable right,—that of laying its mains and laterals in the streets and alleys of the city,—in consideration that it will furnish water to said city and its inhabitants. The company is under obligation to lay its pipes in the streets and alleys so as to make the water accessible to the citizen for his private use. It is given the right, within its franchise limits, to lay all pipes and make all connections with its mains and laterals. . . . Neither has the citizen any right to enter within the franchise limits of the company and in any manner interfere with its mains and pipes."

the water company to make service connections, and its further duty being to supply water to consumers, by necessary implication the charter imposed the obligation to pay the cost of the service connection which it was incumbent upon the company to make.

That the construction thus placed upon the charter by the court below, in the light of the state of the law at the time of its adoption, did not amount to an impairment of the obligations of the charter by subsequent legislation, is, we think, too clear for anything but statement. That the mere fact of holding that an obligation would be implied to pay for the doing of work to enable the corporation to perform a duty, when the duty to do such work was clearly the result of the state law and decisions thereon at the time the charter was granted, did not amount to confiscation, and the consequent taking of the property of the corporation without due process of law, in violation of the 14th Amendment, is also, we think, so obvious as not to necessitate further consideration of the proposition.

As respects the claim based upon the clause of the charter which provided that the water company should not be "required" to extend its distributing system in any ungraded street or alley within the then village (now city) of Cœur d'Alene, even 152] if it were possible to indulge in *the hypothesis that there was subsequent legislation, we think there is nothing supporting the claim of impairment of contract, because the supreme court of Idaho was clearly right in deciding that no contract provision was impaired, since the water company had voluntarily laid its main in the ungraded street in question, and was supplying water from such main to residents on the street, and its duty was to supply water "without distinction of persons."

Affirmed.

GUARANTEE TITLE & TRUST COMPANY, Trustee in Bankruptcy of Pittsburgh Industrial Iron Works, Bankrupt, Appt.,

v.

TITLE GUARANTY & SURETY COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 152-160.)

Statutes — applicability to sovereign — bankruptcy act.

1. The United States as a sovereign is not bound by the general language of a statute, and is therefore not bound by the provisions of a bankruptcy law unless specifically mentioned therein.

[For other cases, see Statutes, II. a, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Bankruptcy — priorities — labor claims — debts due United States.

2. The priority over claims for labor against a bankrupt estate which the United States possessed under U. S. Rev. Stat. § 3466, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2314, providing that in case of insolvency debts due to the United States shall be first satisfied, and the "like priority" which, under § 3468, was given to a surety which had paid to the United States the money due on the bankrupt's bond, no longer exist since the enactment of the bankrupt act of July 1, 1898 (30 Stat. at L. 544, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3418), § 64, which declares that, with the exception of "taxes legally due and owing by the bankrupt to the United States, state, county, district, or municipality," claims for labor shall be preferred over "debts owing to any person who, by the laws of the states or the United States, is entitled to priority."

[For other cases, see Bankruptcy, X. c. 3; United States, V., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 188.]

Argued March 5, 1912. Decided April 1, 1912.

A PPEAL from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit to review a decree which, reversing a decree of the District Court for the Western District of Pennsylvania, sustained the claim of a surety who had paid the United States the money due on a bankrupt's bond, to be preferred over claims for labor. Reversed.

See same case below, 98 C. C. A. 603, 174 Fed. 385.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. R. T. M. McCready argued the cause and filed a brief for appellant:

The sovereign power is included by the general language of a statute where it appears by necessary implication, or is clear from the nature of the mischiefs to be redressed, or the language used, that the government itself was in the contemplation of the legislature.

United States v. Hoar, 2 Mason, 311, Fed. Cas. No. 15,373.

An intention to bind the United States may be inferred without an affirmative declaration that it shall be bound.

United States v. Herron, 20 Wall. 251, 22 L. ed. 275; Fink v. O'Neil, 106 U. S. 272, 27 L. ed. 196, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 325.

NOTE.—On priority of state or United States in payment from assets of a debtor—see notes to State v. Foster, 29 L.R.A.

227; Prince v. Bartlett, 3 L. ed. U. S. 614; and Field v. United States, 9 L. ed. U. S. 94.

The rule that presumably the law is for subjects only fails whenever an intention to embrace the government reasonably appears.

Magdalen College Case, 17 Coke, 66 b.

Out of considerations of public policy, the United States is bound by the general terms of an exemption law that does not extend to the United States in express terms.

Fink v. O'Neil, supra.

The purpose of the law in giving priority to wages is so manifest as to require and receive little discussion.

Heckman v. Tammen, 184 Ill. 144, 56 N. E. 361; Re McDavid Lumber Co. 27 Am. Bankr. Rep. 39.

Even where the consequences of an adverse construction would have been less disastrous and far-reaching, both this court and the courts of England have found little difficulty, in proper cases, in avoiding the rule that, generally speaking, the sovereign is not bound by a statute unless particularly mentioned therein.

Green v. United States, 9 Wall. 655, 19 L. ed. 806; Cook County Nat. Bank v. United States, 107 U. S. 445, 27 L. ed. 537, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 561; United States v. State Bank, 6 Pet. 29, 8 L. ed. 308.

Section 3466 of the United States Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2314) was enacted to operate only when insolvency or bankruptcy has been judicially declared.

United States v. Hooe, 3 Cranch, 73, 2 L. ed. 370.

Where there are two acts on the same subject the rule is to give effect to both, if possible; but if the two are repugnant in any of their provisions, the latter act, without any repealing clause, operates to the extent of the repugnancy as a repeal of the first.

United States v. Tynen, 11 Wall. 88, 20 L. ed. 153.

In the application of the rule in question, there is a plain distinction between cases of sovereign prerogative and cases where the sovereign power seeks to maintain some position of profit or advantage, conferred upon it by statute, and not essentially an attribute of sovereignty.

United States v. Fisher, 2 Cranch, 358, 2 L. ed. 304.

Pro tanto, the bankruptcy act is in pari materia with the provision of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 3466, relating to payment of claims of the United States against bankrupt estates.

Ibid.

In Mott v. Maris, 2 Wash. C. C. 196, Fed. Cas. No. 9,880, the circuit court allowed the priority of a surety, under the 56 L. ed.

act of 1799, in view of the bankrupt law of 1800, only on the theory that the 62d section of the latter law expressly saved the debt itself from the operation of the law.

Mr. George J. Shaffer argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Walter Lyon and John P. Hunter, filed a brief for appellee:

Neither the United States nor any other sovereign is included by the general language of any statute, and is not bound by the provisions of any insolvent law, unless specifically mentioned therein.

Dollar Sav. Bank v. United States, 19 Wall. 239, 22 L. ed. 82; United States v. Herron, 20 Wall. 251, 260, 22 L. ed. 275, 278; Lewis v. United States, 92 U. S. 618, 23 L. ed. 513.

The right of the United States to priority under the act of 1799 is still in force and unaffected by the bankruptcy act of 1898.

Collier, Bankr. 1899 ed. p. 367, § 64, note; Collier, Bankr. 7th ed. p. 728; 29 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 155; Brandenburg, Bankr. 3d ed. §§ 1011-1013; Remington, Bankr. § 2190; Re Stoeber, 127 Fed. 394; United States v. Barnes, 31 Fed. 705.

It is not to be inferred that Congress, in revising and consolidating the statutes, intended to change their effect, unless an intention to do so is clearly expressed.

Logan v. United States, 144 U. S. 302, 36 L. ed. 442, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 617; United States v. Ryder, 110 U. S. 729, 28 L. ed. 308; 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 196; United Shoe Machinery Co. v. Duplessis Independent Shoe Machinery Co. 133 Fed. 933.

The appellant is in grave error in contending that § 64b, el. 5, of the bankruptcy act, is in pari materia with U. S. Rev. Stat. §§ 3466 and 3468, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 2314, 2315.

4 Words & Phrases, 3478; Re Stoeber, 127 Fed. 394.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

This case involves the consideration of the priority of payment out of the estate of a bankrupt of claims due the United States and claims for labor.

The United States is not a party to the action, but appellee brings itself into relation with them as subrogated to their rights by the payment of a judgment obtained against it as surety on a bond for the bankrupt. We shall assume that appellee may assert whatever priority the United States possessed.

After the payment of the judgment, appellee petitioned the district court having jurisdiction of the bankruptcy proceedings for an order directing the trustee in bankruptcy to pay it the amount of the judgment before making any other distribution of the funds of the bankrupt. The referee in bankruptcy decided against the [154]priority, *and also decided that the claim had not been presented in time for allowance. Upon petition for review, and the questions having been certified to the district court, the report of the referee was confirmed. This action was reversed by the court of appeals, and the appellee awarded priority.

The priority of the United States is established, it is contended, by §§ 3466, 3467, and 3468 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 2314, 2315) which are, respectively, as follows:

Section 3466. "Whenever any person indebted to the United States is insolvent, or whenever the estate of any deceased debtor in the hands of the executors or administrators is insufficient to pay all the debts due from the deceased, the debts due to the United States shall be first satisfied; and the priority hereby established shall extend as well to cases in which a debtor, not having sufficient property to pay all his debts, makes a voluntary assignment thereof, or in which the estate and effects of an absconding, concealed, or absent debtor are attached by process of law, as to cases in which an act of bankruptcy is committed."

Section 3467. "Every executor, administrator, or assignee, or other person, who pays any debt due by the person or estate from whom or for which he acts, before he satisfies and pays the debts due to the United States from such person or estate, shall become answerable in his own person and estate for the debts so due to the United States or for so much thereof as may remain due and unpaid."

Section 3468. "Whenever the principal in any bond given to the United States is insolvent, or whenever such principal, being deceased, his estate and effects which come to the hands of his executor, administrator, or assignee, are insufficient for the payment of his debts, and in either of such cases, any surety on the bond, or the executor, administrator, or assignee of such [155]surety, pays *to the United States the money due upon such bond, such surety, his executor, administrator, or assignee, shall have the like priority for the recovery and receipt of the moneys out of the estate and effects of such insolvent or deceased principal as is secured to the United States; and may bring and maintain a suit upon the bond in law or in equity, in his own name, for the recovery of all moneys paid thereon."

The counter contention of appellant is that those sections have been superseded by the provisions of the bankruptcy act of 1898 [30 Stat. at L. 544, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3418], which declare a different policy and give priority to labor claims. Those provisions we shall presently quote and consider.

The comprehensive objection is made to the applicability of the provisions that the United States, as a sovereign, is not bound by the general language of a statute, and is not bound by the provision of an insolvency law, unless specifically mentioned therein. This objection prevailed in the circuit court of appeals, and is said to be sustained by Dollar Sav. Bank v. United States, 19 Wall. 239, 22 L. ed. 82; United States v. Herron, 20 Wall. 251, 260, 22 L. ed. 275, 278; Lewis v. United States, 92 U. S. 618, 23 L. ed. 513.

The proposition is established. The first case cited gives an illustration of it not connected with bankruptcy laws. In the other two cases it was applied to such laws.

United States v. Herron was an action brought on a bond executed by one Collins as principal and Herron and others as sureties. Herron pleaded a discharge in bankruptcy under the act of 1867. [14 Stat. at L. 517, chap. 176.] The question was therefore presented whether a discharge under the act barred a debt due to the United States. It was held that such a discharge was not a bar, although it was also held that the United States might have proved its debt and been given priority by the act.

The decision was expressly put upon the ground "that *the sovereign authority [156 of the country is not bound by the words of a statute unless named therein, if the statute tends to restrain or diminish the powers, rights, or interests of the sovereign." There was much reasoning to sustain the proposition, and it was especially applied to discharges in bankruptcy. Expressing the general assent to the proposition announced, the court said:

"Greater unanimity of decision in the courts or of views among text writers can hardly be found upon any important question than exists in respect to this question in the parent country, nor is there any diversity of sentiment in our courts, Federal or state, nor among the text writers of this country."

In Lewis v. United States, Lewis had been appointed trustee of the estates of Jay Cooke & Company, and as such received and held their separate individual estates and assets, and the estates and assets of the firm as well. The estates of the bankrupts were insufficient to pay all their indebtedness. The United States claimed priority of payment of its debt out of the individual estates as against the creditors of the firm. Lewis denied the validity of the demand, but it was sustained.

As one of the elements in its decision the court considered the provision of the act of 1867 (§ 5101 of the Revised Statutes), that in the order for a dividend "all debts due to the United States, and all taxes and assessments under the laws thereof," should be "entitled to priority and preference." The court also considered as an element of its decision the act of March 3, 1797 (1 Stat. at L. 515, chap. 20, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2314), which provided as follows:

"That where any revenue officer or other person hereafter becoming indebted to the United States, by bond or otherwise, shall become insolvent, or where the estate of any deceased debtor in the hands of executors or administrators shall be insufficient to pay all the debts due from the deceased, the debt due to the United States [157]*shall be first satisfied, and the priority hereby established shall be deemed to extend as well to cases in which a debtor, not having sufficient property to pay all his debts, shall make a voluntary assignment thereof, or in which the estate and effects of an absconding, concealed, or absent debtor shall be attached by process of law, as to cases in which an act of legal bankruptcy shall be committed."

The court decided that it was "almost too clear to admit of serious controversy" that under this act and the facts in the case the United States was entitled to the priority which they claimed, and passed to the contention against it based on the provisions of the bankruptcy act.

The court met the contention by the general declaration that "the United States are in no wise bound by the bankruptcy act." The disposing effect of the declaration was appreciated, for it was said, "that the claim of the United States was not proved in the bankruptcy proceedings in question was therefore quite immaterial." Citing United States v. Herron, 20 Wall. 251, 260, 22 L. ed. 275, 278, and Harrison v. Sterry, 5 Cranch, 289, 3 L. ed. 104.

The court, however, did consider the provisions of the bankruptcy act, and said of the clause which it had quoted that it was "in pari materia with the several acts giving priority of payment to the United States, and was doubtless put in to recognize and reaffirm the rights which those statutes give, and to exclude the possibility of a different conclusion." And, emphasizing the priority of the United States, it was pointed out (p. 623) that the bankruptcy law declared that the United States should be first paid, and that the act of 1867 gave the debts of the United States priority. "Neither statute," the court said, "contains any qualification, and we can interpolate none." The inference from the language of the court, it must be admitted, is quite strong, and the court of appeals considered that "in the light thereof the *omission in the act of 1898 of [158 words expressly giving priority to debts due to the United States had no more significance than the presence of such words in the act of 1867,"—that is, as we understand the reasoning, that § 3466 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2314), which is a reproduction of the statute of 1797, with immaterial changes, was all-sufficient to give priority, and that the rights it gave were only recognized and reaffirmed by the provisions for priority in the bankruptcy act of 1898. But, as we have seen, the decision in Lewis v. United States declared that the statute of 1797 and the bankruptcy act were to be regarded as in pari materia, and both were unqualified; or, as the court said, as neither contained any qualification, none could be interpolated. They being affirmations of each other, either would have been sufficient without the other. The bankruptcy act of 1867, as we have seen, provided for priority, first, for the payment of expenses, and, second, of "all debts due to the United States, and all taxes and assessments under the laws thereof." The priority, therefore, given by the bankruptcy act, was coextensive with the priority given by the statute of 1797. In other words, to repeat, there was a reaffirmation by the bankruptcy act of the statute of 1797. But there is not such affirmation by the bankruptcy act of 1898 of that statute, which still exists, as we have said, as § 3466 of the Revised Statutes, supra. There is a change in provisions, and we come to the question if there is a change of purpose. A consideration of those provisions becomes necessary. We shall quote those only which affect the United States. They are as follows: "Section 1. . . . (9) 'Creditor' shall include anyone who owns a demand provable in bankruptcy." (Sec. 17.) A discharge in bankruptcy releases the bankrupt from all of his provable debts except such as are due as a tax levied by the United States. (Sec. 57-J.) Debts owing to the United States as a penalty or forfeiture shall not be allowed except for the *amount of the pecun-[159 iary loss sustained by the act, transaction, or proceeding out of which the penalty arose.
56 L. ed.

Priority is provided for in § 64 as follows: (3) The court shall order the trustee to pay all taxes legally due the United States. (b) Debts to have priority, except as herein provided, are to be paid in full, . . . and the order of payment shall be: (4) wages due to workmen, clerks, or servants, which have been earned within three months before the date of the commencement of the proceedings; and (5) debts owing to any person who, by the laws of the states or the United States, is entitled to priority.

With these provisions we may compare §§ 5091 and 5101 of the Revised Statutes, which are reproductions of the act of 1867. Section 5091 provided that creditors whose debts were duly proved and allowed should be entitled to share pro rata without any priority or preference except as allowed in § 5101. The latter section (5101) provided as follows:

"In the order for a dividend, the following claims shall be entitled to priority, and to be first paid in full in the following order:

" . . . Second. All debts due to the United States, and all taxes and assessments under the laws thereof. . . . Fourth. Wages due to any operative clerk, or house servant, to an amount not exceeding fifty dollars, for labor performed within six months next preceding the first publication of the notice of proceedings in bankruptcy. Fifth. All debts due to any person who, by the laws of the United States, are, or may be, entitled to a priority, in like manner as if the provisions of this title had not been adopted. . . ."

It will be seen, therefore, that by the statute of 1797 (now § 3466) and § 5101 of the Revised Statutes, all debts due to the United States were expressly given priority to the wages due any operative, 160] clerk, or house servant. A *different order is prescribed by the act of 1898, and something more. Labor claims are given priority, and it is provided that debts having priority shall be paid in full. The only exception is "taxes legally due and owing by the bankrupt to the United States, state, county, district, or municipality." These were civil obligations, not personal conventions, and preference was given to them; but as to debts, we must assume a change of purpose in the change of order. And we cannot say that it was inadvertent. The act takes into consideration, we think, the whole range of indebtedness of the bankrupt—national, state, and individual—and assigns the order of payment. The policy which dictated it was beneficent and well might induce a postponement of the claims, even of the sovereign, in favor of those who necessarily depended upon their daily labor. And to give such claims priority could in no case seriously affect the sovereign. To deny them priority would in all cases seriously affect the claimants.

Reversed.

WESTERN UNION TELEGRAPH COMPANY, Appt.,

v.

CITY OF RICHMOND.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 160-173.)

Telegraphs — post roads — municipal regulation.

1. The right of a telegraph company accepting the provisions of the act of July 24, 1866 (14 Stat. at L. 221, chap. 230, Rev. Stat. §§ 5263 et seq., U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3579), to construct, maintain, and operate lines over the post roads of the United States, such as the streets of Richmond, Virginia, are, is subject to reasonable municipal regulation.

[For other cases, see Telegraphs, I., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Telegraphs — post roads — municipal regulation.

2. The municipal power to make reasonable regulations respecting the occupancy of the city streets by a telegraph company accepting the provisions of the act of July 24, 1866, giving the right to construct, maintain, and operate lines over the post

NOTE.—On the power of states to control or impose burdens upon interstate telegraph and telephone companies—see note to Postal Telegr. Cable Co. v. Baltimore, 24 L.R.A. 161.

On state law affecting telegraphs as regulation of interstate commerce—see note to Western U. Telegr. Co. v. Commercial Mill. Co. 36 L.R.A. (N.S.) 220.

On the validity of charges on telegraph and telephone poles and wires—see note to Western U. Telegr. Co. v. New Hope, 47 L. ed. U. S. 240.

On the right of telegraph and telephone companies to use the public streets—see note to St. Louis v. Western U. Telegr. Co. 37 L. ed. U. S. 810.

As to what constitutes due process of law—see notes to People v. O'Brien, 2 L.R.A. 255; Kuntz v. Sumption, 2 L.R.A. 655; Re Gannon, 5 L.R.A. 359; Ulman v. Baltimore, 11 L.R.A. 224; Gilman v. Tucker, 13 L.R.A. 304; Pearson v. Yewdall, 24 L. ed. U. S. 436; and Wilson v. North Carolina, 42 L. ed. U. S. 865.

On statutes part valid and part invalid—see notes to Titusville Iron Works v. Keystone Oil Co. 1 L.R.A. 363; and Fayette County v. People's & D. Bank, 10 L.R.A. 196.

roads of the United States, is not exceeded, as granting arbitrary discretion to municipal officers, by an ordinance which leaves to the determination of the city engineer the size, quality, character, number, condition, appearance, and manner of erection of poles and wires, and to the judgment of other officials the safety and suitability of poles, wires, attachments, insulations, etc., and which empowers the committee on streets to require permission to be given to others to place lighting wires upon the poles, where, in the committee's opinion, they will not interfere with the owner's business, and which authorizes such committee to pass upon underground plans, and invests other officials with supervisory powers over the carrying out of such plans, including the laying of conduits and the replacement of pavements.

[For other cases, see Telegraphs, I., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — due process of law — municipal regulation of telegraph companies.

3. The property of a telegraph company accepting the provisions of the act of July 24, 1866, giving the right to construct, maintain, and operate, lines over the post roads of the United States, is not taken without due process of law by a municipal ordinance which demands as a condition of the establishment of poles and conduits in the city streets that positions shall be reserved upon the poles for the city's wires, and that underground conduits shall provide for 30 per cent increase, and shall carry the city's wires free of charge, one duct being reserved for them, and that space be left in the conduits for the wires of third parties, to be used on permission by the city and compensation, and which provides for moving the conduits when necessary, at the company's expense, and imposes a specific money charge for each pole or underground mile of wire.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, IV. b, 7, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — due process of law — municipal charge on poles and wires.

4. An annual municipal charge of $2 per pole, and the same sum for each mile of underground wire, which has been paid for many years without complaint, cannot be said to be so unreasonable as to deny due process of law to a telegraph company occupying the city streets under the authority of the act of July 24, 1866, giving the telegraph companies accepting its provisions the right to construct, maintain, and operate lines over the post roads of the United States.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, IV. b, 7, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Statutes — invalid in part.

5. The possible invalidity under the Federal Constitution of the penalties prescribed by a municipal ordinance for violation of its provisions regulating the occupancy of the city streets by a telegraph company which has accepted the provisions of the act of July 24, 1866, giving the right to construct, maintain, and operate lines over the post roads of the United States, does not defeat the other provisions, where the penalties are separable from the rest of the ordinance.

[For other cases, see Statutes, I. d, 4, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Telegraphs — post roads — municipal regulation.

6. Limiting by municipal ordinance the privilege of a telegraph company as to conduits to fifteen years, and providing that after that time the city may impose such restrictions, conditions, and charges as it sees fit, or may order the conduits removed, cannot be regarded as an attempt to make the telegraph company contract itself out of the benefit of the act of July 24, 1866, under which it has the right to construct, maintain, and operate lines over the post roads of the United States,—especially in view of an amendment to the ordinance, providing that none of its obligations shall interfere with rights under that act.

[For other cases, see Telegraphs, I., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 195.]

Argued March 6 and 7, 1912. Decided April 1, 1912.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Virginia to review a decree dismissing a bill to restrain the enforcement of a municipal ordinance regulating the occupancy of the city streets by a telegraph company. Affirmed.

See same case below, 178 Fed. 310.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Rush Taggart argued the cause, and, with Mr. A. L. Holladay, filed a brief for appellant:

The telegraph company has the right, under the act of Congress, to use every street within the city of Richmond. It is not, therefore, required to contract with the city for such right to use the street, nor is it required to be a suppliant to the city, nor to comply with every condition which the city may see fit to impose. It must pay taxes upon its property within the city the same as other persons or corporations owning property there.

Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Atty. Gen. 125 U. S. 530, 31 L. ed. 790, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 961.

It may be required to pay reasonable compensation for the property occupied by its poles or appliances.

St. Louis v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 148 U. S. 92, 37 L. ed. 380, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485.

It is subject to such necessary provisions respecting its buildings, poles, and wires as the comfort and convenience of the community may require.

Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Pendleton, 122 U. S. 359, 30 L. ed. 1187, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 306, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1126.

It is not, however, exposed to the arbitrary discretion of any officer of the city with respect to the operation of its lines. Neither the city nor the state can prevent it from operating within their limits by any form of legislation whatever.

Pensacola Teleg. Co. v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 96 U. S. 1, 24 L. ed. 708.

The city may not, with respect to any individual or corporation, subject it to the arbitrary discretion of an officer acting without any definite rule laid down for his guidance.

Baltimore v. Radecke, 49 Md. 217, 33 Am. Rep. 239; Anderson v. Wellington, 40 Kan. 173, 2 L.R.A. 110, 10 Am. St. Rep. 175, 19 Pac. 719; State ex rel. Garrabad v. Dering, 84 Wis. 585, 19 L.R.A. 858, 36 Am. St. Rep. 948, 54 N. W. 1104; State Center v. Barenstein, 66 Iowa, 249, 23 N. W. 652; Winthrop v. New England Chocolate Co. 180 Mass. 464, 62 N. E. 969; Barthet v. New Orleans, 24 Fed. 563; Re Frazee, 63 Mich. 396, 6 Am. St. Rep. 310, 30 N. W. 72; Anderson v. Wellington, 40 Kan. 173, 2 L.R.A. 110, 10 Am. St. Rep. 175, 19 Pac. 719; Chicago v. Trotter, 136 Ill. 430, 26 N. E. 359; Cicero Lumber Co. v. Cicero, 176 Ill. 9, 42 L.R.A. 696, 68 Am. St. Rep. 155, 51 N. E. 758; Newton v. Belger, 143 Mass. 598, 10 N. E. 464; State v. Tenant, 110 N. C. 609, 15 L.R.A. 423, 28 Am. St. Rep. 715, 14 S. E. 387; Sioux Falls v. Kirby, 6 S. D. 62, 25 L.R.A. 621, 60 N. W. 156; Boyd v. Frankfort, 117 Ky. 199, 111 Am. St. Rep. 240, 77 S. W. 669; Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356, 371, 30 L. ed. 220, 226, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064; State ex rel. Omaha Gas Co. v. Withnell, 78 Neb. 33, 8 L.R.A. (N.S.) 978, 126 Am. St. Rep. 586, 110 N. W. 680; Robison v. Miner, 68 Mich. 549, 37 N. W. 21; State v. Mahner, 43 La. Ann. 496, 9 So. 480; May v. People, 1 Colo. 157, 27 Pac. 1010; Richmond v. Dudley, 129 Ind. 112, 13 L.R.A. 587, 28 Am. St. Rep. 180, 28 N. E. 312; St. Louis v. Russell, 116 Mo. 248, 20 L.R.A. 721, 22 S. W. 470; Los Angeles County v. Hollywood Cemetery Asso. 124 Cal. 344, 71 Am. St. Rep. 75, 57 Pac. 153; Noel v. People, 187 Ill. 587, 52 L.R.A. 287, 79 Am. St. Rep. 238, 58 N. E. 616; Elkhart v. Murray, 165 Ind. 304, 1 L.R.A. (N.S.) 940, 112 Am. St. Rep. 228, 75 N. E. 593, 6 Ann. Cas. 748; Montgomery v. West, 149 Ala. 311, 9 L.R.A. (N.S.) 659, 123 Am. St. Rep. 33, 42 So. 1000, 13 Ann. Cas. 651.

The ordinance imposes excessive fines and penalties for the failure to obey the arbitrary orders of the city officials in matters concerning which the company has no guide except the direction of these officers.

Ex parte Young, 209 U. S. 123, 52 L. ed. 714, 13 L.R.A. (N.S.) 932, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 441, 14 Ann. Cas. 764; Cotting v. Kansas City Stock Yards Co. (Cotting v. Godard) 183 U. S. 79, 46 L. ed. 92, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30.

The ordinance requires the company to furnish to the city large and extensive facilities for the doing of the city's business without compensation or reward therefor, and such compulsion is not a legitimate exercise of the police power.

2 Dill. Mun. Corp. 5th ed. § 661; State v. Bean, 91 N. C. 554; State, Benson, Prosecutor, v. Hoboken, 33 N. J. L. 280; State ex rel. Wisconsin Teleph. Co. v. Sheboygan, 111 Wis. 23, 86 N. W. 657; State, Mühlenbrinck, Prosecutor, v. Long Branch, 42 N. J. L. 364, 36 Am. Rep. 518; Van Hook v. Selma, 70 Ala. 361, 45 Am. Rep. 85; Ft. Smith v. Ayers, 43 Ark. 82; New Haven v. New Haven Water Co. 44 Conn. 106; Jackson v. Newman, 59 Miss. 385, 42 Am. Rep. 367; Vansant v. Harlem Stage Co. 59 Md. 330; Ottumwa v. Zckind, 95 Iowa, 622, 29 L.R.A. 734, 58 Am. St. Rep. 447, 64 N. W. 646; New York v. Hexamer, 59 App. Div. 4, 69 N. Y. Supp. 198; State v. Glavin, 67 Conn. 29, 34 Atl. 708; Welch v. Hotchkiss, 39 Conn. 143, 12 Am. Rep. 383; New Haven v. New Haven Water Co. 44 Conn. 108; Chaddock v. Day, 75 Mich. 527, 4 L.R.A. 809, 13 Am. St. Rep. 468, 42 N. W. 977.

The ordinance seeks to put limits upon the right of the telegraph company to use the streets, and to require the abandonment of the use of the streets at the demand of the city, while the act of Congress secures to the telegraph company the full and unlimited right to use the streets, subject only to fair and reasonable regulations by the city.

Pensacola Teleg. Co. v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 96 U. S. 1, 24 L. ed. 708; St. Louis v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 148 U. S. 92, 37 L. ed. 380, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485; Leloup v. Mobile, 127 U. S. 640, 32 L. ed. 311, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 134, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1380.

Mr. H. R. Pollard argued the cause and filed a brief for appellee:

The primary control of public streets and roads is with the legislature of the state, with the right, however, to delegate a part or the whole of such control to the several municipalities in which the same are located.

Dill. Mun. Corp. 5th ed. §§ 1128, 1129:

Elliott, Roads & Streets, § 421; St. Louis v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 149 U. S. 465, 37 L. ed. 810, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 990.

The ordinance complained of does impose rules sufficiently definite for the guidance of the appellant in the operation of its business, and does not expose its operations to the discretion of the officers of the city in any unreasonable degree.

Missouri ex rel. Laclede Gaslight Co. v. Murphy, 170 U. S. 78, 42 L. ed. 955, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 505, 130 Mo. 10, 31 L.R.A. 798, 31 S. W. 594; Gundling v. Chicago, 177 U. S. 183, 44 L. ed. 725, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 633; Fischer v. St. Louis, 194 U. S. 361, 372, 48 L. ed. 1018, 1024, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 673; Re Flaherty, 105 Cal. 558, 27 L.R.A. 529, 38 Pac. 981; Re Kollock, 165 U. S. 526, 41 L. ed. 813, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 444; New York ex rel. Lieberman v. Van De Carr, 199 U. S. 552, 50 L. ed. 305, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 144; United States v. Grimaud, 220 U. S. 506, 55 L. ed. 563, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 480; Marshall, Field & Co. v. Clark, 143 U. S. 694, 36 L. ed. 310, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 495.

Where an ordinance is enacted in pursuance of express authority, the courts are powerless to investigate the question of the unreasonableness of the ordinance, while, on the other hand, where the ordinance is enacted in pursuance of an incidental or implied power, the same must be reasonable.

Dill. Mun. Corp. 5th ed. §§ 589, 600; McQuillin, Mun. Ord. §§ 181, 186.

It will be presumed that an ordinance is valid, and the burden to establish invalidity is on the person asserting it.

2 Dill. Mun. Corp. 5th ed. § 649; Danville v. Hatcher, 101 Va. 523, 44 S. E. 723; Norfolk, P. & N. News Co. v. Norfolk, 105 Va. 139, 52 S. E. 851; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. New Hope, 187 U. S. 419, 47 L. ed. 240, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 204.

The requirements of the ordinance that the city shall have the right, through the board of fire commissioners, to run city wires needed for the fire alarm and police telegraph departments on appellant's poles, and that its conduits shall contain one duct for the accommodation of similar city wires, are not unreasonable and oppressive, so as to render the said requirements invalid.

Electric Improv. Co. v. San Francisco, 13 L.R.A. 131, 45 Fed. 593; Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Chicopee, 207 Mass. 341, 32 L.R.A. (N.S.) 997, 93 N. E. 927; Dill. Mun. Corp. § 1274; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. New York, 3 L.R.A. 449, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 533, 38 Fed. 552; American Rapid Teleg. Co. v. Hess, 125 N. Y. 641, 13 L.R.A. 454, 21 Am. St. Rep. 764, 26 N. E. 919; 56 L. ed.

New York ex rel. New York Electric Lines Co. v. Squires, 145 U. S. 175, 190, 36 L. ed. 666, 671, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 880.

Although telegraph companies are engaged in interstate commerce, yet municipalities in which they occupy the streets may require a fee or charge sufficient to cover any reasonably anticipated expenses incident to the proper inspection and supervision of their conduits, poles, and wires, as well as a charge in the nature of a rental for the use of the street occupied by the same.

Western U. Teleg. Co. v. New York, 3 L.R.A. 449, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 533, 38 Fed. 552; Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Taylor, 192 U. S. 64, 48 L. ed. 342, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 208; St. Louis v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 148 U. S. 92, 37 L. ed. 380, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485; St. Louis v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 149 U. S. 465, 37 L. ed. 810, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 990; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Atty. Gen. 125 U. S. 530, 31 L. ed. 790, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 961; American Rapid Teleg. Co. v. Hess, 125 N. Y. 641, 13 L.R.A. 454, 21 Am. St. Rep. 764, 26 N. E. 919; Memphis v. Postal Teleg. Cable Co. 76 C. C. A. 292, 145 Fed. 602; Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Baltimore, 156 U. S. 210, 39 L. ed. 400, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 356; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. New Hope, 187 U. S. 419, 47 L. ed. 240, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 204; Atlantic & P. Teleg. Co. v. Philadelphia, 190 U. S. 160, 47 L. ed. 995, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 817; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 195 U. S. 566, 49 L. ed. 321, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 133, 1 Ann. Cas. 517; Ganz v. Ohio Postal Teleg. Cable Co. 72 C. C. A. 186, 140 Fed. 692; Michigan Teleph. Co. v. Charlotte, 93 Fed. 11; Toledo v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 52 L.R.A. 730, 46 C. C. A. 111, 107 Fed. 10; 27 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 1007, 1021; Chester City v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 154 Pa. 464, 25 Atl. 1134; Philadelphia v. American Union Teleg. Co. 167 Pa. 406, 31 Atl. 628; Philadelphia v. Postal Teleg. Cable Co. 67 Hun, 21, 21 N. Y. Supp. 556; Taylor v. Postal Teleg. Cable Co. 202 Pa. 583, 52 Atl. 128; Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. New Hope, 192 U. S. 55, 48 L. ed. 338, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 204; Toledo v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 52 L.R.A. 730, 46 C. C. A. 111, 107 Fed. 10.

Where a party has for years acquiesced in a requirement, it is too late to complain of its invalidity.

Emery v. Bradford, 29 Cal. 75; Cochran v. Collins, 29 Cal. 129; Lux & L. Stone Co. v. Donaldson, 162 Ind. 481, 68 N. E. 1014; Holloran v. Mormam, 27 Ind. App. 309, 59 N. E. 869; De Puy v. Wabash, 133 Ind. 336, 32 N. E. 1016; Cason v. Lebanon, 153 Ind. 567, 55 N. E. 768; Darnell v. Keller, 18 Ind. App. 103, 45 N. E. 676; Bloomington ton v. Phelps, 149 Ind. 596, 49 N. E. 581; Gorman v. State, 157 Ind. 205, 60 N. E. 1083; Cooley, Const. Lim. *181.

A municipality cannot, if it would, divest itself of its power to protect the lives and property of its inhabitants. Any attempt to do so would be ultra vires.

Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Nebraska, 170 U. S. 57, 72, 42 L. ed. 948, 953, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 513; Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. v. Detroit R. Co. 171 U. S. 48, 53, 43 L. ed. 67, 71, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 732.

A company which secures the right to use the streets of a municipal corporation takes it subject to the police power resident in the state as an inalienable attribute of sovereignty.

Chicago v. Chicago Union Traction Co. 199 Ill. 270, 59 L.R.A. 666, 65 N. E. 243; Elliott, Roads & Streets, p. 801.

A requirement that a company or individual comply with reasonable police regulations without compensation is the legitimate exercise of the power, and not in violation of the constitutional inhibition against the impairment of the obligations of contracts.

Northern P. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 208 U. S. 583, 597, 52 L. ed. 630, 636, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341; New York & N. E. R. Co. v. Bristol, 151 U. S. 556, 567, 38 L. ed. 269, 272, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 437; Knoxville Iron Co. v. Harbison, 183 U. S. 13, 22, 46 L. ed. 55, 61, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; Bacon v. Walker, 204 U. S. 311, 317, 51 L. ed. 499, 502, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Illinois, 200 U. S. 561, 592, 50 L. ed. 596, 609, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341, 4 Ann. Cas. 1175; Engel v. O'Malley, 219 U. S. 128, 136, 55 L. ed. 128, 136, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 190; Noble State Bank v. Haskell, 219 U. S. 104, 111, 55 L. ed. 112, 116, 32 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1062, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 186, Ann. Cas. 1912a, 487; Mutual Loan Co. v. Martell, 222 U. S. 225, ante, 175, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 74; Richmond, F. & P. R. Co. v. Richmond, 96 U. S. 521, 24 L. ed. 734.

A party who has accepted and acted under a law will not be allowed to assail the law as invalid.

Cooley, Const. Lim. p. 214; Dewhurst v. Allegheny, 95 Pa. 437; Bidwell v. Pittsburgh, 85 Pa. 412, 27 Am. Rep. 662; Daniels v. Tearney, 102 U. S. 415, 421, 26 L. ed. 187, 189; Purcell v. Conrad, 84 Va. 557, 5 S. E. 545.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a bill in equity, filed on June 21, 1904, to restrain the enforcement of an ordinance of September 10, 1895, codified as chapter 88 of the ordinances of Richmond, and amended March 15, 1902, and December 18, 1903. The plaintiff alleges that the ordinance infringes its rights under the act of July 24, 1866, chap. 230, 14 Stat. at L. 221 (Rev. Stat. §§ 5263 et seq., U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3579), and under article 1, § 8 (the commerce clause), and the 14th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States. The circuit court dismissed the bill (178 Fed. 310), and the plaintiff appealed. The act of Congress gives to telegraph companies that accept its provisions the right to construct, maintain, and operate lines over the post roads of the United States, such as the streets of Richmond concerned are admitted to be. Rev. Stat. § 3964, act of March 1, 1884, *chap. 9, 23 Stat. at L. 3, U. S. [166 Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2707. Some of the objections to the ordinance are based upon this statute and some are not; we take them as they come.

By § 1 poles and wires are not to be put up "until the city engineer shall have first determined the size, quality, character, number, location, condition, appearance, and manner of erection of" the same. By § 4 the committee on streets may require permission to be given to others to place upon the poles light current wires which, in the Committee's opinion, will not unreasonably interfere with the owners' business; terms, if not agreed upon, to be submitted to arbitration. By § 15 the chief of the fire department and the superintendent of fire alarm and police telegraph are to inspect poles and wires, and if a pole is unsafe, or the attachments or insulations, etc., are unsuitable or unsafe, are to require them to be altered or replaced and removed, with a fine for each day's failure to obey the order. By § 26 violation of any provision, or failure to obey any requirement made under the ordinance by the city engineer or the just-named superintendent or chief, if not specially fined, is to be fined from ten to five hundred dollars a day, by the police justice. Finally, by § 28, as amended in 1903, all overhead wires within a certain territory are to be removed, and within two months plans for conduits are to be submitted to the committee on streets and Shockoe creek, showing location, plan, size, construction, and material. These plans may be altered or amended by the committee, and when satisfactory to it are to be followed by the owner of the wires in a manner satisfactory to the city engineer. The pavements are to be replaced and kept in repair to his satisfaction and the city saved harmless from damages. The conduits are to provide for an increase of 30 per cent, not to be occupied by third parties without consent of the committee and compensation, but the wires of the city to be carried free, 167] one duct being *reserved for them. The location, size, shape, and subdivision of the conduits, the material and manner of construction, must be satisfactory to the city engineer, and the work of laying underground conduits is to be under the direction and to the satisfaction of the superintendent of fire alarm and police telegraph.

All these provisions are objected to as subjecting the appellant to an arbitrary discretion,—in § 1, that of the city engineer as to the poles; in § 4, that of the committee on streets as to the use of the poles; in § 15, that of the chief and superintendent mentioned as to not only the safety of the poles and wires, but the unsuitableness of the latter, or their attachments, insulation, or appliances; in § 28, that of the committee on streets as to underground plans, that of the superintendent of fire alarm as to laying the conduits, and that of the city engineer as to the replacement of pavement in the streets, and the carrying out of the plans in all the details just stated. It is argued also that by § 26 the appellant is subjected to further requirements without limit from the officers named, but this argument may be dismissed, the requirements referred to being only those “made under this chapter;” that is, specifically authorized in the other sections to which we have referred. Again, the objections are not to be fortified by those decisions that turn on the power to delegate legislative functions. United States v. Grimaud, 220 U. S. 506, 55 L. ed. 563, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 480. We have been shown no ground for supposing that the ordinance exceeded the power of the legislature to authorize, or of the city to enact, unless it interferes with some special paramount right of the appellant. The bill is brought wholly on the ground that the appellant has such rights that no state legislation can touch. Unless it has them, there is nothing in the Constitution of the United States to prevent the grant of these discretionary powers to the committees and officers named. Davis v. Massachusetts, 167 U. S. 43, 42 L. ed. 71, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 731; Gundling v. 168] Chicago*, 177 U. S. 183, 44 L. ed. 725, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 633; Fisher v. St. Louis, 194 U. S. 361, 371, 48 L. ed. 1018, 1023, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 673; Prentiss v. Atlantic Coast Line Co. 211 U. S. 210, 225, 53 L. ed. 150, 158, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 67.

The appellant says that it has the right to occupy the streets of Richmond under the act of Congress, and therefore, although subject to reasonable regulation, it cannot be subjected to a discretion guided by no rules. 56 L. ed.

Neither branch of this proposition, as applied to this case, commands our assent. To begin with the end, while it is true that rules are not laid down in terms, they are implied so far as there need to be any. If the committee and officers do their duty, there is no room in the questions left to them for arbitrary whim. They are to exercise their judgment on the suitableness, safety, etc., of the places, poles, and wires by the criteria that would be applied by all persons skilled in such affairs who should seek to reconcile the welfare of the public and the instalment of the plant. The objection that other motives may come in is merely that which may be made to all authority,—that it may be dishonest,—an objection that would make government impossible if it prevailed. It is said that the ordinance should confine the committee and officers to finding whether required and specified facts exist. But not only is it impossible to set down beforehand every particular fact that may have to be taken into account, but, in case of dishonesty, it would do no good. We are of opinion that the ordinance is not unreasonable as a grant of arbitrary power. Regulations very like these were upheld, so far as they presented Federal questions, against a company assumed to have a right to use the streets, in Missouri ex rel. Laeclde Gaslight Co. v. Murphy, 170 U. S. 78, 99, 42 L. ed. 955, 964, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 505. See also Wilson v. Eureka City, 173 U. S. 32, 43 L. ed. 603, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 317.

In view of what we have said and the appellant's admission that it is subject to reasonable regulation, it would be unnecessary to consider its rights under the act of *Congress but for some further com-[169] plaint that the appellant's property is taken without due process of law. That complaint opens the question what property the appellant has. The act of Congress, of course, conveyed no title, and did not attempt to found one by delegating the power to take by eminent domain. Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 195 U. S. 540, 574, 49 L. ed. 312, 324, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 133, 1 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 517. It made the erection of telegraph lines free to all submitting to its conditions, as against an attempt by a state to exclude them because they were foreign corporations, or because of its wish to erect a monopoly of its own. Pensacola Teleg. Co. v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 96 U. S. 1, 24 L. ed. 708. It has been held to prevent a state from stopping the operation of lines within the act by injunction for failure to pay taxes. Western U. Teleg. Co. v.

Atty. Gen. 125 U. S. 530, 31 L. ed. 790, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 961. But except in this negative sense, the statute is only permissive, not a source of positive rights. The inability of the state to prohibit the appellant from getting a foothold within its territory, both because of the statute and of its carrying on of commerce among the states, gives the appellant no right to use the soil of the streets, even though post roads, as against private owners, or as against the city or state, where it owns the land. St. Louis v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 148 U. S. 92, 101, 37 L. ed. 380, 384, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485. Any license that the city may 810, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 990; Richmond v. Southern Bell Teleph. & Teleg. Co. 174 U. S. 761, 771, 43 L. ed. 1162, 1166, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 778; Atlantic & P. Teleg. Co. v. Philadelphia, 190 U. S. 160, 163, 47 L. ed. 995, 999, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 817; Hudson County Water Co. v. McCarter, 209 U. S. 349, 357, 52 L. ed. 828, 832, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 529, 14 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 560.

The only ground of title disclosed by the appellant is the act of 1866, coupled, perhaps, with the fact that its lines are established. The rights of the city to the streets are left a little vague, but the bill assumes that they are such as to authorize the charge of a reasonable rental, on the principle of St. Louis v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 148 U. S. 92, 37 L. ed. 380, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485. Any license that the city may 170] have *granted as owner or representative of the owner of the public easement or otherwise may be assumed to have been revoked, and so far as the city's title is infringed by the appellant, nothing appears to limit the city's right to insist upon it, as fully as a private owner might. Leaving the question of title on one side, except so far as to note that the appellant does not show one, and that the city has power to admit it to the highways, the other regulations complained of do not violate the appellant's constitutional rights.

When the appellants, without the right to exercise the power of eminent domain, desires to occupy land belonging to others, prima facie it must submit to their terms. We assume, as we have said, that the city has some interest in the streets that is affected by the presence or by the establishment of conduits or poles. If it demands, as a condition of its assent, as it does by § 6, that positions shall be reserved upon the poles for the city, and by § 28, that provision shall be made for 30 per cent increase, and that the city's wires shall be carried free of charge, one duct being reserved for them, it is within its rights. Even assuming, as seems to be implied by some of the language in St. Louis v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 148 U. S. 92, 104, 105, 37 L. ed. 380, 385, 386, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Atty. Gen. 125 U. S. 530, 31 L. ed. 790, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 961, that, in consequence of the act of Congress, the city is restricted to reasonable demands, the foregoing requirements do not seem to us unreasonable, in view of the position of the parties. The city must use these poles and conduits or others, and it is not unfair that it should avoid the expense and additional burden of a separate system, and insist on getting the help it needs from the system already there. See Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Chicopee, 207 Mass. 341, 32 L.R.A.(N.S.) 997, 93 N. E. 927. It is no sufficient objection that, from the point of view of rental, the burden on certain poles may vary in a proportion different from the value *of [171 those poles. The notion of rental cannot be used thus to restrict the conditions that may be imposed. The conditions are reasonable with reference to the occupation of the streets, considered as a whole, and are not made otherwise by the fact that there is also a specific money charge for each pole or underground mile of wire.

The requirement that space be left in the conduits for wires of third parties, to be used upon permission by the city and compensation (§§ 4, 28), is merely another incident of the necessity for insisting upon a single system. It would seem not to be unreasonable for legislation, apart from any question of property rights, to require that a single conduit should contain all the wires under a street. When the legislature also is fixing the terms on which it will yield a property right, the validity of the condition becomes doubly clear. So, a provision in § 28 for moving or altering conduits at the appellant's expense, upon notice from the city that the change is necessary for the construction or repair of gas, sewer, or water mains. These items seem to us as easily justified as the order to put the wires underground, the legality of which the appellant fully admits.

The money charges of $2 per pole and the same sum per mile of underground wire are found fault with. §§ 10, 32. Many of the cases relied upon by the appellant are cases turning on the limitations to the powers of the municipality. But, as we have said, this bill is brought on the theory that any such legislation by the state would be bad under the Constitution and act of Congress,—not upon the suggestion that the city of Richmond is acting ultra vires. If the city could be authorized to do what it has done, we must assume that it is acting within its powers. Taking up the question, so limited, we agree with the court below that after the appellant, as is found, has paid the charges without complaint, for many years, it would require something 172] more *than a mere protest now to induce us to find it unreasonable. The sum is not so great as has been charged and sustained heretofore. St. Louis v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 148 U. S. 92, 104, 37 L. ed. 380, 385, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485, s. c. 149 U. S. 465, 37 L. ed. 810, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 990; Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Baltimore, 156 U. S. 210, 39 L. ed. 399, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 356; Memphis v. Postal Teleg. & Cable Co. 91 C. C. A. 135, 164 Fed. 600, 16 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 342.

There is the frequently recurring contention that the ordinance is void because of the great penalties that may be incurred in the time necessary to test its legality. Especially mentioned is § 27, as amended in 1902, which imposes a fine of from $100 to $500 for each pole remaining after the time set for their removal, and of from $100 to $500 for every week thereafter. It does not look as if the penalties in this ordinance were established with a view to prevent the appellant from resorting to the Federal courts, nor do we apprehend that an attempt will be made to enforce them in respect to the past. But the penalties are separable from the rest of the ordinance, and if an oppressive application of them should be attempted, it will be time enough then for the appellant to file its bill. United States ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Delaware & H. Co. 213 U. S. 366, 417, 53 L. ed. 836, 852, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 527; Grenada Lumber Co. v. Mississippi, 217 U. S. 433, 443, 54 L. ed. 826, 831, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 535.

One more objection to the ordinance is found in § 31, which limits the privilege as to the conduits to fifteen years, and provides that after that time the city may put such restrictions, conditions and charges as it sees fit, or may order the conduits removed. It seems to be thought that this is an attempt to make the appellant contract itself out of the benefit of the act of Congress. What we have said will show some reason for not so regarding the ordinance; and as an amendment, § 34, adopted since the bill was filed, provides that none of the obligations, etc., of the chapter, shall interfere with rights under the act of 1866, the appellant's position would be no worse by reason of its complying with what it cannot help. We 173] think it *unnecessary to discuss the bill in greater detail to show that it cannot be maintained.

Decree dismissing bill affirmed.

56 L. ed.

WORLD'S FAIR MINING COMPANY,
Plff. in Err.,

v.

FRANK POWERS and Josephine Powers.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 173-180.)

Contracts — performance — conditions.

1. The deposit of the net proceeds from ores in a designated bank, to be credited on the purchase price, as stipulated in a contract for the sale of mines, under which the purchaser was given possession and the deed was placed in escrow, to be delivered upon performance of his undertakings, is a condition concurrent with the obligation of the vendor to allow the purchaser to remain in possession, and precedent to the vendor's obligation to convey.

[For other cases, see Contracts, V. d, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Vendor and purchaser — breach by purchaser — excuse.

2. The purchaser in possession under a contract for the sale of mines by which the deed was placed in escrow, and the purchaser required to deposit in a designated bank the net proceeds from the ores, to be credited upon the purchase price, cannot claim damages for his dispossession by the vendor because of the failure to make such deposits, without showing a valid excuse therefor.

[For other cases, see Vendor and Purchaser, II. a, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Contracts — excuse for failure to perform.

3. The breach by the purchaser in possession under a contract for the sale of mines, of his agreement to deposit the net proceeds from the ores in a designated bank, to be credited upon the purchase price, is not excused by attachment proceedings and other acts of the vendor, hindering, but not preventing, performance.

[For other cases, see Contracts, V. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 207.]

Argued March 11 and 12, 1912. Decided
April 1, 1912.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the Territory of Arizona to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the District Court of the First Judicial District in that territory, directing a verdict for the defendants in an action by a purchaser of mines to recover damages for dispossession by the vendors. Affirmed.

See same case below, 12 Ariz. 285, 100 Pac. 957.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

NOTE.—On the right to rescind or abandon contract because of other party's default—see note to Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Richards, 30 L.R.A. 33.

Mr. Frank H. Hereford argued the cause, and, with Mr. F. E. Curley, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The allegations of an answer may supply any omitted allegations in the complaint, and thus aided, the defect in the complaint is cured.

Hill v. George, 5 Tex. 87; McFarland v. Mooring, 56 Tex. 118; International & G. N. R. Co. v. Sein, 11 Tex. Civ. App. 386, 33 S. W. 558; United States v. Morris, 10 Wheat. 246-283, 6 L. ed. 314-323; 31 Cyc. 714-717.

To permit the use of the technical law of pleading, formulated to facilitate trials and to render more certain the administration of justice, to defeat a hearing and determination of what is justice, is wholly inconsistent with the spirit and policy of our law, which seeks a determination of every case upon a trial of the merits.

Boudreaux v. Tucson Gas, E. L. & P. Co. 13 Ariz. 361, 33 L.R.A.(N.S.) 196, 114 Pac. 552.

Pleadings will be construed most favorably towards the pleader in determining whether or not the allegations therein contained are sufficient to apprise the opposite party of the questions of fact that the pleader will seek to establish on the trial.

4 Enc. Pl. & Pr. 756; United States v. Parker, 120 U. S. 89-97, 30 L. ed. 601-605, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 454.

An even greater liberality is allowed after answer filed and on trial.

4 Enc. Pl. & Pr. 758.

The rule expressio unius est exclusio alterius, as applied to contracts, has been recognized and adopted by this court.

Douglass v. Lewis, 131 U. S. 75, 33 L. ed. 53, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 634; Tucker v. Alexandroff, 183 U. S. 424-436, 46 L. ed. 264-270, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 195.

The contract did not make the deposit of the proceeds of the ore a condition precedent.

New Orleans v. Texas & P. R. Co. 171 U. S. 334, 43 L. ed. 186, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 875.

The escrow instructions were plainly for the benefit of plaintiff in error, in that they enabled the latter to get the deeds deposited in escrow. The penalties provided for in the escrow instructions were therefore necessarily to be construed more strongly against defendants in error than against plaintiff in error.

7 Enc. U. S. Sup. Ct. Rep. 264; 4 Enc. U. S. Sup. Ct. Rep. 573.

The escrow instructions did not modify or become a part of the original contract.

Powers v. World's Fair Min. Co. 10 Ariz. 5, 86 Pac. 15, 12 Ariz. 281, 100 Pac. 956.

It is a principle recognized and acted upon as a cardinal rule by all the courts of justice in the construction of contracts, whether under seal or not, that the intention of the parties at the time of making the contract is to be inquired into, and, if not forbidden by law, is to be effectuated.

4 Enc. U. S. Sup. Ct. Rep. 570.

What is implied is as effectual as what is expressed. The intent of the parties as manifested is the contract.

Equitable Safety Ins. Co. v. Hearne, 20 Wall. 494, 496, 22 L. ed. 398, 399; United States v. Babbitt, 95 U. S. 334, 336, 24 L. ed. 480, 481.

But even if deposits to the credit of defendants in error of the proceeds of ore shipped were a condition precedent in the contract, then before the time for its performance, defendants in error had elected not so to consider such conditions; had waived the condition precedent, and had elected to consider the contract unbroken by plaintiff in error's failure to perform.

15 Cyc. 258, 259, 262, 263; New Orleans v. Texas & P. R. Co. 171 U. S. 313, 334, 43 L. ed. 178, 186, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 875.

A party who engages to do work has a right to proceed free from any let or hindrance of the other party, and if such other party interferes, hinders, and prevents the doing of the work to such an extent as to render its performance difficult and largely diminish the profits, the first may treat the contract as broken, and is not bound to proceed under the added burdens and increased expense. It may stop and sue for the damages which it has sustained by reason of the nonperformance which the other has caused.

Anvil Min. Co. v. Humble, 153 U. S. 540, 38 L. ed. 814, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 876, 18 Mor. Min. Rep. 98.

If a party to a contract who is entitled to the benefit of a condition upon the performance of which his responsibility is to arise dispenses with, or by any act of his own prevents, the performance, the opposite party is excused from proving a strict compliance with the condition. Thus, if the precedent act is to be performed at a certain time or place, and a strict performance of it is prevented by the absence of the party who has a right to claim it, the law will not permit him to set up the nonperformance of the condition as a bar to the responsibility which his part of the contract had imposed upon him.

District of Columbia v. Camden Iron Works, 181 U. S. 453, 461, 462, 45 L. ed. 948, 953, 954, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 680.

The so-called condition precedent was satisfied and complied with nine days before the time for complying with it had arrived.

Central Nat. Bank v. Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. 104 U. S. 54-77, 26 L. ed. 693-703.

Mr. Eugene S. Ives argued the cause and filed a brief for defendants in error:

The company's obligation to deposit the money was a condition precedent; and it must allege and prove the fulfilment of the condition, or a legal excuse for its non-performance.

9 Cyc. pp. 642-644, note, 60, p. 720, note, 466; Milligan v. Keyser, 52 Fla. 331, 42 So. 371; Kane v. Hood, 13 Pick. 281; Graves v. White, 87 N. Y. 463; Dermott v. Jones, 23 How. 220, 16 L. ed. 442; Fancher v. Goodman, 29 Barb. 315; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Cochran, 42 Neb. 531, 60 N. W. 894; McColl v. Frith, 101 N. Y. 677, 5 N. E. 429.

Power's cause of action for the $6,400 accrued immediately upon receipt of the smelter returns by the company.

Green v. Robertson, 64 Cal. 75, 28 Pac. 446; Hoch v. Bass, 126 Pa. 13, 17 Atl. 512.

The institution of the action by defendants in error on June 11, 1904, was no excuse for nonperformance.

Mitchell v. Silver Lake Lodge, 29 Or. 294, 45 Pac. 798; Frantz v. Hanford, 87 Iowa, 469, 54 N. W. 474; 4 Cyc. 845.

Defendants in error had the right to rescind the contract and dispossess plaintiff in error for nonperformance.

Norrington v. Wright, 5 Fed. 768, 115 U. S. 188, 205, 29 L. ed. 366, 369, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 12; Loudenback Fertilizer Co. v. Tennessee Phosphate Co. 61 L.R.A. 402, 58 C. C. A. 220, 121 Fed. 298.

Plaintiff in error having elected to continue under the contract after the alleged acts of interference and hindrance on the 11th of June, 1904, was bound to perform its covenants, and therefore having failed to deposit the money on the 21st day of June, 1904, is precluded from recovering in this action.

Norrington v. Wright, 115 U. S. 205, 29 L. ed. 369, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 12; Mill Dam Foundery v. Hovey, 21 Pick. 444; McGregor v. Ross, 96 Mich. 103, 55 N. W. 653; Robinson v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 103 Mich. 607, 61 N. W. 1014; Rodermund v. Clark, 46 N. Y. 357; Robb v. Voss, 155 U. S. 13, 39, 42, 39 L. ed. 52, 62, 63, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 4; Keedy v. Long, 71 Md. 385, 5 L.R.A. 759, 18 Atl. 704; Goodsell v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 23 Jones & S. 183; Pakas v. Hollingshead, 184 N. Y. 211, 3 L.R.A. (N.S.) 1042, 112 Am. St. Rep. 601, 77 N. E. 40, 6 Ann. Cas. 60.

One seeking to excuse nonperformance by reason of the conduct of the other party must affirmatively allege in his pleading a sufficient excuse for nonperformance, and must set forth the facts constituting the excuse.
56 L. ed.

9 Cyc. 719, 720, 722; Dermott v. Jones, 23 How. 220, 16 L. ed. 442; Buchanan v. Layne, 95 Mo. App. 148, 68 S. W. 952; Stern v. McKee, 70 App. Div. 142, 75 N. Y. Supp. 157; Purdue v. Noffsinger, 15 Ind. 386; Jones v. Singer Mfg. Co. 38 W. Va. 147, 18 S. E. 478.

Even had there been an allegation of performance, an excuse for nonperformance could not be shown.

White v. Mitchell, 30 Ind. App. 342, 65 N. E. 1061.

The defendants were entitled to treat the contract as ended and retake possession of the property, and such resumption of possession could not be the basis of a recovery of damages.

Norrington v. Wright, 115 U. S. 188, 29 L. ed. 366, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 12; Loudenback Fertilizer Co. v. Tennessee Phosphate Co. 61 L.R.A. 402, 58 C. C. A. 220, 121 Fed. 298.

*Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the [176 opinion of the court:

This is an action brought by the plaintiff in error upon a contract made by the defendants in error, hereafter called Powers, with one Ferguson, and assigned to the plaintiff in error. The contract was for the sale of some mines known as the World's Fair Group. Powers agreed to place a deed of the mines in escrow in the Arizona National Bank of Tucson within ninety days, to be delivered on performance of the undertakings on the other side. Ferguson was to begin work within ninety days, and to go on at a minimum rate until 1,000 feet had been done. All ore taken or stoped out below the main level, and all ores then on the dumps, were to be milled, concentrated, or leached on the grounds, $12 per ton being allowed to Ferguson for such treatment. On all ores, if any should be extracted, better adapted to be shipped directly to a smelter, and upon all concentrates, a further allowance to the extent of the shipping and smelting charges was to be made. Ferguson agreed to ship the products "and after the deduction of the said shipping and smelter charges, to deposit in trust in the Arizona National Bank, Tucson, Arizona, the net proceeds therefrom, the same to remain in trust in said bank until the expiration of this agreement, which shall be upon the completion of the aforesaid 1,000 feet of work, or until such time" as Ferguson should pay Powers $450,000 and deliver to him one quarter of the full-paid stock of a company that Ferguson agreed to form for working the mines, the moneys deposited in trust thereupon to be Ferguson's. The agreement was to be void if Ferguson did not begin and prosecute the work in the manner and at the rate agreed upon, and in that event all permanent improvements were to belong to Powers.

By a subsequent modification of April 15, 1904, it was agreed that the money deposited [177] in the Arizona National Bank should at once belong to and be at the disposal of Powers, and be credited upon the $450,000, the other party being released from further liability upon the amounts. On the same date deeds from Powers to Ferguson, and from Ferguson and the London & Glasgow Development Company, his assignee, to the World's Fair Mining Company, were placed in escrow by Powers and Ferguson in the Arizona National Bank, with instructions that upon demand by Powers in writing the bank should appoint a person to ascertain whether there had been a breach of agreement on the other side, and if he should certify other breaches or a failure to deposit the returns from ores, less the allowances, for more than fifteen days after the receipt of the returns, then Powers's deed was to be given back and the other deed destroyed. There were also provisions that, in case of performance, the bank should deliver the deeds. Before April 15, Ferguson and his assignee had been in possession and at work. Shortly after that date the World's Fair Mining Company went on with the business. On June 6, 1904, it received several thousand dollars proceeds from ores, and deposited them in the First National Bank of Nogales, to its own account. The money not having been deposited in the Arizona National Bank, and Powers being dissatisfied with the conduct of the plaintiff's predecessors, who also seem to have failed to deposit as agreed, on June 11 he brought suit and garnished the Nogales account. The company kept on at work, but on July 25 Powers took forcible possession of the mines. Subsequently this action was brought.

At the trial the plaintiff offered in evidence the record of the attachment suit, but the court excluded it and directed a verdict for the defendant on the ground that the deposit in the Arizona National Bank was a condition concurrent with or precedent to the obligation of Powers to go on with the contract, and that the declaration [178] did not disclose an excuse for the plaintiff's breach; that it did not purport to admit a failure or to allege that such failure was due to Powers. The supreme court of the territory took the same view and affirmed the judgment, as the plaintiff, on its attention being called to the matter at the trial, had not seen fit to amend.

The exclusion of the evidence and the direction to the jury both turn on the same point, and call for an analysis of the pleadings so far as material. The declaration states the contracts, assignments, and escrow, and the other facts that we have mentioned; that Powers brought the suit with the intent to break and abrogate the contract; that therein he alleged a debt of the London & Glasgow Development Company for $6,617, and one of the present plaintiff for $8,000; that by his garnishment and an injunction that he obtained for a time he sought to prevent the plaintiff from carrying out its contract, and that after the injunction was dissolved Powers proceeded with the litigation, threatening to attach any other funds brought into the territory, and "continued to harass, impede, and defeat the efforts of the plaintiff to carry out the terms of its said contracts." The plaintiff relies upon the foregoing allegations, and especially the word "defeat," as showing that Powers prevented its performance by his acts. But the declaration goes on that these acts made the plaintiff fear that if it brought any more money into the territory, that also would be attached; that they crippled and impeded it; and that "when plaintiff had finally succeeded in overcoming the conditions" thus occasioned, Powers took possession of the mine.

The declaration admits, therefore, that the acts of Powers were not sufficient to prevent the plaintiff from keeping its undertaking. It implies, also, that the plaintiff had other money out of the territory, and in no way shows that it could not have made the required deposit in the Arizona Bank. The garnishment of the sum in the *Nogales Bank did not prevent putting [179] other money into the Arizona Bank if the World's Fair Company did not see fit to release the attachment, and if the deposit had been made in time and to the right amount, the source from which it came would not have mattered. The deposit never was made, and therefore it is unnecessary to consider whether there had not been a breach by the failure to deposit at once before Powers attached. The plaintiff argues from the escrow that it had fifteen days; but as it also contends for other purposes that the escrow did not modify the contract, the argument is weakened. But it is enough that on the record the plaintiff discloses an unexcused breach. There is nothing in the answer to better the case thus made. We agree with the courts below that the depositing in the Arizona Bank was a condition concurrent with the obligation of Powers to allow the plaintiff to continue in possession, and precedent to Powers's obligation to convey.

The escrow instructions treat making the deposits as a condition to the plaintiff's rights. The plaintiff's argument that the instructions do not modify the contract is only effective to exclude the introduction of an allowance of fifteen days for making the deposit, as the instructions are not needed to make the meaning of the contract clear. For even if the express condition of avoidance for failure to prosecute the work "in the manner and at the rate agreed upon" does not certainly extend to this, it is not to be supposed that the plaintiff was to be allowed to go on converting the proceeds of the mine into money, and at the same time appropriate the whole, instead of turning the net amount over to Powers.

Another matter might, perhaps, have caused a difficulty with different pleadings. It is suggested that the previous suit of Powers against the World's Fair Mining Company was a suit for the proceeds of ore that should have been deposited. It might be argued that Powers had no right to 180] *that money unless the contract was to be carried through; that he might have declined to go further, and have sued the company for the breach (Anvil Min. Co. v. Humble, 153 U. S. 540, 552, 38 L. ed. 814, 818, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 876, 18 Mor. Min. Rep. 98), but that he could not claim part of the purchase price, as such, unless he was content to go on, and thus, that Powers had elected against the termination of the contract before he attempted it. But no such election is pleaded, and not enough appears to show that if it had been, it could have been proved. The precise nature of the former suit does not appear, nor whether it had been proceeded with far enough to conclude Powers's right of choice. Moreover, if Powers terminated the contract, he would not affirm it by suing for proceeds of ore belonging to him in that event. No error appears in the judgment below, and it is affirmed.

Judgment affirmed.

CHARLES SWANSON, Plff. in Err.,
v.

JOHN T. SEARS and Nancy M. Kettler.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 180-182.)

Mines — conflicting claims — relocation.

An attempted location of a mining claim, based upon a discovery within a then valid and subsisting claim, is absolutely void for the purpose of founding an adverse claim, and does not attach upon the subsequent failure of the first locator to do the required annual assessment work.

[For other cases, see Mines, 58-64, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 217.]

Argued March 15, 1912. Decided April 1 1912.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Idaho to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the District Court of Blaine County, in that state, in favor of defendant in a suit over the right of possession of a mining claim. Affirmed.

See same case below, 17 Idaho, 321, 105 Pac. 1059; on rehearing, 17 Idaho, 339, 105 Pac. 1065.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. John M. Zane argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

A location requires three things: 1, discovery of the vein; 2, proper location notice; 3, marking upon the ground. A claim is not complete until discovery, but the order in which the acts are performed is immaterial, provided the three things concur in the claim before it is insisted upon as a mining claim duly located.

Creede & C. C. Min. & Mill Co. v. Uinta Tunnel Min. & Transp. Co. 196 U. S. 337, 49 L. ed. 501, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 266.

There was no objection to a junior locator laying the lines of his claim across the surface of a senior claim, provided his entry was peaceable, and upon his doing so he obtained all of the vein that his marked claim gave him, except what was taken by the senior claim, and if that should cease to exist, the junior claim would get all that the senior claim theretofore had.

Del Monte Min. & Mill Co. v. Last Chance Min. & Mill. Co. 171 U. S. 55, 43 L. ed. 72, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 895, 19 Mor. Min. Rep. 370.

This conclusion that the conflict inures to the junior claim upon forfeiture of the senior claim also results from a consideration of the statute as to adverse claim and protest suit; for if the owner of the senior claim waives his rights, or fails to set them up, or fails to prosecute an adverse claim, the conflict area is patented to the junior locator in his claim.

Lavagnino v. Uhlig, 198 U. S. 443, 49 L. ed. 1119, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 716; Gwil-

NOTE.—On location of mining claim—see notes to Dwinnell v. Dyer, 7 L.R.A. (N.S.) 763; Last Chance Min. Co. v. Tyler Min. Co. 39 L. ed.

U. S. 859; and Enterprise Min. Co. v. Rico-Aspen Consol. Min. Co. 42 L. ed. U. S. 96.

lim v. Donnellan, 115 U. S. 45, 29 L. ed. 348, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1110, 15 Mor. Min. Rep. 482; Creede & C. C. Min. & Mill. Co. v. Uinta Tunnel Min. & Transp. Co. 196 U. S. 337, 49 L. ed. 501, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 266.

Every evil urged by the courts of Nevada and Utah as resulting from the allowing of the conflict area to inure to the junior claim, upon the forfeiture of the senior claim if there are any such evils, has already been permitted by the rule in Del Monte Min. & Mill. Co. v. Last Chance Min. & Mill. Co. supra, and by the constant practice of the Land Department, which allows such inuring.

Mutual Min. & Mill Co. v. Currency Co. 27 Land Dec. 191; Gowdy v. Kismet Gold Min. Co. 22 Land Dec. 624; American Consol. Min. & Mill. Co. v. DeWitt, 26 Land Dec. 580; Burnside v. O'Connor, 30 Land Dec. 67.

The fact that the conflict area contains the discovery of the senior claim is immaterial.

Lavagnino v. Uhlig, 198 U. S. 443, 49 L. ed. 1119, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 716; Swanson v. Kettler, 17 Idaho, 321, 105 Pac. 1059.

If the junior locator, after locating his claim, had made another discovery outside the conflict area, his whole claim would have become good without relocation, even in Utah, upon the forfeiture of the senior claim.

Silver City Gold & S. Min. Co. v. Lowry, 19 Utah, 334, 57 Pac. 11, 20 Mor. Min. Rep. 55; Bingham Amalgamated Copper Co. v. Ute Copper Co. 181 Fed. 748; Gwillim v. Donnellan, 115 U. S. 45, 29 L. ed. 348, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1110, 15 Mor. Min. Rep. 482.

If the relocation of the senior claim is eliminated from the discussion, there is no question but that the junior claim, upon the forfeiture of the senior claim, is a valid claim against the United States, and must be therefore against its grantee.

Costigan, Min. Law, 153, note, 25, 160, note, 51; Creede & C. C. Min. & Mill. Co. v. Uinta Tunnel Min. & Transp. Co. 196 U. S. 337, 49 L. ed. 501, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 266.

Similarly, if the relocation is eliminated from the discussion, even if the junior claim had no discovery at all, it would have become good upon a discovery within its limits without any relocation for everything except the area conflicting with the older claim, and upon that claim being forfeited, the junior claim would have had its whole surface. So much is admitted by all the authorities.

The decision in Lavagnino v. Uhlig, 198 U. S. 443, 49 L. ed. 1119, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep.

716, was correct when it decided that the relocater of a claim could not show, as against a junior claim, that his conflict area with an older claim was itself in a still older claim when the location was made, but which afterwards became forfeited. That case agrees with all the analogies of the mining law; it does not create, but avoids, an irreconcilable conflict with Del Monte Min. & Mill. Co. v. Last Chance Min. & Mill. Co. supra; and with Creede & C. C. Min. & Mill. Co. v. Uinta Tunnel Min. & Transp. Co. supra, and the Land Office practice; it is not contrary to Belk v. Meagher, 104 U. S. 279, 26 L. ed. 735, 1 Mor. Min. Rep. 510.

It agrees with the rule that if the owner of the older claim had drawn in his line so as not to conflict with the junior claim, that claim would have at once become good without relocation, even if the discovery was within the conflict area.

Tonopah & S. L. Min. Co. v. Tonopah Min. Co. 125 Fed. 408.

The whole difficulty on the point under consideration results from a misapplication of the language of the court in Belk v. Meagher, supra.

The word "relocation" is properly applied to an actual relocation where a junior locator enters to appropriate the work, the boundaries, the marking, and the discovery of a prior locator. Such an entry must be wrongful and unlawful, and cannot be innocent when such senior claim is still subsisting. In such case it is proper to hold that a relocation is void unless the senior claim, which is being relocated, has passed away. Such is the situation described in Belk v. Meagher, supra, and Brown v. Gurney, 201 U. S. 184, 50 L. ed. 717, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 509.

But the word "relocation" is improperly applied to a junior location which merely conflicts with a senior location, but is made upon a different discovery, different location, and different markings. The latter kind of double location for a part of a claim often arises and is properly and laudably made as in Del Monte Min. & Mill. Co. v. Last Chance Min. & Mill. Co. supra.

In Farrell v. Lockhart, 210 U. S. 142, 52 L. ed. 994, 16 L.R.A.(N.S.) 162, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681, guarded language is used, which simply qualifies Lavagnino v. Uhlig, so that it will not apply to a relocation pure and simple; the qualification is not intended to render doubtful its application to a mere conflict in locations, where the junior locator was not attempting to appropriate the senior locator's discovery, location boundaries, and work.

Brown v. Gurney, supra, does not contradict the rule which we contend for (1) because it was a relocation pure and simple, and therefore belongs to the class of Belk v. Meagher, and (2) the ground was sub judice, and motives of policy would require it for the time being to be nonlocatable.

All the evils foretold from the rule in Lavagnino v. Uhlig are wholly fanciful.

Costigan, "The Doctrine of Farrell v. Lockhart," 11 Columbia L. Rev. 733, 738; Costigan, Min. Law, 313, note, 60.

The second question, as to the relocation by defendant in error Kettler of her own claim being void as an evasion of the statutory labor statute, is answered by the authorities to the effect that such a relocation is void.

1 Lindley, Mines, 2d ed. § 405; Shamel, Min. Law, 128, 129; Morrison, Min. Rights, 13th ed. 124, 125; Costigan, Min. Law, 327-330.

Mr. Frank Reeves argued the cause and filed a brief for defendants in error:

When plaintiff posted his notice and made his discovery for Independence No. 2, January 3, 1889, on ground that was then embraced within a valid and subsisting mining claim belonging to and in possession of another, the attempted location was absolutely void, not merely voidable. It conferred no rights, either present or prospective. It was void not only as against the owner of the claim upon which such attempted location was made, but as against the whole world.

Belk v. Meagher, 104 U. S. 279, 26 L. ed. 735, 1 Mor. Min. Rep. 510; 1 Lindley, Mines, 1897 ed. §§ 363-367; Barringer & A. Mines & Mining, p. 306; 1 Snyder, Mines, § 572; Martin, Min. Law & Land Office Proc. §§ 197-282; Costigan, Min. Law, 151; Gwillim v. Donnellan, 115 U. S. 45, 29 L. ed. 348, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1110, 15 Mor. Min. Rep. 482; Del Monte Min. & Mill. Co. v. Last Chance Min. & Mill. Co. 171 U. S. 55, 43 L. ed. 72, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 895, 19 Mor. Min. Rep. 370; Clipper Min. Co. v. Eli Min. & Land Co. 194 U. S. 226, 48 L. ed. 949, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 632; Brown v. Gurney, 201 U. S. 182, 50 L. ed. 717, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 509; Farrell v. Lockhart, 210 U. S. 142, 52 L. ed. 994, 16 L.R.A.(N.S.) 162, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681; Book v. Justice Min. Co. 58 Fed. 128, 17 Mor. Min. Rep. 617; Oscamp v. Crystal River Min. Co. 7 C. C. A. 233, 19 U. S. App. 18, 58 Fed. 295, 17 Mor. Min. Rep. 651; Perigo v. Erwin, 85 Fed. 904, 19 Mor. Min. Rep. 269; McCulloch v. Murphy, 125 Fed. 153; Zerres v. Vanina, 134 Fed. 614; Malone v. Jackson, 70 C. C. A. 216, 137 Fed. 878; Rose v. Richmond Min. Co. 17 Nev. 25, 27 Pac. 1110; John- son v. Young, 18 Colo. 625, 34 Pac. 173; Jordan v. Duke, 6 Ariz. 55, 53 Pac. 197; Conn v. Oberto, 32 Colo. 313, 76 Pac. 369; Shattuck v. Costello, 8 Ariz. 22, 68 Pac. 529, 22 Mor. Min. Rep. 136; Peoria & C. Mill. & Min. Co. v. Turner, 20 Colo. App. 474, 79 Pac. 915; Anderson v. Caughey, 3 Cal. App. 22, 84 Pac. 223; Sullivan v. Sharp, 33 Colo. 346, 80 Pac. 1054; Lockhart v. Farrell, 31 Utah, 155, 86 Pac. 1077; Nash v. McNamara, 30 Nev. 114, 16 L.R.A. (N.S.) 168, 133 Am. St. Rep. 694, 93 Pac. 405; Moorhead v. Erie Min. & Mill. Co. 43 Colo. 408, 96 Pac. 253; Lozar v. Neill, 37 Mont. 287, 96 Pac. 343; Garthe v. Hart, 73 Cal. 541, 15 Pac. 93, 15 Mor. Min. Rep. 492; Souter v. Maguire, 78 Cal. 545, 21 Pac. 183; Quigley v. Gillett, 101 Cal. 469, 35 Pac. 1040, 18 Mor. Min. Rep. 68; Wilson v. Freeman, 68 L.R.A. 836, note; Montagne v. Labay, 2 Alaska, 575.
56 L. ed.

The above authorities seem to hold the attempted location would be void (as to overlapping portion) even though the location notice and discovery were not posted and made on any portion of a valid and subsisting claim, but merely included a portion thereof.

The following authorities deal with cases where the discovery was made within a valid and subsisting mining claim, and hold any attempted location based on such discovery to be absolutely void:

1 Lindley, Mines, §§ 337-339; Martin, Min. Law, § 282; Barringer & A. Mines & Mining, pp. 216-222; Morrison, Min. Rights, 36; Costigan, Min. Law, 152; 27 Cyc. 557; Gwillim v. Donnellan, 115 U. S. 45, 29 L. ed. 348, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1110, 15 Mor. Min. Rep. 482; Erwin v. Perego, 35 C. C. A. 482, 93 Fed. 608; Crown Point Min. Co. v. Buck, 38 C. C. A. 278, 97 Fed. 465; Watson v. Mayberry, 15 Utah, 265, 49 Pac. 479; Reynolds v. Pascoe, 24 Utah, 219, 66 Pac. 1064; Sullivan v. Sharp, 33 Colo. 346, 80 Pac. 1054; Sierra Blanca Min. & Reduction Co. v. Winchell, 35 Colo. 13, 83 Pac. 628; Anderson v. Caughey, 3 Cal. App. 22, 84 Pac. 223; Hoban v. Boyer, 37 Colo. 185, 85 Pac. 837; Lockhart v. Farrell, 31 Utah, 155, 86 Pac. 1077; Tuolumne Consol. Min. Co. v. Maier, 134 Cal. 585, 66 Pac. 863, 21 Mor. Min. Rep. 678; Russell v. Dufresne, 1 Alaska, 486; Atkins v. Hendree, 1 Idaho, 95, 2 Mor. Min. Rep. 328.

Abandonment by senior locator of area conflicting with junior locator will not inure to benefit of the latter.

Lindley, Mines, §§ 363-396; Belk v. Meagher, 104 U. S. 279-285, 26 L. ed. 735-738, 1 Mor. Min. Rep. 510; Oscamp v. Crystal River Min. Co. 7 C. C. A. 233, 19 U. S. App. 18, 58 Fed. 293, 17 Mor. Min. Rep.

651; Pralus v. Pacific Gold & S. Min. Co. 35 Cal. 35, 12 Mor. Min. Rep. 478.

A party cannot make a valid relocation of lands legally possessed by another until the owner's rights have been abandoned, forfeited, or otherwise ended.

Lockhart v. Rollins, 2 Idaho, 540, 21 Pac. 413, 16 Mor. Min. Rep. 16.

After the senior's location has been forfeited, the junior should file an amended certificate if he wishes to take in part of an abandoned claim.

Morrison v. Regan, 8 Idaho, 291, 67 Pac. 955, 22 Mor. Min. Rep. 69; Moorhead v. Erie Min. & Mill. Co. 43 Colo. 408, 96 Pac. 253.

A junior locator may, subsequent to the abandonment or forfeiture of the conflict area by the senior, amend his location and include the overlapping surface; but without some act on his part manifesting an intention to make a new appropriation or acquire a new right after the abandonment or forfeiture became effectual, this area would not, by mere gravity, become a part of the junior location.

1 Lindley, Mines, 1st ed. §§ 363-396; Morrison, Min. Rights, 102; Johnson v. Young, 18 Colo. 625, 34 Pac. 173; Oscamp v. Crystal River Min. Co. 7 C. C. A. 233, 19 U. S. App. 18, 58 Fed. 293, 17 Mor. Min. Rep. 651.

If the discovery of a junior location is on a valid subsisting claim, or if, for any reason, the senior location was wholly void, an amended certificate would not be sufficient to cure the imperfection or to take in the area in conflict, but a relocation would have to be made.

Sullivan v. Sharp, 33 Colo. 346, 80 Pac. 1054; Brown v. Gurney, 201 U. S. 184, 50 L. ed. 718, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 509.

181] *Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

The defendant in error Kettler applied for a patent for a mining claim. The plaintiff in error filed an adverse claim under Rev. Stat. § 2326, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1430, and then brought this complaint to establish his right of possession to the area in dispute. The facts are these: In 1881 the defendant's claim, then called Emma No. 2, was located, running north and south. In 1889 the plaintiff's claim, Independence No. 2, was located, running east and west, its westerly end overlapping the southerly end of Emma No. 2, and the discovery being within the overlapping part. Kettler, who then had Emma No. 2, failed, because of the illness of her daughter, to do the assessment work upon it for 1903, and, supposing that to be the only way to hold the ground, relocated it on January 1, 1904, as Malta No. 1, since which time she has done the required annual work. The only question is whether, on the failure of the defendant, as stated, for 1903, the plaintiff's location attached, or whether it was wholly void. The state courts gave judgment for the defendant (17 Idaho, 322, 105 Pac. 1059), and the plaintiff brought the case to this court.

The argument for the plaintiff is a vain attempt to reopen what has been established by the decisions. A location and discovery on land withdrawn quoad hoc from the public domain by a valid and subsisting mining claim is absolutely void for the purpose of founding a contradictory right. Belk v. Meagher, 104 U. S. 279, 26 L. ed. 735, 1 Mor. Min. Rep. 510; Gwillim v. Donnellan, 115 U. S. 45, 29 L. ed. 348, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1110, 15 Mor. Min. Rep. 482. This doctrine was not qualified in its proper meaning by Del Monte Min. & Mill. Co. v. Last Chance Min. & Mill. Co. 171 U. S. 55, 43 L. ed. 72, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 895, 19 Mor. Min. Rep. 370, for that case attributed effect to the overlapping location only for the purpose of securing extralateral rights on the dip of a vein the apex of which was within the second and outside of the first,—rights consistent with all those acquired by the first location. See Creede & C. C. Min. & Mill. Co. v. Uinta Tunnel Min. & Transp. Co. 196 U. S. 337, 342, 49 L. ed. 501, 505, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 266. The principle of Belk v. Meagher was reaffirmed (171 U. S. 78, 79, 43 L. ed. 82, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 895, 19 Mor. Min. Rep. 370), as it was again in Clipper Min. Co. v. Eli Min. & Land Co. 194 U. S. 220, 226, 227, 48 L. ed. 944, 949, 950, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 632, and in Brown v. Gurney, 201 U. S. 184, 193, 50 L. ed. 717, 722, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 509. It is true that there is reasoning to the contrary in Lavagnino v. Uhlig, 198 U. S. 453, 49 L. ed. 1123, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 716, but in Farrell v. Lockhart, 210 U. S. 142, 146, 147, 52 L. ed. 994, 996, 997, 16 L.R.A.(N.S.) 162, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681, that language was qualified and the older precedents recognized as in full force. We deem it unnecessary to consider the distinctions attempted by the plaintiff between location and relocation, voidable and void claims, etc., as the very foundation of his right, the offer and permission of the United States under Rev. Stat. § 2322, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1425, was wanting when he did the acts intended to erect it. His entry was a trespass, his claim was void, and the defendant's forfeiture did him no good.

There was some attempt before us to recede from the concession made below, that the defendant had a right to relocate under Rev. Stat. § 2324, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p.

1426. We do not see how it could help the plaintiff if the proposition were incorrect, or any sufficient reason for listening to the argument in this case.

Judgment affirmed.

183]*IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF H. H. LOVING, Trustee.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 183-188.)

Bankruptcy — review — revisory proceedings.

An order establishing as a lien against the bankrupt estate a claim, the validity of which as a general claim the trustee does not contest, is not reviewable by a circuit court of appeals, in the exercise of its power under the bankrupt act of July 1, 1898 (30 Stat. at L. 553, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3432), § 24b, to superintend and revise in matter of law the proceedings of inferior courts of bankruptcy, since this revisory proceeding is not intended as a substitute for the appeal which would lie under § 25a, giving appellate jurisdiction to the circuit courts of appeals in bankruptcy proceedings.

[For other cases, see Bankruptcy, XIII., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 216.]

Submitted March 15, 1912. Decided April 1, 1912.

ON A CERTIFICATE from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit, presenting the question as to the right of that court to review by revisory petition an order establishing a claim as a lien against a bankrupt estate. Answered in the negative.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. James Denis Mocquot submitted the cause for Loving, trustee.

Mr. W. F. Bradshaw, Jr., submitted the cause for the American-German National Bank.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

This case is here upon certificate from the circuit court of appeals for the sixth circuit.

184] *From the statement in the certificate preceding the question asked of this court, it appears that Loving, trustee in bankruptcy of the Starks-Ullman Saddlery Company, filed a petition in the circuit court of appeals to revise in matter of law an order of the district court adjudging that the American-German National Bank of Paducah, Kentucky, had a lien under the statutes of Kentucky upon the property and effects of the bankrupt, in the sum of $10,125, and interest. The facts are stated as follows:

"On December 4, 1908, after the Saddlery Company had been adjudged a bankrupt, and the cause had been referred to the referee in bankruptcy, the bank filed before the referee its proof of claim, verified by its cashier, in which it alleged that the bankrupt was indebted to it in the sum of $11,125, evidenced by two notes, one for $2,000, dated April 20, 1908, and due four months after date, and the other for $8,000, dated July 25, 1908, and due two months after date, each of which provided for a reasonable attorneys' fee, and executed by the bankrupt for unmanufactured leather sold to it for use in carrying on its manufacturing business. After setting forth the nature of this indebtedness, the proof of claim concluded as follows: 'Deponent says that . . . by and under the provision of §§ 2487-2490 of the Kentucky statutes, the claimant has a lien upon all the property and effects of the bankrupt involved in its business, and upon all the accessories connected therewith, used in its business, to secure the payment of its said indebtedness; and deponent now asserts its claim and lien upon all such property and effects, to secure the payment of its said debt, including interest upon the notes from maturity thereof, and an attorneys' fee, as provided in said notes, of 10 per cent for the collection thereof by legal process.'

"Wherefore, the affiant prays that the claimant's debt be allowed as a lien claim against the assets of *this bankrupt[185 estate, and for all other proper and equitable relief.'

"The trustee in bankruptcy thereupon filed exceptions to the allowance of this claim in so far as it was made for any sum in excess of $10,000 at the time of the adjudication of bankruptcy, for various reasons set out in the exceptions, and also further objected and excepted to the allowance of any part of the said claim as a lien in favor of the bank against the estate of the bankrupt, for various reasons set forth in the exceptions. These exceptions of the trustee concluded as follows:

"Wherefore, he prays that said claim be disallowed as a lien against the property of the aforesaid bankrupt, and that it be allowed as a general claim only for the sum of two thousand ($2,000) dollars, with interest from August 20, 1908, and for eight thousand ($8,000) dollars, with interest from September 25, 1908.'

NOTE.—On appeal and review in bankruptcy cases—see note to Re Eggert, 43 C. C. A. 9.

56 L. ed.

The referee, having heard the case upon an agreed statement of facts, ordered that the exceptions of the trustee be overruled, and the claim of the bank was established and allowed as a lien against the estate of the bankrupt. The trustee in bankruptcy thereupon filed his petition for review of the order of the referee in the district court. The district court affirmed the order of the referee, and adjudged the claim to be in the amount found, with a lien for the security thereof, as reported by the referee. More than ten days thereafter, on June 30, 1909, the trustee in bankruptcy filed his petition for the revision of the order of the district court in the circuit court of appeals, his petition reciting:

"That said order was erroneous in matter of law, in that it adjudged a dismissal of your petitioner's petition, and in that it adjudged that the American-German National Bank of Paducah had any lien upon any of the property or effects of the aforesaid bankrupt by virtue of the statutes of 186] the state of Kentucky in such *cases made and provided, or by virtue of any law or contract.

"Wherefore your petitioner, feeling aggrieved because of such order, asks that the same may be revised in matter of law by this honorable court of appeals of the United States for the sixth circuit, as provided in § 24b of the bankruptcy law of 1898 [30 Stat. at L. 553, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3432] and the rules and practice in such cases provided."

In this certificate it is said:

"In the brief filed in this court in behalf of the trustee, in support of the petition, no question is made as to the allowance of the claim of the bank as a general claim against the bank(rupt), or as to its amount, the sole contention of the trustee on the merits being that the district court was in error in matter of law in adjudging that, under the Kentucky statutes, the claim was secured by a lien upon the property and effects of the bankrupt."

The circuit court of appeals propounds the question whether it has jurisdiction to revise the order of the district court upon the petition for revision filed under § 24b of the bankruptcy act.

The bankruptcy act of 1898, § 24, gives appellate jurisdiction to the circuit court of appeals and to this court of controversies arising in bankruptcy proceedings, and in paragraph b provides:

"The several circuit courts of appeal shall have jurisdiction in equity, either interlocutory or final, to superintend and revise in matter of law the proceedings of the several inferior courts of bankruptcy within their jurisdiction. Such power shall be exercised on due notice and petition by any party aggrieved."

Section 25 provides for appeals and writs of error in bankruptcy proceedings to the circuit court of appeals and to this court. These sections of the bankruptcy act were under consideration in this court in the case of Coder v. Arts, 213 U. S. 223, 53 L. ed. 772, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436, 16 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1008, and it was there held *con-[187] troversies arising in bankruptcy proceedings, as distinguished from bankruptcy proceedings, were appealable to the circuit court of appeals under the court of appeals act of March 3, 1891 [26 Stat. at L. 826, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 488]; that where a claim alleged to be secured by a lien upon the bankrupt's estate was filed against a bankrupt for allowance, an appeal was given under § 25a to the circuit court of appeals, as from a judgment allowing or rejecting a claim of $500 or over, and that from any final decision of the circuit court of appeals allowing or rejecting a claim coming within § 25b, a further appeal was given to this court. Under the decision of this court in that case there can be no doubt that the bank in this case instituted a proceeding in bankruptcy, which was appealable under § 25a to the circuit court of appeals. The fact that after the adjudication of the claim the trustee made no objection to its allowance as a valid claim, but intended only to contest its validity as a lien upon the bankrupt's estate, made no difference as to the appellate character of the controversy. A bankruptcy proceeding was instituted as to the claim and its alleged lien, as distinguished from a controversy arising in a bankruptcy proceeding, and the appeal was under § 25a to the circuit court of appeals. Coder v. Arts, supra.

The question now propounded is: Was the trustee also entitled to a review in the circuit court of appeals, under § 24b, by petition for review? Under that section authority, either interlocutory or final, is given to the circuit court of appeals to superintend and revise in matters of law the proceedings of the inferior courts of bankruptcy within their jurisdiction. We think this subdivision was not intended to give an additional remedy to those whose rights could be protected by an appeal under § 25 of the act. That section provides a short method by which rejected claims can be promptly reviewed by appeal in the circuit court of appeals, and, in certain cases, in *this court. The proceeding[188] under § 24b, permitting a review of questions of law arising in bankruptcy proceedings, was not intended as a substitute for the right of appeal under § 25. Coder v.

Arts, supra, p. 233. Under § 24b a question of law only is taken to the circuit court of appeals; under the appeal section, controversies of fact as well are taken to that court, with findings of fact to be made therein if the case is appealable to this court. We do not think it was intended to give to persons who could avail themselves of the remedy by appeal under § 25 a review by petition under § 24b. The object of § 24b is rather to give a review as to matters of law, where facts are not in controversy, of orders of courts of bankruptcy in the ordinary administration of the bankrupt's estate.

In our judgment the rule was well stated in Re Mueller, 68 C. C. A. 349, 135 Fed. 711, by Mr. Justice Lurton, then Circuit Judge (p. 715):

"The 'proceedings' reviewable [under § 24b] are those administrative orders and decrees in the ordinary course of a bankruptcy between the filing of the petition and the final settlement of the estate, which are not made specially appealable under [§] 25a. This would include questions between the bankrupt and his creditors of an administrative character, and exclude such matters as are appealable under [§] 24a."

We answer the question certified in the negative.

189]. *RACHEL B. BROWN, Plff. in Err.,
v.

THOMAS O. SELFRIDGE.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 189-193.)

Evidence — burden of proof — malicious prosecution — malice — probable cause.

1. The burden of proving malice and want of probable cause rests upon the plaintiff in an action for malicious prosecution. [For other cases, see Evidence, II. e, 6, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Evidence — malicious prosecution — probable cause — prima facie case.

2. A prima facie showing of want of probable cause for swearing out a search warrant charging that certain property stolen by persons unknown was concealed upon defendant's premises is not made by evidence as to the prosecution and the circumstances under which the unsuccessful search was made and the dismissal of the proceedings, together with testimony tending to show defendant's good reputation for honesty and integrity, and the injury to her health and occupation.

[For other cases, see Evidence, II. n; XII. f, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

NOTE.—As to when malice may be inferred in an action for malicious prosecution—see note to Jenkins v. Gilligan, 9 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1087.
56 L. ed.

Trial — questions of law and fact — want of probable cause.

3. In clear cases the question of want of probable cause for instituting a criminal prosecution is one of law for the court.

[For other cases, see Trial, VI. c, 14, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 214.]

Argued March 14, 1912. Decided April 1, 1912.

IN ERROR to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Supreme Court of the District, directing a judgment in favor of defendant in an action for malicious prosecution. Affirmed.

See same case below, 34 App. D. C. 242.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Wilton J. Lambert argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

In the nature of things, a less amount and different class of evidence is required to establish a negative than an affirmative.

Jones, Ev. § 178; Olson v. Tvete, 46 Minn. 225, 48 N. W. 914.

The question of malice is one exclusively for the jury.

Stewart v. Sonneborn, 98 U. S. 187, 25 L. ed. 116; Staples v. Johnson, 25 App. D. C. 159.

Mr. Henry E. Davis argued the cause, and, with Messrs. William A. Gordon and J. Holdsworth Gordon, filed a brief for defendant in error:

Unless both want of probable cause and malice are shown to exist, the case must fall, and the onus probandi is upon the plaintiff to show each.

Wheeler v. Nesbitt, 24 How. 544, 549, 550, 16 L. ed. 765, 768, 769; Stone v. Crocker, 24 Pick. 83.

The fact that the case was nolle prossed in the police court, while a necessary item of proof in the chain of claim of the plaintiff, as evidence to meet the requirements of the law as to the malicious character of the act of the defendant, has no value.

Stewart v. Sonneborn, 98 U. S. 195, 25 L. ed. 119.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

The plaintiff in error brought suit in the supreme court of the District of Columbia against the defendant, to recover damages for malicious prosecution. Judgment was entered in favor of the defendant, and upon appeal to the court of appeals of the District of Columbia this judgment was affirmed. 34 App. D. C. 242. The case was then brought to this court upon proceedings in error.

The facts as to the prosecution are, in substance: That the plaintiff, being the keeper of a boarding house in the city of Washington, on or about the 26th day of December, 1907, and occupying certain premises known as 717 Eighth street northwest, and one Mary Levy, were named as defendants in a proceeding commenced by Selfridge in the police court of the District of Columbia, in which he swore out a search warrant for certain of his property, namely, twelve curtains, of the value of $300, which, he averred, had, within two hundred days last past, by some person or persons unknown, been stolen, taken, and carried away out of his possession, and which he had probable cause to suspect, and did suspect, were concealed in the premises of plaintiff and Mary Levy, on Eighth street; that, under authority of the search warrant, certain officers, accompanied by the defendant, proceeded to search the premises, but did not find the goods in question, and that, upon return of that fact being made, the proceedings against the plaintiff and Mrs. Levy were nolle and the case thus ended.

At the trial of the case in the supreme court, the plaintiff introduced testimony as to the prosecution and the circumstances under which the search was made, and also testimony tending to show her good reputation for honesty and integrity, and the injury to her health and occupation. At the conclusion of the plaintiff's proof, the court instructed the jury to return a verdict for the defendant, upon the ground that the plaintiff had failed to make a prima facie showing of want of probable cause, and judgment was entered accordingly.

The question involved, therefore, is: Was there sufficient proof of the want of probable cause to carry the case to the jury?

The testimony shows that when the defendant and *officers executing the search warrant visited the house of Miss Brown, the plaintiff, search was made of the premises and also of the trunks of the plaintiff and of Mrs. Levy, who, it seems, was at the time stopping with Miss Brown. As we have said, the officers found nothing.

The charge upon which the search warrant was issued did not accuse either Miss Brown or Mrs. Levy of stealing or wrongfully taking the property from the defendant, but stated that such property was thus appropriated by some person unknown, within two hundred days before the warrant was sworn out, and the belief of the defendant was alleged that the property was concealed within the premises of the persons named.

There was testimony in the record tending to show that Miss Brown had not taken the property mentioned or other property from the house of the defendant; that she was in his employ for a number of years, and was trusted with monetary transactions, and otherwise treated as worthy of his confidence. The plaintiff testified in her own behalf, and Mrs. Levy was called as a witness in support of her case.

The plaintiff did not show that, with her knowledge or consent, the alleged stolen property was not in her house or upon the premises within the time named in the search warrant. Mrs. Levy, evidently not an unwilling witness, did not testify that she had never taken the goods, or that, so far as she knew, they were never upon the premises of the plaintiff.

It is settled law that, in an action of this kind, the burden of proving malice and the want of probable cause is upon the plaintiff. This has been the recognized law of this court and was distinctly stated in the case of Wheeler v. Nesbitt, 24 How. 544, 16 L. ed. 765, often cited in cases of this character, where Mr. Justice Clifford, speaking for the court, said (p. 551):

"The plaintiff must show that the defendant acted from *malicious motives[192 in prosecuting him, and that he had no sufficient reason to believe him to be guilty. If either of these be wanting, the action must fail; and so are all the authorities, from a very early period to the present time. Golding v. Crowle, Sayer, 1; Farmer v. Darling, 4 Burr. 1974; 1 Hilliard, Torts, 460.

"It is true, as before remarked, that want of probable cause is evidence of malice for the consideration of the jury; but the converse of the proposition cannot be sustained. Nothing will meet the exigencies of the case, so far as respects the allegation that probable cause was wanting, except proof of the fact; and the onus probandi, as was well remarked in the case last referred to, is upon the plaintiff to prove affirmatively, by circumstances or otherwise, as he may be able, that the defendant had no reasonable ground for commencing the prosecution. Purcell v. MacNamara, 9 East, 361, 1 Campb. 199, 9 Revised Rep. 578; Willans v. Taylor, 6 Bing. 184, 3 Moore & P. 350, 7 L. J. C. P. 250, 31 Revised Rep. 379; Johnstone v. Sutton, 1 T. R. 544, 1 Bro. P. C. 76, 1 Revised Rep. 269, 1 Eng. Rul. Cas. 766; Add. on W. and R. 435; Turner v. Ambler, 10 Q. B.

257, 16 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 158, 6 Jur. 346."

While it is true that the want of probable cause is required to be shown by the plaintiff, and the burden of proof is upon her in this respect, such proof must necessarily be of a negative character, and concerning facts which are principally within the knowledge of the defendant. The motives and circumstances which induced him to enter upon the prosecution are best known to himself. This being true, the plaintiff could hardly be expected to furnish full proof upon the matter. She is only required to adduce such testimony as, in the absence of proof by the defendant to the contrary, would afford grounds for presuming that the allegation in this respect is true. 1 Greenl. Ev. § 78. In other words, the plaintiff was only obliged to adduce such proof, by circumstances or otherwise, as are affirmatively within her control, and which she might fairly be expected to be able to produce. As Mr. Justice Clifford put it, in Wheeler v. Nesbitt, supra, 193] "the plaintiff must prove this part of the case "affirmatively, by circumstances or otherwise, as he may be able."

It is contended by the learned counsel for the plaintiff in error that Miss Brown produced all the testimony in the case which she might reasonably be expected to control, and it is pertinently asked, What more could she prove? We think an inspection of the record furnishes an answer to the question. With respect to the search warrant, the charge was not that the plaintiff and Mrs. Levy stole or wrongfully took the property of the defendant, but the belief of the defendant was averred that the property had been by someone thus taken, and was concealed in or about the premises of the plaintiff and Mrs. Levy. The plaintiff could readily have shown that, within the time named in the search warrant, so far as she knew, with the means which she had of information, the property in question had never been upon her premises. She could have shown by Mrs. Levy, whom she produced as a witness, that Mrs. Levy did not take the property from the premises of the defendant, and that the property was not upon the premises of Miss Brown at any time, so far as her knowledge and opportunity of knowing extended.

Failing to adduce proof of the facts to which we have called attention, and, in clear cases, the question of probable cause being one of law, for the court, we think that there was no error in taking the case from the jury.

Judgment of the District Court of Appeals is affirmed.

56 L. ed.

*INTERSTATE COMMERCE COM-[194
MISSION et al., Appts.,

v.
GOODRICH TRANSIT COMPANY. (No.
879.)

INTERSTATE COMMERCE COMMISSION
et al., Appts.,

v.
GOODRICH TRANSIT COMPANY. (No.
880.)

UNITED STATES et al., Appts.,
v.

WHITE STAR LINE. (No. 881.)

UNITED STATES et al., Appts.,
v.

WHITE STAR LINE. (No. 882.)

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 194-216.)

Interstate Commerce Commission — powers — accounting — reports.

1. The Interstate Commerce Commission did not exceed its authority under the act of February 4, 1887 (24 Stat. at L. 379, chap. 104, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3154), § 20, as amended by the act of June 29, 1906 (34 Stat. at L. 584, chap. 3591, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1909, p. 1150), to prescribe a uniform system of bookkeeping and accounting for, and to call for annual reports from, common carriers by water upon the Great Lakes, which, being engaged in the transportation of passengers and property, partly by railroad and partly by water, under a joint arrangement for a continuous carriage or shipment, are, by § 1 of that act, brought within its terms, because such accounting system and reports are not limited to the joint rail and water business, but are required to embrace as well the other business of the carriers, such as their port to port business, both intrastate and interstate, and the business of operating amusement parks.

[For other cases, see Interstate Commerce Commission, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

NOTE.—On the power of Congress to regulate commerce—see notes to State ex rel. Corwin v. Indiana & O. Oil, Gas & Min. Co. 6 L.R.A. 579; Bullard v. Northern P. R. Co. 11 L.R.A. 246; Re Wilson, 12 L.R.A. 624; Gibbons v. Ogden, 6 L. ed. U. S. 23; Brown v. Maryland, 6 L. ed. U. S. 678; Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 29 L. ed. U. S. 158; Ratterman v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 32 L. ed. U. S. 229; Harmon v. Chicago, 37 L. ed. U. S. 216; and Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Backus, 38 L. ed. U. S. 1041.

On delegation of legislative power to railroad commissions—see note to Railroad Commission v. Central R. Co. 95 C. C. A. 132.

On delegation by legislature of power to regulate carriers—see note to State v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. 32 L.R.A. (N.S.) 639.

Commerce — Federal regulation — carriers — accounting — reports.

2. Congress did not exceed its power under the commerce clause by enacting the act of February 4, 1887, § 20, as amended by the act of June 29, 1906, under which common carriers by water upon the Great Lakes, engaged in the transportation of passengers and property partly by water, under a joint arrangement for the continuous carriage or shipment, may be required by the Interstate Commerce Commission to adopt a uniform system of accounting and bookkeeping, and to make annual reports, which shall embrace not only the joint rail and water business, but the other business of the carriers as well, such as their port to port business, both intrastate and interstate, and the business of operating amusement parks.

[For other cases, see Commerce, III., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — delegation of power — Interstate Commerce Commission.

3. Leaving to the Interstate Commerce Commission the carrying out of details in the exercise of its discretion under the act of February 4, 1887, § 20, as amended by the act of June 29, 1906, to prescribe a uniform system of accounting and bookkeeping for the carriers subject to that act, does not render such section invalid as a delegation of legislative authority.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 153-166, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Commerce — Federal regulation — carriers — accounting — reports.

4. Corporations organized under state laws, engaged in interstate carriage, could validly be subjected to regulation and control by the Interstate Commerce Commission, in the exercise of its power, under the act of February 4, 1887, § 20, as amended by the act of June 29, 1906, to prescribe a uniform system of accounting and bookkeeping, and to require annual reports.

[For other cases, see Commerce, III., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[Nos. 879, 880, 881, and 882.]

Argued February 20 and 21, 1912. Decided April 1, 1912.

FOUR APPEALS from the United States Commerce Court to review decrees enjoining in part the enforcement of orders of the Interstate Commerce Commission prescribing a uniform system of accounting and bookkeeping for carriers by water upon the Great Lakes, and calling for annual reports from such carriers. Reversed.

See same case below, 190 Fed. 943.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Charles W. Needham argued the cause and filed a brief for the Interstate Commerce Commission:

The provisions of § 20 of the interstate commerce act have a real and substantial relation to the execution of the powers and the attainment of the purposes of the act to regulate commerce; therefore Congress has power to require statistical reports from, and a uniform system of bookkeeping by, every common carrier subject to the act, and the Interstate Commerce Commission acted within its statutory power in requiring such reports from, and classification of accounts by, such carriers.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 145 U. S. 276, 36 L. ed. 703, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 92, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 844; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. 167 U. S. 506, 42 L. ed. 255, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 896; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co. 204 U. S. 426, 438, 51 L. ed. 553, 558, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350, 9 Ann. Cas. 1075; Adair v. United States, 208 U. S. 178, 52 L. ed. 444, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277, 13 Ann. Cas. 764; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Illinois C. R. Co. 215 U. S. 452, 474, 54 L. ed. 280, 289, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 155; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. United States, 215 U. S. 481, 54 L. ed. 292, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 164; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 221 U. S. 612, 618-622, 55 L. ed. 878, 882-884, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 621; Southern R. Co. v. United States, 222 U. S. 20, 24, 26, 27, ante, 72-74, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 2; New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 200 U. S. 361, 391, 50 L. ed. 515, 521, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 272; Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 196, 6 L. ed. 23, 70.

The relation of a carrier to a particular traffic, or to instrumentalities which are under the regulating power of Congress, determines whether such a carrier is subject to the act.

Oyster Police Steamers, 31 Fed. 763; The Daniel Ball, 10 Wall. 557-566, 19 L. ed. 999-1002; Southern P. Terminal Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 219 U. S. 498, 55 L. ed. 310, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 279; Employers' Liability Cases (Howard v. Illinois C. R. Co.) 207 U. S. 497, 52 L. ed. 308, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 141.

The legislative branch of the government exercises exclusive discretion when adopting any means intended to accomplish the purposes in view in a legislative act.

McCulloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 316, 421, 4 L. ed. 579, 605; Lottery Case (Champion v. Ames) 188 U. S. 321, 353, 47 L. ed. 492, 500, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 321, 13 Am. Crim. Rep. 561.

Congress has not granted to the Commission legislative powers in violation of the fundamental law.

Buttfield v. Stranahan, 192 U. S. 496, 497, 48 L. ed. 535, 536, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 349; Union Bridge Co. v. United States, 224 U. S.

204 U. S. 377, 51 L. ed. 530, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 367; Monongahela Bridge Co. v. United States, 216 U. S. 177, 54 L. ed. 435, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 356; United States v. Grimaud, 220 U. S. 506, 55 L. ed. 563, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 480.

The constitutional rights of the appellees are not invaded by the publicity given their business.

Flint v. Stone Tracy Co. 220 U. S. 107, 55 L. ed. 389, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 342; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 221 U. S. 612, 55 L. ed. 878, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 621.

The commerce court erred in holding that "a recast of the forms of reports should be made by the Commission, acting in conformity with the views herein expressed," thereby requiring that the reports and classification of accounts should only include business partly by railroad and partly by water.

Southern R. Co. v. United States, 222 U. S. 20, ante, 72, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 2.

Assistant to the Attorney General Fowler argued the cause, and, with Mr. Blackburn Esterline, Special Assistant to the Attorney General, filed a brief for the United States:

Information concerning the entire business of a carrier subject to the provisions of the act has such a real and substantial relation to interstate commerce as to authorize Congress to require its production before the Commission.

The Daniel Ball, 10 Wall. 557, 19 L. ed. 999; Smith v. Alabama, 124 U. S. 465, 479, 480, 31 L. ed. 508, 512, 513, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 804, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 564; Northern Securities Co. v. United States, 193 U. S. 197, 335, 48 L. ed. 679, 699, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Illinois C. R. Co. 215 U. S. 452, 474, 54 L. ed. 280, 289, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 155; Southern R. Co. v. United States, 222 U. S. 20, 26, ante, 72, 74, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 2; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 221 U. S. 612-618, 55 L. ed. 878-883, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 621.

Information concerning the entire business of a carrier subject to the provisions of the act is essential to its proper enforcement, and Congress has the power to require its production at the instance of the Commission.

St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Gill, 156 U. S. 649, 39 L. ed. 567, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 484; Minneapolis & St. L. Co. v. Minnesota, 186 U. S. 257, 46 L. ed. 1151, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 900; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Brimson, 154 U. S. 447, 465, 470, 472, 38 L. ed. 1047, 1053-1055, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 545, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1125; M'Culloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 316, 421, 423, 56 L. ed.

4 L. ed. 579, 605; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Baird, 194 U. S. 25, 43, 44, 48 L. ed. 860, 868, 869, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 563; Flint v. Stone Tracy Co. 220 U. S. 107, 55 L. ed. 389, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 342.

Section 20 of the interstate commerce act is not unconstitutional on the ground that it authorizes unreasonable searches and seizures.

Hale v. Henkel, 201 U. S. 43-77, 50 L. ed. 652-667, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 370; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Baird, 194 U. S. 25, 48 L. ed. 860, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 563; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 221 U. S. 612, 618, 55 L. ed. 878, 882, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 621.

Mr. Ralph M. Shaw argued the cause, and, with Messrs. John Barton Payne, Silas H. Strawn, and Garrard B. Winston, filed a brief for appellees:

The rules laid down by the courts for the interpretation of the act to regulate commerce preclude the interpretation placed upon it by the Commission in the case at bar.

Texas & P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 197, 218, 40 L. ed. 940, 947, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 405, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 666; McKee v. United States, 164 U. S. 287, 293, 41 L. ed. 437, 439, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 92; Camden Iron Works v. United States, 85 C. C. A. 585, 158 Fed. 561; Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Osborne, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 257, 3 C. C. A. 347, 10 U. S. App. 430, 52 Fed. 912; Blake v. National City Bank, 23 Wall. 307, 319, 23 L. ed. 119, 120; Smith v. Townsend, 148 U. S. 490, 494, 37 L. ed. 533, 534, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 634.

One engaged in intrastate business, who also engages in interstate business, does not thereby subject all his intrastate business to the regulating power of Congress.

Employers' Liability Cases (Howard v. Illinois C. R. Co.) 207 U. S. 502, 52 L. ed. 310, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 141; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 221 U. S. 612, 618, 55 L. ed. 878, 882, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 621; Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 184, 40 L. ed. 935, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 391, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 700.

An act of Congress or the order of an officer of the Federal government, or a subordinate body created by an act of Congress, or a decree of a Federal court, which, under the guise or the pretense of regulating interstate commerce, is so broad in its scope as in fact to regulate or interfere with intrastate commerce, is void.

Under such circumstances, especially when the act is penal, the court will not introduce words of limitation, and thus by judicial interpretation attempt to make good that which in its essence is void.

Illinois C. R. Co. v. McKendree, 203 U. S. 514, 529, 51 L. ed. 298, 304, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 153; Addyston Pipe & Steel Co. v. United States, 175 U. S. 211, 247, 44 L. ed. 136, 149, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 96; Employers' Liability Cases (Howard v. Illinois C. R. Co.) 207 U. S. 492, 498, 499, 502, 52 L. ed. 306, 309, 310, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 141; United States v. Reese, 92 U. S. 214, 221, 23 L. ed. 563, 565; Trade Mark Cases, 100 U. S. 82, 99, 25 L. ed. 550, 553; United States v. Ju Toy, 198 U. S. 253, 262, 263, 49 L. ed. 1040, 1043, 1044, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 644.

Section 20 of the act to regulate commerce is void because it is an unlawful delegation of legislative power:

(1) The law gives the Commission discretion to determine whether it will legislate or not.

(2) The law also confers discretionary power upon the Commission to determine what (if any) the legislation shall be.

Marshall, Field & Co. v. Clark, 143 U. S. 649, 693, 36 L. ed. 294, 310, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 495; Wayman v. Southard, 10 Wheat. 1, 43, 6 L. ed. 253, 262; Harriman v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 211 U. S. 407, 418, 53 L. ed. 253, 262, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 115; O'Neil v. American F. Ins. Co. 166 Pa. 72, 26 L.R.A. 715, 45 Am. St. Rep. 650, 30 Atl. 943; Anderson v. Manchester F. Assur. Co. 59 Minn. 182, 28 L.R.A. 609, 50 Am. St. Rep. 400, 60 N. W. 1095, 63 N. W. 241; Dowling v. Lancashire Ins. Co. 92 Wis. 63, 31 L.R.A. 112, 65 N. W. 738; King v. Concordia F. Ins. Co. 140 Mich. 258, 103 N. W. 616, 6 Ann. Cas. 87.

On this point the cases at bar are not, for several reasons, controlled by either United States v. Grimaud, 220 U. S. 506, 55 L. ed. 563, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 480, or St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Taylor, 210 U. S. 281, 52 L. ed. 1061, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 616.

1. A conspicuous reason is that, in the cases at bar, Congress did not determine or legislate that there should or ought to be any rules or regulations respecting bookkeeping methods, or any uniformity therein. On the contrary, Congress left it to the Commission in their discretion to determine:

(a) Whether there should be any legislation on the subject at all; and (b) If so, to enact such legislation.

2. It was thus a complete divestiture or delegation of legislative power.

Whether or not a power claimed but not granted is a necessary incident to the power granted is (where the facts are not conceded) to be determined by the court.

If, under the pretense of exercising a power granted, Congress or a subordinate body goes beyond that which is necessary, then such action on the part of Congress or its subordinate body is void.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Illinois C. R. Co. 215 U. S. 452, 54 L. ed. 280, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 155; Adair v. United States, 208 U. S. 161, 52 L. ed. 436, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277, 13 Ann. Cas. 764; Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Arkansas, 219 U. S. 453, 55 L. ed. 290, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 275; Employers' Liability Cases (Howard v. Illinois C. R. Co.) 207 U. S. 463, 52 L. ed. 297, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 141; Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. v. Riverside Mills, 219 U. S. 186, 55 L. ed. 167, 31 L.R.A. (N.S.) 7, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 164; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Union P. R. Co. 222 U. S. 541, ante, 308, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 108.

Under our dual form of government the Federal government is supreme in the field of interstate commerce, and the state governments are supreme in the field of intrastate commerce.

M'Culloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 412, 4 L. ed. 602; Worcester v. Georgia, 6 Pet. 515, 8 L. ed. 483; Ableman v. Booth, 21 How. 506, 16 L. ed. 169; License Tax Cases, 5 Wall. 462, 18 L. ed. 497; Employers' Liability Cases (Howard v. Illinois C. R. Co.) 207 U. S. 463, 498, 52 L. ed. 297, 309, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 141; New York ex rel. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Knight, 192 U. S. 28, 48 L. ed. 328, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 202; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 221 U. S. 612, 617, 618, 621, 55 L. ed. 878, 882-884, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 621.

Section 20 of the act to regulate commerce and the orders of the Commission, both in re "Special Accounting Methods," and in re "Special Report Series Circular No. 10," are void:

(1) They are not a regulation of the rates on which interstate commerce moves.

(2) They are not a regulation of the roadbed over which interstate commerce moves.

(3) They are not a regulation of the vehicles in which interstate commerce is carried.

(4) They are not a regulation of the employees engaged in handling interstate commerce.

(5) They are not a regulation of interstate commerce itself. On the contrary, they are an interference with the internal affairs of the appellees.

(6) They prohibit the appellees from keeping for their corporate purposes such books as, in their own judgment, the corporate necessities may require.

(7) They prohibit a common carrier engaged as to any part of its business in interstate commerce from keeping any books or memoranda not prescribed by the Commission with respect to any business which is not under the act to regulate interstate commerce.

McCulloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 412, 4 L. ed. 602; Worcester v. Georgia, 6 Pet. 515, 8 L. ed. 483; Ableman v. Booth, 21 How. 506, 16 L. ed. 169; License Tax Cases, 5 Wall. 462, 18 L. ed. 497; Employers' Liability Cases (Howard v. Illinois C. R. Co.) 207 U. S. 463, 498, 52 L. ed. 297, 309, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 141; New York ex rel. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Knight, 192 U. S. 28, 48 L. ed. 328, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 202; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 221 U. S. 612, 617, 618, 621, 55 L. ed. 878, 882-884, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 621.

Congress has no power to make a general inquisitorial excursion or examination into the internal affairs of a corporation organized under the laws of one of the states.

Angell & A. Priv. Corp. § 687; Guthrie v. Harkness, 199 U. S. 148, 50 L. ed. 130, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 4, 4 Ann. Cas. 433; Sinking Fund Cases, 99 U. S. 720, 25 L. ed. 501; Northern Securities Co. v. United States, 193 U. S. 348, 48 L. ed. 704, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436; Hale v. Henkel, 201 U. S. 75, 50 L. ed. 665, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 370; Re Pacific R. Commission, 32 Fed. 241; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Brimson, 154 U. S. 447, 38 L. ed. 1047, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 545, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1125; Wilson v. United States, 221 U. S. 361, 384, 55 L. ed. 771, 780, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 538.

Congress may not inquire into the internal affairs of a state corporation except for certain specific purposes.

Kilbourn v. Thompson, 103 U. S. 168, 26 L. ed. 377; Re Chapman, 166 U. S. 661, 41 L. ed. 1154, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 677; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Brimson, 154 U. S. 478, 38 L. ed. 1057, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 545, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1125; Harriman v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 211 U. S. 407, 417, 53 L. ed. 253, 262, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 115; Wilson v. United States, 221 U. S. 361, 384, 55 L. ed. 771, 780, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 538.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

The appellees in these four cases are corporations organized under state laws, and engaged in the carriage of passengers and freight by water upon the Great Lakes. 56 L. ed.

They filed bills in the United States circuit court for the northern district of Illinois to enjoin the enforcement of certain orders of the Interstate Commerce Commission. The cases were afterwards transferred to the United States commerce court.

The orders of the Commission complained of comprise: First, an order prescribing the method of accounts and *book-[204 keeping as to the operating expenses of the carriers, and a similar order as to bookkeeping concerning the operating revenues of the carriers; and, second, an order requiring a report of the carriers respecting their corporate organization, financial condition, etc.

The government of the United States intervened and filed an answer in each case, but the cases were practically heard on demurrer, as the record discloses, and therefore the allegations of the bills, well pleaded, must be deemed to be true. The bills contain many conclusions and argumentative deductions as to the effect of the orders upon the carriers, which, under the rules of pleading, are not considered as admitted. United States v. Ames, 99 U. S. 35, 45, 25 L. ed. 295, 300.

The pertinent averments necessary to a decision of the cases, as we view them, show that the carriers are corporations organized under the laws of certain states of the Union; that they carry passengers and freight upon the Great Lakes between ports in different states, which they designate as their port-to-port interstate business; that they carry passengers and freight wholly within a state, which they designate as their port-to-port intrastate business; and that they also carry passengers and property in interstate commerce under joint tariffs in connection with certain railroad carriers of the United States with whom they have agreed upon joint through rates, which they designate as their joint rail and water business. As to the Goodrich Transit Company, it is averred that 80 per cent of its gross revenue is derived from its port-to-port interstate and intrastate business, and less than 20 per cent of its gross earnings is derived from its joint rail and water business. A like averment is made with respect to the White Star Line, except that it is said that in its business the revenue derived from joint rail and water traffic, as aforesaid, is less than 1 per cent of its entire revenue.

*It is averred that the bookkeeping[205 and accounting methods required by the orders of the Commission differ from those prescribed and now kept by the companies; that the orders of the Commission make no difference between the intrastate port-to-port business and the interstate port-to-port business and the joint rail and water business; and that the orders entered by the Commission prohibit the companies from keeping any accounts, records, or memoranda other than those prescribed by the Commission in such orders.

In the White Star Line cases the bills contain an additional averment that that company operates two amusement parks, one at Tashmoo and one at Sugar island, both in the state of Michigan, and in connection therewith owns, operates, and derives revenue from lunch stands, merry-go-rounds, bowling alleys, bath houses, etc., and collects admission fees from people entering the parks. It complains that its business concerning said parks is included within the accounting methods prescribed by the Commission.

As to the report called for by the order of the Commission, it is averred that such report was not required because of any complaint filed against the corporations for the violation of the act to regulate commerce; that there is no statute requiring the report to be kept secret, and, if it is made public, the affairs of the companies will be thrown open to inspection, to their injury; that a large number of the inquiries contained in the order of the Commission relate to details of the companies' business solely intrastate, or that which is from port to port; and that the report is not limited to the joint rail and water business of complainants.

There are also averments that the orders were unconstitutional, because the Commission, in undertaking to put in force such requirements, exceeded its authority in so far as the power was asserted to examine 206 into the affairs *of the companies not relating to their joint rail and water business, and having reference, as it was alleged, to their domestic business, or interstate business not within the terms of the act.

The commerce court enjoined the execution of the orders (190 Fed. 943), declaring that:

"It [the Commission] acted within its authority when it made an order calling for reports of all business done by the petitioners under through bills of lading where the transportation was partly by railroad from one state to another, or from one place in the United States to Canada, an adjacent foreign country; and it was within its power when it prescribed the system of accounts and the uniform method of keeping accounts for such interstate business; and so far as the orders call for information confined to such traffic, or directly related thereto, and so far as the orders prescribe uniform systems of bookkeeping and accounting for such traffic and such as is directly related thereto, they must be sustained. But, in so far as the reports called for and the accounting rules prescribed extend beyond such interstate business of the carriers, or include matters of intrastate traffic accounts and affairs and concerns exclusively, they become invasions of the rights of the carriers, and to the extent of such invasions are unlawful."

The court held that the orders concerning the report and auditing would be lawful respecting the interstate business done by the carriers in connection with railroads, as provided by the act, but, in requiring a report concerning the other business of the companies, and prescribing bookkeeping methods therefor, the Commission exceeded its authority, and the court granted the prayers of the petitioners for the orders of injunction, ordered a recast of the form of report in conformity with its opinion, and remanded the cases to the Commission for that purpose.

Whether this order of the commerce court was correct *or not primarily depends[207 upon the construction of the interstate commerce act and the extent to which, in the respect involved in these cases, the carriers herein interested are within the terms of the law. The terms of the act of Congress, as amended June 29, 1906 (34 Stat. at L. 584, chap. 3591, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1909, p. 1150), and in force at the time when these orders were made, are plain and simple, and, we think, not difficult to comprehend. They are: "The provisions of this act [to regulate commerce] shall apply to . . . any common carrier or carriers engaged in the transportation of passengers or property wholly by railroad (or partly by railroad and partly by water, when both are used under a common control, management, or arrangement for a continuous carriage or shipment), from one state or territory of the United States or the District of Columbia to any other state or territory of the United States, etc." The proviso, at the end of the section, that its terms shall not apply to the transportation of passengers or property wholly within one state was inserted for the purpose of showing the congressional purpose not to undertake to regulate a commerce wholly domestic. The first section makes the act apply alike to common carriers engaged in the transportation of passengers or property wholly by railroad or partly by railroad and partly by water, under an arrangement for a continuous carriage or shipment. It is conceded that the carriers filing the bills in these cases were common carriers engaged in the transportation of passengers and property partly by railroad and partly by water, under a joint arrangement for a continuous carriage or shipment. Such common carriers are declared to be subject to the provisions of the act in precisely the same terms as those which comprehend the other companies named in the act. Carriers partly by railroad and partly by water, under a common arrangement for a continuous carriage or shipment, are as specifically within the terms of the act as any other carrier 208] named therein. *It may be that certain provisions of the act are in their nature applicable to some carriers and not to others; but we are only concerned to inquire in this case whether the carriers thus broadly brought within the terms of the act by § 1 thereof are subject to the provisions of the statute by the authority of which the Commission undertook to require the system of accounting and the report as to the organization and business of the corporations, and whether, if within the terms of the act, the orders are constitutionally made.

Certain it is that, when engaged in carrying on traffic under joint rates with railroads, filed with the Commission, the carriers are bound to deal upon like terms with all shippers who seek to avail themselves of such joint rates, and are subject to the general requirements of the act preventing and punishing the giving of rebates, the making of unjust discriminations, the showing of favoritism, and other practices denounced in the various sections of the act. They are undoubtedly subject to the provisions of § 12 of the act, which permits the Commission to inquire into the management of the business of all common carriers subject to the act, and to keep itself informed as to the manner and method in which the same is conducted, with the right to obtain from such common carriers the full and complete information necessary to enable the Commission to carry out the objects for which it was created. The joint rates established are subject to revision by the Commission under § 15 of the act. We must remember, also, in this connection, that, under § 21 of the act, the Commission is required to make a report each year to the Congress, containing such information and data as may be considered of value in the determination of questions connected with the regulation of commerce, together with such recommendations as to additional legislation as the Commission may see fit to make.

As to annual reports, the power conferred 209] in § 20 of the *act extends to all common carriers subject to the provisions of the act. The Commission is vested with authority to prescribe the manner in which such reports shall be made, and to require specific answers to all questions as to which the Commission may need information. The report required in these cases was declared to be needed to enable the Commission to procure full information of the scope and character of the business of carriers by water within the jurisdiction of the Commission, and of the extent of their operations, such as would enable the Commission to determine the form for annual report which would best give the information required by the Commission, and at the same time conform as nearly as may be to the accounting systems of carriers by water.
56 L. ed.

The form of report adopted by the Commission required a showing as to the corporate organization of each carrier by water subject to the act, the companies owned by it, and the parties or companies controlling it; as to the financial condition of the carrier, the cost of its real property and equipment, its capital stock and other stock and securities owned by it, together with all special funds and current assets and liabilities, as well as its funded indebtedness, with collateral security covering same; and as to finances with respect to the operations of the carrier for the current year, giving the revenue of the company and its source, whether from transportation, and what kind, or from outside operations, and all expenses, detailed, with a statement as to the net income or deficit from the various sources, and the report contains a profit and loss account and a general balance sheet. The report further requires certain statistical information, as follows: The routes of the carrier and their mileage; a general description of the equipment owned, leased, or chartered by the carrier; the amount of traffic, both passenger and freight, and mileage and revenue statistics, together with a separation of freight into the quantity of the various products transported, *showing also whether originating on[210 the carrier's line or received from a connecting line; and a general description of any separate business carried on by the carrier. But such report is no broader than the annual report of such carriers, as prescribed by the act, for § 20 provides that:

"Such annual reports shall show in detail the amount of capital stock issued, the amounts paid therefor, and the manner of payment for the same; the dividends paid, the surplus fund, if any, and the number of stockholders; the funded and floating debts and the interest paid thereon;

the cost and value of the carrier's property, franchises, and equipments; the number of employees and the salaries paid each class; the accidents to passengers, employees, and other persons, and the causes thereof; the amounts expended for improvements each year, how expended, and the character of such improvements; the earnings and receipts from each branch of business and from all sources; the operating and other expenses; the balances of profit and loss; and a complete exhibit of the financial operations of the carrier each year, including an annual balance sheet. Such reports shall also contain such information in relation to rates or regulations concerning fares or freights, or agreements, arrangements, or contracts affecting the same, as the Commission may require."

As to the accounts, the statute permits the Commission, in its discretion, for the purpose of enabling it the better to carry out the purposes of the act, to prescribe a period of time within which such common carriers shall have a uniform system of accounts and the manner in which such accounts shall be kept. The Commission may, the statute further provides, in its discretion, prescribe the forms of all accounts, records, and memoranda to be kept by the common carriers, to which accounts the Commission shall have access. And the act makes it unlawful for the carriers to keep any accounts, records, or memoranda other than those prescribed by the Commission.

211] *We think this section contains ample authority for the Commission to require a system of accounting as provided in its orders, and a report in the form shown to have been required by the order of the Commission. It is true that the accounts required to be kept are general in their nature, and embrace business other than such as is necessary to the discharge of the duties required in carrying passengers and freight in interstate commerce by joint arrangement between the railroad and the water carrier, but the Commission is charged under the law with the supervision of such rates as to their reasonableness, and with the general duty of making reports to Congress which might require a knowledge of the business of the carrier beyond that which is strictly of the character mentioned. If the Commission is to successfully perform its duties in respect to reasonable rates, undue discriminations, and favoritism, it must be informed as to the business of the carriers by a system of accounting which will not permit the possible concealment of forbidden practices in accounts which it is not permitted to see, and concerning which it can require no information. It is a mistake to suppose that the requiring of information concerning the business methods of such corporations, as shown in its accounts, is a regulation of business not within the jurisdiction of the Commission, as seems to be argued for the complainants. The object of requiring such accounts to be kept in a uniform way, and to be open to the inspection of the Commission, is not to enable it to regulate the affairs of the corporations not within its jurisdiction, but to be informed concerning the business methods of the corporations subject to the act, that it may properly regulate such matters as are really within its jurisdiction. Further, the requiring of information concerning a business is not regulation of that business. The necessity of keeping such accounts has been developed in the reports of the Commission, and has been the subject of great consideration. It caused the employment *of those [212] skilled in such matters, and has resulted in the adoption of a general form of accounting which will enable the Commission to examine into the affairs of the corporations, with a view to discharging its duties of regulation concerning them.

There is nothing in the case of Harri-man v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 211 U. S. 407, 53 L. ed. 253, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 115, contrary to the conclusion herein announced. That case dealt with the authority of the Commission to compel the attendance and testimony of witnesses in cases where complaints had not been made. The extent to which the Commission might require systems of accounting and reports of corporations subject to the act was expressly left open in the opinion of the court. 211 U. S. pp. 421, 422.

The necessity of such accounts is emphasized under the English practice, and accounts and reports are required in great detail under the laws of that country.

In the report of the committee appointed by the board of trade under the railway regulation acts, to make inquiries with respect to the form and scope of the accounts and statistical returns rendered by railway companies, the omission of the former law to make provision for any prescribed and uniform system of accounts is pointed out, and it is said:

"It is obviously of the first importance, from the point of view of comparison between the different railway companies, that there should be uniformity of practice among all the companies with regard to the keeping of accounts and statistics; that is to say, that every heading, both in the accounts and in the statistics, should bear precisely the same meaning in the case of all railways,—should, in effect, be standardized.”

The railway companies (accounts and returns) act 1911, 1 and 2 Geo. V. cap. 34, the act to amend the laws with respect to accounts and returns of railway companies, contains requirements as to financial 213] *accounts and statistical returns which call for a uniform system of accounting, showing the organization and workings of the companies in great detail, together with statistical returns as to their business, subdivided so as to include all the operations of the companies as carriers, and in all other enterprises in which they may engage.

The learned commerce court was of the opinion that the Commission might require accounts and reports, so far as the business of the water carriers with reference to joint rates by rail and water under a common arrangement was concerned, and remanded the cases to the Commission for revision of their orders upon that basis. But it is argued for the Commission, and it seems to us, with great force, that it would be impracticable to make such separation in any system of accounting. It is a matter of general knowledge, of which we may take judicial notice, that traffic of all kinds is conducted upon the same ship and passage. A boat may leave a lake port carrying passengers and freight destined for ports within the state and for ports beyond the state, and as a part of the freight for carriage embrace some carried under the terms of joint arrangements made with connecting railroad carriers. How would it be practicable to separate the items of expense entailed in the carriage of these various classes? It is done upon one boat, with one set of officers and crew, and must, in the nature of things, be under one general bill of expense,—at least, it would seem impracticable to separate it into its items, so as to show the expense of that which it is contended is alone within the terms of the act, as construed by the carriers.

We think the act should be given a practical construction, and one which will enable the Commission to perform the duties required of it by Congress; and, conceding for this purpose that the regulating power of the Commission is limited, so far as rates are concerned, to joint rates of the character named in § 1, it is still essential 214] that, to *enable the Commission to perform its required duties, even with respect to such rates, and to make reports to Congress of the business of carriers subject to the terms of the act, it should be informed as to the matters contained in the report. Congress, in § 20, has authorized the Commission to inquire as to the business which the carrier does, and to require the keeping of uniform accounts, in order that the Commission may know just how the business is carried on, with a view to regulating that which is confessedly within its power.

It is contended that this construction of the statute enables the Commission not only to regulate the interstate business, but as well the wholly intrastate business of the complaining corporations, and is, therefore, beyond the power of Congress. Such cases are cited and relied upon by complainants as the Employers' Liability Cases (Howard v. Illinois C. R. Co.) 207 U. S. 463, 52 L. ed. 297, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 141, and Illinois C. R. Co. v. McKendree, 203 U. S. 514, 51 L. ed. 298, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 153. In those cases acts of Congress and orders of executive departments were held void because they undertook to regulate matters wholly intrastate, as distinguished from those matters of an interstate character and within the legislative power of Congress. And what we have already said as to the character of these orders is enough to indicate that in our opinion they are not regulations of intrastate commerce.

Furthermore, it is said that such construction of § 20 makes it an unlawful delegation of legislative power to the Commission. We cannot agree to this contention. The Congress may not delegate its purely legislative power to a commission, but, having laid down the general rules of action under which a commission shall proceed, it may require of that commission the application of such rules to particular situations and the investigation of facts, with a view to making orders in a particular matter within the rules laid down by the Congress. This rule has been frequently stated and illustrated in recent cases in *this court, and needs no amplification—[215] tion here. Buttfield v. Stranahan, 192 U. S. 470, 48 L. ed. 525, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 349; Union Bridge Co. v. United States, 204 U. S. 364, 51 L. ed. 523, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 367; United States v. Grimaud, 220 U. S. 506, 55 L. ed. 563, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 480.

In § 20, Congress has authorized the Commission to require annual reports. The act itself prescribes in detail what those reports shall contain. The Commission is permitted, in its discretion, to require a uniform system of accounting, and to prohibit other methods of accounting than those which the Commission may prescribe. In other words, Congress has laid down general rules for the guidance of the Commission, leaving to it merely the carrying out of details in the exercise of the power so conferred. This, we think, is not a delegation of legislative authority.

And it is argued that Congress has no visitatorial power over state corporations. We need not reassert the ample power which the Constitution has been construed to confer upon Congress in the regulation of interstate commerce, declared in the many cases in this court from Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 6 L. ed. 23, to its most recent deliverances. In Hale v. Henkel, 201 U. S. 43, 75, 50 L. ed. 652, 665, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 370, while general visitatorial power over state corporations was not asserted to be within the power of Congress, it was nevertheless declared as to interstate commerce that the general government had, in the vindication of its own laws, the same power it would possess if the corporation had been created by act of Congress.

As to one of the corporations, it is said that its business includes not only the carriage of passengers and freight, but that it owns and operates in connection therewith certain amusement parks. The report in controversy, as to business other than commerce, requires a general description of such outside operations, and also a statement of the income from and the expenses of the same. As we have said, if the Commission is to be informed of the *business of the corporation, so far as its bookkeeping and reports are concerned, it must have full knowledge and full disclosures thereof, in order that it may ascertain whether forbidden practices and discriminations are concealed, even unintentionally, in certain accounts, and whether charges of expense are made against one part of a business which ought to be made against another.

Bookkeeping, it is said, is not interstate commerce. True, it is not. But bookkeeping may and ought to show how a business which, in part, at least, is interstate commerce, is carried on, in order that the Commission, charged with the duty of making reasonable rates and prohibiting unfair and unreasonable ones, may know the nature and extent of the business of the corporation, the cost of its interstate transactions, and otherwise to inform itself so as to enable it to properly regulate the matters which are within its authority.

We think the uniform system of accounting prescribed and the report called for are such as it is within the power of the Commission to require under § 20 of the act. Nor do the requirements exceed the constitutional authority of Congress to pass such a law. It therefore follows that the commerce court erred in granting the injunctions and in remanding the cases to the Commission with instructions to recast its orders.

Judgments reversed.

Dissenting, Mr. Justice Lurton and Mr. Justice Lamar.

*CHARLES N. HASKELL, Charles West, John J. Shea, et al., Appts.,
v.

KANSAS NATURAL GAS COMPANY,
Marnet Mining Company, and A. W. Lewis.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 217-224.)

Appeal — judgment of affirmance — modification of decree below.

1. The affirmance by the Federal Supreme Court of a decree enjoining the enforcement of certain state legislation, upon the ground that its main and controlling purpose was to prohibit the transportation of natural gas in the lawful channels of interstate commerce, does not require a modification of such decree so as to except from its operation certain provisions of such legislation which, while they might be valid as statutory regulations as to individuals and domestic corporations engaged in transporting gas wholly within the state, are not by their very terms made applicable to interstate commerce.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, IX. 1; IX. j, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Injunction — against state legislation — construction of decree.

2. A decree of a Federal circuit court, enjoining the enforcement of certain state legislation which undertook to prohibit the transportation of natural gas outside the state, or any interference with complainants' pipe lines by reason of any other state law or statute, should not be construed as preventing the enforcement of legitimate state legislation passed in the exercise of the police power, and not conflicting with rights protected by the Federal Constitution, where such a broad construction of the decree would disregard the issues made by the pleadings, and the fact that such decree was affirmed in the Federal Supreme Court on the grounds that complainants had the right, in the conduct of interstate commerce, to take natural gas out of the state, that a state could not prohibit the transportation of such product beyond its borders, and that the main purpose and effect of the legislation in question were to prohibit the exercise of lawful rights secured by the Federal Constitution. [For other cases, see Injunction, II. b, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 914.]

NOTE.—On the right of a state to forbid the exportation of natural resources—see note to West v. Kansas Natural Gas Co. 35 L.R.A. (N.S.) 1193.

Submitted February 23, 1912. Decided
April 1, 1912.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Oklahoma to review an order refusing to modify a decree enjoining the enforcement of state legislation which undertook to prohibit the transportation of natural gas outside the state, which decree had been affirmed in the Federal Supreme Court on a prior appeal. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Charles West, Attorney General of Oklahoma, submitted the cause for appellants.

Messrs. E. L. Scarritt, John J. Jones, John G. Johnson, and D. T. Watson submitted the cause for appellees.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

The appellees in this case brought suit in the circuit court of the United States for the eastern district of Oklahoma against the appellants, who were the governor, attorney general, deputy attorney general, county attorney and deputy county attorney of Washington county, corporation commissioners and mine inspector, of the state of Oklahoma, to enjoin the enforcement of certain statutes of the state of Oklahoma, which undertook to prevent the complainants, now appellees, from transporting natural gas in interstate commerce beyond the borders of the state of Oklahoma. Upon final hearing in that court such statutes were held void, as against the Constitution of the United States, and the enforcement thereof was enjoined. The case came to this court on appeal, and was argued and decided at the October Term, 1910, being reported in 221 U. S. 229, 55 L. ed. 716, 35 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1193, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 564.

On May 29, 1911, the last day of the term, a motion was made in this court by the attorney general of Oklahoma to modify the affirmance of the decree in the court below. The parts objected to are 219]found in the margin.† *This motion was overruled, with leave to either party to apply to the circuit court from whence the case came for such modification of the decree as would make it conform to the opinion of this court. Thereafter, the present proceeding was instituted by the attorney general's filing a motion in the circuit court of the United States for the eastern district of Oklahoma for the modification of such decree. The former complainants, defendants in this proceeding, appeared and filed a motion in the nature of a demurrer, and also filed an answer in the case. The circuit court, treating the pleadings of the defendants as in the nature of a demurrer, without hearing evidence in support of or against the granting of the motion, and without considering the affidavits or exhibits filed, overruled *the same, and ordered [220 the mandate of this court, affirming the former decree, to be spread upon the records. Thereupon this appeal was prosecuted.

In order to properly consider this motion, it is necessary to notice the holding in the case in 221 U. S. supra. The original proceeding was brought to enjoin the officers of the state of Oklahoma from preventing the carriage in interstate commerce, beyond the lines of the state, of natural gas which had been severed from the earth by the owners of such gas, and particularly to enjoin the enforcement of a certain statute of the state, passed in 1907, known as chapter 67 of the Session Laws of Oklahoma, 1907-08, which is inserted in full in the margin of the report of the case in 221 U. S., at page 239. This court held that natural gas after severance is a commodity which might be dealt in like other products of the earth, as coal and other minerals, and is a legitimate subject of interstate commerce; and that no state, by such laws as were involved in the case, can prohibit its transportation in interstate commerce beyond the lines of that state. The court held, after considering and construing the provisions of the act of 1907, that it was, upon its face, a law undertaking to prohibit the transmission or transportation in interstate commerce of natural gas to points beyond the state; that it was an unconstitutional interference with the rights of the complainants, who were legitimately engaged in that commerce, and that therefore the act was null and void.

†3. The court doth find the issues and equities herein in favor of the plaintiff, and that the plaintiff is entitled to the relief prayed for in the bill of complaint herein; and doth find, adjudge, and decree that chapter 67 of the Session Laws of the state of Oklahoma of 1907-08, passed and enacted by the legislature of said state of Oklahoma, and approved by the governor of said state on the 21st day of December, 1907, and referred to in plaintiff's bill of 56 L. ed.

complaint herein, is unreasonable, unconstitutional, invalid, and void, and of no force or effect whatever.

4. The temporary injunction heretofore ordered and entered herein is hereby made permanent and perpetual, and the defendants and each and every of them, their representatives, agents, servants, attorneys, workmen, and employees, and all other persons whomsoever, advised, inspired, influenced, incited, or prompted by them, or

In the course of the opinion the court recognized the right of the state by proper legislation to regulate the removal from the earth of natural gas by the owner thereof, so as to prevent its undue waste, but maintained the decree of the court below, declaring this particular act unconstitutional, upon the grounds of its prohibitory character in attempting to prevent the transmission from the state through the pipe 221]lines of the complainants of a *legitimate subject of interstate commerce. As to the provisions of the statute concerning the right to use the highways of the state, the court declined to discuss the extent of the rights of public or private ownership therein in the state of Oklahoma, but placed the decision in this respect upon the manifest attempt to discriminate against the appellees, engaged in interstate commerce, in giving to domestic corporations engaged in intrastate transportation of natural gas the right to the use of the highways—even longitudinally—while denying to corporations transporting the gas in interstate commerce the right to pass under or over them, and this in the face of the admission in the pleadings that the greater use given to domestic corporations is no obstruction to the highways.

The particular parts of the Oklahoma act of 1907 which it is now contended should be excepted from the operation of the decree are comprised in §§ 5, 6, and 7 of chapter 67, which read as follows:

"Sec. 5. The laying, constructing, building, and maintaining a gas pipe line or lines for the transportation or transmission of natural gas along, over, under, across, or through the highways, roads, bridges, streets, or alleys in this state, or of any county, city, municipal corporation, of any other private or public premises within this state, is hereby declared an additional burden upon said highway, bridge, road, street, or alley, and any other private or public premises, may only be done when the right is granted by express charter from the state, and shall not be constructed, maintained, or operated until all damages to adjacent owners are ascertained and paid as provided by law.

"Sec. 6. All pipe lines for the transportation or transmission of natural gas in this state shall be laid under the direction and inspection of proper persons skilled in such business, to be designated by the chief mining inspector for such duty, and the expenses of such inspection and *su-[222]pervision shall be borne and paid for by the parties laying and constructing such pipe lines for the transportation or transmission of natural gas.

"Sec. 7. No pipe line for the transportation or transmission of natural gas shall be subjected to a greater pressure than 300 pounds to the square inch, except for the purpose of testing such lines, and gas pumps shall not be used on any gas pipe lines for the transportation or transmission of natural gas, or used on or in any gas well within this state;" and also in the act of March 27, 1909, Compiled Laws of Oklahoma, 1909, article 3, chapter 75, § 11, regulating domestic corporations, which prohibits the use of pumps or other artificial means in the transmission of gas, when used to the injury of other corporations, consumers, and producers, producing or consuming natural gas in the same gas district.

It is contended for the appellants herein that each and all of these sections of the law are constitutionally valid; and can be enforced consistently with the opinion of this court when the case was here upon its merits. Without entering upon a discussion of these sections, it is sufficient to say that in so far as they are part of the statute, the main and controlling purpose of which was to prohibit the transportation of natural gas in the lawful channels of interstate commerce, they were for that reason condemned and held void by the former opinion of this court, affirming the circuit court.

either of them, are hereby forever restrained and enjoined from committing any of the acts complained of by complainant in its, or his, bill of complaint, and from tearing up or destroying, or in any way interfering with, the laying, building, and construction of complainant's pipe lines, or any of the pipe lines referred to in the prayer of complainant's bill of complaint, in, through, or out of the state of Oklahoma, by reason of any of the terms or provisions or contents of chapter 67 of the Session Laws of 1907-1908, passed and enacted by the legislature of the state of Oklahoma, or by reason of any other claimed authority or statute of said state, or common-law right, rule of action, or unwritten law whatsoever; and from in any manner instituting, prosecuting, or conducting any suits, or suing out any writs of process in any of the state courts of the state of Oklahoma against the complainants, or anyone representing it or him, for the purpose of enjoining, restraining, or interfering with either of them in the laying, building, construction, maintenance, or operation of any gas pipe line, either under the authority of said legislative act contained in said chapter 67 of the Session Laws of Oklahoma, 1907-08, above referred to, or under any other law or statute of the state of Oklahoma, or under any common-law right, rule of action, or unwritten law of the state of Oklahoma.

Furthermore, if the laws named (§§ 5, 6, and 7 of the act of 1907 and the act of March 27, 1909) might be valid as statutory regulations, as to individuals and domestic corporations engaged in transporting gas wholly within the state, they are not, by the very terms of these statutes, made applicable to foreign corporations, such as the defendants, engaged in interstate commerce. Such corporations and such commerce are forbidden by the act. We see, therefore, no reason to modify the decree so 223]as to except *from its provisions the sections of the act of 1907 and the act of 1909, and thus apply them to those which the act itself excludes.

It is furthermore objected that that part of the decree which undertakes to enjoin not only the execution of the statute law of Oklahoma, chapter 67, in controversy, but prevents interference with the pipe lines of complainants "by reason of any other claimed authority or statute of said state, or common-law right, rule of action, or unwritten law whatsoever; and from in any manner instituting, prosecuting, or conducting any suits, or suing out any writs of process in any of the state courts of the state of Oklahoma . . . under the authority of said legislative act . . . or under any other law or statute of the state of Oklahoma, or under any common-law right, rule of action, or unwritten law of the state of Oklahoma," is so broad as to prevent the state from enforcing any of its lawful enactments at any time passed or to be passed under authority of the state, or from taking any action whatsoever for protecting the lawful authority of the commonwealth. But the decree must be read in view of the issues made and the relief sought and granted. Looking to the pleadings, and reading the opinion of this court in the case when it was considered upon its merits, and thus construing the decree, we are of opinion that it cannot be given any such broad construction as is intimated by the attorney general, and will not prevent the enforcement of legitimate legislation of the state of Oklahoma, if such is passed in the exercise of its police powers, and not conflicting with rights protected by the Federal Constitution. As we have said, this court in its decision affirmed the right of the complainants, in the conduct of interstate commerce, to take natural gas out of the state, and declared that a state could not prohibit the transportation of such product beyond its borders, and that the legislative act in question was an act the main purpose and effect of 224]*which were to prohibit the exercise of lawful rights secured by the Federal Constitution.

56 L. ed.

Construing the decree as we do, we think there is no occasion to modify its terms. The order in this proceeding will therefore be affirmed.

ALEXANDER D. JOHNSON, Elise Thomas Berry, Louise Y. B. Duvall, Imogene Berry Tubman, et al.,† Appts.

v.

WASHINGTON LOAN & TRUST COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 224-241.)

Wills — remainders — vested or contingent — condition subsequent.

The daughters surviving the testator took at his death a vested remainder in fee in the homestead, to take effect in possession upon the marriage of all of them, or the death of the last unmarried daughter, which remainder was not defeasible as to any one of them by her death, leaving descendants, before the expiration of the preceding estates, where the testator, after making separate provisions for his sons and daughters, devised the homestead to his wife for life, with remainder over to his daughters, "being single and unmarried, and to the survivor and survivors of them so long as they shall be and remain single and unmarried," and directed that upon the death or marriage of the last of them, the property should be sold and the proceeds distributed "among my daughters living at my death, and their children and descendants (per stirpes)."

[For other cases, see Wills, 151-158, 206-216, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 40.]

Argued December 8, 1911. Decided April 1, 1912.

APPPEAL from the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Su-†Death of John A. Berry, one of the appellants herein, suggested October 27, 1911, by Mr. A. S. Worthington for the appellants.

Appearance of Nannie Delia Berry, individually and as next friend of Rosalie Eugenia Berry and Natalie West Berry, as a party appellant herein, November 13, 1911.

NOTE.—As to the time for ascertaining member of class described as testator's "heirs," "next of kin," "relations," etc., to whom an estate in real or personal property is limited by way of remainder or executory gift—see note to Welch v. Blanchard, 33 L.R.A.(N.S.) 1.

On conditions precedent and subsequent in will—see note to Taylor v. Mason, 6 L. ed. U. S. 101.

preme Court of the District, in favor of complainant in a suit to quiet title. Affirmed.

See same case below, 33 App. D. C. 242. The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. A. S. Worthington argued the cause and filed a brief for appellants:

The language of this will is so plain that no resort is necessary to rules of construction adopted in construing ambiguous devises.

Clarke v. Boorman (Clarke v. Johnston) 18 Wall. 502, 21 L. ed. 906; Robison v. Female Orphan Asylum, 123 U. S. 702, 707, 31 L. ed. 293, 295, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 327; Travers v. Reinhardt, 205 U. S. 423, 51 L. ed. 865, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 563; Line's Estate, 221 Pa. 374, 19 L.R.A.(N.S.) 293, 70 Atl. 791; Hood v. Pennsylvania Soc. 221 Pa. 474, 70 Atl. 845.

The contention of the appellants on all the principal points involved in this discussion is clearly and forcibly stated in a case very closely resembling it in the court of appeals of Kentucky.

Burnsides v. Wall, 9 B. Mon. 318.

When in a will there is no direct gift of property to the beneficiaries, but merely a direction that after the termination of a preceding life, or other particular estate, it shall be divided among or paid to certain classes of beneficiaries, in the absence of anything in the instrument to indicate a different intention, only those of the classes described who survive till the time fixed for the distribution will participate therein.

2 Williams, Exrs. 6th Am. ed. pp. 1232, 1233; 1 Jarman, Wills, 6th Am. ed. *757, note, 2; Hoghton v. Whitgreave, 1 Jac. & W. 146, 20 Revised Rep. 259; Brograve v. Winder, 2 Ves. Jr. 638; Jones v. Colbeck, 8 Ves. Jr. 38, 6 Revised Rep. 207; Nichols v. Guthrie, 109 Tenn. 536, 73 S. W. 107; Richey v. Johnson, 30 Ohio St. 296; 2 Williams, Exrs. 514; Hawkins, Wills, 232; McCartney v. Osburn, 118 Ill. 403, 9 N. E. 210; Beach, Wills, § 120; McClain v. Capper, 98 Iowa, 145, 67 N. W. 102; Re Moran, 118 Wis. 177, 96 N. W. 367; Benner v. Mauer, 133 Wis. 325, 113 N. W. 663; 2 Jarman, Wills, 6th Am. ed. 455, 457, *797; McCartney v. Osburn, 118 Ill. 423, 9 N. E. 210; Bates v. Gillett, 132 Ill. 299, 24 N. E. 611; Storrs v. Burgess, 101 Me. 34, 62 Atl. 730; Re Baer, 147 N. Y. 348, 41 N. E. 702; Dougherty v. Thompson, 167 N. Y. 472, 60 N. E. 760; Lewisohn v. Henry, 179 N. Y. 352, 72 N. E. 239; Re Hogarty, 34 Misc. 610, 70 N. Y. Supp. 428, affirmed in 62 App. Div. 79, 70 N. Y. Supp. 839; Hale v. Hobson, 167 Mass. 397, 45 N. E. 913; Hobson v. Hale, 95 N. Y.

588; Boston Safe Deposit & T. Co. v. Blanchard, 196 Mass. 35, 81 N. E. 654; Dary v. Grau, 190 Mass. 482, 77 N. E. 507; Reilly v. Bristow, 105 Md. 326, 66 Atl. 262; Rosengarten v. Ashton, 228 Pa. 389, 77 Atl. 562.

That a remainder is vested on the death of the testator does not necessarily determine that the devisee, his heirs or assigns, shall be entitled to the property which is the subject of the gift, since the estate so vested may be divested by the death of the devisee before the determination of the preceding particular estate.

Myers v. Adler, 1 L.R.A. 432, 6 Mackey, 515; Richardson v. Penicks, 1 App. D. C. 261; Carver v. Jackson, 4 Pet. 1, 7 L. ed. 761; Croxall v. Shererd, 5 Wall. 268, 18 L. ed. 572; Doe ex dem. Poor v. Considine, 6 Wall. 458, 18 L. ed. 869; Blanchard v. Blanchard, 1 Allen, 227; McArthur v. Scott, 113 U. S. 340, 28 L. ed. 1015, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 652; Thaw v. Ritchie (Thaw v. Falls) 136 U. S. 519, 34 L. ed. 531, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1037; United States use of Hine v. Morse, 218 U. S. 493, 54 L. ed. 1123, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 37, 21 Ann. Cas. 782.

The only difference (at common law) between a remainder that vests at once, subject to defeasance by the death of the devisee before the right of possession accrues, and one that does not vest at all unless the devisee survives till that time, seems to be that in the first case the interest is alienable by grant or devise or otherwise, and may be attached by creditors, while in the second case the interest is regarded as too uncertain to be transferable in any way.

2 Washb. Real Prop. 263, 530; 24 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 405; Young v. Young, 23 L.R.A. 642 and note, 89 Va. 675, 75 S. E. 475; Clarke v. Fay, 27 L.R.A.(N.S.) 454 and note, 205 Mass. 228, 91 N. E. 328.

It is better to stick to the text of the will than to conjure up doubts by applying formulas intended for use only when there is no other way open.

Mitchell v. Mitchell, 126 Wis. 49, 105 N. W. 216.

Unless there is something in the particular will under consideration to lead to a contrary conclusion, the rule as to early vesting relied on by the appellee does not apply where, after the determination of a precedent estate, real estate is to be sold and the proceeds in the form of money paid over to certain classes of legatees.

Cripps v. Wolcott, 4 Madd. Ch. 12, 20 Revised Rep. 268, 25 Eng. Rul. Cas. 727; Hearn v. Baker, 2 Kay & J. 386; Stevenson v. Gullan, 18 Beav. 590; Knight v. Poole, 32 Beav. 548; Hoghton v. Whitgreave, 1 Jac. & W. 146, 20 Revised Rep. 259; 1 Jarman, Wills, 6th Am. ed. *547; Peter v. Beverly, 10 Pet. 532, 563, 9 L. ed. 522, 534; Cropley v. Cooper, 19 Wall. 167, 174, 22 L. ed. 109, 113; Robertson v. Guenther, 25 L.R.A.(N.S.) 887, note; O'Brien v. Dougherty, 1 App. D. C. 148.

The language of a will which gives property to certain persons and to their children upon the happening of a future event should not be distorted into a gift to those persons to the exclusion of their children, because of the possibility that they may not have any children.

Augustus v. Seabolt, 3 Met. (Ky.) 155; Re Disney, 190 N. Y. 128, 82 N. E. 1093.

When there is a devise to parent and children—as to parent and descendants—without more, the parent takes a life estate, with remainder to such children or descendants.

Ward v. Grey, 26 Beav. 485, 29 L. J. Ch. N. S. 74, 7 Week. Rep. 569; Jeffery v. De Vitre, 24 Beav. 296; Jeffery v. Honywood, 4 Madd. Ch. 398; Hall v. Hall, 84 Vt. 259, 33 L.R.A.(N.S.) 191, 78 Atl. 971; Noe v. Miller, 31 N. J. Eq. 234; Stiles v. Cummings, 122 Ga. 635, 50 S. E. 484; Lynn v. Hall, 101 Ky. 738, 72 Am. St. Rep. 439, 43 S. W. 402; Ballantine v. Ballantine, 152 Fed. 775; Forest Oil Co. v. Crawford, 23 C. C. A. 55, 39 U. S. App. 408, 77 Fed. 106; Crawford v. Forest Oil Co. 208 Pa. 5, 57 Atl. 47; Barclay v. Platt, 170 Ill. 384, 48 N. E. 972; Kuhn v. Kuhn, 24 Ky. L. Rep. 112, 68 S. W. 16; Sims v. Skinner, 118 Ky. 573, 81 S. W. 703.

Mr. B. F. Leighton argued the cause and filed a brief for appellee:

The direction for a sale of the property and a division of the proceeds among his daughters living at his death was equivalent to a limitation of the title in fee to them, and they could have elected, on testator's death, to take the property instead of the proceeds to be derived from its sale.

Doe ex dem. Poor v. Considine, 6 Wall. 472, 18 L. ed. 873; Cropley v. Cooper, 19 Wall. 167, 22 L. ed. 109; Hauptman v. Carpenter, 16 App. D. C. 524.

According to the contention of the appellants, if one or more of testator's daughters had married and died between the date of the will and the death of testator, leaving lawful issue her or them surviving and living at the time of his death, such issue would have taken no interest under testator's will,—a construction not to be given unless the language of the will imperatively compels it.

Goodlittle ex dem. Hayward v. Whitby, 1 Burr. 232.

The legal presumption arising from the 56 L. ed.

making of the will itself is, that the testator intended to dispose of all of his property, and not die intestate as to any of it. This presumption must prevail unless overborne by the terms of the will itself.

Given v. Hilton, 95 U. S. 591, 24 L. ed. 458; Snyder v. Baker, 5 Mackey, 455.

The first taker is always the favorite object of testator's bounty, and, as such, entitled to every implication.

Barber v. Pittsburgh, Ft. W. & C. R. Co. 166 U. S. 100, 41 L. ed. 933, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 488.

Effect must be given to a general intent, although to do so may render ineffective some particular intent.

Inglis v. Sailor's Snug Harbor, 3 Pet. 118, 7 L. ed. 624; Sheriff v. Brown, 5 Mackey, 172.

Where the distribution is to be per stirpes, the principle of representation will be applied to all degrees; children never take concurrently with their parents.

2 Jarman, Wills, 5th ed. p. 100.

By the use of the words "children and descendants," testator intended to provide against the contingency of the death of one or more of his daughters, leaving issue at the time his will became effective at his death. If these words were not used as words of substitution, they were used as words of limitation, and the daughters took a fee tail estate, which is the legal equivalent in this jurisdiction of an estate in fee simple.

Dengel v. Brown, 1 App. D. C. 423.

The birth of the first grandchild occurred after the death of the testator. This brought the case clearly within the rule of construction laid down in Wild's Case, 6 Coke, 17.

3 Jarman, Wills, 5th Am. ed. 174-182; Vanzant v. Morris, 25 Ala. 292; Akers v. Akers, 23 N. J. Eq. 26; Nightingale v. Burrell, 15 Pick. 104; Moore v. Leach, 50 N. C. (5 Jones, L.) 88; Jones v. Jones, 13 N. J. Eq. 236; Johnson v. Johnson, McMull. Eq. 347; Reeder v. Spcarman, 6 Rich. Eq. 91; Chrystie v. Phyfe, 19 N. Y. 354.

A descendant is one who proceeds from the body of another, however remotely. The word is coextensive with issue, but does not embrace others not of issue.

Hamlin v. Osgood, 1 Redf. 411; Torrance v. Torrance, 4 Md. 11; Baker v. Baker, 8 Gray, 120; Barstow v. Goodwin, 2 Bradf. 416; Bates v. Gillett, 132 Ill. 297, 24 N. E. 611; Tichenor v. Brewer, 98 Ky. 349.

The remainders were vested.

Hauptman v. Carpenter, 16 App. D. C. 524; Doe ex dem. Poor v. Considine, 6 Wall. 458, 475, 476, 18 L. ed. 869, 874, 875; Cropley v. Cooper, 19 Wall. 167, 22

L. ed. 109; Myers v. Adler, 6 Mackey, 515, 1 L.R.A. 432; O'Brien v. Dougherty, 1 App. D. C. 148; Richardson v. Penicks, 1 App. D. C. 261; Thaw v. Ritchie (Thaw v. Falls) 136 U. S. 519, 34 L. ed. 531, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1037; McArthur v. Scott, 113 U. S. 340, 28 L. ed. 1015, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 652; Williamson v. Field, 2 Sandf. Ch. 533; Croxall v. Shererd, 5 Wall. 288, 18 L. ed. 579; Linton v. Laycock, 33 Ohio St. 128; Tayloc v. Mosher, 29 Md. 454; Fairfax v. Brown, 60 Md. 50; Barber v. Pittsburgh, Ft. W. & C. R. Co. 166 U. S. 100, 41 L. ed. 933, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 448; Boston Safe Deposit & T. Co. v. Blanchard, 196 Mass. 35, 81 N. E. 654.

Mr. Justice Hughes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an appeal from a decree of the court of appeals of the District of Columbia, which affirmed a decree in favor of the complainant, the Washington Loan & Trust Company. The suit was brought to quiet title, and the question concerns the construction of the fifth clause of the will of Washington Berry, who died in 1856. This clause relates to the testator's homestead,—the property known as Metropolis View, containing about 410 acres, in the District of Columbia,—and is as follows:

"Item 5th. It is my will and desire that my said homestead shall be kept and continued as the home and residence of my daughters so long as they shall remain single and unmarried. I therefor first after the death of my wife will and devise the said estate to my said daughters, being single and unmarried, and to the survivor and survivors of them so long as they shall 233] be and remain single and *unmarried, and on the death or marriage of the last of them, then I direct that the said estate shall be sold by my executors, and the proceeds thereof be distributed by my said executors among my daughters living at my death, and their children and descendants (per stirpes), and I hereby reserve to my heirs the family vault and burial ground, embracing half an acre of ground, and having the said vault as a center, and on such sale as aforesaid by my executors I earnestly enjoin on my sons or some of these sons to purchase the said homestead, that it may be kept in the family."

The will was executed in 1852. The testator had three sons and five daughters, all of whom were living at that time; and they, with his wife, survived him. Four of the daughters married and had children; only one of them was married before the testator's death, and her children were born subsequently. One daughter, Eliza Thomas Berry, remained single and survived all her sisters, dying in 1903. The testator appointed his wife and one of his sons executors and trustees; the widow acted as executrix, but the son declined.

Soon after the death of the testator, the widow removed from the homestead, and neither she nor any of her unmarried daughters occupied it again. During the War the estate suffered much injury; the vault was destroyed and it was necessary to remove the bodies it had contained; the rent and profits were not sufficient to pay taxes or to provide for repairs, and the property fell into a dilapidated condition.

The testator's widow died in 1864. In the following year a suit was brought by three of the married daughters and their husbands in the supreme court of the District of Columbia to have the property sold and the proceeds divided among the daughters, save the proceeds of the burial ground and vault, which the bill asked to have distributed among the heirs at law. The other children *of the testator, with the spouses of [234] those that were married, were parties defendant. There were, then living, three grandchildren, by the daughters, but they were not parties or represented. All the defendants, save one married daughter,—who was a minor and answered by guardian, submitting her rights to the court,—consented to the decree. Eliza Thomas Berry, the unmarried daughter, stated in her answer that she relinquished "upon the sale of the estate in the bill mentioned her right to the possession and enjoyment thereof whilst unmarried," and consented "to the distribution of the proceeds of sale as prayed." The case was referred to the auditor to take testimony and report whether the sale would be for the advantage of the infant defendant. He reported that the property was an unfit residence for the unmarried daughter; that the land generally was poor and unproductive as a farm; that the testator had used it as a mere place of residence, and it was fit only, as a whole, for a man of fortune; that the burial place had been demolished and the buildings and fences were out of repair; and that it was a fit case for a sale.

In October, 1865, the court entered a decree for sale, appointing for that purpose two trustees, who were authorized to divide the estate and to sell it in parcels if this were found advisable. The division was made accordingly, and certain lots were sold at public auction. Subsequently, upon the petition of two of the daughters and their husbands, stating that they had children to support, and were in need of the money that would come from the sale, the court ordered the trustees to sell the residue of the estate, and sales were made at public auction, which were confirmed by the court in October, 1868, and the proceeds were distributed among the five daughters of the testator. In the long period of years since that time the property has been divided into many separate parcels, which have been the 235]subject of conveyances, *it being assumed that a valid title passed under the court's decree.

In 1906, suit was brought in the supreme court of the District of Columbia by the children of the daughters of the testator, against the children of the deceased sons, averring that, on the death of the unmarried daughter, Eliza T. Berry, in 1903, the entire equitable interest in the property vested in fee simple in the complainants; that their rights and interests had not been affected by the decree in the former suit or by the sales that had been made under it. It was prayed that trustees might be appointed in the place of those named in the testator's will, to whom the legal title should be transferred. Decree was passed and trustees were appointed by the court on February, 20, 1907.

Thereupon Henry P. Sanders brought this suit against all the parties in the suit above mentioned,—including the trustees,—to quiet the title to a portion of the land which he had derived, by mesne conveyances, through the sale made under the decree passed in 1868; and he alleged that he, and those under whom he claimed, had been for thirty-five years in exclusive and continuous possession, relying upon the validity of their title acquired bona fide for a valuable consideration. Mr. Sanders died in 1907, appointing the Washington Loan & Trust Company executor and trustee of his last will and testament, by which the real property in question was devised, and an order was made substituting this company as complainant.

It is contended by the appellants that, under the provision of the fifth item of the will, the proceeds of the sale, which the testator directed to be made of the property, should be distributed "among his daughters and their children and descendants, as those classes should exist when all of the daughters should be dead or married." The appellee insists that, at the death of 236]the testator, the *daughters took a vested remainder in fee, "to take effect in possession on the marriage of all of them, or the death of the last unmarried daughter."

On examining the scheme of the will, we find that the testator made separate provision for his three sons, on the one hand, and for his five daughters, on the other. While he contemplated the marriage of his children, and the birth of issue, he did not seek to tie up his property for the benefit of his children's descendants. The testator made no provision whatever for grandchildren or for the descendants of his children, save as it was made in the clause in question and in the residuary clause.

To each of his sons he devised a tract of land. The devise was to the son, his heirs and assigns. In the case of two of the sons, it was made on condition that the son and his heirs should convey to the testator's daughters the son's interest in certain real estate, and in case the conveyance were not made within two years, the devise was not to take effect, and the property was to go to his daughters living at his death, share and share alike. There was a slight difference in the wording of the conditional devises to the daughters; in the one, they were described as "my daughters living," and in the other as "my daughters living at my death." After thus providing for the sons in the first three items of the will, the testator adds that he annexes to their several estates "this limitation, that if either of them shall die without leaving lawful issue, that the estate of each one, or both, if more than one, shall go to the survivor or survivors, his and their heirs." We have no occasion to consider the effect of this provision upon the devises to the sons, but it may be noted that there was no gift to the children or descendants of the sons, nor did the testator undertake, in case all the sons died without leaving issue, to devise the property to the children or descendants of his daughters.

By the fourth item of the will, the testator gave to his *wife for life, in case[237 she survived him, the homestead estate,—the property here in question,—together with certain money and securities, subject to the maintenance and education of his five daughters, while unmarried, and to the provision that each daughter, on marriage and birth of issue, should receive one-sixth part of the personal property bequeathed. When the condition was satisfied by birth of issue, the daughter took her share absolutely. Then followed the fifth clause above quoted, under which this controversy has arisen. And to this was added the residuary clause,—item sixth,—providing as follows: "I direct that my executors shall divide and distribute all the rest, residue, and remainder of my personal estate among my children at my death, and the descendants of such as may have died during my life to take a parent's part.

In the disposition of the homestead, the testator explicitly states his purpose. He was planning for the protection of his daughters. He desired the property to be the home of his widow so long as she lived.

and that after her death it should continue to be the home of his daughters while they remained unmarried. When this object had been attained, the property was to be sold and the proceeds divided.

These avails were to be distributed "among my daughters living at my death, and their children and descendants (per stirpes).²³⁹" The words "living at my death" may not be disregarded. They are not to be eliminated in the interest of a construction which would leave the clause as though it read, "among my daughters who shall be living at the time of the death or marriage of my last unmarried daughter and the children and descendants (per stirpes) of such of my daughters as may previously died." At the time of the death of the testator, his five daughters were living, and none of them had children or descendants. By the definite language of the 238]*clause, these daughters were then ascertained and identified as those entitled to the immediate enjoyment of the property on the termination of the preceding estates. They, therefore, had a vested remainder in fee. Croxall v. Shererd, 5 Wall. 268, 288, 18 L. ed. 572, 579; Doe ex dem. Poor v. Considine, 6 Wall. 458, 474-477, 18 L. ed. 869, 874, 875; Cropley v. Cooper, 19 Wall. 167, 175, 22 L. ed. 109, 113; McArthur v. Scott, 113 U. S. 340, 380, 28 L. ed. 1015, 1027, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 652; Hallifax v. Wilson, 16 Ves. Jr. 171, 10 Revised Rep. 146. The fact that the property was directed to be sold, and that they were described as distributees of the proceeds, did not postpone the vesting of the interest. "For many reasons," said this court by Mr. Justice Gray in McArthur v. Scott, supra (pp. 378, 380), "not the least of which are that testators usually have in mind the actual enjoyment, rather than the technical ownership, of their property, and that sound policy as well as practical convenience requires that titles should be vested at the earliest period, it has long been a settled rule of construction in the courts of England and America that estates, legal or equitable, given by will, should always be regarded as vesting immediately, unless the testator has by very clear words manifested an intention that they should be contingent upon a future event. . . . Words directing land to be conveyed to or divided among remaindermen after the termination of a particular estate are always presumed, unless clearly controlled by other provisions of the will, to relate to the beginning of enjoyment by the remaindermen, and not to the vesting of the title in them. . . .

So, a direction that personal property shall be divided at the expiration of an estate for life creates a vested interest." In Cropley v. Cooper, supra, the testator bequeathed the rent of his house to his daughter for her life, and it was provided that at her decease the property should "be sold, and the avails therefrom become the property of her children or child, when he, she, or they have arrived at the age of twenty-one years, the interest in the meantime to be applied to their maintenance." When the testator *died, his daughter, who[239 survived him, had one son about three years old. It was held that the son took a vested interest at the death of the testator. The court said: "A bequest in the form of a direction to pay at a future period vests in interest immediately if the payment be postponed for the convenience of the estate or to let in some other interest. . . . In all such cases it is presumed that the testator postponed the time of enjoyment by the ultimate legatee for the purpose of the prior devise or bequest. A devise of lands to be sold after the termination of a life estate given by the will, the proceeds to be distributed thereafter to certain persons, is a bequest to those persons, and vests at the death of the testator."

The question remains, whether the interest vested in the daughters was defeasible on condition subsequent. That is, whether, on death of a daughter before the determination of the preceeding estate, leaving descendants, her interest was to be divested and her descendants were to take by substitution.

What, then, was the intent of the testator in providing for the children and descendants of daughters per stirpes? If the clause be considered to import a condition subsequent, providing for a divesting of the interest of the daughters who survived him, and a substitution of their children and descendants, it would necessarily follow that the children and descendants of daughters who died before him would be excluded from participation. It is difficult to suppose that this was his purpose. That his daughters might marry and die, leaving children, before he died, was undoubtedly contemplated. At the time of his death, one of his daughters had already married. If she survived him, she was to have a share in the property. Did the testator intend that if she died after his death, and before the time for distribution, her interest was to be divested in favor of her children and descendants, and if she died before the testator, her children and descend-240]ants were *to be barred? Or if it had happened that three of the daughters had married and died during the testator's lifetime, having children, and another daughter had married and died after the testator, were the children of the latter daughter to share in the avails of the property, on the death of the last daughter, unmarried, to the exclusion of all the other daughters' children? It is not to be thought that the testator designed such a purely arbitrary selection unless the words forbid a different interpretation.

The language of the clause is not of this imperative character. As well might it be said that it required the conclusion that the daughters and their respective children and descendants were to take concurrently. But this would not be a sensible construction, and it would seem to be equally contrary to the intention of the testator to imply a condition subsequent, and thus not only to make defeasible the interest which passed to the daughters, but to shut out the children and descendants of daughters who predeceased him.

The clause is obviously elliptical, and the provision for representation is not fully expressed. Taking the context and the entire plan of the will into consideration, we believe that what the testator had in mind was to establish the right of his daughters, who survived him, as of the time of his death, and to provide for the representation of any of his daughters, who might previously die, by her children and descendants. So construed, the disposition is a natural one, and representation of the same sort is accorded as that provided for in the next paragraph, when, in giving to his children the residuary personal estate, the testator fully defined the representation intended by stating that "the descendants of such as may have died during my life" were "to take a parent's part."

We are of the opinion that the remainder in fee which vested in the daughters, all of whom survived the testator, was not defeasible as to any of them by her death, leaving 241]*descendants, before the expiration of the preceding estates. As already stated, all the daughters were parties to the suit brought in 1865, and all consented to the decree, save the married daughter who was under age, and whose interests were duly protected by the court. It follows that the purchasers under the decree acquired a good title.

The complainant was entitled to the relief sought.

Decree affirmed.

56 L. ed.

C. R. SHARPE et al., Appts.,
v.

E. W. BONHAM et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 241-243.)

Federal courts — jurisdiction — diversity of citizenship — alignment of parties.

The trustees holding the legal title to church property need not, when testing the jurisdiction of a Federal circuit court, invoked on the ground of diversity of citizenship, be aligned on the side of complainants in a controversy between two religious societies over the right to control the church property, growing out of proceedings to consolidate the Cumberland Presbyterian Church with the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, but, as mere title holders, such trustees are properly made parties defendant.

[For other cases, see Courts, 721-769, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 396.]

Submitted March 12, 1912. Decided April 1, 1912.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Middle District of Tennessee to review a decree dismissing, for want of jurisdiction, a suit between two religious societies, growing out of the proceedings to consolidate the Cumberland and Presbyterian Churches, over the right to control certain church property. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. John M. Gaut submitted the cause for appellants:

The cases of Watson v. Jones, 13 Wall. 679, 720, 20 L. ed. 666, 672, and Helm v. Zarecor, 222 U. S. 32, ante, 77, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 10, are conclusive of this case.

Mr. W. C. Caldwell submitted the cause for appellees. Messrs. Frank Slemmons, Z. H. Zarecor, and W. B. Lamb were on the brief:

The averments of fact in the plea to the jurisdiction were admitted to be true by the motion to disallow the plea for insufficiency in law.

Farley v. Kittson, 120 U. S. 303, 314, 30 L. ed. 684, 688, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 534; Unit-

NOTE.—As to diverse citizenship as ground of Federal jurisdiction—see notes to Shipp v. Williams, 10 C. C. A. 249; Mason v. Dullaghan, 27 C. C. A. 298; Seddon v. Virginia, T. & C. Steel & I. Co. 1 L.R.A. 108; Myers v. Murray, N. & Co. 11 L.R.A. 216; Emory v. Greenough, 1 L. ed. U. S. 640; Strawbridge v. Curtiss, 2 L. ed. U. S. 435; M'Donald v. Smalley, 7 L. ed. U. S. 287; and Roberts v. Lewis, 36 L. ed. U. S. 579.

ed States v. California & O. Land Co. 148 U. S. 31, 39, 37 L. ed. 354, 359, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 458; United States v. American Bell Teleph. Co. 29 Fed. 33; Kellner v. Mutual L. Ins. Co. 43 Fed. 623; Burrell v. Hackley, 35 Fed. 833; Stephens v. Smartt, 172 Fed. 466; Stewart v. Mitchell, 172 Fed. 907; 1 Beach, Modern Law of Eq. Pr. § 36, p. 348.

In a case where the jurisdiction of the court depends alone on diversity of citizenship, the court will arrange the parties to the litigation as their interest may appear from the allegations of the bill, or from the admitted averments of the plea, as in this instance, or from the proof; and if, under such arrangement, citizens of the same state be found on opposite sides of the controversy, the court can proceed no further, but must dismiss the suit for want of jurisdiction.

Removal Cases, 100 U. S. 457, 25 L. ed. 593; Pacific R. Co. v. Ketchum, 101 U. S. 289, 25 L. ed. 932; Harter Twp. v. Kernochan, 103 U. S. 562, 26 L. ed. 411; Detroit v. Dean, 106 U. S. 537, 27 L. ed. 300, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 500; Wilson v. Oswego Twp. 151 U. S. 56, 38 L. ed. 70, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 259; Merchants' Cotton Press & Storage Co. v. Insurance Co. of N. A. 151 U. S. 368, 38 L. ed. 195, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 499, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 367; Evers v. Watson, 156 U. S. 527, 39 L. ed. 520, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 430; Dawson v. Columbia Ave. Sav. Fund, S. D. Title & T. Co. 197 U. S. 178, 49 L. ed. 713, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 420; Venner v. Great Northern R. Co. 209 U. S. 24, 52 L. ed. 666, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 328; Steele v. Culver, 211 U. S. 26, 53 L. ed. 74, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 9; Southern Realty Invest. Co. v. Walker, 211 U. S. 603, 53 L. ed. 346, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 211; First Nat. Bank v. Radford Trust Co. 26 C. C. A. 1, 47 U. S. App. 692, 80 Fed. 573; Stephens v. Smartt, 172 Fed. 466; Stewart v. Mitchell, 172 Fed. 907.

Among the many cases emphasizing the duty of the court, under the second clause of § 5 of the judiciary act of 1875, to dismiss the suit whenever and however it may appear that parties have been improperly or collusively made or joined for the purpose of creating a case cognizable in the circuit court, are:

Williams v. Nottawa, 104 U. S. 209, 26 L. ed. 719; Farmington v. Pillsbury, 114 U. S. 144, 29 L. ed. 116, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 807; Lehigh Min. & Mfg. Co. v. Kelly, 160 U. S. 340, 40 L. ed. 449, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 307; Miller & Lux v. East Side Canal & Irrig. Co. 211 U. S. 293, 53 L. ed. 189, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111; Southern Realty Invest. Co. v. Walker, 211 U. S. 603, 53 L. ed. 346, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 211; Steele v.

Culver, 211 U. S. 26, 53 L. ed. 74, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 9; Dawson v. Columbia Ave. Sav. Fund, S. D. Title & T. Co. 197 U. S. 178, 49 L. ed. 713, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 420.

An arrangement of parties which is merely a contrivance between friends to found jurisdiction on diverse citizenship will not avail; and when it is obvious that a party who is really on the complainant's side has been made a defendant for jurisdictional reasons, and for the purpose of reopening, in the United States courts, a controversy already decided in the state courts, the court will look beyond the pleadings, and arrange the parties according to their actual sides in the dispute.

Dawson v. Columbia Ave. Sav. Fund S. D. Title & T. Co. 197 U. S. 178, 49 L. ed. 713, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 420.

Memorandum opinion by direction of the court. By Mr. Justice Hughes:

Appeal from decree dismissing the bill for want of jurisdiction.

*The suit was brought by members[242 of a religious society in Nashville, Tennessee, known as Grace Church, citizens of states other than Tennessee, against the pastor and elders of another religious society calling itself Grace Cumberland Presbyterian Church, and also against three individuals described as trustees, who hold the legal title to certain land and a house of worship, all the defendants being citizens of Tennessee. The controversy grew out of the proceedings to consolidate the Cumberland Presbyterian Church with the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America. It was alleged in the bill that the union had been legally effected, and the complainants sought decree that the church property be declared to be held in trust for the congregation which adhered to the alleged united body.

The defendants, other than the trustees, filed a plea to the jurisdiction, alleging that the trustees, "who are alleged to hold the legal title of the property described and involved, are indispensable parties complainant, and yet, as these defendants aver, those persons are improperly and collusively joined as defendants for the purpose of creating a case cognizable in this honorable court;" and it was also asserted that parties had been improperly and collusively omitted for the same purpose. The court dismissed the bill, and in its certificate states that the dismissal was upon the ground that the three defendants, trustees, were not antagonistic to the complainants, and should be aligned upon the same side of the controversy; and, therefore, as some of the complainants and some of the defendants were citizens of the same state, the court was without jurisdiction.

The case is not to be distinguished from Helm v. Zarecor, 222 U. S. 32, ante, 77, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 10. There the controversy arising from the same proceedings, having in view the union of the two religious bodies, related to the property and management of an incorporated committee of publication, or publishing agency, known as the Board of Publication of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church. It was held that to align the corporation itself with the complainants was virtually to decide the merits in their favor; that the corporation was simply a title holder,—an instrumentality, the mastery of which was in dispute; and that it was properly made a party defendant.

As, in that case, the controversy embraced the fundamental question of the rights of the religious associations, said to be represented by the respective parties, to control the corporate agency, and to have the benefit in their denominational work of the corporate property, so here the controversy is with respect to the control of the church property which the three trustees hold in trust. These trustees were not indispensable parties complainant, as alleged in the plea, and, as mere title holders, they were properly made parties defendant. The court erred in aligning them with the complainants.

Decree reversed.

THEODORE R. CONVERSE, Receiver, Plff.
in Err.,
v.

CAROLINE A. HAMILTON. (No. 42.)

THEODORE R. CONVERSE, Receiver, Plff.
in Err.,
v.

JENEVA S. McCAULEY. (No. 43.)

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 243-261.)

Judgment — full faith and credit — stockholders' liability.

The refusal of the Wisconsin courts to permit an action to enforce the double liability of the stockholders in an insolvent Minnesota corporation to be maintained by the receiver of such corporation, who, by the proceedings in a sequestration suit brought conformably to Minn. Laws 1899, chap. 272, became a quasi assignee and representative of the creditors, and charged with the enforcement of the stockholders' liability in the Minnesota courts and elsewhere, denies the constitutional full faith and credit to the laws of Minnesota and the judicial proceedings in that state upon which the receiver's title, authority, and right to relief were grounded, and by which the stockholders, even though not made parties to the sequestration suit, and not notified otherwise than by publication or by mail of the applications for the orders levying the assessments, were bound. [For other cases, see Judgment, 975-981, 1025-1029, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[Nos. 42 and 43.]

Argued November 7, 1911. Decided April 1, 1912.

TWO WRITS OF ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Wisconsin to review judgments which affirmed judgments of the Circuit Court of Dane County, in that State, sustaining demurrers to and dismissing the complaints in actions brought by a receiver of an insolvent Minnesota corporation to enforce the stockholders' liability. Reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

See same case below, No. 42, 136 Wis. 589, 118 N. W. 190; No. 43, 136 Wis. 594, 118 N. W. 192.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Cordenio A. Severance argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Burr W. Jones, E. J. B. Schubring, Frank B. Kellogg, and Robert E. Olds, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The Minnesota Thresher Manufacturing Company is not exclusively a manufacturing or mechanical corporation, and hence the stockholders are liable.

Merchants' Nat. Bank v. Minnesota Thresher Mfg. Co. 90 Minn. 144, 95 N. W. 767; Bernheimer v. Converse, 206 U. S. 516, 524, 51 L. ed. 1163, 1172, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 755.

The plaintiff receiver under chap. 272 of the General Laws of Minnesota for 1899, and §§ 3184 to 3190, inclusive, of the Revised Laws of 1905, is a representative of the corporation and of its creditors, and has title to the assessments sued upon, and is authorized to enforce such assessments by proper proceedings either in the state of Minnesota or elsewhere.

NOTE.—On the right of a receiver to enforce the liability of a corporate stockholder outside the state of his appointment—see notes to Hale v. Allinson, 47 L. ed. U. S. 380; and Fowler v. Osgood, 4 L.R.A. (N.S.) 824.

As to full faith and credit to be given to state records and judicial proceedings—see notes to Lindley v. O'Reilly, 1 L.R.A. 56 L. ed.

79; Cummington v. Belchertown, 4 L.R.A. 131; Rand v. Hanson, 12 L.R.A. 574; Wiese v. San Francisco Musical Fund Soc. 7 L.R.A. 578; Darby v. Mayer, 6 L. ed. U. S. 367; Mills v. Duryee, 3 L. ed. U. S. 411; D'Arcy v. Ketchum, 13 L. ed. U. S. 648; and Huntington v. Attrill, 36 L. ed. U. S. 1123.

Bernheimer v. Converse, 206 U. S. 516, 51 L. ed. 1163, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 755; Converse v. Ayer, 197 Mass. 443, 84 N. E. 98.

Prior to the enactment of chap. 272 of the Laws of 1899, the receiver did not have such title, being nothing but the ordinary chancery receiver, and hence he could not maintain an action to recover stockholders' liability outside the state of Minnesota.

Finney v. Guy, 189 U. S. 335, 47 L. ed. 839, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 558; Hale v. Allinson, 188 U. S. 56, 47 L. ed. 380, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 244; Finney v. Guy, 106 Wis. 256, 49 L.R.A. 486, 82 N. W. 595.

Chapter 272 of the General Laws of 1899 and §§ 3184-3190 of the Revised Laws of 1905 merely changed and enlarged the remedy for the enforcement of stockholders' liability, and did not change the substantive right, and hence the said laws are constitutional.

Bernheimer v. Converse and Converse v. Ayer, supra; Straw & E. Mfg. Co. v. L. D. Kilbourne Boot & Shoe Co. 80 Minn. 125, 83 N. W. 36; London & N. W. American Mortg. Co. v. St. Paul Park Improv. Co. 84 Minn. 144, 86 N. W. 872.

The judgment at law against the thrasher company in the state court of Minnesota, and the decree in the subsequent suit based thereon, by which decree the receiver was appointed, cannot be collaterally attacked.

Bernheimer v. Converse, 206 U. S. 516, 51 L. ed. 1163, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 755; Converse v. Ayer, 197 Mass. 443, 84 N. E. 98; Mutual F. Ins. Co. v. Phoenix Furniture Co. 108 Mich. 170, 34 L.R.A. 694, 62 Am. St. Rep. 693, 66 N. W. 1095; Western Nat. Bank v. Lawrence, 117 Mich. 669, 76 N. W. 105; Hinckley v. Kettle River R. Co. 80 Minn. 32, 82 N. W. 1088; Parker v. Stoughton Mill Co. 91 Wis. 181, 51 Am. St. Rep. 881, 64 N. W. 751.

Chapter 272 of the General Laws of 1899 and §§ 3184-3190 of the Revised Laws of 1905 both declare that assessments levied pursuant to their provisions, which the demurrer admits were followed in this case, are conclusive upon stockholders wherever they may be.

Straw & E. Mfg. Co. v. L. D. Kilbourne Boot & Shoe Co. 80 Minn. 136, 83 N. W. 36; Bernheimer v. Converse, 206 U. S. 532, 533, 51 L. ed. 1175, 1176, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 755; Converse v. Ayer, 197 Mass. 443, 84 N. E. 100.

Full faith and credit must be given in all courts to the interlocutory decrees of the district court of Washington county, Minnesota, levying the assessment in question.

Bernheimer v. Converse, 206 U. S. 516, 51 L. ed. 1163, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 755; Hawkins v. Glenn, 131 U. S. 319, 33 L. ed. 184, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 739; Hancock Nat. Bank v. Farnum, 176 U. S. 640, 44 L. ed. 619, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 506.

There is no question of comity in this case.

Bernheimer v. Converse, supra.

Mr. Charles E. Buell argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Chauncey E. Blake and John B. Sanborn, filed a brief for defendants in error:

An assessment made by the court upon the stock of an insolvent Minnesota corporation and upon the stockholders thereof in an action to sequester the assets of the corporation is not such a judgment against the stockholders as to come within the full faith and credit clause of the Federal Constitution.

Hale v. Allinson, 188 U. S. 56, 80, 47 L. ed. 380, 393, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 244.

The corporation is not the representative of the stockholder in the sense that it can represent him in making an assessment upon his stock so as to establish a personal liability.

Ibid.; Hanson v. Davison, 73 Minn. 454, 76 N. W. 254; Willius v. Mann, 91 Minn. 494, 98 N. W. 341, 867; Lagerman v. Casserly, 107 Minn. 494, 23 L.R.A. (N.S.) 673, 131 Am. St. Rep. 506, 120 N. W. 1086; Finney v. Guy, 106 Wis. 256, 49 L.R.A. 486, 82 N. W. 595; Danforth v. National Chemical Co. 68 Minn. 308, 71 N. W. 274; Schrader v. Manufacturers' Nat. Bank, 133 U. S. 67, 76, 77, 33 L. ed. 564, 567, 568, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 238.

It has always been the law of Wisconsin, and was always the law of Minnesota until the enactment of chap. 272, Laws of 1899, that upon the insolvency of a corporation whose stockholders were subject to a double liability the only remedy the creditors had to enforce that liability was by an action brought by all the creditors, or by one or more creditors on behalf of all, against the corporation and all of the stockholders, to wind up the corporation, sequester its assets, and enforce the double liability of the stockholders; and that the judgment as to such double liability bound only such of the stockholders as could be personally served with process within the jurisdiction of the court, or should voluntarily appear in the action, and that no other action could be brought to enforce such liability either in the state in which the insolvent corporation was located or elsewhere.

Re Martin, 56 Minn. 420, 57 N. W. 1065; Allen v. Walsh, 25 Minn. 543; Merchants' Nat. Bank v. Bailey Mfg. Co. 34 Minn. 323, 25 N. W. 639; Minneapolis Baseball Co. v. City Bank, 66 Minn. 441, 38 L.R.A. 415, 69 N. W. 331; Hanson v. Davison, 73 Minn. 454, 76 N. W. 254; Coleman v. White, 14 Wis. 700, 80 Am. Dec. 797; Cleveland v. Marine Bank, 17 Wis. 546; Merchants' Bank v. Chandler, 19 Wis. 435; Hurlbut v. Marshall, 62 Wis. 590, 22 N. W. 852; Terry v. Chandler, 23 Wis. 456; Gianella v. Bigelow, 96 Wis. 185, 71 N. W. 111; Booth v. Dear, 96 Wis. 516, 71 N. W. 816; Gager v. Marsden, 101 Wis. 598, 77 N. W. 922; Foster v. Posson, 105 Wis. 99, 81 N. W. 123; Finney v. Guy, 106 Wis. 260, 49 L.R.A. 486, 82 N. W. 595; Eau Claire Nat. Bank v. Benson, 106 Wis. 624, 82 N. W. 604; Hunt v. Whewell, 122 Wis. 33, 99 N. W. 599; Hale v. Allinson, 188 U. S. 56, 47 L. ed. 380, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 244; Finney v. Guy, 189 U. S. 335, 47 L. ed. 839, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 558.

Chapter 272, Laws of Minnesota for the year 1899, and the amendments thereto, have not changed the legal aspect of this case.

Finney v. Guy, 106 Wis. 260, 49 L.R.A. 486, 82 N. W. 595.

Whether or not a right exists depends on the law of the state where it was created; the remedy for enforcing such right depends upon the law of the forum where it is sought to be enforced.

Herrick v. Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. 31 Minn. 11, 47 Am. Rep. 771, 16 N. W. 413; Northern P. R. Co. v. Babcock, 154 U. S. 190, 197, 38 L. ed. 958, 960, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 978; Marshall v. Sherman, 148 N. Y. 9, 34 L.R.A. 757, 51 Am. St. Rep. 654, 42 N. E. 419; Leucke v. Tredway, 45 Mo. App. 507.

A receiver has no extraterritorial jurisdiction or power of official action and is not entitled, as matter of right, to sue in a foreign jurisdiction; and the refusal of another state to entertain such suit does not amount to failure to give full faith and credit to the laws and judgments of the state of appointment, within the meaning of the Federal Constitution.

High, Receivers, § 239; Booth v. Clark, 17 How. 322, 15 L. ed. 164; Filkins v. Nunemacher, 81 Wis. 91, 51 N. W. 79; Farmers' & M. Ins. Co. v. Needles, 52 Mo. 17; Brigham v. Luddington, 12 Blatchf. 237, Fed. Cas. No. 1,874; Hazard v. Durant, 19 Fed. 471.

The statutes of a state have no extraterritorial force. A foreign receiver cannot, as matter of right, maintain an action outside of the state of his appointment. He is often permitted through comity, or the courtesy of a sister state, to maintain an action therein; but never where the courts of such sister state have declared the maintenance of such action to be against the public policy of that state, or that the rights of its citizens would be thereby jeopardized or impaired.

High, Receivers, § 241; Comstock v. Frederickson, 51 Minn. 350, 53 N. W. 713; Mercantile Nat. Bank v. Macfarlane, 71 Minn. 497, 70 Am. St. Rep. 352, 74 N. W. 287; Hanson v. Davison, 73 Minn. 455, 76 N. W. 254; Herrick v. Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. 31 Minn. 13, 47 Am. Rep. 771, 16 N. W. 413; New Haven Horse Nail Co. v. Linden Spring Co. 142 Mass. 349, 7 N. E. 773; Post & Co. v. Toledo, C. & St. L. R. Co. 144 Mass. 345, 59 Am. Rep. 86, 11 N. E. 540; Higgins v. Central New England & W. R. Co. 155 Mass. 176, 31 Am. St. Rep. 544, 29 N. E. 534; Howarth v. Lombard, 175 Mass. 573, 49 L.R.A. 301, 56 N. E. 888; Smith v. Mutual L. Ins. Co. 14 Allen, 336; Rice v. Merrimack Hosiery Co. 56 N. H. 127; Nimick v. Mingo Iron Works Co. 25 W. Va. 184; Rorer, Interstate Law, 167, 168, 226; Foster v. Glazener, 27 Ala. 391; Stevens v. Brown, 20 W. Va. 460; Gilman v. Ketcham (Gilman v. Hudson River Boot & Shoe Mfg. Co.) 84 Wis. 60, 23 L.R.A. 52, 36 Am. St. Rep. 899, 54 N. W. 395; Sobernheimer v. Wheeler, 45 N. J. Eq. 614, 18 Atl. 234; Disconto Gesellschaft v. Umbreit, 127 Wis. 651, 15 L.R.A. (N.S.) 1045, 115 Am. St. Rep. 1063, 106 N. W. 821; Bagby v. Atlantic, M. & O. R. Co. 86 Pa. 291; Falk v. Janes, 49 N. J. Eq. 484, 23 Atl. 813; Finney v. Guy, 189 U. S. 335, 345, 47 L. ed. 839, 845, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 558.

Whether or not a complaint in a state court states a cause of action, no Federal question being involved, is exclusively for the state court to determine.

Finney v. Guy, 189 U. S. 335, 339, 47 L. ed. 839, 843, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 558; Allen v. Alleghany Co. 196 U. S. 458, 466, 49 L. ed. 551, 556, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 311.

In various cases the Federal courts have entertained jurisdiction of actions by receivers to enforce judgments for additional stockholders' liability. In those cases, the bringing of such an action would not have been against the public policy of the state in which the Federal court was sitting. In many of them the court expressly mentions this fact as bearing upon its ability to entertain the action.

Kirtley v. Holmes, 52 L.R.A. 738, 46 C. C. A. 102, 107 Fed. 1; Lewis v. Clark, 64 C. C. A. 138, 129 Fed. 570; Rogers v. Riley, 80 Fed. 759; Burr v. Smith, 113 Fed. 858.

Where a case turns upon the construction, and not upon the validity, of the statute of another state, it does not necessarily involve a Federal question.

Finney v. Guy, 189 U. S. 335, 340, 47 L. ed. 839, 843, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 558; Johnson v. New York L. Ins. Co. 187 U. S. 491, 496, 47 L. ed. 273, 275, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 194; Allen v. Alleghany Co. 196 U. S. 463, 49 L. ed. 555, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 311; Lloyd v. Matthews, 155 U. S. 222, 39 L. ed. 128, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 70; Banzholzer v. New York L. Ins. Co. 178 U. S. 402, 44 L. ed. 1124, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 972.

Upon demurrer to a complaint alleging the law of another state, the defendant is not concluded by such allegations; the court will examine the statutes and decisions of such state, and determine for itself whether the law is as pleaded.

Finney v. Guy, 189 U. S. 335, 343, 344, 47 L. ed. 839, 844, 845, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 558; Knickerbocker Trust Co. v. Iselin, 185 N. Y. 58, 113 Am. St. Rep. 863, 77 N. E. 877.

There is nothing in any of the cases arising under the amended Minnesota statute and decided by this court since the amendment to the Minnesota law in conflict with the decision of the Wisconsin court in Hunt v. Whewell, 122 Wis. 33, 99 N. W. 599.

First Nat. Bank v. Converse, 200 U. S. 425, 50 L. ed. 537, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 306; Bernheimer v. Converse, 206 U. S. 516, 51 L. ed. 1166, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 755; Converse v. First Nat. Bank, 212 U. S. 567, 53 L. ed. 654, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 691; Converse v. Stewart, 218 U. S. 666, 54 L. ed. 1202, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 226; Howarth v. Angle, 162 N. Y. 179, 47 L.R.A. 725, 56 N. E. 489; Post & Co. v. Toledo, C. & St. L. R. Co. 144 Mass. 345, 59 Am. Rep. 86, 11 N. E. 540; Hancock Nat. Bank v. Farnum, 176 U. S. 640, 44 L. ed. 619, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 506.

Mr. Justice Van Devanter delivered the opinion of the court:

These were actions at law, brought in the circuit court of Dane County, Wisconsin, by a receiver of an insolvent Minnesota corporation, the Minnesota Thresher Manufacturing Company, to enforce an asserted double liability of two of its stockholders. The facts stated in the complaints, which were substantially alike, were these: A judgment creditor, upon whose judgment an execution had been issued and returned nulla bona, commenced a suit against the company in the district court of Washington county, Minnesota, for the sequestration of its property and effects and for the appointment of a receiver of the same. The company appeared in the suit, a receiver was appointed, and such further proceedings were had therein, conformably to the statutes of the state, as resulted in the appearance of the creditors of the company, in the presentation and adjudication of their claims, aggregating many thousands of dollars, in an ascertainment of *the[252 complete insolvency of the company, and of the necessity of resorting to the double liability of its stockholders for the payment of its creditors, and in orders levying upon its stockholders two successive assessments of 36 and 64 per cent of the par value of their respective shares, requiring that these assessments be paid to the receiver within stated periods, and directing the receiver, in case any of the stockholders should fail to pay either assessment within the time prescribed, to institute and prosecute all such actions, whether within or without the state, as should be necessary to enforce the assessments. Some of the stockholders intervened in the suit and appealed from the order levying the first assessment, and the order was affirmed by the supreme court of the state. 90 Minn. 144, 95 N. W. 767.

The defendants here were stockholders in the company, and failed and refused to pay either assessment, although payment was duly demanded of them. But they were not made parties to the sequestration suit, and were not notified, otherwise than by publication or by mail, of the applications for the orders levying the assessments. Upon the expiration of the times prescribed in the orders, the receiver brought the present actions to enforce them. The complaints set forth the proceedings in the sequestration suit and the provisions of the Minnesota Constitution and statutes relating to the double liability of stockholders and its enforcement, with the interpretation placed upon those provisions by the supreme court of that state, and also made the claim that § 1, article 4, of the Constitution of the United States, and § 905, Rev. Stat. (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 677), required the courts of Wisconsin to give such faith and credit to those proceedings and provisions as they have by law or usage in the courts of Minnesota.

Demurrers to the complaints were sustained upon the ground that to permit the actions to be maintained in the Wisconsin courts would be contrary to the settled policy *of that state in respect of the[253 enforcement of the like liability of stockholders in its own corporations, and judgments of dismissal were entered, accordingly. The judgments were affirmed by the supreme court of the state (136 Wis. 589 and 594, 118 N. W. 190, 192), and the receiver sued out these writs of error, alleging that he had been denied a right asserted, as before indicated, under the Constitution and laws of the United States.

Of course, we must look to the Minnesota Constitution, statutes, and decisions to determine the nature and extent of the liability in question, and the effect given in that state to the laws and judicial proceedings therein looking to its enforcement, and when this is done we find that the situation, as applied to the cases now before us, is as follows:

1. Section 3, article 10, of the Minnesota Constitution, provides: "Each stockholder in any corporation (excepting those organized for the purpose of carrying on any kind of manufacturing or mechanical business), shall be liable to the amount of stock held or owned by him." The insolvent company, before mentioned, is within the general terms of this provision, not the excepting clause. Merchants' Nat. Bank v. Minnesota Thresher Mfg. Co. 90 Minn. 144; 95 N. W. 767; Bernheimer v. Converse, 206 U. S. 516, 524, 51 L. ed. 1163, 1172, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 755. The provision is self-executing, and under it each stockholder becomes liable for the debts of the corporation in an amount measured by the par value of his stock. This liability is not to the corporation, but to the creditors collectively; is not penal, but contractual; is not joint, but several; and the mode and means of its enforcement are subject to legislative regulation. Willis v. Mabon (Willis v. St. Paul Sanitation Co.), 48 Minn. 140, 16 L.R.A. 281, 31 Am. St. Rep. 626, 50 N. W. 1110; Minneapolis Baseball Co. v. City Bank, 66 Minn. 441, 446, 38 L.R.A. 415, 69 N. W. 331; Hanson v. Davison, 73 Minn. 454, 76 N. W. 254; Straw & E. Mfg. Co. v. L. D. Kilbourne Boot & Shoe Co. 80 Minn. 125, 83 N. W. 36; London & N. W. American Mortg. Co. v. St. Paul Park Improv. Co. 84 Minn. 144, 86 N. W. 872; Bernheimer v. Converse, supra.

254] *2. The proceedings in the sequestration suit, looking to the enforcement of this liability, were had under chapter 272, Laws of 1899, and §§ 3184-3190, Revised Laws of 1905, the latter being a continuation of the former, with changes not here material. An earlier statute prescribed a mode of enforcement by a single suit in equity in a home court, which was to be prosecuted by all the creditors jointly, or by some for the benefit of all, against all the stockholders, or as many as could be served with process in the state, and all the rights of the different parties were to be finally adjusted therein. That mode was exclusive. A receiver could not sue on behalf of the creditors in a home court or elsewhere. A single creditor could not sue in his own behalf, and, if all united, or one sued for the benefit of all, it was essential that the suit be in a home court. The statute was so interpreted by the supreme court of the state. See Hale v. Allinson, 188 U. S. 56, 47 L. ed. 380, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 244, and Finney v. Guy, 189 U. S. 335, 47 L. ed. 839, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 558, where the cases were carefully reviewed. In one of them, Minneapolis Baseball Co. v. City Bank, 66 Minn. 441, 446, 38 L.R.A. 415, 69 N. W. 331, that court, after holding that the liability could not then be enforced through a suit by a receiver, added: "If it be desirable, in order to secure a speedy, economical, and practical method of enforcing the liability, to invest the receiver with such power, it must be done by statute." Doubtless, responding, to this suggestion, the legislature enacted chapter 272, Laws of 1899. It expressly prescribed the mode of enforcement pursued in the present instance; that is to say, it made provision for bringing all the creditors into the sequestration suit, for the presentation and adjudication of their claims, for ascertaining the relation of the corporate debts and the expenses of the receivership to the available assets, and whether and to what extent it was necessary to resort to the stockholders' double liability, for levying such assessments upon the stockholders according to their respective holdings as should *be necessary[255 to pay the debts, and for investing the receiver with authority to collect the assessments on behalf of the creditors. And it also contained the following provisions respecting the effect to be given to the orders levying assessments, and respecting the authority and duties of the receiver:

"Sec. 5. Said order and the assessment thereby levied shall be conclusive upon and against all parties liable upon or on account of any stock or shares of said corporation, whether appearing or represented at said hearing, or having notice thereof or not, as to all matters relating to the amount of and the propriety of and necessity for the said assessment. This provision shall also apply to any subsequent assessment levied by said court as hereinafter provided.

"Sec. 6. It shall be the duty of such assignee or receiver to, and he may, immediately after the expiration of the time specified in said order for the payment of the amount so assessed by the parties liable therefor, institute and maintain an action or actions against any and every party liable upon or on account of any share or shares of such stock who has failed to pay the amount so assessed against the same, for the amount for which such party is so liable. Said actions may be maintained against each stockholder, severally, in this state or in any other state or country where such stockholder, or any property subject to attachment, garnishment, or other process in an action against such stockholder, may be found. . . ."

3. Under this statute, as interpreted by the supreme court of the state, as also by this court, the receiver is not an ordinary chancery receiver or arm of the court appointing him, but a quasi assignee and representative of the creditors; and when the order levying the assessment is made he becomes invested with the creditors' rights of action against the stockholders, and with full authority to enforce the same in any [256] court of competent jurisdiction in the state or elsewhere. Straw & E. Mfg. Co. v. L. D. Kilbourne Boot & Shoe Co. 80 Minn. 125, 83 N. W. 36; Bernheimer v. Converse, 206 U. S. 516, 524, 51 L. ed. 1163, 1172, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 755.

4. The constitutional validity of chapter 272 has been sustained by the supreme court of the state, as also by this court; and this because (1) the statute is but a reasonable regulation of the mode and means of enforcing the double liability assumed by those who become stockholders in a Minnesota corporation; (2) while the order levying the assessment is made conclusive, as against all stockholders, of all matters relating to the amount and propriety of the assessment and the necessity therefor, one against whom it is sought to be enforced is not precluded from showing that he is not a stockholder, or is not the holder of as many shares as is alleged, or has a claim against the corporation which, in law or equity, he is entitled to set off against the assessment, or has any other defense personal to himself, and (3) while the order is made conclusive as against a stockholder, even although he may not have been a party to the suit in which it was made, and may not have been notified that an assessment was contemplated, this is not a tenable objection, for the order is not in the nature of a personal judgment against the stockholder, and as to him is amply sustained by the presence in that suit of the corporation, considering his relation to it and his contractual obligation in respect of its debts. Straw & E. Mfg. Co. v. L. D. Kilbourne Boot & Shoe Co. supra; London & N. W. American Mortg. Co. v. St. Paul Park Improv. Co. 84 Minn. 144, 86 N. W. 872; Bernheimer v. Converse, supra.

This statement of the nature of the liability in question, of the laws of Minnesota bearing upon its enforcement, and of the effect which judicial proceedings under those laws have in that state, discloses, as we think, that in the cases now before us the supreme court of Wisconsin failed to give full faith and credit to those laws and to the proceedings thereunder, upon which the receiver's right to sue was grounded. It is true that an ordinary chancery receiver is a mere arm of the court appointing him, is invested with no estate in the property committed to his charge, and is clothed with no power to exercise his official duties in other jurisdictions. Booth v. Clark, 17 How. 322, 15 L. ed. 164; Hale v. Allinson, 188 U. S. 56, 47 L. ed. 380, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 244; Great Western Min. & Mfg. Co. v. Harris, 198 U. S. 561, 49 L. ed. 1163, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 770. But here the receiver was not merely an ordinary chancery receiver, but much more. By the proceedings in the sequestration suit, had conformably to the laws of Minnesota, he became a quasi assignee and representative of the creditors, was invested with their rights of action against the stockholders, and was charged with the enforcement of those rights in the courts of that state and elsewhere. So, when he invoked the aid of the Wisconsin court, the case presented was, in substance, that of a trustee, clothed with adequate title for the occasion, seeking to enforce, for the benefit of his cestuis que trustent, a right of action, transitory in character, against one who was liable contractually and severally, if at all. The receiver's right to maintain the actions in that court was denied in the belief that it turned upon a question of comity only, unaffected by the full faith and credit clause of the Constitution of the United States, and this view of it was regarded as sustained by the decision of this court in Finney v. Guy, 189 U. S. 335, 47 L. ed. 839, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 558. But that case is obviously distinguishable from those now before us. It involved the right of a Minnesota receiver and of the creditors of a Minnesota corporation to sue a stockholder in Wisconsin prior to the enactment of chapter 272, and while the earlier statute, before mentioned, provided an exclusive remedy through a single suit in equity in a Minnesota court. That remedy having been exhausted, the receiver and the creditors sought, by an ancillary suit in Wisconsin, to enforce the liability of a stockholder who resided in that state and was not a party to the suit in Minnesota. The supreme court of Wisconsin, treating the right to maintain the suit in that state as [258] depending upon comity only, ruled that it ought not to be entertained. The case was then brought here, it being claimed that full faith and credit had not been accorded to the laws of Minnesota and the proceedings in the suit in that state. This claim was grounded upon a contention that the first decisions in Minnesota, holding that the remedy provided by the earlier statute was exclusive, that a receiver could not sue thereunder, and that the rights of creditors against stockholders must be worked out in the single suit in the home court, had been overruled by later decisions giving, as was alleged, a different interpretation to that statute. The contention was fully considered by this court, the cases relied upon being carefully reviewed, and the conclusion was reached that "the law of Minnesota still remains upon this particular matter as stated in the former cases, which have not been overruled." The claim under the full faith and credit clause was accordingly held untenable, and it was then said: "Whether, aside from the Federal considerations just discussed, the Wisconsin court should have permitted this action to be maintained, because of the principle of comity between the states, is a question exclusively for the courts of that state to decide."

We perceive nothing in the decision in that case which makes for the conclusion that when the representative character, title, and duties of a receiver have been established by proceedings in a Minnesota court conformably to the altogether different provisions of the later statute embodied in chapter 272, his right to enforce in the courts of another state the assessments judicially levied in Minnesota depends upon comity, unaffected by the full faith and credit clause. Indeed, the implication of the decision is to the contrary. We say this, first, because, had it been thought that the controlling question was one of comity only, there would have been no occasion to consider what effect was accorded in Minnesota to the earlier statute and to the proceedings thereunder; and, second, because especial care was taken to explain that the case in hand was not controlled by the decision in Hancock Nat. Bank v. Farnum, 176 U. S. 640, 44 L. ed. 619, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 506. That was an action in a Rhode Island court by a creditor of a Kansas corporation against one of its stockholders, to enforce the contractual double liability of the latter. The creditor had recovered against the corporation in a court in Kansas a judgment which, according to the laws of that state, invested the creditor with a cause of action against the stockholder which could be asserted in any court of competent jurisdiction. The supreme court of Rhode Island, treating the right to maintain the action in that state against the stockholder as dependent upon comity only, and finding that the right with which the creditor was invested under the law of Kansas was unlike that conferred by the law of Rhode Island in like situations, ruled that the action could not be maintained in the courts of that state. 20 R. I. 466, 40 Atl. 341. But when the case came here, it was held that full faith and credit had not been given to the Kansas judgment upon which the creditor relied, and the judgment of the supreme court of Rhode Island was accordingly reversed, it being said in that connection: "The question to be determined in this case was not what credit and effect are given in an action against a stockholder in the courts of Rhode Island to a judgment in those courts against the corporation of which he is a stockholder, but what credit and effect are given in the courts of Kansas in a like action to a similar judgment there rendered. Thus and thus only can the full faith and credit prescribed by the Constitution of the United States and the act of Congress be secured."

In Bernheimer v. Converse, 206 U. S. 516, 51 L. ed. 1163, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 755, the present receiver sought, by reason of the proceedings in the Minnesota court under chapter 272, to maintain an action in New York against a stockholder residing in that state, "to enforce one of the assessments before mentioned, and this court sustained the action, saying (p. 534):

"It is objected that the receiver cannot bring this action, and Booth v. Clark, 17 How. 322, 15 L. ed. 164; Hale v. Allinson, 188 U. S. 56, 47 L. ed. 380, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 244; and Great Western Min. & Mfg. Co. v. Harris, 198 U. S. 561, 49 L. ed. 1163, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 770, are cited and relied upon. But in each and all of these cases it was held that a chancery receiver, having no other authority than that which would arise from his appointment as such, could not maintain an action in another jurisdiction. In this case the statute confers the right upon the receiver, as a quasi assignee and representative of the creditors, and as such vested with the authority to maintain an action. In such case we think the receiver may sue in a foreign jurisdiction. Relfe v. Rundle (Life Asso. of America v. Rundle) 103 U. S. 222, 226, 26 L. ed. 337, 339; Howarth v. Lombard, 175 Mass. 570, 49 L.R.A. 301, 56 N. E. 888; Howarth v. Angle, 162 N. Y. 179, 182, 47 L.R.A. 725, 56 N. E. 489."

And in Converse v. First Nat. Bank, 212 U. S. 567, 53 L. ed. 654, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 691, where, in a similar action, the supreme court of errors of Connecticut had given judgment against the receiver, this court reversed the judgment on the authority of Bernheimer v. Converse, supra.

True, the full faith and credit clause of the Constitution is not without well-recognized exceptions, as is pointed out in Huntington v. Attrill, 146 U. S. 657, 36 L. ed.

1123, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224; Andrews v. Andrews, 188 U. S. 14, 47 L. ed. 366, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 237, and National Exch. Bank v. Wiley, 195 U. S. 257, 49 L. ed. 184, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 70; but the laws and proceedings relied upon here come within the general rule which that clause establishes, and not within any exception. Thus, the liability to which they relate is contractual, not penal. The proceedings were had with adequate jurisdiction to make them binding upon the stockholders in the particulars before named. The subject to which chapter 272 is addressed is peculiarly within the regulatory power of the state of Minnesota; so much so that no other state properly can be said to have any public policy thereon. And what the law of Wisconsin 261] may be respecting the *relative rights and obligations of creditors and stockholders of corporations of its creation, and the mode and means of enforcing them, is apart from the question under consideration.

Besides, it is not questioned that the Wisconsin court in which the receiver sought to enforce the causes of action with which he had become invested under the laws and proceedings relied upon was possessed of jurisdiction which was fully adequate to the occasion. His right to resort to that court was not denied by reason of any jurisdictional impediment, but because the supreme court of the state was of opinion that, as to such causes of action, the courts of that state "could, if they chose, close their doors and refuse to entertain the same."

In these circumstances we think the conclusion is unavoidable that the laws of Minnesota and the judicial proceedings in that state, upon which the receiver's title, authority, and right to relief were grounded, and by which the stockholders were bound, were not accorded that faith and credit to which they were entitled under the Constitution and laws of the United States.

The judgments are accordingly reversed, and the cases are remanded for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion.

Reversed.

262]*O. G. HOLT, Trustee in Bankruptcy of Davis, Kelly, & Company, Bankrupts, Appt.,

v.

CRUCIBLE STEEL COMPANY OF AMERICA.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 262-267.)

Bankruptcy—effect of unrecorded chattel mortgage.

1. The effect to be given in bankruptcy proceedings to an unrecorded chattel mortgage as against subsequent creditors of the bankrupt mortgagor, without notice, must be determined by the recording law of the state, in view of the declaration of the bankrupt act of July 1, 1898 (30 Stat. at L. 564, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3449), § 67a, that claims which, for want of record, or for other reasons, would not have been valid liens as against the claims of the creditors of the bankrupt, shall not be liens against his estate.

[For other cases, see Bankruptcy, 193-201, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Chattel mortgage — recording — creditors.

2. Subsequent creditors without notice of an unrecorded chattel mortgage, who have not secured any specific lien upon the mortgaged property by execution, attachment, or otherwise, are not comprehended by the term "creditors," as used in Ky. Stat. 1903, § 496, which provides that no unrecorded mortgage shall be valid against a purchaser for a valuable consideration, without notice thereof, or against creditors.

[For other cases, see Chattel Mortgage, III., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 183.]

Argued March 4, 1912. Decided April 1, 1912.

APPEAL from the United States Circuit Court of appeals for the Sixth Circuit to review a decree which, reversing an order of the District Court for the Western District of Kentucky, sustained the right to priority asserted by the chattel mortgagee of a bankrupt, as against subsequent creditors who had not secured any specific lien upon the mortgaged property. Affirmed.

See same case below, 98 C. C. A. 101, 174 Fed. 127.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. H. H. Nettelroth argued the cause, and, with Mr. John C. Doolan, filed a brief for appellant:

Under the law of Kentucky an unrecorded mortgage is invalid as to subsequent creditors without notice, even though such creditors have fastened no lien upon the mortgaged property.

Wick Bros. v. McConnell, 102 Ky. 434, 43 S. W. 205; Besten v. People's Messenger & Parcel Delivery Co. 30 Ky. L. Rep. 787, 99 S. W. 631; Swafford v. Asher, 31 Ky. L. Rep. 1338, 105 S. W. 164; Re Duck-er, 67 C. C. A. 117, 134 Fed. 43.

Mr. Keith L. Bullitt argued the cause, and, with Mr. William Marshall Bullitt, filed a brief for appellee:

The term "creditors" includes only those who, by judgment, attachment, or otherwise, have obtained an interest in, or a lien upon, the property covered by the mortgage.

Button v. Rathbone, 126 N. Y. 187, 27 N. E. 266; Overstreet v. Manning, 67 Tex. 657, 4 S. W. 248; 8 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 241; Ayres v. Duprey, 27 Tex. 593, 86 Am. Dec. 657; McFadden v. Worthington, 45 Ill. 365; Stewart v. Beale, 7 Hun, 405; Ransom v. Schmela, 13 Neb. 77, 12 N. W. 926; Grace v. Wade, 45 Tex. 527; Citizens' Sav. Bank v. Hibbs, 11 Ky. L. Rep. 441; Underwood v. Ogden, 6 B. Mon. 606; Bailey v. Welch, 4 B. Mon. 244; United States Bank v. Huth, 4 B. Mon. 451; Wicks Bros. v. McConnell, 102 Ky. 434, 43 S. W. 205; Re Ducker, 67 C. C. A. 117, 134 Fed. 48; Re Doran, 83 C. C. A. 265, 154 Fed. 471; York Mfg. Co. v. Cassell, 201 U. S. 344, 50 L. ed. 782, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 481.

The rule in Kentucky has not been changed by the decisions rendered in Swafford v. Asher, 31 Ky. L. Rep. 1338, 105 S. W. 164, and in Besten v. People's Messenger & Parcel Delivery Co. 30 Ky. L. Rep. 787, 99 S. W. 631.

Crucible Steel Co. v. Holt, 98 C. C. A. 101, 174 Fed. 127.

Mr. Justice Van Devanter delivered the opinion of the court:

This appeal brings up for review a decree reversing an order of the district court for the western district of Kentucky in a proceeding in bankruptcy. The matter in dispute is the validity, under the recording law of that state, of an unrecorded chattel mortgage as against creditors who became such after the mortgage was given, and without knowledge of it, where none of them had secured a lien upon the mortgaged property by execution, attachment, or otherwise. The mortgagee, in making proof of its claim, asserted a lien under the mortgage, and sought priority of payment out of the proceeds of the property covered by it. The claim was allowed, but the district court, being of opinion that the mortgage was invalid as against the subsequent creditors without notice, held that it gave no right to priority of payment as against them. The mortgagee appealed to the circuit court of appeals, and that court, taking the view that the mortgage was valid as against those creditors, since none had secured any specific lien upon the mortgaged property, sustained the right to priority asserted by the mortgagee. 98 C. C. A. 101, 174 Fed. 127. The trustee prosecutes the present appeal.

Section 67a of the bankruptcy act declares:

"Claims which, for want of record, or for other reasons, would not have been valid liens as against the claims of the creditors of the bankrupt, shall not be liens against his estate." [30 Stat. at L. 564, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3449.]
56 L. ed.

And the applicable provision of the recording law of Kentucky (Stat. 1903, § 496) is as follows:

"No deed or deed of trust or mortgage conveying a legal or equitable title to real or personal estate shall be valid against a purchaser for a valuable consideration, without notice thereof, or against creditors, until such deeds shall be acknowledged or proved according to law, and lodged for record."

It is apparent from the language of § 67a and from the decisions of this court in York Mfg. Co. v. Cassell, 201 U. S. 344, 50 L. ed. 782, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 481; Thomas v. Taggart, 209 U. S. 385, 52 L. ed. 845, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 519, and other like cases, that the effect to be given to the unrecorded chattel mortgage must be determined by the recording law of the state; and it is also apparent that the question arising under that law turns upon who are included in the term "creditors" in § 496.

Upon that question the decisions of the court of appeals of the state have not been uniform, but it is conceded, and is evident upon an examination of the more recent decisions, that the term does not include antecedent creditors, or subsequent creditors whose claims are acquired with notice of the unrecorded mortgage, but does include subsequent creditors without notice, who, by their diligence, secure a specific lien upon the property, as by execution or attachment, before the mortgage is recorded. Baldwin v. Crow, 86 Ky. 679, 7 S. W. 146; Wicks Bros. v. McConnell, 102 Ky. 434, 43 S. W. 205; Clift v. Williams, 105 Ky. 559, 49 S. W. 328, 51 S. W. 821; Bowles v. Jones, 123 Ky. 395, 96 S. W. 1121; Swafford v. Asher, 31 Ky. L. Rep. 1338, 105 S. W. 164. And so, the question for decision is reduced to this: Does the term include subsequent creditors without notice, who have not secured such a lien?

No case in that court has been called to our attention, and none has been found by us, in which this question was presented for decision and decided; but in two of the later cases there are expressions bearing thereon which are respectively relied upon here. Thus, in Wicks Bros. v. McConnell, supra, where the prior cases were reviewed with the evident purpose of extracting a general and guiding rule, it was said: "On the one hand, the unrecorded lien is upheld as against creditors who cannot be presumed to have given credit upon the faith of the property held in lien. On the other hand, creditors who may be presumed on such faith to have given credit are protected as against the secret lien in the rights which they secure by their diligence in the levy of their execution or attachment." (Italics ours.) And in Swafford v. Asher, supra, it was said: "As the mortgage was not recorded, it would, of course, not be valid as to creditors whose debts were subsequently created; but as to those whose debts were created prior to the purchase of the teams and the mortgage upon them the lien is valid, although not recorded as required by § 496 of the Kentucky Statutes [of 1903], and, *as said before, there is nothing to show that any debt of the estate was created after the purchase of the terms, except that of appellant, who had actual notice." As Wicks Bros. v. McConnell was cited as sustaining this statement, it is not probable that the court regarded it as overruling or departing from what had been said in that case; and this view receives added support from the fact that the opinion in Swafford v. Asher was marked by the court, "Not to be officially reported." These considerations, coupled with the further fact that in cases such as Bowles v. Jones, supra, where subsequent creditors prevailed over such a mortgagee, the court was careful to state, not only that the claims of the creditors arose after the date of the unrecorded mortgage, but also that the creditors had obtained attachment or other liens upon the mortgaged property before the mortgage was recorded, are persuasive that what was said in Wicks Bros. v. McConnell should be accepted as reflecting the true construction of § 496, in the absence of some more positive and direct ruling upon the subject by the court of appeals of the state. Such was the view of the circuit court of appeals, and we are at least unable to say that it was wrong. It follows that, as here the subsequent creditors had not fastened any lien upon the property covered by the mortgage prior to the proceedings in bankruptcy by which the title passed to the trustee, the mortgage, although unrecorded, was valid and effective against them.

Decree affirmed.

268]*HENRY BRINKMEIER, Plff. in Err.,
v.
MISSOURI PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 268-270.)

Pleading — sufficiency of complaint — action under safety-appliance act.

1. The petition states no cause of action under the original safety-appliance act of March 2, 1893 (27 Stat. at L. 531, chap. 196, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3174), making it unlawful for any railroad carrier engaged in interstate commerce "to haul or permit to be hauled or used on its line any car used in moving interstate traffic, not equipped with couplers coupling automatically by impact," where there is no allegation that either of the cars was, at the time of the accident, or at any time, used in moving interstate traffic.

[For other cases, see Pleading, II, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Error to state court — scope of review — pleading and practice.

2. The refusal to allow an amendment to the petition in an action founded on the original safety-appliance act of March 2, 1893, after the cause had twice been tried without decisive result, and the period of limitation had expired, so as to allege that the cars were used in moving interstate traffic, involves only a question of pleading and practice under the local law, which is not reviewable in the Federal Supreme Court on writ of error to a state court.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 2209-2226, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Error to state court — scope of review — evidence.

3. A ruling that the evidence is insufficient to sustain a recovery under a petition which, while founded on the safety-appliance act of March 2, 1893, fails to state a cause of action under that statute, but at most shows a right of recovery at common law, does not involve a Federal question open to examination in the Federal Supreme Court on a writ of error to a state court.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 2175-2208, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 206.]

Submitted March 11, 1912. Decided April 1, 1912.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Kansas to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the District Court of Sedgwick County, in that state, in favor of defendant in an action for personal injuries. Affirmed.

See same case below, 81 Kan. 101, 105 Pac. 221.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

NOTE.—On the duty and liability under Federal and state railway safety-appliance acts—see note to Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. United States, 20 L.R.A. (N.S.) 473.

On what questions the Federal Supreme Court will consider in reviewing the judgments of state courts—see note to Missouri ex rel. Hill v. Dockery, 63 L.R.A. 571.

As to questions of local practice and procedure on writ of error from Federal Supreme Court to a state court—see note to Texas & N. O. R. Co. v. Miller, 55 L. ed. U. S. 790.

Mr. C. V. Ferguson submitted the cause for plaintiff in error. Messrs. Kos Harris and V. Harris were on the brief:

By every intendment and a reasonable interpretation of the matter alleged in the petition, it sufficiently warns the defendant that it must meet a claim under the safety-appliance act.

Voelker v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 116 Fed. 867.

An objection must be specific; and a general objection that evidence is incompetent or irrelevant is no objection at all, and may and should be ignored by the court, and the evidence considered as admitted without objection.

Walker v. Armstrong, 2 Kan. 220; Kansas P. R. Co. v. Cutter, 19 Kan. 87.

The question of the sufficiency of the petition was not before the supreme court, because the district court made no decision on that question. The sufficiency of the petition was never challenged, at any stage of the proceedings, either by demurrer, motion, or objection.

Kansas P. R. Co. v. Cutter, supra; Evansville & C. R. Co. v. Lawrence, 29 Ind. 622; McBride v. Hartwell, 2 Kan. 410.

The only question properly before the supreme court was the ruling of the district court, sustaining the demurrer to the evidence; and in passing upon such a demurrer the appellate court, on an appeal by the plaintiff, is bound to consider all the evidence, whether rightfully or erroneously admitted by the trial court.

Atwell v. Grant, 11 Md. 101.

The failure to object to evidence at all, or at the proper time, or in a proper manner, is a waiver of the grounds of objection and of the right subsequently to question the admissibility of the evidence.

Hunt v. United States, 10 C. C. A. 74, 19 U. S. App. 683, 61 Fed. 795; Benson v. United States, 146 U. S. 325, 36 L. ed. 991, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 60.

Evidence which is in the case by virtue of a failure to make a proper objection to its admission must be considered and allowed its full force.

Lamb v. Taylor, 67 Md. 85, 8 Atl. 760; People v. Smith, 121 Cal. 355, 53 Pac. 802, 11 Am. Crim. Rep. 108; Levin v. Russell, 42 N. Y. 251; Jones v. Mobile & G. R. Co. 55 Ga. 122; Peters v. Gracia, 110 Cal. 89, 42 Pac. 455; Liverpool & L. & G. Ins. Co. v. Gunther, 116 U. S. 113, 29 L. ed. 575, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 306.

Evidence which has been admitted without objection is evidence in the case, and must be treated as such in the appellate court, although it would have been rejected as inadmissible if properly objected to. 56 L. ed.

Atwell v. Grant, 11 Md. 101; Farmers' Bank v. Duvall, 7 Gill & J. 78.

Messrs. Balle P. Waggener, Charles E. Benton, and David Smyth submitted the cause for defendant in error:

No Federal question was involved.

Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 147 U. S. 531, 37 L. ed. 267, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 353; Millingar v. Hartuppee, 6 Wall. 258, 18 L. ed. 829; Sawyer v. Piper, 189 U. S. 154, 47 L. ed. 757, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 633.

Amendments of pleadings or other proceedings are, as a rule, matters of discretion with the trial court.

Buena Vista County v. Iowa Falls & S. C. R. Co. 112 U. S. 165, 28 L. ed. 680, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 84; Gormley v. Bunyan, 138 U. S. 623, 34 L. ed. 1086, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 453; Stevens v. Nichols (Carr v. Nichols) 157 U. S. 370, 39 L. ed. 736, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 640; Iowa C. R. Co. v. Iowa, 160 U. S. 389, 40 L. ed. 467, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 344.

The petition does not state a cause of action under the safety-appliance act.

Johnson v. Southern P. Co. 117 Fed. 470, 54 C. C. A. 508; Winkler v. Philadelphia & R. R. Co. 4 Penn. (Del.) 80, 53 Atl. 90; Rosney v. Erie R. Co. 68 C. C. A. 155, 135 Fed. 311; Southern R. Co. v. United States, 222 U. S. 20, ante, 72, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 2.

The supreme court of Kansas has held many times that a party must recover, if at all, upon the case made by his pleadings.

Union P. R. Co. v. Young, 8 Kan. 658; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Irwin, 35 Kan. 286, 10 Pac. 820; Telle v. Leavenworth Rapid Transit Co. 50 Kan. 455, 31 Pac. 1076; Southern Kansas R. Co. v. Griffith, 54 Kan. 428, 38 Pac. 478; Brown v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 59 Kan. 70, 52 Pac. 65; Hunter Mill. Co. v. Allen, 65 Kan. 158, 69 Pac. 159; Schwarzschild & S. Co. v. Weeks, 66 Kan. 800, 72 Pac. 274.

Mr. Justice Van Devanter delivered the opinion of the court:

This was an action to recover for personal injuries *sustained by a brake-[269 man while coupling two freight cars on a side track of the defendant railway company at Hutchinson, Kansas. The defendant prevailed in the state courts (81 Kan. 101, 105 Pac. 221), and the plaintiff brings the case here. The injury occurred November 12, 1900, and the action was begun March 15, 1901.

The question first presented for decision is whether the petition stated a cause of action under the original safety-appliance act of March 2, 1893, 27 Stat. at L. 531, chap. 196, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3174, which made it unlawful for any common carrier engaged in interstate commerce by railroad "to haul or permit to be hauled or used on its line any car used in moving interstate traffic, not equipped with couplers coupling automatically by impact," etc. The petition, if liberally construed, charged that defendant was a common carrier engaged in interstate commerce by railroad; that the cars in question were not equipped with couplers of the prescribed type, and that the plaintiff's injuries proximately resulted from the absence of such couplers; but there was no allegation that either of the cars was then or at any time used in moving interstate traffic. The supreme court of the state held that in the absence of such an allegation the petition did not state a cause of action under the original act. We think that ruling was right. The terms of that act were such that its application depended, first, upon the carrier being engaged in interstate commerce by railroad, and, second, upon the use of the car in moving interstate traffic. It did not embrace all cars used on the line of such a carrier, but only such as were used in interstate commerce. Southern R. Co. v. United States, 222 U. S. 20, 25, ante, 72, 74, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 2. The act was amended March 2, 1903, 32 Stat. at L. 943, chap. 976, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1909, p. 1143, so as to include all cars "used on any railroad engaged in interstate commerce," but the amendment came too late to be of any avail to the plaintiff.

In 1908, after the case had been twice 270] tried without any *decisive result, the plaintiff sought to amend his petition by charging that the cars were used in moving interstate traffic, but the application was denied, the period of limitation having expired in the meantime. Error is assigned upon this ruling; but as it involved only a question of pleading and practice under the laws of the state, it is not subject to review by us. Texas & N. O. R. Co. v. Miller, 221 U. S. 408, 416, 55 L. ed. 789, 796, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 534.

It also was held that the evidence produced upon the third trial was not sufficient to sustain a recovery under the petition, and error is assigned upon this. As the petition did not state a cause of action under the safety-appliance act, but at most a right of recovery at common law, the ruling upon the sufficiency of the evidence did not involve a Federal question, and so is not open to re-examination in this court.

Finding no error in the record in respect of any Federal right, the judgment must be affirmed.

STANDARD OIL COMPANY OF INDIANA, Plff. in Err.,

v.

STATE OF MISSOURI ON THE INFORMATION OF HERBERT S. HADLEY, Attorney General, Succeeded by Elliott W. Mayor, et al. (No. 47.)

REPUBLIC OIL COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,

v.

STATE OF MISSOURI ON THE INFORMATION OF HERBERT S. HADLEY, Attorney General, Succeeded by Elliott W. Mayor, et al. (No. 48.)

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 270-290.)

Error to state court — scope of review — construction of state Constitution.

1. The ruling of the highest court of a state that, under the state Constitution, it had jurisdiction of the subject-matter, and authority to enter judgment of ouster and fine in civil quo warranto proceedings against foreign corporations holding licenses to do business in the state, is conclusive on the Federal Supreme Court on a writ of error to the state court, regardless of whether the judgment is civil or criminal, or both combined.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 2124-2151, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Quo warranto — judgment — fine.

2. A corporation may, in a quo warranto proceeding in Missouri, be subjected to a substantial fine as well as to a judgment of ouster, quo warranto in that state being regarded as purely civil in its nature.

[Nature of quo warranto proceedings. see Quo Warranto, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

NOTE.—On what questions the Federal Supreme Court will consider in reviewing the judgments of state courts—see note to Missouri ex rel. Hill v. Dockery, 63 L.R.A. 571.

On illegal trusts under modern anti-trust laws—see note to Whitwell v. Continental Tobacco Co. 64 L.R.A. 689.

As to what service of process is sufficient to constitute due process of law—see note to Pinney v. Providence Loan & Invest. Co. 50 L.R.A. 577.

As to when quo warranto will lie against a corporation—see note to Ames v. Kansas, 28 L. ed. U. S. 482.

On exclusion or recognition of foreign corporations—see notes to Cone Export & Commission Co. v. Poole, 24 L.R.A. 289; and McCanna & F. Co. v. Citizens' Trust & Surety Co. 24 C. C. A. 13.

As to the validity of class legislation—see notes to State v. Goodwill, 6 L.R.A. 621; and State v. Loomis, 21 L.R.A. 789.

As to constitutional equality of privileges, immunities, and protection—see note to Louisville Safety Vault & T. Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 14 L.R.A. 579.

Constitutional law — due process of law — notice and hearing.

3. Entry of a judgment of ouster and the imposition of a substantial fine in quo warranto proceedings, conformably to the local practice, afford sufficient notice and opportunity to be heard to satisfy the due-process-of-law clause of U. S. Const., 14th Amend., although the information contains only general allegations of misuser, with only a prayer for ouster.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 696-724, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — due process of law — quo warranto — notice and hearing.

4. There is no want of due process of law in a judgment of the highest court of a state, imposing a substantial fine in quo warranto proceedings, conformably to the local practice, upon a foreign corporation found to have misused its license to do business in the state, although there was no statute fixing a maximum penalty, no rule for measuring damages, and no hearing on that subject.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 629-678; 696-724, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Error to state court — scope of review — non-Federal questions.

5. Collateral questions as to whether quo warranto proceedings abated as against a foreign corporation when it gave notice of its withdrawal from the state, and as to whether an amendment to the state anti-trust act operated to relieve the corporation from the penalties for all combinations in restraint of trade entered into prior to the adoption of the amendatory statute, are not reviewable on writ of error from the Federal Supreme Court to a state court, to review a judgment of ouster and fine, where such judgment was within the jurisdiction of the state court, and within the issues submitted.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 2072-2226, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — equal protection of the laws — quo warranto.

6. A foreign corporation ousted and fined $50,000 in civil quo warranto proceedings in the highest court of a state, for misuser of its license to do business in the state, cannot claim to have been denied the equal protection of the laws because corporations prosecuted in the inferior state courts for identically the same acts, in violation of the state anti-trust act, are entitled to a trial by jury, and, if convicted, can be ousted of their franchises and subjected to a fine not to exceed $100 per day during the time the combination continued in effect.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 239-291, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — modifying or amending judgment below.

7. A judgment of ouster and fine, entered against a foreign corporation in quo warranto proceedings in the highest court of a state, which cannot be reversed on the Federal question involved, cannot be modified so as to provide that the judgment shall not be construed to conflict with a decree entered in an equity cause in another court, to which the corporation is a party, nor be amended by adding a provision that the judgment of ouster shall not operate to make those who buy the products of the corporation subject to prosecution under a statute making it a felony for any person to deal in articles manufactured by a corporation whose license has been forfeited, which the court has no right to assume will be applied so as to interfere with interstate commerce.

[Judgment on appeal, see Judgment, IX., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[Nos. 47 and 48.]

Argued November 8 and 9, 1911. Decided April 1, 1912.

TWO WRITS OF ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Missouri to review judgments of ouster and fine in quo warranto proceedings instituted in that court against foreign corporations charged with misusing their license to do business in the state. Affirmed.

See same case below, 218 Mo. 1, 116 S. W. 902.

Statement by Mr. Justice Lamar:

Writ of error to a judgment of ouster and fine against plaintiffs in error in original quo warranto proceedings in the supreme court of Missouri.

The Missouri anti-trust act (Rev. Stat. of 1899, §§ 8968, 8971) provides that any person or corporation which shall form a combination in restraint of trade shall be deemed guilty of a conspiracy to defraud, and on conviction shall be subject to a penalty of not less than $5 nor more than $100 per day for each day the combination continues, and in addition the guilty corporation shall have its franchises forfeited.

In April, 1905, while this act was in force, the attorney general filed an information in the nature of a writ of quo warranto against the Standard Oil Company and the Republic Oil Company, foreign corporations, holding licenses to do business in Missouri, and the Waters-Pierce Oil Company, a domestic company, alleging that between the day of 1901, and March 29, 1905, they had formed and maintained a combination to prevent competition in the buying, selling, and refining oil, to the great damage of the people of Missouri.

The information contained no reference to the anti-trust act further than was involved in the allegation that, "by reason of the premises, said respondents, . . . grossly offended against the laws of the state, and wilfully and flagrantly abused and misused their . . . franchises . . . and their acts . . . constitute a *wilful and malicious perversion of the franchise granted the said corporations. . . . Wherefore, your informant, prosecuting in this behalf for the state of Missouri, prays" that each of the defendants be ousted of their said corporate franchises and license to do business under the laws of the state.

The defendants answered, denying all the allegations of the petition, and moving to dismiss on many grounds not material to be considered here. The case was referred to a commissioner to take testimony and report findings of fact and conclusions of law.

While the case was under consideration, the anti-trust statute was amended in March, 1907, so as to provide that if any corporation should be found guilty of a violation of the provisions of the act, its charter or license should be forfeited, and the court might also forfeit any or all of its property to the state, or cancel its right to do business, or the court might assess a fine. It was provided that the act should not operate to release any penalty, forfeiture, or liability already incurred.

After the passage of this amendment, making new and increased penalties for a violation of the anti-trust statute, the commissioner made his report, finding (May 24, 1907) against the defendants on the law and the fact. On June 22, 1907, the Republic Oil Company filed with the secretary of state, in statutory form, a notice of its withdrawal from the state. On October 23, 1907, the fact of this withdrawal was brought to the attention of the court, and a motion was made that the case be abated so far as the Republic Oil Company was concerned. The motion was overruled, and later the court found that each of the defendants had entered into a combination in restraint of trade, and prevented and destroyed competition. And it was adjudged that the defendants had each forfeited their right to do business, and they were each ousted of any and all right and franchise, 274]and fined *$50,000. In view of the capital of the company and the amount of profits that had been made during the period of the combination, some members of the court expressed the opinion that the fine should be $1,000,000.

A motion for rehearing was denied. The Waters-Pierce Oil Company paid the fine and complied with conditions, by virtue of which it was permitted to continue to do business in the state. The other two defendants brought the case here.

It is alleged that—

(b) "The court held that this was a civil proceeding, and that it had no criminal jurisdiction. It then, in addition to an ouster, adjudged that this respondent should pay a fine of $50,000. This fine was at least the exercise of criminal jurisdiction in an original proceeding, which was beyond the court's power and jurisdiction. The court thereby takes from the respondent its property without due process of law, discriminates against respondent, and refuses to accord to it the equal protection of the law, all of which is contrary to the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States."

There are various assignments of error challenging the constitutionality of the anti-trust statute, on the ground that it deprived defendants of their property without due process of law and interfered with interstate commerce. It was also claimed that the defendants were denied the equal protection of the law, in that, in forfeiting their franchise and imposing a fine of $50,000 without a jury trial, a different procedure had been adopted and a different judgment entered from that which could have been rendered on conviction by a jury for violation of the anti-trust statute.

The defendants (now plaintiffs in error) sought first a reversal of the judgment of the supreme court of Missouri, and, in the alternative, a modification of the judgment. *To this end attention was called to [275 the fact that the plaintiffs in error were parties in the case of Standard Oil Co. v. United States [221 U. S. 1, 55 L. ed. 619, 34 L.R.A.(N.S.) 834, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 502]. They pray that the judgment herein be modified so as to provide that it should not be held to conflict with any decree entered in that equity cause so far as concerned property in Missouri belonging to plaintiffs in error.

It was also urged that the statute making it a felony for any person to sell or deal in articles manufactured by a corporation whose license had been forfeited would operate to destroy the value of the plaintiffs' property in Missouri, and would in effect prevent them from engaging in interstate commerce. They moved that the judgment be modified here so as to provide against any such result.

Mr. Frank Hagerman argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Alfred D. Eddy and Robert W. Stewart, filed a brief for plaintiffs in error:

The cases below were civil, as distinguished from criminal.

State ex rel. Crow v. Vallins, 140 Mo. 535, 41 S. W. 887; State ex rel. Walker v. Equitable Loan & Invest. Co. 142 Mo. 335, 41 S. W. 916; Ames v. Kansas, 111 U. S. 449, 461, 28 L. ed. 482, 487, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 437.

The power to fine in a substantial sum did not exist at common law. Neither state statute nor Constitution authorized it.

State ex rel. Hadley v. Delmar Jockey Club, 200 Mo. 69, 92 S. W. 185, 98 S. W. 539; Ames v. Kansas, 111 U. S. 449, 461, 28 L. ed. 482, 487, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 437; 3 Bl. Com. 263; Rex v. Francis, 2 T. R. 484; Bacon, Abr. title Information D; 2 Kyd, Corp. 439.

To treat respondents in a civil suit, asking no such relief, as criminals, and fine each of them $50,000, by an exercise of original criminal jurisdiction, upon the court's own suggestion, after the submission of the case, and when the judgment was entered, was not due process of law, because at the threshold to that protection is the question of jurisdiction. If that does not exist, there is not due process.

Twining v. New Jersey, 211 U. S. 78, 111, 53 L. ed. 97, 111, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 14; Scott v. McNeal, 154 U. S. 34, 46, 38 L. ed. 896, 901, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1108; Bell v. Bell, 181 U. S. 175, 178, 45 L. ed. 804, 807, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 551; Andrews v. Andrews, 188 U. S. 14, 47 L. ed. 366, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 237.

The discrimination is as pointed as that existing in the cases heretofore here decided.

Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150, 154, 41 L. ed. 666, 667, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Cotting v. Kansas City Stock Yards Co. (Cotting v. Godard) 183 U. S. 79, 46 L. ed. 93, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30; Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co. 184 U. S. 540, 559, 46 L. ed. 679, 689, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431; Southern R. Co. v. Greene, 216 U. S. 400, 54 L. ed. 536, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 287, 19 Ann. Cas. 1247.

This court is empowered to do justice and thereby meet every emergency, and upon error enter, or direct the lower court to enter, such judgment as it deems proper.

Stanley v. Schwalby, 162 U. S. 255, 279, 283, 40 L. ed. 960, 968, 970, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 754.

It is possible to permit the company to remain in the state upon the same conditions that it is to be by this court permitted there to operate under the Sherman act by a reversal of so much of the judgment as provides for a fine, and the modification of the ouster to the extent that it shall become effective and in force in case the respondent fails, within a fixed time, to reorganize its business in accordance with the decree finally entered in United States v. Standard Oil Co. 173 Fed. 177, 221 U. S. 1, 55 L. ed. 619, 34 L.R.A.(N.S.) 834, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 502, with the proviso that in case of such reorganization within such time, the ouster shall not be enforced.

The judgment of ouster and a fine was 56 L. ed.

clearly wrong as to the Republic Oil Company, which voluntarily withdrew from the state. The action should, as to it, therefore, be simply abated at its costs.

Re Franklin Teleg. Co. 119 Mass. 449; State v. Centreville Bridge Co. 18 Ala. 681.

The effect of the judgment of ouster is confiscation under Mo. Rev. Stat. 1899, §§ 8969, 8972, 8975 Mo. Laws 1907, pp. 379, 380), whereby the obligation of a contract is impaired and the equal protection of the law denied.

Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150, 154, 41 L. ed. 666, 667, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Cotting v. Kansas City Stock Yards Co. (Cotting v. Godard) 183 U. S. 79, 46 L. ed. 92, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30; Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co. 184 U. S. 540, 559, 46 L. ed. 679, 689, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431; Southern R. Co. v. Greene, 216 U. S. 400, 54 L. ed. 536, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 287, 19 Ann. Cas. 1247; Allgeyer v. Louisiana, 165 U. S. 578, 589, 41 L. ed. 832, 835, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427; Holden v. Hardy, 169 U. S. 366, 390, 42 L. ed. 780, 790, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383; Lochner v. New York, 198 U. S. 45, 53, 49 L. ed. 937, 940, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 539, 3 Ann. Cas. 1133; Adair v. United States, 208 U. S. 161, 172, 173, 52 L. ed. 436, 441, 442, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277, 13 Ann. Cas. 764.

The statute is not one of exclusion; it applies alike to all corporations, domestic and foreign, and therefore cannot be upheld upon the ground of being a condition to a foreign corporation entering the state or remaining therein.

Carroll v. Greenwich Ins. Co. 199 U. S. 401, 409, 50 L. ed. 246, 249, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 66.

The Constitution of the United States is a protection against the act of the state, regardless of the form which it takes or method it is to pursue. It may be by judgment of a court, or come into existence for the first time by the effect to be given to such judgment.

Terre Haute & I. R. Co. v. Indiana, 194 U. S. 579, 589, 48 L. ed. 1124, 1129, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 767; Atty. Gen. ex rel. Kies v. Lowrey, 199 U. S. 233, 239, 50 L. ed. 167, 170, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 27; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Illinois, 200 U. S. 561, 580, 50 L. ed. 596, 604, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341, 4 Ann. Cas. 1175; West Chicago Street R. Co. v. Illinois, 201 U. S. 506, 519, 520, 50 L. ed. 845, 850, 851, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 518.

The judgment of ouster as entered, and especially as it is to be enforced under Mo. Rev. Stat. 1899, §§ 8972, 8975 (Mo. Laws 1907, p. 380), unwarrantably interferes with the right to do interstate business.

Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Kansas, 216 U. S. 1, 54 L. ed. 355, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 190; Pullman Co. v. Kansas, 216 U. S. 56, 54 L. ed. 378, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 232; International Textbook Co. v. Pigg, 217 U. S. 91, 54 L. ed. 678, 27 L.R.A.(N.S.) 493, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 481, 18 Ann. Cas. 1103.

There should have been added, as was done in a Texas case (Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. Texas, 177 U. S. 28, 41, 44 L. ed. 657, 662, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 518), an express provision that nothing in the judgment should preclude the defendant, its successors or assigns, from dealing, in the state, in any article in interstate business.

The judgment of ouster as written should at least be modified. If any modification is made, it would not be unfair to add that, as already suggested, any ouster should be suspended if and whenever there becomes effective the contemplated reorganization to meet the requirements made by the decree in United States v. Standard Oil Co. 173 Fed. 177, 221 U. S. 1, 55 L. ed. 619, 34 L.R.A.(N.S.) 834, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 502.

The statute for the violation of which there was an ouster was, prior to the trial, repealed, and it was not due process of law to enforce it.

State v. Centreville Bridge Co. 18 Ala. 681; Re Franklin Teleg. Co. 119 Mass. 449.

Mr. Elliot W. Major, Attorney General of Missouri, and Mr. Charles G. Revelle, Assistant Attorney General, argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

It is elementary that only Federal questions can be considered by the Supreme Court of the United States in reviewing the judgment of a state court.

Chicago L. Ins. Co. v. Needles, 113 U. S. 574, 28 L. ed. 1084, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681; Cornell University v. Fiske, 136 U. S. 152, 34 L. ed. 427, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 775; Barbier v. Connolly, 113 U. S. 27, 28 L. ed. 923, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357.

Whether a statute is repugnant to the state Constitution is not a Federal question, but one which belongs exclusively to the state court, and the decision of that court is conclusive here.

De La Lande v. Louisiana, 18 How. 192, 15 L. ed. 350; Re Kemmler, 136 U. S. 447, 34 L. ed. 524, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 930; Layton v. Missouri, 187 U. S. 356, 47 L. ed. 214, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 137; Levy v. Superior Ct. 167 U. S. 175, 42 L. ed. 126, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 769; Mobile Transp. Co. v. Mobile, 187 U. S. 479, 47 L. ed. 266, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 170; Rasmussen v. Idaho, 181 U. S. 200, 45 L. ed. 821, 21 Sup. Ct.

Rep. 594; Montana Co. v. St. Louis Min. & Mill. Co. 152 U. S. 160, 38 L. ed. 398, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 506; Merchants' & M. Nat. Bank v. Pennsylvania, 167 U. S. 462, 463, 42 L. ed. 237, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 829.

The supreme court of Missouri has, on numerous occasions, sustained the validity of the anti-trust laws under which plaintiffs in error are being prosecuted, the same being justified as a proper exercise of the police power of the state.

State ex rel. Crow v. Firemen's Fund Ins. Co. 152 Mo. 1, 45 L.R.A. 363, 52 S. W. 595; State ex rel. Crow v. Continental Tobacco Co. 177 Mo. 1, 75 S. W. 737; State ex rel. Crow v. Armour Packing Co. 173 Mo. 356, 61 L.R.A. 464, 96 Am. St. Rep. 515, 73 S. W. 645; State ex rel. Hadley v. Standard Oil Co. 194 Mo. 148, 91 S. W. 1062; State ex rel. Hadley v. Standard Oil Co. 218 Mo. 1, 116 S. W. 902.

Likewise the proper construction to be given a statute, and as to what is to be regarded as within its terms, presents no Federal question.

Phœnix Ins. Co. v. The Treasurer (Phœnix Ins. Co. v. Gardiner) 11 Wall. 204, 20 L. ed. 112; Morley v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 146 U. S. 162, 36 L. ed. 925, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 54; Standard Oil Co. v. Tennessee, 217 U. S. 413, 54 L. ed. 817, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 543; Smiley v. Kansas, 196 U. S. 454, 455, 49 L. ed. 550, 551, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289; Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. Texas, 177 U. S. 42, 44 L. ed. 663, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 518; St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Paul, 173 U. S. 404, 43 L. ed. 746, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 419; Armour Packing Co. v. Lacy, 200 U. S. 236, 50 L. ed. 457, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 232; W. W. Cargill Co. v. Minnesota, 180 U. S. 466, 467, 45 L. ed. 625, 626, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 423.

The question as to what penalties are prescribed by the laws of Missouri for violations of the anti-trust act involves only the exercise of judicial interpretation and is not reviewable.

Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. Texas, 212 U. S. 111, 53 L. ed. 430, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 220; Coffey v. Harlan County, 204 U. S. 659, 51 L. ed. 666, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 305; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Nebraska, 164 U. S. 414, 41 L. ed. 494, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 130.

The decision of the state court that, according to the rules of practice and procedure in Missouri, proceedings in the nature of quo warranto are of a civil nature, is conclusive.

Wood v. Brady, 150 U. S. 23, 37 L. ed. 983, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 6; Brown-Forman Co. v. Kentucky, 217 U. S. 571, 54 L. ed. 886, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 578.

The highest courts of Missouri have uniformly construed such proceedings to be of a civil nature.

State ex rel. Hadley v. Delmar Jockey Club, 200 Mo. 70, 92 S. W. 185, 98 S. W. 539.

The judgment of a state court, respecting the extent of its original jurisdiction in quo warranto proceedings and in dealing with matters under state law, is not reviewable here.

Maxwell v. Dow, 176 U. S. 581, 44 L. ed. 597, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 448, 494; Smith v. Adsit, 16 Wall. 189, 21 L. ed. 310; Tripp v. Santa Rosa Street R. Co. 144 U. S. 126, 36 L. ed. 371, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 655; Iowa C. R. Co. v. Iowa, 160 U. S. 389, 393, 40 L. ed. 467, 469, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 344; Cincinnati Street R. Co. v. Snell, 193 U. S. 35, 38, 48 L. ed. 607, 608, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 319; Twining v. New Jersey, 211 U. S. 110, 113, 53 L. ed. 110, 112, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 14; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 226, 41 L. ed. 979, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581; Brown v. New Jersey, 175 U. S. 172, 44 L. ed. 119, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77; League v. Texas, 184 U. S. 158, 46 L. ed. 480, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 475; A. Backus Jr. & Sons v. Fort Street Union Depot Co. 169 U. S. 570, 42 L. ed. 859, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 445; Missouri v. Lewis (Bowman v. Lewis) 101 U. S. 31, 25 L. ed. 992; Ex parte Reggel, 114 U. S. 651, 29 L. ed. 253, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1148, 5 Am. Crim. Rep. 218; Hooker v. Los Angeles, 188 U. S. 318, 319, 47 L. ed. 491, 63 L.R.A. 471, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 395; Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. Texas, 212 U. S. 107, 53 L. ed. 428, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 220.

The jurisdiction in quo warranto has been universally construed by the supreme court of Missouri to mean jurisdiction of an information in the nature of a quo warranto, and, in the exercise thereof, forfeitures have been decreed and fines imposed.

State ex rel. McIlhany v. Stewart, 32 Mo. 379; State ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Vail, 53 Mo. 97; State ex rel. Walker v. Equitable Loan & Invest. Asso. 142 Mo. 325, 41 S. W. 916; State ex rel. Hadley v. Delmar Jockey Club, 200 Mo. 51, 92 S. W. 185, 98 S. W. 539; State ex rel. Hadley v. Standard Oil Co. 218 Mo. 345, 116 S. W. 902.

The question as to whether the penalty section of the law under which these proceedings were instituted was repealed by a subsequent legislative act involves no Federal question, and is not reviewable.

Morley v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 146 U. S. 166, 167, 36 L. ed. 928, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 54.

Even if the section referred to had been repealed, as asserted by plaintiffs, the court still had the power to render the judgment it did, and this court cannot interfere.
56 L. ed.

Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. Texas, 177 U. S. 47, 44 L. ed. 665, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 518.

The constitutionality of the statute will not be determined in any case unless such determination is absolutely necessary in order to determine the merits of the suit in which the constitutionality of such statute has been drawn in question, and then only where the part of the statute alleged to be unconstitutional is involved in the controversy and the remaining portion is incomplete and inoperative in itself.

National Cotton Oil Co. v. Texas, 197 U. S. 133, 49 L. ed. 696, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 379; 8 Enc. Law & Proc. 798; McChord v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 183 U. S. 495, 496, 46 L. ed. 295, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 165; New York ex rel. Hatch v. Reardon, 204 U. S. 160, 51 L. ed. 422, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 188; Patterson v. The Eudora, 190 U. S. 176, 47 L. ed. 1006, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 821; Arbuckle v. Blackburn, 191 U. S. 413, 415, 48 L. ed. 241, 242, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 148; Castillo v. McConnico, 168 U. S. 680, 42 L. ed. 624, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 229; Albany County v. Stanley, 105 U. S. 311, 26 L. ed. 1049; Clark v. Kansas City, 176 U. S. 118, 44 L. ed. 396, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 284; California Reduction Co. v. Sanitary Reduction Works, 199 U. S. 318, 50 L. ed. 209, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 100.

A Federal question cannot be raised for the first time in a petition or motion for rehearing, unless the state court actually passes thereon. An order merely overruling or denying the motion, or basing the denial upon other grounds, does not pass upon nor preserve the question.

Harding v. Illinois, 196 U. S. 78, 49 L. ed. 394, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 176; McCorquodale v. Texas, 211 U. S. 432, 53 L. ed. 269, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 146; Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. Texas, 212 U. S. 115, 117, 53 L. ed. 433, 434, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 227; Leathe v. Thomas, 207 U. S. 93, 52 L. ed. 118, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30; Loeber v. Schroeder, 149 U. S. 580, 585, 37 L. ed. 856, 859, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 834; Pim v. St. Louis, 165 U. S. 273, 41 L. ed. 714, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 322.

Neither does this court review, but, on the contrary, accepts as conclusive, the findings of fact made by the state court, and that such facts constitute a violation of the law as construed.

Quimby v. Boyd, 128 U. S. 488, 32 L. ed. 502, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 147; Egan v. Hart, 165 U. S. 188, 41 L. ed. 680, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 300; Dower v. Richards, 151 U. S. 658, 38 L. ed. 305, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 452, 17 Mor. Min. Rep. 704; Thayer v. Spratt, 189 U. S. 346, 47 L. ed. 845, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 576; Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. Texas, 212 U. S. 86, 53 L. ed. 417, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 200; Gardner v. Bonestell, 180 U. S. 362, 45 L. ed. 574, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 399; Chrisman v. Miller, 197 U. S. 313, 49 L. ed. 770, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 468; Chapman & D. Land Co. v. Bigelow, 206 U. S. 41, 51 L. ed. 953, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 679; Smiley v. Kansas, 196 U. S. 454, 455, 49 L. ed. 550, 551, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289.

The authority of the state legislature to pass laws prohibiting the making of agreements or the forming of combinations in restraint of trade, or the carrying out in the state of such agreements or combinations, is absolute and complete.

Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. Texas, 177 U. S. 28, 44 L. ed. 657, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 518; Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. Texas, 212 U. S. 86, 53 L. ed. 417, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 220; Standard Oil Co. v. Tennessee, 217 U. S. 413, 54 L. ed. 817, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 543; Standard Oil Co. v. United States, 221 U. S. 1, 55 L. ed. 619, 34 L.R.A.(N.S.) 834, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 502; National Cotton Oil Co. v. Texas, 197 U. S. 115, 49 L. ed. 689, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 379; Smiley v. Kansas, 196 U. S. 447, 49 L. ed. 546, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289; Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 31 L. ed. 205, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; Addyston Pipe & Steel Co. v. United States, 175 U. S. 211, 44 L. ed. 136, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 96; Carroll v. Greenwich Ins. Co., 199 U. S. 410, 50 L. ed. 250, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 66; United States v. Joint Traffic Asso., 171 U. S. 505, 43 L. ed. 259, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 25; United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Asso., 166 U. S. 290, 41 L. ed. 1007, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 540; Northern Securities Co. v. United States, 193 U. S. 197, 48 L. ed. 679, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436.

The state likewise has the absolute right to prescribe the punishment for violations of the anti-trust laws.

Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. Texas, 212 U. S. 115, 49 L. ed. 689, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 220; Coffey v. Harlan County, 204 U. S. 659, 51 L. ed. 666, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 305; National Cotton Oil Co. v. Texas, 197 U. S. 115, 49 L. ed. 689, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 379; Rippey v. Texas, 193 U. S. 504, 48 L. ed. 767, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 516; Ohio ex rel. Lloyd v. Dollison, 194 U. S. 445, 48 L. ed. 1062, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 703; Marvin v. Trout, 199 U. S. 212, 50 L. ed. 157, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 31; McCray v. United States, 195 U. S. 27, 49 L. ed. 78, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 769, 1 Ann. Cas. 561; Devine v. Los Angeles, 202 U. S. 313, 50 L. ed. 1046, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 652; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Humes, 115 U. S. 512, 29 L. ed. 463, 6 Sup. Ct.

Rep. 110; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Indiana, 165 U. S. 304, 41 L. ed. 725, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 345; Seaboard Air Line R. Co. v. Seegers, 207 U. S. 73, 52 L. ed. 108, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 28; O'Neil v. Vermont, 144 U. S. 323, 36 L. ed. 450, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 693; Northwestern Nat. L. Ins. Co. v. Riggs, 203 U. S. 251, 51 L. ed. 172, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 126, 7 Ann. Cas. 1104.

The statute relating to the production of books, papers, and witnesses upon an order of the court, after due notice and opportunity to be heard, does not violate any provision of the Federal Constitution.

Hammond Packing Co. v. Arkansas, 212 U. S. 322, 53 L. ed. 530, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 370, 15 Ann. Cas. 645; Consolidated Rendering Co. v. Vermont, 207 U. S. 550, 52 L. ed. 334, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 178, 12 Ann. Cas. 658; Hale v. Henkel, 201 U. S. 43, 50 L. ed. 652, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 370.

The construction placed by the supreme court of Missouri upon the extent of its jurisdiction and its statutory and constitutional authority both to decree a forfeiture of the franchises of plaintiffs in error and impose a fine does not contravene any provision of the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

Hammond Packing Co. v. Arkansas, 212 U. S. 343, 53 L. ed. 541, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 370; Standard Oil Co. v. Tennessee, 217 U. S. 420, 54 L. ed. 820, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 543; Twining v. New Jersey, 211 U. S. 111, 53 L. ed. 111, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 14; Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 283, 42 L. ed. 1037, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594; Orient Ins. Co. v. Daggs, 172 U. S. 557, 43 L. ed. 552, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 281; Hayes v. Missouri, 120 U. S. 68, 30 L. ed. 578, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350; Maxwell v. Dow, 176 U. S. 599, 44 L. ed. 604, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 448, 494.

The decisions of the supreme court of Missouri that the reasons for the classification and the particular mischiefs which the legislature sought to suppress were sufficient to warrant the classification will not be disturbed unless shown to be unmistakably and palpably wrong.

Welch v. Swasey, 214 U. S. 105, 53 L. ed. 929, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 567; Southwestern Oil Co. v. Texas, 217 U. S. 126, 127, 54 L. ed. 694, 695, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 496; McLean v. Arkansas, 211 U. S. 547, 53 L. ed. 319, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 206; Williams v. Arkansas, 217 U. S. 90, 54 L. ed. 678, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493, 18 Ann. Cas. 865.

The distinction between labor and property is broad enough to authorize classification and separate regulations.

Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Matthews, 174 U. S. 96, 43 L. ed. 909, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 600; Thomas v. Cincinnati, N. O. &

T. P. R. Co. 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 788, 62 Fed. 803; Arthur v. Oakes, 25 L.R.A. 414, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 744, 11 C. C. A. 209, 24 U. S. App. 239, 63 Fed. 310, 9 Am. Crim. Rep. 169; Hopkins v. United States, 171 U. S. 578, 43 L. ed. 290, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 40; Wabash R. Co. v. Hannahan, 121 Fed. 568; Coeur d'Alene Consol. & Min. Co. v. Miners' Union, 19 L.R.A. 382, 51 Fed. 260; Re Higgins, 27 Fed. 443; State v. Stockford, 77 Conn. 227, 107 Am. St. Rep. 28, 58 Atl. 769; Snow v. Wheeler, 113 Mass. 179; Beck v. Railway Teamsters' Protective Union, 118 Mich. 497, 42 L.R.A. 407, 74 Am. St. Rep. 421, 77 N. W. 13; Gray v. Building Trades Council, 91 Minn. 171, 63 L.R.A. 753, 103 Am. St. Rep. 477, 97 N. W. 663, 1118, 1 Ann. Cas. 172; Mayer v. Journeymen Stonecutters' Asso. 47 N. J. Eq. 519, 20 Atl. 492; National Protective Asso. v. Cumming, 170 N. Y. 317, 58 L.R.A. 135, 88 Am. St. Rep. 648, 63 N. E. 369; Moores v. Bricklayers' Union, 10 Ohio Dec. Reprint, 665; Longshore Printing Co. v. Howell, 26 Or. 527, 28 L.R.A. 464, 46 Am. St. Rep. 640, 38 Pac. 547; Cote v. Murphy, 159 Pa. 420, 23 L.R.A. 135, 39 Am. St. Rep. 686, 28 Atl. 190; Everett Wadley Co. v. Richmond Typographical Union No. 90, 105 Va. 188, 5 L.R.A.(N.S.) 792, 53 S. E. 273, 8 Ann. Cas. 798; Reg. v. Rowland, 5 Cox, C. C. 436; Williams v. Arkansas, 217 U. S. 79, 54 L. ed. 673, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493, 18 Ann. Cas. 865; Pacific Exp. Co. v. Seibert, 142 U. S. 399, 35 L. ed. 1035, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 810, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 250; McLean v. Arkansas, 211 U. S. 545, 53 L. ed. 318, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 206; Southwestern Oil Co. v. Texas, 217 U. S. 114, 121, 54 L. ed. 688, 692, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 496; Brown-Forman Co. v. Kentucky, 217 U. S. 563, 54 L. ed. 883, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 578; Armour Packing Co. v. Lacy, 200 U. S. 227, 50 L. ed. 452, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 232; Clark v. Titusville, 184 U. S. 330, 46 L. ed. 572, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 382; American Sugar Ref. Co. v. Louisiana, 179 U. S. 89, 45 L. ed. 102, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 43; W. W. Cargill Co. v. Minnesota, 180 U. S. 452, 45 L. ed. 619, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 423; Barbier v. Connolly, 113 U. S. 32, 28 L. ed. 925, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Mackey, 127 U. S. 209, 32 L. ed. 109, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1161; Bell's Gap R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 134 U. S. 232, 33 L. ed. 892, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 533.

Mr. Justice Lamar, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

The Standard Oil Company and the Republic Oil Company by this writ of error seek to reverse a judgment of ouster and fine of $50,000, entered against each of them in original quo warranto proceedings by the supreme court of Missouri, contending that they are thereby deprived of property without due process of law and denied the equal protection of the law.

The briefs and arguments for the defendants were addressed mainly to the proposition that the fine of $50,000 was a criminal sentence in a civil suit, and void because beyond the jurisdiction of the court, and, for the further reason, that the pleadings and prayer gave no notice which would support such a sentence.

1. It is, of course, essential to the validity of any judgment that the court rendering it should have had jurisdiction, not only of the parties, but of the subject-matter. [281] Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 234, 247, 41 L. ed. 983, 988, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581. But it is equally well settled that it is for the supreme court of a state finally to determine its own jurisdiction and that of other local tribunals, since the decision involves a construction of the laws of the state by which the court was organized. In this case the Constitution of Missouri declared that "the supreme court shall have power to issue writs of habeas corpus, quo warranto, certiorari, and other remedial writs, and to hear and determine the same." Its decision and judgment necessarily imply that under that clause of the Constitution it had jurisdiction of the subject-matter and authority to enter judgment of ouster and fine in civil quo warranto proceedings. That ruling is conclusive upon us regardless of whether the judgment is civil or criminal, or both combined. Standard Oil Co. v. Tennessee, 217 U. S. 420, 54 L. ed. 820, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 543.

2. The Federal question is whether, in that court, with such jurisdiction, the defendants were denied due process of law. Under the 14th Amendment they were entitled to notice and an opportunity to be heard. That necessarily required that the notice and the hearing should correspond, and that the relief granted should be appropriate to that which had been heard and determined on such notice. For even if a court has original general jurisdiction criminal and civil, at law and in equity, it cannot enter a judgment which is beyond the claim asserted, or which, in its essential character, is not responsive to the cause of action on which the proceeding was based.

"Though the court may possess jurisdiction of a cause, of the subject-matter, and of the parties, it is still limited in its modes of procedure, and in the extent and character of its judgments. It must act judicially in all things, and cannot then transcend the power conferred by the law. If, for instance, the action be upon a money demand, *the court, notwithstanding its complete jurisdiction over the subject and parties, has no power to pass judgment of imprisonment in the penitentiary upon the defendant. If the action be for a libel or personal tort, the court cannot order in the case a specific performance of a contract. If the action be for the possession of real property, the court is powerless to admit in the case the probate of a will. . . . The judgments mentioned, given in the cases supposed, would not be merely erroneous, they would be absolutely void, because the court, in rendering them, would transcend the limits of its authority in those cases." Windsor v. McVeigh, 93 U. S. 274, 282, 23 L. ed. 914, 917. See also Reynolds v. Stockton, 140 U. S. 265-268, 35 L. ed. 467-469, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 773; Barnes v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 122 U. S. 1, 14, 30 L. ed. 1128, 1132, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1043.

The defendants claim that the present case is within this principle,—that the judgment for a fine of $50,000, which some of the Missouri court thought should have been a million dollars, was not only a criminal sentence in a civil suit, but beyond the issues and the prayer for relief in the information, and therefore void, as having been in substance entered without notice and opportunity to be heard. This raises the old question whether information in the nature of quo warranto is a civil or a criminal proceeding, and the further question whether, under general allegations of misuser in and information with only a prayer for ouster, a fine may be imposed in those jurisdictions where quo warranto has ceased to be a criminal proceeding. The uncertainty as to the relief that may be granted in such case arises from the fact that at one time the proceeding was wholly criminal, and those guilty of usurping a franchise were prosecuted by information instead of by indictment, and punished both by judgment of ouster and by fine. But in England, before the Revolution, and since that date in most of American states, including Missouri, quo warranto has been resorted to for the purpose of trying the civil right, and determining *whether the defendant had usurped or forfeited the franchise in question. After this method of procedure began to be used as a form of action to try title, it was inevitable that the civil feature would tend to dominate in fixing its character for all purposes. But the discussion as to the nature of such writs and the character of the judgment that could be entered, though not controlled by their use (Coffey v. Harlan County, 204 U. S. 659, 664. 51 L. ed. 666, 669, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 305; Huntington

v. Attrill, 146 U. S. 667, 36 L. ed. 1127, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224; Boyd v. United States, 116 U. S. 634, 29 L. ed. 752, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 524), has been prolonged by the retention of the words information, prosecute, guilty, punish, fine,—survivals of the period when the writ was a criminal proceeding in every respect.

In some jurisdictions the writ is still treated as criminal, both in the procedure adopted and in the relief afforded. State v. Kearn, 17 R. I. 401, 22 Atl. 322, 1018. But there are practically no decisions which deal with the nature and amount of the fine which can be entered in states where, as in Missouri, quo warranto is treated as a purely civil proceeding. The references to the subject, both in textbooks and opinions, are few and casual. They usually repeat Blackstone's statement (3 Com. 262) that the writ is now used for trying the civil right, "the fine being nominal only." Ames v. Kansas, 111 U. S. 470, 28 L. ed. 490, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 437; Com. v. Woelper, 3 Serg. & R. 53; High, Extr. Legal Rem. 702, 697, 593. These authorities and the general practice indicate that in most of the American states only a nominal fine can be imposed in civil quo warranto proceedings. We shall not enter upon any discussion of the question as to the character of the proceeding nor the amount and nature of the money judgment. For, in Missouri, and prior to the decision in this case, the rulings were to the effect that the supreme court of Missouri had jurisdiction not only to oust, but to impose a substantial fine in quo warranto.

In 1865, under a Constitution which, like the present, *conferred power "to is-[284 sue writs of quo warranto and hear and determine the same," the court tried the case of State ex rel. Circuit Atty. v. Bernoudy, 36 Mo. 279, brought against the clerk of a circuit court for usurpation of the office. There was a prayer for judgment of ouster and costs. The court said:

"No evidence is offered to charge the defendant with any evil intent, and it being probable that he acted from mistaken views only, [the court] will not avail itself of the power given by law, to impose a fine on him, and will condemn him to pay the cost only of this proceeding."

In 1902, in State ex rel. Crow v. Armour Packing Co. 173 Mo. 393, 41 L.R.A. 464, 96 Am. St. Rep. 515, 73 S. W. 645, information in the nature of quo warranto was filed in the supreme court against three corporations, praying that their franchises be forfeited because they had formed and maintained a conspiracy in restraint of trade. The court held that, "under the circumstances, the judgment of absolute ouster is not necessary, but the needs of justice will be satisfied by the imposition of a fine." It thereupon adjudged that each of the defendants should pay the sum of $5,000 as a fine, together with the costs of court.

In State ex rel. Hadley v. Delmar Jockey Club, 200 Mo. 37, 92 S. W. 185, 98 S. W. 539, quo warranto was brought to forfeit the charter of the company, because it had violated a criminal statute prohibiting the sale of pools on horse races. A judgment of ouster was entered and a fine of $5,000 was imposed. On rehearing the judgment was amended and the provision for a fine omitted. Evidently this was not for want of jurisdiction to impose such sentence, but because it was considered that ouster was all that was demanded by the facts. This appears from the fact that in the present case the court adopted the language of the original Delmar decision, in which it was said that the fine is imposed for a violation of the corporation's [285] implied contract "not to violate the franchise granted by the state (218 Mo. 360, 116 S. W. 902). So that, whatever may be the rule elsewhere, in Missouri a corporation may, in quo warranto, be subjected to a money judgment, whether called a fine as punishment, or damages for its implied contract not to violate its franchise.

3. But the defendants insist that even if the court had jurisdiction of the subject-matter and was authorized to impose a fine, there was nothing in the pleading to indicate that such an issue was to be tried, nor any prayer warranting such relief; and hence that the judgment is wanting in due process of law, and void for want of notice of what was to be heard and determined. It is true that the information did not ask for damages or that a fine should be imposed. But if this be treated as a criminal case, a prayer was no more necessary than in an indictment or ordinary information; since such proceedings never contain any reference whatever to the judgment or sentence to be rendered on conviction. In civil suits the pleadings should, no doubt, contain a prayer for judgment, so as to show that the judicial power of the court is invoked. The rules of practice also may well require that the plaintiff should indicate what remedy he seeks. But the prayer does not constitute a part of the notice guaranteed by the Constitution. The facts stated fix the limit of the relief that can be granted. While the judgment must not go beyond that to which the plaintiff was entitled on proof of the allegations made, yet the court may grant other and different relief than that for which he prayed.

4. Nor, from a Federal standpoint, is there any invalidity in the judgment because there was no statute fixing a maximum penalty, no rule for measuring damages, and no hearing on a subject which it is claimed was not referred to in the information. At common law, and under many English statutes, the amount of the fine to be imposed "in criminal cases" [286] was not fixed. This was true of the statute of 9 Ann, chapter 20, which, in quo warranto cases, made it "lawful as well to give judgment of ouster as to fine for usurping or unlawfully exercising any office or franchise." The amount to be paid in all such cases was left to the discretion of the court, "regulated by the provisions of Magna Charta and the Bill of Rights that excessive fines ought not to be demanded." 4 Bl. Com. 378. Or, considering the fine as in the nature of a civil penalty, the case is within the principle which permits the recovery of punitive damages. They are not compensatory, nor is the amount measured by rule. But "where the defendant has acted wantonly or perversely, or with such malice as implies a spirit of mischief or criminal indifference to civil obligations" (Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Prentice, 147 U. S. 107, 37 L. ed. 101, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 261), damages may, in some jurisdictions, be assessed, even in civil cases, by way of punishment. It is true that, except in cases for the breach of a contract of marriage, punitive damages have been allowed only in actions for torts. But no Federal question arises on a ruling that, in Missouri, punitive damages may be recovered from a corporation for the violation of its implied contract when, as alleged in the information, the defendants "wilfully and wantonly misused their licenses." Iowa C. R. Co. v. Iowa, 160 U. S. 389, 40 L. ed. 467, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 344.
56 L. ed.

The real objection is not so much to the existence of the power to fix the amount of the fine, as the fact that, when exercised by the supreme court of the state, it is not subject to review, and is said to be unlimited. But it is limited. Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. Texas, 212 U. S. 111, 53 L. ed. 430, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 220. It is limited by the obligation to administer justice, and to no more assess excessive damages than to impose excessive fines. But the power to render a final judgment must be lodged somewhere, and in every case a point is reached where litigation must cease. What that point is can be determined by the legislative power of the state, *for right of appeal is not essential to [287] due process of law. Twining v. New Jersey, 211 U. S. 111, 53 L. ed. 111, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 14.

The 14th Amendment guarantees that the defendant shall be given that character of notice and opportunity to be heard which is essential to due process of law. When that has been done, the requirements of the Constitution are met, and it is not for this court to determine whether there has been an erroneous construction of statute or common law. Iowa C. R. Co. v. Iowa, supra; West v. Louisiana, 194 U. S. 261, 48 L. ed. 968, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 650. The matter was summed up by Justice Moody in Twining v. New Jersey, 211 U. S. 110, 53 L. ed. 110, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 14, where, citing many authorities, he said:

"Due process requires that the court which assumes to determine the rights of parties shall have jurisdiction, . . . and that there shall be notice and opportunity for hearing given the parties. . . . Subject to these two fundamental conditions, which seem to be universally prescribed in all systems of law established by civilized countries, this court has, up to this time, sustained all state laws, statutory or judicially declared, regulating procedure, evidence, and methods of trial, and held them to be consistent with due process of law."

There is nothing in the present record which takes the case out of that principle. This was not like a suit on a note resulting in a sentence to the penitentiary; or does it resemble any of the extreme illustrations given in Windsor v. McVeigh, 93 U. S. 282, 23 L. ed. 917, in which, after a trial, the judgment of a court having jurisdiction might be invalidated because the relief so far exceeded the issue heard as, in effect, to deprive the defendant of the benefit of his constitutional right to notice. No such question is presented in the present case, for the plaintiffs in error were bound to know that, under the laws of Missouri, the court, on proof of the charge contained in the information, might impose a fine, and 288]afforded an opportunity *to offer evidence in mitigation or reduction. On the application for a rehearing there was no claim that the fine was excessive, but the judgment was attacked on the ground that, for want both of jurisdiction and of notice, no such penalty could be imposed. We are concluded by the decision of the supreme court of the state as to its power; the judgment was within the issues submitted, and is not void as having been entered without due process of law.

If the judgment was not void, we cannot consider the collateral questions as to whether the suit abated against the Republic Oil Company when it gave notice of its withdrawal from the state; nor whether the act of 1907, amending the anti-trust act, operated to relieve the defendant from the penalties for all combinations in restraint of trade entered into prior to the adoption of the amending statute. These are non-Federal questions.

5. It is further contended that the defendants were denied the equal protection of the law. This claim is based upon the fact that, without indictment or trial by jury, they were ousted of their franchise and subjected to a fine of $50,000, at the discretion of the supreme court, while corporations prosecuted in the circuit court for the identically same acts in violation of the anti-trust statute were entitled to a trial by jury, and, if convicted, could be ousted of their franchises and subjected to a fine not to exceed $100 per day, during the time the combination continued in effect.

But proceedings by information in the nature of quo warranto differ in form and consequence from a prosecution by indictment for violation of a criminal statute. In the one, the state proceeds for a violation of the company's private contract; in the other, it prosecutes for a violation of public law. The corporation may be deprived of its franchise for nonuser,—a mere failure to act. It may also be deprived of its charter for that which, though *in-[289]nocent in itself, is beyond the power conferred upon it as an artificial person. If, however, the act of misuser is not only ultra vires but criminal, there is no merger of the civil liability in the criminal offense. Separate proceedings may be instituted,—one to secure the civil judgment, and the other to enforce the criminal law. Both cases may involve a consideration of the same facts; and evidence warranting a judgment of ouster may be sufficient to sustain a conviction for crime. A judgment may in one case sometimes be a bar to the other; but neither remedy is exclusive. The double liability, in civil and criminal proceedings, finds its counterpart in many instances; as, for example, where an attorney is disbarred or ousted of his right to practise in the court because of conduct for which he may likewise be prosecuted and fined.

In addition to these considerations it is to be noted that though the anti-trust act provides for penalties somewhat similar to those which may be entered in quo warranto proceedings, the statute did not, and, as held by the supreme court, could not, lessen the power conferred upon it to hear and determine quo warranto proceedings, and to enter judgments which, on general principles, appertained to the exercise of such constitutional jurisdiction. Standard Oil Co. v. Tennessee, 217 U. S. 421, 54 L. ed. 821, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 543; Delmar Jockey Club v. Missouri, 210 U. S. 324, 52 L. ed. 1080, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 732.

It was pointed out in the opinion (218 Mo. 349, 116 S. W. 902), that where a corporation had entered into a combination in restraint of trade, it thereby offended against the law of its creation, and consequently forfeited its right longer to exercise its franchise. It was thereupon held that in Missouri quo warranto might have been instituted for such acts of misuser, even though there had been no criminal statute on the subject. For this reason neither the validity nor invalidity of the anti-trust statute has any bearing on the case. The plaintiffs in error cannot 290] *complain that they were deprived of the equal protection of law, because in the civil proceeding they were not tried in the manner, and subjected to the judgment, appropriate in criminal cases.

If the plaintiffs in error were afforded due process of law, and were not deprived of the equal protection of the law, the judgment cannot be reversed. And, if it cannot be reversed, it cannot be modified to provide that it shall not be construed to conflict with a decree entered in an equity cause in another court to which plaintiffs are parties. Neither can it be amended by adding a provision that the judgment of ouster shall not operate to make those who buy plaintiff's products subject to prosecution, under the act of 1907, making it a felony for any person to deal in articles manufactured by a corporation whose license had been forfeited. This statute, which, it is said, will deprive plaintiffs of the right to do interstate business, is not before us. We have no right to assume that it will be applied so as to interfere with any right which plaintiffs have, under the Constitution, to do interstate business.

Affirmed.

WILLIAM CROZIER, Petitioner,

v.

FRIED. KRUPP AKTIENGESELLSCHAFT.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 290²-309.)

Injunction — infringement of patent by United States — right to sue officer.

1. Any existing Federal equity jurisdiction of a suit against an Army officer, based upon his alleged infringement of certain patents for the benefit of the United States, from which suit, by stipulation, every claim based upon the prior use of infringing devices was withdrawn, as was also the prayer for preliminary injunction and accounting, leaving in issue only the right to a permanent injunction forbidding the making of, or causing to be made by the defendant, guns or gun carriages embodying the inventions owned by complainant, was ousted by the provisions of the act of June 25, 1910 (36 Stat. at L. 851, chap. 423, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1457), that whenever an invention described in, and covered by, a patent of the United States, "shall hereafter be used by the United States without license of the owner thereof, or lawful right to use the same, such owner may recover reasonable compensation for such use by suit in the court of claims," the effect of which is to provide for the appropriation of a license to use the invention, the appropriation thus made being sanctioned by means of the compensation for which the statute provides.

NOTE.—On jurisdiction to restrain acts of public officers—see note to Mississippi v. Johnson, 18 L. ed. U. S. 437. 56 L. ed.

[For other cases, see Injunction, 192, 193; United States, 183-189, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Eminent domain — compensation — use of patent by United States.

2. The suit in the court of claims for compensation provided for by the act of June 25, 1910, "whenever an invention described in and covered by a patent of the United States shall hereafter be used by the United States without license of the owner thereof or lawful right to use the same," answers all requirements as to compensation necessary to sustain the statute as an exercise of the power of eminent domain.

[For other cases, see Eminent Domain, 138-144, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — remanding — dismissal without prejudice.

3. The Federal Supreme Court, upon reversing a decree of the court of appeals of the District of Columbia with directions to affirm a decree of the supreme court of the District, dismissing the bill in a suit to enjoin an Army officer from making or causing to be made, guns or gun carriages embodying the patented inventions owned by complainant, will direct that such affirmation be without prejudice to the right of complainant to proceed in the court of claims, under the act of June 25, 1910, for the compensation for which that statute provides.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 5491-5493, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 8.]

Argued April 20, 1911. Decided April 8, 1912.

ON WRIT of Certiorari to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia to review a decree which reversed a decree of the Supreme Court of the District, sustaining a demurrer to and dismissing the bill in a suit against an Army officer for the infringement of a patent. Reversed and remanded, with directions 'to affirm the decree of the Supreme Court of the District, without prejudice.

See same case below, 32 App. D. C. 1, — L.R.A. (N.S.) —, 15 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1108.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Stuart McNamara, Special Assistant to the Attorney General, argued the cause, and, with Attorney General Wickersham, filed a brief for petitioner:

The government is immune from suit except where immunity is waived.

Bracton, de Leg. 168 B; Staundforde, Prerogative, 72 B; Hale, Analysis of Law, § 9; Doe ex dem. Legh v. Roe, 8 Mees. & W. 579, 11 L. J. Exch. N. S. 57; Cohen v. Virginia, 6 Wheat. 264-411, 5 L. ed. 257-292; United States v. Clarke, 8 Pet. 444, 8 L. ed. 1004; The Siren, 7 Wall. 152-154, 19 L. ed. 129-131.

Under the statute the United States may be sued on a contract where it or its representatives have used the inventions under a contract made by the United States with the owner of the invention.

United States v. Palmer, 128 U. S. 262, 32 L. ed. 442, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 104; United States v. Berdan Fire-Arms Mfg. Co. 156 U. S. 552, 39 L. ed. 530, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 420.

The United States may also be sued under an implied contract, where it has appropriated the patented property of an individual under circumstances implying an agreement on the part of the government to pay reasonable compensation therefor.

United States v. Great Falls Mfg. Co. 112 U. S. 645, 28 L. ed. 846, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 306; United States v. Alexander, 148 U. S. 186-191, 37 L. ed. 415-417, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 529.

But the government cannot be sued in cases of tort. The United States has not consented to be sued in actions sounding in tort for wrongs done by their officers, even though in the discharge of official duties.

Gibbons v. United States, 8 Wall. 269, 19 L. ed. 453; Langford v. United States, 101 U. S. 341, 25 L. ed. 1010; Hill v. United States, 149 U. S. 593, 37 L. ed. 862, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1011.

Nor can the tort be waived and the litigant proceed upon an implied contract.

Russell v. United States, 182 U. S. 516, 45 L. ed. 1210, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 899.

This immunity of the government itself extends equally to its property; and there is no distinction between suits against the United States and against its property.

Stanley v. Schwalby, 147 U. S. 508-512, 37 L. ed. 259-261, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418.

The officers and agents of the government, civil and military, in times of peace, are personally liable to an individual whose rights of property they have wrongfully invaded, even by authority of the United States.

Bates v. Clark, 95 U. S. 204, 24 L. ed. 471.

Such officers, although acting under the orders of the government, are personally liable to be sued for their own infringement of a patent.

Cammeyer v. Newton, 94 U. S. 225-235, 24 L. ed. 72-76.

But there can be no enjoining of government through its officers.

Belknap v. Schild, 161 U. S. 10, 40 L. ed. 599, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 443; International Postal Supply Co. v. Bruce, 194 U. S. 601, 48 L. ed. 1134, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 820.

A plain, adequate, and complete remedy may be had by respondent for the invasion of its patents, and no circumstance of the case warrants the court's interference by injunction, even if jurisdiction to do so otherwise existed.

James v. Campbell, 104 U. S. 356, 26 L. ed. 786; Hollister v. Benedict & B. Mfg. Co. 113 U. S. 59, 28 L. ed. 901, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 717; Gerken v. Hall, 35 Misc. 225, 71 N. Y. Supp. 753; Grey ex rel. Simmons v. Paterson, 60 N. J. Eq. 385, 48 L.R.A. 717, 83 Am. St. Rep. 642, 45 Atl. 995; Lloyd v. Catlin Coal Co. 210 Ill. 460, 71 N. E. 335; Smith v. Sands, 24 Fed. 470; Bowers Dredging Co. v. New York Dredging Co. 77 Fed. 980; Huntington Dry-Pulverizer Co. v. Alpha Portland Cement Co. 91 Fed. 534; American Ordnance Co. v. Driggs-Seabury Co. 87 Fed. 947.

Mr. William A. Jenner argued the cause and filed a brief for respondent:

The right of a patentee and his assigns under letters patent of the United States to make, use, and vend the patented invention is exclusive of the government of the United States as well as of all others; and any use of such invention unauthorized by the owner of the letters patent, whether done directly by the United States, or indirectly through one of its officers, is a violation of that right.

Belknap v. Schild, 161 U. S. 10, 40 L. ed. 599, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 443; Hollister v. Benedict & B. Mfg. Co. 113 U. S. 59, 28 L. ed. 901, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 717; James v. Campbell, 104 U. S. 356, 26 L. ed. 786; Cammeyer v. Newton, 94 U. S. 225, 235, 24 L. ed. 72, 75; United States v. Burns, 12 Wall. 246, 20 L. ed. 388.

The fact that the invasion of a plaintiff's property is done by a defendant while acting in his official capacity as an officer of the United States government or of a state government does not of itself justify the wrong nor deprive plaintiff of the relief which otherwise the court would grant.

Davis v. Gray, 16 Wall. 203, 21 L. ed. 447; Osborn v. Bank of United States, 9 Wheat. 738, 6 L. ed. 204; Board of Liquidation v. McComb, 92 U. S. 531, 541, 23 L. ed. 623, 628; Allen v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 114 U. S. 311, 29 L. ed. 200, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 925, 962; Pennoyer v. McConaughy, 140 U. S. 1, 35 L. ed. 363, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 699; Howell v. Miller, 33 C. C. A. 407, 62 U. S. App. 17, 91 Fed. 129; American School v. McAnnulty, 187 U. S. 94, 47 L. ed. 90, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 33; United States v. Lee, 106 U. S. 196, 27 L. ed. 171, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 240; Tindal v. Wesley, 167 U. S. 204, 42 L. ed. 137, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 770; Poindexter v. Greenhow, 114 U. S. 270, 29 L. ed. 185, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 903, 962; Bates v. Clark, 95 U. S. 204, 24 L. ed. 471; Teal v. Felton, 12 How. 284, 13 L. ed. 990; Little v. Barreme, 2 Cranch, 170, 2 L. ed. 243; Elliott v. Swartwout, 10 Pet. 137, 9 L. ed. 373.

The courts have frequently entertained jurisdiction of actions brought to enjoin officers of the United States from infringement of letters patent.

Dashiell v. Grosvenor, 162 U. S. 425, 40 L. ed. 1025, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 805; Cammer v. Newton, 94 U. S. 225, 24 L. ed. 72; James v. Campbell, 104 U. S. 356, 26 L. ed. 786; Hollister v. Benedict & B. Mfg. Co. 113 U. S. 59, 28 L. ed. 901, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 717.

The argument that an injunction against the manufacture by defendant of guns and gun carriages infringing the complainant's patent would in effect be an injunction against the free use by the United States of the material at its arsenals used in the manufacture of guns and gun carriages, and that therefore the case is brought within the decision of Belknap v. Schild, 161 U. S. 10, 40 L. ed. 599, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 443, and International Postal Supply Co. v. Bruce, 194 U. S. 601, 48 L. ed. 1134, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 820, is untenable.

Howell v. Miller, 33 C. C. A. 407, 62 U. S. App. 17, 91 Fed. 129.

Where jurisdiction in equity has become established, a subsequent statute creating a remedy at law or removing the obstacles at law upon the existence of which the equity jurisdiction was originally founded does not oust equity of that jurisdiction, unless the statute affirmatively discloses the legislative intent to make the legal remedy exclusive.

16 Cyc. 34; White v. Meday, 2 Edw. Ch. 486; New York Ins. Co. v. Roulet, 24 Wend. 514; Mayne v. Griswold, 3 Sandf. 463; Sailly v. Elmore, 2 Paige, 497; Labadie v. Hewitt, 85 Ill. 341; McNab v. Heald, 41 56 L. ed.

Ill. 326; Crass v. Memphis & C. R. Co. 96 Ala. 447, 11 So. 480; Hardeman v. Battersby, 53 Ga. 36.

Mr. Chief Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

The defendant, a corporation organized under the laws of the German Empire, commenced this suit on June 8, 1907, in the supreme court of the District of Columbia. Relief was sought because of alleged infringements of three described letters patent of the United States, originally issued in the name of Fried. Krupp and assigned to the corporation. Two of the patents, numbered 722,724 and 722,725, were granted in 1903, and the third, issued in 1905, was numbered 791,347. The patents related to improvements in guns and gun carriages. The petitioner here, William Crozier, was named as sole defendant in the bill.

After full averments as to the issue of the patents and the assignments by which the plaintiff had become the owner thereof, it was charged that the defendant Crozier, well knowing of the existence of the patents, "in violation and infringement of said letters patent and of the exclusive rights granted and secured under said letters patent . . . since the 17th day of March, 1903, *and within the period[298 of six (6) years prior to the filing of this bill of complaint, in the city of Bridgeport, state of Connecticut, and in the Watervliet Arsenal in the state of New York, and in the Rock Island Arsenal in the state of Illinois, . . . and elsewhere in the United States," has "made and used, or caused to be made and used, is now making and causing to be made and used, and threatens and intends to continue to make or cause to be made, and to use and cause to be used," guns and recoil-brake apparatus and guns and gun carriages embodying the inventions owned by the complainant, in violation of the rights secured by the patents.

The prayer was for a preliminary and a permanent writ enjoining the defendant, "his agents and employees, from making or using or causing to be made or used any guns or gun carriages or other devices which shall contain or employ the inventions or any of the inventions covered and secured by said letters patent or any of said letters patent." There was also a prayer that the defendant "may be compelled to account for and pay over to your orator all the profits which the defendant has or had derived from any making or using of any gun or any specimen or device covered and secured by said letters patent or any of said letters patent, and that also the defendant be decreed to pay all damages which your orator has incurred or shall incur upon account of defendant's infringement of any of said letters patent, with such increase thereof as shall be meet. . . . "

A stipulation was filed in the cause, in which, while expressly reserving the right of the defendant "to demur or otherwise plead to the bill of complaint, because of lack of jurisdiction on any ground," it was agreed as follows:

"The complainant stipulates that no pecuniary benefit has accrued to the defendant, William Crozier, by reason of the acts set forth in the bill, and complainant waives any claim against said defendant for 299]an accounting of the *profits or for damages, if any, arising out of or suffered by the complainant by reason of the acts and things set forth in the bill. Defendant stipulates and agrees that the government of the United States of America and the Ordnance Department of said government have manufactured, are now manufacturing, and intend to continue the manufacture and use, or to cause to be manufactured for their use, field guns and carriages made after the so-called 'Model of 1902' referred to in the bill of complaint, the claim or claims of complainant being in nowise admitted; that the defendant, William Crozier, sued in this suit, is an officer in the United States Army and Chief of the Ordnance of the United States Army, and is the officer in the service of the United States who directs and is in charge of such manufacture of said field guns and carriages for the United States. The complainant concedes that the defendant, William Crozier, is such officer. The defendant further stipulates and agrees that the complainant is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the Empire of Germany and a citizen of said Empire and a subject of the Emperor of Germany.

"Further, complainant desires to amend its bill in certain particulars, and the defendant desires to consent thereto. It is therefore stipulated that the bill of complaint herein be amended to read as follows: In paragraph 32 of said bill shall be eliminated and expunged the words 'a preliminary and also,' and also the words 'or using' and the words 'or used,' so that the said 32d paragraph of said bill of complaint shall, when so amended, read as follows:

"And your orator therefore prays your honors to grant unto your orator a permanent writ of injunction issuing out of and under the seal of this honorable court, directed to the said defendant, William Crozier, and strictly enjoining him, his agents and employees, from making or causing to be made any guns or gun carriages or other *devices which shall contain or em-[300 ploy the inventions or any of the inventions covered and secured by said letters patent or any of said letters patent."

"Paragraph 33 of said bill of complaint shall be amended so as to eliminate and expunge from said paragraph the following words:

"by a decree of this court may be compelled to account for and pay over to your orator all the profits which the defendant has or had derived from any making or using of any gun or any specimen or device covered and secured by said letters patent or any of said letters patent, and that also the defendant be decreed to pay all damages which your orator has incurred or shall incur upon account of defendant's infringement of any of such letters patent, with such increase thereof as shall seem meet, and that also the defendant."

"So that the paragraph marked 33, when so amended, shall read as follows:

"And your orator further prays that the defendant be decreed to pay the costs of this suit, and that your orator may have such other and further relief as the equity of the cause or the statutes of the United States may require and to this court may seem just."

The defendant demurred to the amended bill on various grounds, all of which, in substance, challenged the jurisdiction of the court over the cause on the ground that the suit was really against the United States.

The demurrer was sustained and the bill dismissed. The court of appeals reversed, and remanded the cause for further proceedings not inconsistent with its opinion. 32 App. D. C. 1, — L.R.A.(N.S.) —, 15 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1108.

The court held that there was a broad distinction between interfering by injunction with the use by the United States of its property and the granting of a writ of injunction for the purpose of preventing the wrongful taking of private property, even although the individual *who was[301 enjoined from such taking was an officer of the government, and although the purpose of the proposed taking was to appropriate the private property when taken to a governmental purpose. The cases of Belknap v. Schild, 161 U. S. 10, 40 L. ed. 599, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 443, and International Postal Supply Co. v. Bruce, 194 U. S. 601, 48 L. ed. 1134, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 820, were analyzed and held to be apposite solely to the first proposition; that is, the want of authority to interfere with the property of the United States used for a governmental purpose. The court said:

"It will thus be seen that in the Belknap and Bruce Cases the subject-matter involved was property of the United States, and that therefore the United States was necessarily a party. In the present case it is not sought to disturb the United States in the possession and use of the guns already manufactured. The court is not asked to deal with property of the United States. The plaintiff simply asks that an officer of the United States be restrained from invading rights granted by the government itself. The acts complained of are not only not sanctioned by any law, but are inconsistent with the patent laws of the United States."

A writ of certiorari was thereupon allowed.

The arguments at bar ultimately considered but affirm on the one hand and deny on the other the ground of distinction upon which the court below placed its ruling and by which the decisions in Belknap v. Schild and International Postal Supply Co. v. Bruce were held to be distinguishable from the case in hand, and therefore not to be controlling. Thus the government insists that although, under the stipulation and the bill as amended, it resulted that no damages were sought in respect to use by the government of the patented inventions, and no interference of any kind was asked with property belonging to the government, nevertheless the suit was against the United States, because the defendant was conceded to be an officer of the Army of the United States, engaged in the duty of making or causing to be made guns or gun carriages for the Army of the United States. This, it is contended, is demonstrated to be the case by considering that the right to enjoin the officer of the United States, which the court below upheld, virtually asserts the existence of a judicial power to close every arsenal of the United States. On the other hand, the plaintiff insists that the act of the officer in wrongfully attempting to take its property cannot be assumed to be a governmental act, but must be treated as an individual wrong which the courts have the authority to prevent. The exertion of the power to enjoin a wrong of that nature in order to prevent the illegal conversion of private property is, it is urged, a manifestly different thing from using the process of injunction to interfere with property in the possession of the government, and which is being used for a public purpose. But we do not think, under the conditions which presently exist, we are called upon to consider the correctness of the theory upon which the court of appeals placed its decision, or the soundness of the contentions at bar by which that theory is supported on the one hand or assailed on the other. We reach this conclusion because, since October 7, 1908, when the decision of the court of appeals was rendered, the subject to which the controversy relates was dealt with by Congress by a law enacted on June 25, 1910, 36 Stat. at L. chap. 423, p. 851, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1457, as follows:

An Act to Provide Additional Protection for Owners of Patents of the United States, and for Other Purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That whenever an invention described in and covered by a patent of the United States shall hereafter be used by the United States without license of the owner thereof or lawful right to use the same, such owner may recover reasonable compensation for such use by suit in the court of claims: [303] Provided, however, That said court of claims shall not entertain a suit or reward compensation under the provisions of this act where the claim for compensation is based on the use by the United States of any article heretofore owned, leased, used by, or in the possession of, the United States: Provided further, That in any such suit the United States may avail itself of any and all defenses, general or special, which might be pleaded by a defendant in an action for infringement, as set forth in title sixty of the Revised Statutes or otherwise: And provided further, That the benefits of this act, shall not inure to any patentee who, when he makes such claim, is in the employment or service of the government of the United States; or the assignee of any such patentee; nor shall this act apply to any device discovered or invented by such employee during the time of his employment or service.

The text of this statute leaves no room to doubt that it was adopted in contemplation of the contingency of the assertion by a patentee that rights secured to him by a patent had been invaded for the benefit of the United States by one of its officers; that is, that such officer, under the conditions stated, had infringed a patent.

The enactment of the statute, we think, grew out of the operation of the prior statute law concerning the right to sue the United States for the act of an officer in infringing a patent, as interpreted by repeated decisions of this court. United States v. Palmer, 128 U. S. 262, 32 L. ed. 442, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 104; Schillinger

v. United States, 155 U. S. 163, 39 L. ed. 108, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 85; United States v. Berdan Fire-arms Mfg. Co. 156 U. S. 552, 39 L. ed. 531, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 420; Russell v. United States, 182 U. S. 516, 45 L. ed. 1210, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 899; Harley v. United States, 198 U. S. 229, 49 L. ed. 1029, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 634. The effect of the statute was thus pointed out in the last-cited case (198 U. S. 234):

"We held in Russell v. United States, 182 U. S. 516, 530, 45 L. ed. 1210, 1215, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 899, that in order to give the court of claims jurisdiction, under the act of March 3, 1887, 24 Stat. at L. 505, chap. 359, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 752, [304] *defining claims of which the court of claims had jurisdiction, the demand sued on must be founded on 'a convention between the parties,—a coming together of minds.' And we excluded, as not meeting this condition, those contracts or obligations that the law is said to ~~take~~ ^{derive} from a tort. Schillinger v. United States, 155 U. S. 163, 39 L. ed. 108, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 85; United States v. Berdan Fire-arms Mfg. Co. 156 U. S. 552, 39 L. ed. 530, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 420."

In other words, the situation prior to the passage of the act of 1910 was this: Where it was asserted that an officer of the government had infringed a patent right belonging to another,—in other words, had taken his property for the benefit of the government,—the power to sue the United States for redress did not obtain unless, from the proof, it was established that a contract to pay could be implied,—that is to say, that no right of action existed against the United States for a mere act of wrongdoing by its officers. Evidently inspired by the injustice of this rule as applied to rights of the character of those embraced by patents, because of the frequent possibility of their infringement by the acts of officers under circumstances which would not justify the implication of a contract, the intention of the statute to create a remedy for this condition is illustrated by the declaration in the title that the statute was enacted "to provide additional protection for owners of patents." To secure this end, in comprehensive terms the statute provides that whenever an invention described in and covered by a patent of the United States "shall hereafter be used by the United States without license of the owner thereof or lawful right to use the same, such owner may recover reasonable compensation for such use by suit in the court of claims." That is to say, it adds to the right to sue the United States in the court of claims already conferred when contract relations exist, the right to sue even although no element of contract is present. And to render the power thus conferred efficacious, the statute endows any owner of *a patent with the right to establish [305] contradictorily with the United States the truth of his belief that his rights have been, in whole or in part, appropriated by an officer of the United States, and if he does so establish such appropriation, that the United States shall be considered as having ratified the act of the officer, and be treated as responsible pecuniarily for the consequences. These results of the statute are the obvious consequences of the power which it confers upon the patentee to seek redress in the court of claims for any injury which he asserts may have been inflicted upon him by the unwarranted use of his patented invention, and the nature and character of the defenses which the statute prescribes may be made by the United States to such an action when brought. The adoption by the United States of the wrongful act of an officer is, of course, an adoption of the act when and as committed, and causes such act of the officer to be, in virtue of the statute, a rightful appropriation by the government, for which compensation is provided. In substance, therefore, in this case, in view of the public nature of the subjects with which the patents in question are concerned and the undoubted authority of the United States as to such subjects to exert the power of eminent domain, the statute, looking at the substance of things, provides for the appropriation of a license to use the inventions, the appropriation thus made being sanctioned by the means of compensation for which the statute provides.

This being the substantial result of the statute, it remains only to determine whether its provisions are adequate to sustain and justify giving effect to its plain and beneficent purpose to furnish additional protection to owners of patents when their rights are infringed by the officers of the government in the discharge of their public duties. This inquiry may be solved, under the conditions here involved, by taking the most exacting *aspect of the [306] well-established and indeed elementary requirements in favor of property rights essential to be afforded in order to justify the taking by government of private property for public use.† Indisputably the duty to make compensation does not inflexibly, in the absence of constitutional provisions requiring it, exact, first, that compensation should be made previous to the taking,—that is, that the amount should be ascertained and paid in advance of the appropriation,—it being sufficient, having relation to the nature and character of the property taken, that adequate means be provided for a reasonably just and prompt ascertainment and payment of the compensation; second, that, again, always having reference to the nature and character of the property taken, its value and the surrounding circumstances, the duty to provide for payment of compensation may be adequately fulfilled by an assumption on the part of government of the duty to make prompt payment of the ascertained compensation,—that is, by the pledge, either expressly or by necessary implication, of the public good faith to that end.

†United States v. Russell, 13 Wall. 623, 20 L. ed. 474; Cherokee Nation v. Southern Kansas R. Co. 135 U. S. 641, 34 L. ed. 295, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 965; Sweet v. Rechel, 159 U. S. 380, 40 L. ed. 188, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 43. See Lewis, Em. Dom. 3d ed. vol. 2, §§ 675, 679, and Cooley, Const. Lim. 7th ed. p. 813.

Coming to apply these principles, and confining ourselves in their application, as we have done in their statement, strictly to the conditions here before us, that is, the intangible nature—patent rights—of the property taken, the great possibilities in the essential operations of government that such rights may be invaded by incorporating them into property of a public character, of the vital public interest involved in the subject-matter of the patents in question, and the grave detriment to the very existence of government which might result from interference with the right of 307]the government to make and use *instrumentalities of the character of those with which the patents in question are concerned, of the purpose which the statute manifests to add additional protection and sanction to private rights, and the pledge of the good faith of the government which the statute plainly implies, to appropriate for and pay the compensation when ascertained as provided in the statute,—we think there is no room for doubt that the statute makes full and adequate provision for the exercise of the power of eminent domain for which, considered in its final analysis, it was the purpose of the statute to provide. Indeed, the desire to confine ourselves to the particular case before us has led us to state and limit the doctrine which we here apply, when it was possibly unnecessary to do so. We say this because no contention was made in argument by counsel for the corporation that the statute of 1910 does not provide methods of compensation adequate to the exercise of the power of taking for which the statute provides. Thus, in the argument, it is said: "If the officers of the United States have since the act . . . used or shall hereafter use complainant's patented design, it is possible or probable that complainant may receive reasonable compensation under the act in the court of claims,"—this statement being followed by an insistence that even although this be the case, the statute is not controlling, because it was enacted after the bill was filed, and did not, therefore, retroactively deprive the court below of the power to afford relief under the conditions existing when the suit was commenced. The conclusion of the argument on this subject was thus stated:

"The general rule is that, where jurisdiction in equity has been established, a subsequent statute creating a remedy at law or removing the obstacle at law upon which the existence of the equity jurisdiction was originally founded does not oust equity of that jurisdiction unless the statute affirmatively discloses the legislative *intent to make the legal remedy ex-308 clusive . . . We cannot discover in the act of June 25, 1910, any evidence of an intent to oust equity when its jurisdiction had attached, because there is no expression and the act is not retroactive."

But this contention is either an afterthought or is occasioned by overlooking the amendment to the pleadings operated by the stipulation to which we have hitherto referred. By that stipulation every conceivable claim based on the prior use of infringing devices was withdrawn. The prayer for a preliminary restraint was waived, and all right to an accounting was likewise withdrawn. As a result the case was confined solely to obtaining at the end of the suit a permanent injunction forbidding the making of, or causing to be made by the defendant, guns or gun carriages embodying the inventions owned by complainant.

Upon the hypothesis that the decree of the court below, remanding the case for further proceedings not inconsistent with its opinion, was correct under the conditions existing when it was rendered, clearly, under the circumstances now existing, that is, the acquiring by the government, under the right of eminent domain, as the result of the statute of 1910, of a license to use the patented inventions in question, there could be no possible right to award at the end of a trial the permanent injunction to which the issue in the case was confined. Moreover, taking a broader view, and supposing that a final decree granting a permanent injunction had been entered below, in view of the subject-matter of the controversy and the right of the United States to exert the power of eminent domain as to that subject, at most and in any event the injunction could rightfully only have been made to operate until the United States had appropriated the right to use the patented inventions; and as that event has happened, the injunction, if granted, would no longer have operative 309]*force. It follows that the decree of the Court of Appeals must be reversed, with directions to that court to affirm the decree of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, dismissing the bill, without prejudice, however, to the right of the defendant here, who was the complainant below, to proceed in the Court of Claims in accordance with the provisions of the act of 1910.

Reversed and remanded.

UNITED STATES, Appt.,

v.

SOCIETE ANONYME DES ANCIENS
ETABLISSEMENTS CAIL. (No. 209.)

SOCIETE ANONYME DES ANCIENS
ETABLISSEMENTS CAIL, Appt.,

v.

UNITED STATES. (No. 210.)

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 309-330.)

Claims — jurisdiction — implied contract — use of patent.

1. An implied contract to pay for the use of a patent, justiciable in the court of claims, arises out of its use by the United States with the patentee's consent, and with no claim of ownership on the part of the United States, and nothing to show any intention to dispute the patentee's title.

[For other cases, see Claims, 122-127, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Patents — combination — construction — equivalents — infringement.

2. The claim of the De Bange patent, No. 301,220, for a device to prevent the escape of gas from breech-loading cannon, the essence of which is a "system of packing" which, by the force of the explosion of the powder, is expanded to make a tight joint to prevent leakage of gas, should not be confined to the specific form of the elements described therein as the best means of carrying out the invention, so that a change in the covering of the packing, or the substitution of steel rings for brass, will avoid infringement.

[For other cases, see Patents, 708-760, 908-931, 935-1000, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — from court of claims — remanding for additional finding.

3. A case will not be remanded to the court of claims on a motion which in effect calls for the certification of the evidence, and not the court's conclusions from the evidence, since this would contravene a rule of the Federal Supreme Court which requires the record on an appeal from the court of claims to contain a finding "of the facts in the case established by the evidence in the nature of a special verdict, but not the evidence establishing it."

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, V. o, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — from court of claims — review of finding.

4. A finding of the court of claims upon the question of the compensation to be paid by the United States for its use of a patent, to which finding there was no objection taken nor exception reserved, is conclusive on the Federal Supreme Court, being in the nature of a special verdict of the jury.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, 4892-4902, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[Nos. 209 and 210.]

Argued March 12 and '13, 1912. Decided April 8, 1912.

CROSS APPEALS from the Court of Claims to review an award for the use of a patent by the United States. Affirmed.

See same case below, 43 Ct. Cl. 25.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Philip Mauro and Timothy D. Merwin argued the cause and filed a brief for Société Anonyme Des Anciens Etablissements Cail:

If there be among pre-existing devices anything presenting a superficial resemblance to the De Bange breech mechanism, the resemblance is of the kind characterized by this court in the Richardson Valve Case (Consolidated Safety Valve Co. v. Crosby Steam Gauge & Valve Co.) 113 U. S. 157, 28 L. ed. 939, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 513, in which the court, speaking of certain prior devices, said: "Likenesses in them, in physical structure, to the apparatus of Richardson, in important particulars, may be pointed out; but it is only as the anatomy of a corpse resembles that of a living being. The prior structures never effected the kind of result attained by Richardson's apparatus, because they lacked the thing which gave success."

Ibid.

The court of claims had jurisdiction.

United States v. Palmer, 128 U. S. 262, 269, 32 L. ed. 442, 444, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 104; United States v. Berdan Fire-Arms Mfg. Co. 156 U. S. 552, 39 L. ed. 530, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 420.

A patent is not to be limited to one particular form of machine, excluding all other forms, if the claim can fairly be construed otherwise.

Winans v. Denmead, 15 How. 330, 14 L.

NOTE.—As to what claims constitute valid demands against a state—see note to Northwestern & P. Hypotheek Bank v. State, 42 L.R.A. 33.

ed. 717; Western Electric Co. v. LaRue, 139 U. S. 601, 608, 35 L. ed. 294, 297, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 670; Consolidated Safety Valve Co. v. Crosby Steam Gauge & Valve Co. 113 U. S. 157, 28 L. ed. 939, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 513; Turrill v. Michigan S. & N. I. R. Co. 1 Wall. 491, 17 L. ed. 668; Klein v. Russell, 19 Wall. 433, 466, 22 L. ed. 116, 124; Consolidated Fastner Co. v. Columbian Fastener Co. 79 Fed. 795; Bonnette Arc Lawn Sprinkler Co. v. Koehler, 27 C. C. A. 200, 54 U. S. App. 267, 82 Fed. 428.

The claim, even if it had been limited in terms to a copper envelope and brass shells, would be entitled to such a construction as to cover equivalent substances such as a canvas cover and steel shells.

Union Paper-Bag Mach. Co. v. Murphy, 97 U. S. 120, 125, 24 L. ed. 935, 936.

Assistant Attorney General Thompson and Mr. Malcolm A. Coles argued the cause and filed a brief for the United States:

There is nothing in the record to show a meeting of minds, or agreement as to compensation, which this court has held to be an essential requisite as a basis for an implied contract in fact.

Russell v. United States, 36 Ct. Cl. 581, 182 U. S. 516, 45 L. ed. 1210, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 899; Harley v. United States, 39 Ct. Cl. 114, 198 U. S. 229-234, 49 L. ed. 1029-1031, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 634.

No implied contract in fact with the United States can arise from the action of any officer of the United States who is not authorized under the statutes to make an express contract.

Sprague v. United States, 37 Ct. Cl. 455; Clark v. United States, 95 U. S. 539, 24 L. ed. 518; St. Louis Hay & Grain Co. v. United States, 191 U. S. 159, 48 L. ed. 130, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 47; McLaughlin v. United States, 37 Ct. Cl. 185.

What is the thing patented is a question of law, to be determined by the court, construing the letters patent, and the description of the invention and specification of claim annexed to them.

Winans v. Denmead, 15 How. 330, 338, 14 L. ed. 717, 720; Davis v. Palmer, 2 Brock. 298, Fed. Cas. No. 3,645; Davoll v. Brown, 1 Woodb. & M. 53, Fed. Cas. No. 3,662; Parker v. Hulme, 1 Fisher, Pat. Cas. 44, Fed. Cas. No. 10,740; Teese v. Phelps, McAll. 48, Fed. Cas. No. 13,819; Cahoon v. Ring, 1 Cliff. 592, Fed. Cas. No. 2,292; National Car-Brake Shoe Co. v. Terre Haute Car & Mfg. Co. 19 Fed. 514; Emerson v. Hogg, 2 Blatchf. 6, Fed. Cas. No. 4,440; Ransom v. New York, 1 Fisher, Pat. Cas. 252, Fed. Cas. No. 11,573.

Inasmuch as the Davis and Gerdomb de-
56 L. ed.

VICES used by the government, while containing asbestos and tallow, do not employ the copper shells and the brass shells, they do not fall within the claim.

Singer Mfg. Co. v. Cramer, 192 U. S. 265, 48 L. ed. 437, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 291.

The courts, in treating broad claims, often regard the use of reference letters to designate the elements of a combination claim, not as limiting the claim to the precise details of the elements to which the letters apply, but as covering, as well, all substitutes for such elements having differing details.

Consolidated Safety Valve Co. v. Crosby Steam Gauge & Valve Co. 113 U. S. 157, 28 L. ed. 939, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 513; Reed v. Chase, 25 Fed. 99; Delemater v. Heath, 7 C. C. A. 279, 20 U. S. App. 14, 58 Fed. 414; Bonnette Arc Lawn Sprinkler Co. v. Koehler, 27 C. C. A. 200, 54 U. S. App. 267, 82 Fed. 428.

Had the patentee, appellee herein, actually considered that claim 1 was not as broad as it was intended to draw it, or as it might have been drawn when the application was pending, the remedy to correct any such defect or oversight in the handling of the application was to have applied within reasonable time for a re-issue of the patent. No such application for reissue was filed; hence a dedication to the public of all which was not defined in the claims of the patent has unquestionably occurred.

Ex parte Roberts, Comrs. Decisions, 1887, p. 61; Ex parte Mullen, 50 Off. Gaz. 837; Yale Lock Mfg. Co. v. Berkshire Nat. Bank, 135 U. S. 342, 34 L. ed. 168, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 884.

It matters not what the real invention of the patentee may have been. It is he who is called upon to define it, and if he characterizes it as narrow and circumscribed when in fact it is broad and generic, he, and not the public, must suffer for it. On the other hand, if he defines it as broad, when in fact it is narrow, he is equally bound. The claim must have a fixed meaning. It cannot mean one thing to-day and another to-morrow.

McClain v. Ortmyer, 141 U. S. 419, 35 L. ed. 800, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 76; Lehigh Valley R. Co. v. Mellon, 104 U. S. 112, 26 L. ed. 639; Merrill v. Yeomans, 94 U. S. 568, 24 L. ed. 235; Burns v. Meyer, 100 U. S. 671, 25 L. ed. 738; Sutter v. Robinson, 119 U. S. 530, 30 L. ed. 492, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 376.

The appellee's effort in this case to have the court read into his claim just enough to hold the government is entirely without warrant.

Santa Clara Valley Mill. & Lumber Co.

v. Prescott, 42 C. C. A. 477, 102 Fed. 501; McCarty v. Lehigh Valley R. Co. 160 U. S. 110, 40 L. ed. 358, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 240; Day v. Fair Haven & W. R. Co. 132 U. S. 98, 33 L. ed. 265, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 11; Howe Mach. Co. v. National Needle Co. 134 U. S. 388, 33 L. ed. 963, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 570; White v. Dunbar, 119 U. S. 47, 30 L. ed. 303, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 72; United States Repair & Guarantee Co. v. Assyrian Asphalt Co. 183 U. S. 591, 46 L. ed. 342, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 87; Frederick R. Stearns & Co. v. Russell, 29 C. C. A. 121, 54 U. S. App. 591, 85 Fed. 218; Paul Boynton Co. v. Morris Chute Co. 30 C. C. A. 617, 58 U. S. App. 53, 87 Fed. 225; Penfield v. Potts, 61 C. C. A. 371, 126 Fed. 475; Westinghouse Air Brake Co. v. New York Air Brake Co. 56 C. C. A. 404, 119 Fed. 874; American Bell Teleph. Co. v. National Tel. Mfg. Co. 109 Fed. 976; Gerard v. Diebold Safe & Lock Co. 9 C. C. A. 451, 23 U. S. App. 341, 61 Fed. 209.

Should this judgment not be reversed, the amount thereof, being in the nature of a special verdict found by the court of claims, cannot be altered or enlarged under the well-established practice of this court.

District of Columbia v. Barnes, 197 U. S. 146, 49 L. ed. 699, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 401.

Assistant Attorney General Thompson, Mr. Malcolm A. Coles, and the late Solicitor General Bowers, filed a brief in opposition to the motion for remand:

It is a well-settled policy of this court, particularly as to the amount determined and fixed as its judgment by the court of claims, that such a finding is in the nature of a special verdict and will not be disturbed by this court upon appeal.

United States v. Smith, 94 U. S. 214, 24 L. ed. 115; McClure v. United States, 116 U. S. 145, 29 L. ed. 572, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 321; Union P. R. Co. v. United States, 116 U. S. 145, 29 L. ed. 572, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 325; Stone v. United States, 164 U. S. 380, 41 L. ed. 477, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 71; United States v. New York Indians, 173 U. S. 464, 43 L. ed. 769, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 464; District of Columbia v. Barnes, 197 U. S. 146, 49 L. ed. 699, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 401; Moore v. United States, 25 Ct. Cl. 86.

Mr. Malcolm A. Coles also filed a separate brief for the United States:

A combination is an entirety, and if one of its elements is omitted the thing claimed disappears. Every part of the combination claimed is conclusively presumed to be material to the combination. A patentee makes all parts of a combination material when he claims them in combination, and not separately. He cannot, therefore, show his invention to be broader or narrower by construction, to prevent anticipation or to assert infringement.

Walker, Patents, §§ 176, 181, 182, 186, 339, 349; Case v. Brown, 2 Wall. 320, 17 L. ed. 817; Derby v. Thompson, 146 U. S. 476, 482, 36 L. ed. 1051, 1053, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 181; Wright v. Yuengling, 155 U. S. 47, 39 L. ed. 64, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; McClain v. Ortmyer, 141 U. S. 419, 425, 35 L. ed. 800, 802, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 76; Hubbell v. United States, 179 U. S. 77, 82, 45 L. ed. 95, 98, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 24; Union Water Meter Co. v. Desper, 101 U. S. 332, 25 L. ed. 1024; Fay v. Cordesman, 109 U. S. 408, 27 L. ed. 979, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 236; American Can. Co. v. Hickmott Asparagus Canning Co. 137 Fed. 86.

And when the alleged infringing device omits from its construction and operation one or more of the elements, as claimed in the patent in suit, or embodies one or more elements in addition to those as claimed in the patent in suit, the allegation of infringement must fail of establishment unless the claim can be saved by invoking the doctrine of mechanical equivalents.

Knapp v. Morss, 150 U. S. 221, 37 L. ed. 1059, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 81; Boyden Power Brake Co. v. Westinghouse, 170 U. S. 537, 42 L. ed. 1136, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 707; Adams Electric R. Co. v. Lindell R. Co. 23 C. C. A. 223, 40 U. S. App. 482, 77 Fed. 432; National Harrow Brake-Beam Co. v. Interchangeable Brake-Beam Co. 45 C. A. 544, 106 Fed. 693.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

This suit is for royalties alleged to be due for the use by the government of a certain patented invention known as a "gas check" or "obturator,"—a device applied to breech-loading cannon to prevent the escape of gas.

The court of claims rendered judgment against the United States for the sum of $136,000. Both parties appeal, the United States contending against any judgment, the claimant contending for the recovery of a larger sum. No further distinction is necessary to be observed between the appeals. The discussion of the case will dispose of both.

The first contention of the government is that the facts *set out in the findings[311] did not constitute an implied contract in fact as distinguished from a tort, and that therefore the court of claims had no jurisdiction of the case.

Such a contract is necessary to sustain the exercise of jurisdiction. Russell v. United States, 182 U. S. 516, 45 L. ed.

1210, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 899, and cases cited. The court of claims decided that such a contract existed and that the jurisdiction of the court was established; citing United States v. Berdan Fire-Arms Mfg. Co. 156 U. S. 552, 39 L. ed. 531, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 420. The court said: "The findings disclose an invitation to present the details of the patent to the defendant [the government], its examination by a board of officers appointed to investigate such inventions, and its final use without the slightest claim of ownership. Nothing appears to show an intention to dispute claimant's title to the patent, hence an implied contract arose to pay for such use." [43 Ct. Cl. 55]

In discussing the correctness of these conclusions we necessarily assume the validity of the patent, its utility and use by the government, the question being only for the present whether such use was a trespass upon the rights of the claimant, or in concession of such rights and of an obligation to pay for them.

The findings lack, and, it may be, necessarily lack, definiteness. They trace the history and progress of the invention of gas checks from an early period to the culmination in the patent to Colonel De Bange, an officer of the French army, in 1884, granted upon an application made in 1883. It immediately attracted the notice of American army and naval officers and received favorable commendation in ordnance notes.

In 1883, under an act of Congress of that year (22 Stat. at L. 474, chap. 97), a board was constituted, known as the "gun foundry board," composed of eminent officers of the Army and Navy, headed by Rear Admiral Simpson of the Navy, whose duty it was, among others, as it is recited in the findings, to report on the establishment *of a government foundry, "or what other method, if any, should be adopted for the manufacture of heavy ordnance adapted to modern warfare, for the use of the Army and Navy of the United States."

The board visited the claimant's works at Paris on June 29, 1883. "In the official report of this board reference is made to a visit to the claimant's works at Paris, France, on August 29, 1883, and to the inspection by said board of the De Bange system of ordnance. In the said report of said board is the following:

"Breech fermeture.—All the French guns are breech-loading, and are fitted with the interrupted screw system, as modified by Colonel De Bange to suit his gas check.

"Gas check.—The De Bange gas check is universally employed."

Prior to the visit of the gun foundry 56 L. ed.

board the De Bange obturator was brought directly to the attention of the United States ordnance authorities through Lieutenant Commander Chadwick, naval attaché at London, to whom De Bange explained his invention, and who gave to Lieutenant Commander Folger of the Bureau of Ordnance, Navy Department, a detailed description of the method of making it, furnished by De Bange, subsequently (July 5, 1883) forwarding to the Department the device, accompanied by the following letter:

Sir:—

I have the honor to forward herewith a De Bange "obturator," which was kindly presented on request by the French minister of war.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
F. E. Chadwick,
Lt. Comdr., U. S. Navy, Naval Attaché.
Commodore J. E. Walker,

U. S. Navy, Chief of Bureau of Navigation,

Navy Department, Washington.

*In 1884 the ordnance officers of [313 the United States, after experimenting with the De Bange device, adopted it for heavy ordnance (5-inch caliber and upward), and have used no other device since.

"The United States government [we quote from the findings] has never disputed the title of claimant's assignor, Colonel De Bange, as inventor of the said invention; but, on the contrary, the said invention has, ever since its adoption, been known in the service of the United States as the 'De Bange gas check,' and is described by that name in the official reports of the Secretaries of War and of the Navy."

The findings contain certain correspondence which is relied on by the government to sustain its contention, and, as it is not possible to condense it, it is given in full.

Paris, June 29, 1891.

Colonel De Bange to H. E., the Minister Plenipotentiary of the United States.

Mr. Minister:—

In order to respond to the desire expressed by your excellency in the letter which you have done me the honor to address to me, I add some details to my previous observations.

One of my patents bears the number 331,618; it relates to gun carriages; it is not very important, because one can do without it; but the second, No. 301,220, which is connected with the obturation of guns and breech mechanism, is of the highest importance. Without my obturator the loading of a gun by the breech is difficult and the service is rendered ineffectual. The metallic ring used in Germany is far from having its value and imparts to the gun a considerable inferiority. Thus all the makers of cannon are led to employ my invention, either openly or in a disguised form, styled by them improvement. The War and Navy Departments at New York, which are well acquainted with the question, will certainly not contest *the truth of my assertions; they have under their eyes, on trial, guns which speak for themselves.

This is not the first time that I have had to complain of my idea being borrowed without my knowledge, in France or abroad. The English government particularly had taken up my system, and without my having demanded anything, had offered me £20,000 sterling to indemnify me. I refused this offer, it is true, but because, as a French officer, I ought not to aid in the arming of a power which I do not consider as friendly. In part, deprived of my assistance, England has copied me badly, and possesses but a moderate artillery.

In any case, I appeal to the sentiments of equity of the government of the United States, convinced that it will recognize easily the justice of my claim.

Pray accept, etc., etc.,

(Sgd.) Colonel De Bange.

United States Legation,

Naval Attaché,

Paris, July 2d, 1891.

The naval attaché at London suggested in a communication to Mr. Reid, our Minister there, that Colonel De Bange's letter be forwarded to the Navy Department. The Minister, however, referred it to the Secretary of State.

De Bange sent the following letter to the Secretary of the Navy:

Versailles, near Paris, 16/8/91.
Colonel De Bange to Monsieur Benjamin F. Tracy, Secretary of the Navy at Washington.

Mr. Secretary:—

Some months ago I addressed the United States Minister at Paris, verbally and by writing, several remarks on the subject of loans which I had made of my invention to the Departments of War and of the Navy; finally, as I have undertaken to write to you directly, I now have the honor to lay before you the following:

315] *I had taken out letters patent, which treated of artillery in the United States, one number, 301,220, relative to the obturation of guns, and of principal importance; the other number, 331,618, relative to the carriage.

Furthermore, I have seen at Paris many of your officers, to whom I furnished without reserve all the information which they have asked of me.

Under these circumstances I hope that if the government has desired to utilize my inventions, it will inform me; there has been no defect, and I have learned from a reliable source that my systems was copied, unknown to me, by the Departments of War and of the Navy, be it under the disguise of an improvement or be it openly.

I regret that this has occurred, but in any case I consider that an indemnity is due me. If you will have the kindness to notify the government of my claim, I am confident that it will see that justice is accorded me in the indemnity to which I believe myself to be entitled.

Please accept, Mr. Secretary, the expression of sentiments of highest consideration, with which I am

Your obedient servant,

De Bange.

Please reply.

This letter seems also to have been sent to the Department of State, and referred by it to the Secretary of the Navy, as appears from the following letter of the Chief of the Bureau of Ordnance:

Bureau of Ordnance, August 27, 1891.

Respectfully returned to the honorable Secretary of the Navy.

The bureau has not manufactured and is not using any gun carriages which contain principles which could be held as infringing any claims secured in United States patent No. 331,618. The gas check which has been adopted for the naval guns of 6-in. Caliber and upwards *resem- [316] bles in certain features that described in United States patent No. 301,220, issued to Col. De Bange. It also differs from it materially in particulars which are original in this bureau.

I am not in position to give an opinion as to the question of infringement, and have to suggest that the applicant refer the matter to the court of claims.

The bureau will note for the information of the applicant that there are no funds appropriated or available for the payment of any claim that might be allowed by the court of claims, and that it will be necessary for the applicant to go to Congress for relief in the event of a decision being obtained which will warrant such action.

(Sgd.) Wm. M. Folger,

Chief Bureau of Ordnance.

The Navy Department then addressed the Secretary of State as follows:

Navy Department,
Washington, September 3, 1891.

Sir:—

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your communication of the 20th ultimo, inclosing copies of correspondence relating to a claim of Colonel De Bange, a retired officer of the French army, residing in Paris, France, who alleges the use by this government of certain inventions patented by him in guns and gun carriages.

In reply I have to state that the Chief of the Bureau of Ordnance, in this Department, to whom the communication and accompanying papers were referred, reports as follows:

The bureau has not manufactured, and is not using, any gun carriages which contain principles which could be held as infringing any claims described in U. S. patent No. 331,618.

The gas check which has been adopted for the naval guns of 6-inch. caliber and 317]upwards resembles in certain *features that described in U. S. patent 301,220, issued to Colonel De Bange. It also differs from it materially in particulars which were original in this bureau.

In view of the statement made by the Chief of the Bureau of Ordnance, there appears to be no proper ground for the claim of Colonel De Bange.

Very respectfully,

F. M. Ramsay,

Acting Secretary of the Navy.

The Honorable the Secretary of State.

On January 31, 1894, the claimant, by its attorneys, addressed substantially similar letters to the Secretary of War and the Secretary of the Navy, stating its claim for the use of its patented invention, and requesting payment for the use of it. The letters described and extolled the device, and stated that they "deemed it expedient to take a low average price and apply it to all guns." They fixed such price at $200 per gun.

The Secretary of the Navy, on February 10, 1894, in replying, referred to and quoted from the Department's letter of August 20, 1891, and added: "As the status of the case has not been changed since the date of the Department's letter above mentioned, and as the matter has been previously disposed of by the Department, no further consideration of the case appears to be required."

The letter of the claimant's attorneys, however, was the subject of a report and 56 L. ed.

recommendation by the Chief of Bureau of Ordnance, which resulted in the following letters:

Bureau of Ordnance,
December 4, 1894.

Respectfully returned to the Department.

The gas check applied to guns constructed for the Navy is that illustrated in United States letters patent No. 318,093, of May 10, 1885, and so far as this patent *is valid no royalties should be paid.[318 See Court of Claims Reports, p. 334, vol. 23, 1887-88. If, however, as the bureau believes to be the case, the above-mentioned patent is only valid so far as it covers improvements on the De Bange patent (No. 301,220, of July 1, 1884), then, so far as the latter patent is valid, the within claim for royalties, in the bureau's opinion, is a proper one, and would be maintained by the courts.

It must be noted, however, that until recently there has been no authority of law for the payment of royalties out of the naval appropriations, and the manufacture of most of the gas checks in question had been completed prior to the legislation giving such authority. Moreover, the bureau is of opinion that the Davis patent (No. 318,093, of May 19, 1885) covers real and important improvements, without which it is doubtful if the De Bange system would have been adopted for United States naval guns, and consequently it will be necessary to decide as to the relative values of the device in its original and improved forms. The fact that practically the same gas check is in use in all United States Army guns of recent construction, and is being applied to guns now being made by the Bethlehem Iron Company, under contract with the War Department, should also be considered, since independent action on the part of the Navy Department might easily be against the interests of the government.

It is therefore recommended that an investigation be made in regard to the De Bange patent, and if this patent is concluded to be valid, that the War Department be consulted as to whether a definite sum, to be fixed upon either by a board or in some other way, should not be offered the claimants for the right on the part of the government to use the device in question on all its guns.

W. T. Sampson,
Chief of Bureau of Ordnance.

*The final action of the Navy Department upon petitioner's claim was communicated to the petitioner in a letter of the Secretary of the Navy, dated December 31, 1894, as follows:

Navy Department,
Washington, December 31, 1894.

Gentlemen:—

The Department has carefully considered the questions presented in the brief filed by you, as well as in former correspondence, relative to the matter of the claim of the Société Anonyme des Anciens Etablissements Cail for compensation for the use by the United States of a gas check invented by Col. Charles T. W. V. De Bange, of the French army.

It appears that the matter is now in such a condition that it will in all probability involve not only questions arising under the patent issued to Colonel De Bange, but also those growing out of the claims and affecting the rights of other patentees. Under these circumstances the Department is of opinion that the full consideration and determination of these questions can be more certainly and equitably reached, and the rights of all the parties concerned, as well as the government, more definitely ascertained and assured, through the medium of a court of justice. It is therefore suggested that the necessary proceedings for the consideration and adjustment of the matter by the court of claims be instituted.

Very respectfully,

H. A. Herbert, Secretary.

Messrs. Pollock & Mauro,
Attorneys at Law, Washington, D. C.

The final action of the War Department was communicated to claimant's attorneys in a letter dated January 14, 1895, in which the language and suggestion of the Secretary of the Navy were adopted substantially verbatim.

320] *It is not possible to review the arguments by which the claimant asserts and the government denies the sufficiency of the facts as we have related them to constitute an implied contract between the claimant and the government. The ultimate contention of the government is that the mere use of the patentee's invention with his knowledge does not create an implied contract in fact to pay for such use, but "there must be (1) a use of it with the patentee's assent; and there must also be (2) an agreement or meeting of minds on the part of the patentee and on the part of the user as to compensation for the use, even though the amount of the compensation be not fixed." These elements, it is insisted, were present in the Berdan Case, which we have seen was relied on by the court of claims; they are,

it is further insisted, absent in the case at bar.

But these elements do not have to appear by the explicit declaration of the parties. They may be collected from their conduct. The alternative of a contract is important to be kept in mind. The officers of the government knew of the De Bange invention and were aware of its great importance, and the purpose to deliberately take property of another without the intention that he should be compensated—in other words, to do plainly a wrongful act—cannot be imputed to them without the most convincing proof. Such proof does not exist in the present case. On the contrary, the record shows that compensation was contemplated. There was doubt as to the extent of it, because there was doubt as to how far the devices used were attributable to or belonged to De Bange, or whether they constituted an infringement of his patent, and therefore there was hesitancy and doubt, not as to compensation, but as to the amount and extent of it.

We agree with the court of claims that there is resemblance between this case and the Berdan Case. In that case the court had no difficulty in adducing the assent of Berdan to the use of his invention. The court *found more difficulty in infer-[321 ring the assent of the government. The court said, by Mr. Justice Brewer: "While the findings are not so specific and emphatic as to the assent of the government to the terms of any contract, yet we think they are sufficient. There was certainly no denial of the patentee's rights to the invention; no assertion on the part of the government that the patent was wrongfully issued; no claim of a right to use the invention regardless of the patent; no disregard of all claims of the patentee, and no use in spite of protest or remonstrance. Negatively, at least, the findings are clear. The government used the invention with the consent and express permission of the owner, and it did not, while so using it, repudiate the title of such owner."

Like comment may be made of the facts in the case at bar. It is true that the letter of William F. Folger, Chief of the Bureau of Ordnance, stated that while the gas check used by the government resembled in certain features De Bange's gas check, it differed from it materially in particulars which were original in the bureau. But this was not a denial of the use or the utility of De Bange's invention. Whether there was infringement the officer did not decide, but suggested that the "applicant refer the matter to the court of claims." Subsequently the Acting Secretary of the Navy did deny infringement.

But that position was abandoned and the Secretaries of War and the Navy "suggested that the necessary proceedings for the consideration of the adjustment of the matter by the court of claims be instituted." There were parallel circumstances in the Berdan Case

The invention of Berdan was an "extractor-ejector" for use in breech-loading rifles, and that which was used by the government was devised by one of its employees. There was a difference between it and Berdan's device, but the officers of the government doubted if the difference was material, and concluded that it was a matter 322] *for the courts to decide. It is true there was no assertion of right against the Berdan device in consequence of the difference between it and the device used by the government as, it may be said, there was in the case at bar by the letter of Admiral Ramsay of September 3, 1891. But the position taken in that letter was, as we have seen, abandoned, and it was declared that so far as the De Bange patent was valid, its claim for royalties was, in the opinion of the Bureau of Ordnance, a proper one, and would be sustained by the courts. This was in 1894. Prior to that time and afterwards the government continued to use the device. We think the court of claims had jurisdiction.

The government contends that it has not infringed the De Bange patent. Infringement is a question of fact, and as an aid to its solution courts are furnished usually with an expert comparison of the contending devices, their identity or difference of construction and modes of operation. This record is destitute of such testimony. The government contends for the very narrow construction of the patent based on its claims and the prior art. The only proof of the prior art, however, is a reference to thirteen or fourteen patents by number and patentee, some of which are English, some French, and some American. The only explanation of them is in the argument of counsel and an exhibition of the patents. It is very doubtful if we may take notice of even the American patents; more doubtful if we may of the foreign ones. We, however, have considered counsel's explanation of them. They reveal nothing material to be considered that the findings of the court of claims do not show of the prior art and the progress, from its failure to the success of the De Bange invention,—a success, it may be conceded, that availed itself of all that the prior art demonstrated, but went beyond it to the fulfilment that it had not achieved.

The necessity of a gas check to the success 323] of breach *loading guns all could see, 56 L. ed.

and what a device, to be successful, must do; but the world struggled a long time with the problem, and that problem was to find something which would stand the intense heat generated and the great force caused by the explosion of the powder in a high power gun, and the backward escape of the resultant gas under the enormous pressure exerted, and this not in one service of the gun, but in many services. The experiments are detailed in the findings. Metallic cups were tried and paper cups. As early as 1858 India rubber was suggested. Its elasticity, it was thought, would afford all that was necessary for a complete automatic obturation, the gas by its expansion "to seal its own escape."

Rubber had some success when constructed in rings of varying degrees of suppleness and hardness, and seemed to have settled the problem. But defects subsequently developed and experiments continued for something better and which would fulfil all the conditions. Then soap obturators were tried, and finally Colonel De Bange's invention of tallow and asbestos. If our purpose was speculative, not practical, we might pause to wonder how such substances could produce such results under the conditions to which they are subjected, and by wondering we express in a way the quality of the invention. We are told by the findings of the court of claims that a gas check "is subject to a pressure of from 30,000 to 40,000 pounds per square inch, to very high temperatures, to the effects of corrosive gases, and the effects of rapid and violent shocks."

We need not, however, dwell longer on the excellence of the invention. The government has testified to its excellence by using it in the guns intended for the national defense.

But it is contended that the claim of the patent is for a specific combination of elements, and that that combination of elements is not used by the government.

*This contention is based upon what[324 is considered to be the proper construction of claim 1 of the patent, a strict construction being urged of it,—indeed, as we understand the argument, the claim must be confined to the specific forms of its elements, giving the widest latitude to imitation.

The patentee answers the contention. Describing his invention, De Bange calls it "certain new and useful improvements in breech-loading guns." Specifying the improvements, he says that they "apply to breach-loading guns which employ a screw plug having its threads interrupted." Further specifying, he adds: "I have devised a system of packing placed in advance of the plug, and which is expanded by the force of the explosion of the powder to make a tight joint to prevent the leakage of gas." He declares the drawings form a part of the specification, and represent what he considers the best means of carrying out the invention. It is only necessary to give Figures 1, 2, 6, and 7.

sufficient to pack the joint tightly against the escape of gas. This expansion is due to two causes,—the tapering form of the front end of the pin N, which acts on the interior of the packing, and the powerful compression received from the head N'. The expansion from one or both causes is sufficient to press the exterior of the cop-

They are described in the patent as follows: "Figure 1 is a central longitudinal section. The strong lines show the parts ready for firing. The dotted lines show the transverse lever in a position for conveniently operating to turn the screw plug. Fig. 2 is a rear view showing the parts locked. Fig. 3 is a corresponding view showing the parts unlocked. . . . Figs. 6 and 7 represent the packing ring detached. Fig. 6 is a face view, and Fig. 7 a section in the plane of the axis." The specification then proceeds as follows:

"A liberal hole in the line of the axis of the screw plug B carries a stout sliding pin, N, at the extreme front of which is a stout head, N'. The portion of the body adjacent to the head N' is slightly enlarged. The head N' is adapted to receive the force of the powder at the discharge. At the moment of the discharge this head moves backward, compressing a relatively soft and expansible packing ring, M, behind it. Certain portions of this ring will be distinguished, when necessary, by additional marks, as M' M². The body M' of this packing is of asbestos saturated with tallow, and affords a sufficiently yielding mass with the required capacity for enduring heat and for withstanding the very strong compressive force to which it is subjected by the discharge. It is inclosed between two thin shells, M² M², of copper, one fitting the body M' on the inner and the other on the outer side, and nearly incasing the entire packing. Both the body M' and the copper M² are then inclosed between two strong shells of brass, M³ M³. The entire packing thus made is adapted to maintain its form, but to allow a small amount of radial expansion suf-per M² tightly against the interior of the gun, thus effectually preventing any leakage of gas."

Claim 1 is the important one and is as follows:

"1. The partially-threaded plug B, headed pin N N', extending through said plug, and the yielding packing M, arranged between the head N' and the inner end of the plug, in combination with each other and with the gun A, arranged as shown, to allow the pin to be driven rearward and compress the packing, as herein specified."

It will be observed, therefore, that De Bange declared that what he devised was a "system of packing" which, by the force of the explosion of the powder, is expanded to make a tight joint to prevent the leakage of gas. The mechanical parts are but aids to this result, securing in place the packing and enabling its qualities to operate, enabling it to maintain its form, but to allow radial expansion sufficient "to pack the joint tightly against the escape of gas." This expansion has also the effect of pressing "the copper (M²)" against the interior of the gun, and co-operates to prevent the leakage of gas.

That this packing constitutes the very essence of the invention is declared in all of the literature on the subject and recognized in all of the government publications. The government now contends for a limitation of it, and insists that it consists of "a yielding packing M," exactly as described, although the description is declared by De Bange to represent "the best means of carrying out his invention," and he declares also that "modifications could be used in the forms and proportions."

We cannot therefore assent to the contention of the government, and in rejecting it we do not render "the claim elastic and indefinite where it should be certain." We preserve that which was declared to be and which has always been recognized to be the invention, and by those competent to declare, whose duty it was to comprehend and estimate, not only the result achieved, but by what achieved.

In the description furnished by De Bange to Commander Chadwick a covering of cloth is described. The description in the Ordinance Notes of April 20, 1883, mentions "plates of tin, strengthened at the edges 327] by thin brass *rings." Another description speaks of "a metallic split ring." These are but details. As said by the court of claims, through Booth, J., "The invention described by the language of the claim was the yielding pad of asbestos and tallow." And this, the learned judge also said, predominates as the one "central idea" in every description of the patent in either the specifications or claim.

We learn from the court that it heard much expert testimony, and in its opinion it considers two subsequent patents expressed to be improvements on the De Bange patent. One of these was issued to James B. Davis and the other to Gregory Gerdorn. The difference between them and the De Bange patent was commented on, and it was said that the record disclosed that in all inventions subsequent to De Bange's "the pad of asbestos and tallow is the functioning element of the device, without which its utility is as nothing;" and that a pad of that composition supplied "the necessary expansion, indispensable to forward the operation of both the Davis and Gerdorn patents. The United States used the Gerdorn patent and paid him substantial royalties for its use."

It would seem, therefore, that the contention of the government turns upon a question of fact found against it by the court below; that is, it was found that the particular envelop of the tallow and asbestos pad were not essential features of De Bange's invention, and that the substitution of steel rings for brass rings could be an infringement of the invention. As said by counsel for claimant, claim 1 "does not recite among its elements the materials whereof the envelop [of the pad] and rings are made. . . . It is, on the contrary, obvious that any suitable material may be used for these subsidiary parts." It is conceded that the pliable copper envelop (M²) may be properly regarded as a part of the "yielding packing." The patentee so states, but he does not say that the "strong shells of brass M² M³ are parts" 56 L. ed.

of it. *It would indeed be arbitrary, [328 as said by claimant, to read into the claim the specific metal of which those shells are composed "for no other purpose than to render it [the claim] worthless."

We have seen De Bange describe what he conceived to be the best form of his invention, and contemplated that it could be represented in other forms and proportions. This, however, was unnecessary, for the law would secure him against imitation by other forms and proportions. Winans v. Denmead, 15 How. 330, 14 L. ed. 717; Hotchkiss v. Greenwood, 11 How. 248, 265, 13 L. ed. 683, 690; Western Electric Co. v. La Rue, 139 U. S. 601, 608, 35 L. ed. 294, 297, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 670.

We think, therefore, that the court of claims rightfully decided the question of infringement against the government.

The cross appeal of claimant is directed to the question of damages.

In the original petition filed by it on January 31, 1895, damages were laid at $140,000. There was no traverse filed until October, 1907. An amended petition was filed April 12, 1909, and judgment was prayed for $1,447,667.98. In this petition it was alleged that the invention was used upon 1,518 guns of various calibers within the six years next preceding the filing of the original petition, the number which was used by the Army and that used by the Navy being given. The total cost of the guns was stated to be $18,226,-263. There is no finding responding to these allegations. The opinion of the court was filed December 2, 1907, that is, before the filing of the amended position. The opinion contains the following statement: "There is no testimony in the record upon which the quantum of damages can be predicated. The measure of damages would be the value of the device to the defendants. Following the precedents heretofore established, the case will stand upon the docket, with leave to furnish testimony upon this point."

*On the 20th of May, 1909, judgment [329 was rendered for claimant in the sum of $136,000. Each party moved for an amendment to the findings, which were overruled in part and allowed in part. The former findings were withdrawn and amended findings of fact filed. No exception appears to have been taken to this action. Indeed, the record does not furnish us with a comparison between the findings which were withdrawn and those filed. There is nothing to show upon what the court's ruling was invoked.

A motion was presented to this court April 25, 1910, to remand the case to the court of claims, and that that court be instructed to find and certify as matters of fact, in addition to the facts found, in regard to the cost of the guns in which the De Bange obturators were used, the amount the government paid or contracted to pay for patented improvements in breech-loading mechanism for ordnance, and whether there appears in the record the testimony of experts as to the value of the De Bange device, or what would be a reasonable compensation for its use, and, if so, to state the amounts of such estimates.

It was further moved that the court of claims be instructed to strike out certain matters in the findings which were described to be evidentiary. The motion was postponed to the hearing, and is now to be considered. The motion is, in effect, for a direction to the court of claims to certify the evidence to this court, and not its conclusions from the evidence. This is clearly in contravention of the rule of this court which requires the record on appeal from the court of claims to contain a finding by the court "of the facts in the case established by the evidence in the nature of a special verdict, but not the evidence establishing it."

Besides, as we have seen, the record does not disclose what ruling was invoked. We 330] can only act upon the *record, and that shows a finding of the court upon the question of compensation, to which finding there was no objection taken nor exception reserved. The finding determines the matter, being in the nature of a special verdict of a jury. United States v. New York Indians, 173 U. S. 464, 43 L. ed. 769, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 464.

Ceballos v. United States, 214 U. S. 47, 53 L. ed. 904, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 583, is not applicable. There was a contract of which there could be no dispute, and therefore a motion to embrace it in the record from the court of claims was granted and the case reviewed in the light thereof.

The motion to remand the case is therefore denied.

Judgment affirmed.

CITY OF POMONA et al., Appts.,

v.

SUNSET TELEPHONE & TELEGRAPH COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 330-346.)

Appeal — jurisdiction of circuit court of appeals.

1. A circuit court of appeals has jurisdiction to review a decree of a Federal circuit court, dismissing a bill to restrain a municipality from removing the poles and wires of a telephone and telegraph company from the city streets, and from preventing the placing of further poles and wires therein, on the ground that the company had rights under the act of July 24, 1866 (14 Stat. at L. 221, chap. 230, Rev. Stat. §§ 5263 et seq., U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3579), that were infringed, and that the conduct of the city has given rise to a contract protected against impairment.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, III. c. in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — impairing contract obligations — corporate franchise.

2. No grant to a telephone company of the right to occupy the streets of a city without its consent, which will be protected by the contract clause of the Federal Constitution, can be deduced from the amendment of October 10, 1911, to Cal. Const. art. 11, § 19, under which persons or corporations may establish and operate works for supplying the inhabitants of a municipality with telephone service "upon such conditions and under such regulations as the municipality may prescribe under its organic law, on condition that the municipal government shall have the right to regulate the charges."

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 1201-1213, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — impairing contract obligations — corporate franchise — repeal.

3. A telephone company can claim no contract right under the amendment of March 20, 1905, to Cal. Civ. Code, § 536, to occupy the streets of a city for local business without the city's consent, in view of the passage, before the date when such amendment by its terms was to go into effect, of the franchise act of March 22, 1905, taking effect immediately, and providing that every franchise to erect or lay telephone wires, except "telephone lines doing an interstate business," shall be granted upon the conditions named in such act, which leaves franchise grants generally to the local subdivisions concerned, and con-

NOTE.—On the privilege of using streets as a contract within the constitutional provision against impairing the obligation of contracts—see note to Clarksburg Electric Light Co. v. Clarksburg, 50 L.R.A. 142.

As to what laws are void as impairing obligation of contracts—see notes to Franklin County Grammar School v. Bailey, 10 L.R.A. 405; Fletcher v. Peck, 3 L. ed. U. S. 162; McCanna & F. Co. v. Citizens' Trust & Surety Co. 24 C. C. A. 20; and Montana Ore-Purchasing Co. v. Boston & M. Consol. Copper & S. Min. Co. 35 C. C. A. 12.

On the jurisdiction of the circuit courts of appeals—see notes to Lau Ow Bew v. United States, 1 C. C. A. 6, and United States Freehold Land & Emigration Co. v. Gallegos, 32 C. C. A. 475.

tains a general repealing clause naming certain exceptions, of which § 536 is not one. [For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 1201-1213, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Constitutional law — impairing contract obligations — corporate franchise.

4. A contract right to maintain only through interstate telephone wires in the city streets, and not to maintain the poles and wires connecting local subscribers, is all that can be gathered from the exceptions in favor of "telephone lines doing interstate business," made by Cal. act of March 22, 1905, which repealed, before it took effect, the act of March 20, 1905, amending Cal. Civ. Code, § 536, so as to include telephone companies among the corporations which could occupy the city streets without municipal consent.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, 1201-1213, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 215.]

Argued March 14 and 15, 1912. Decided April 8, 1912.

APPEAL from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit to review a decree which, reversing a decree of the Circuit Court for the Southern District of California, enjoined a municipality from removing telephone poles and wires from the city streets, and from preventing the placing of further poles and wires therein. Reversed, with directions to dismiss the bill without prejudice.

See same case below, 97 C. C. A. 251, 172 Fed. 829.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. John W. Shenk and William J. Carr argued the cause, and, with Messrs. C. W. Guerin, Robert G. Loucks, W. B. Mathews, Leslie R. Hewitt, J. P. Wood, and J. W. Joos, filed a brief for appellants:

If the claim of rights by the company under the act of July 24, 1866, presents a question for Federal jurisdiction, an appeal would lie to the circuit court of appeals under § 6, and that court would decide the whole case or certify the constitutional questions also involved to the Supreme Court, and proceed as thereupon advised, or an appeal would lie directly to the Supreme Court under § 5 of the judiciary act.

Carter v. Roberts, 177 U. S. 496, 44 L. ed. 861, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 713; American Sugar Ref. Co. v. New Orleans, 181 U. S. 277, 45 L. ed. 859, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 646.

If the claim of the company under the act of July 24, 1866, does not present a question for Federal jurisdiction, the Supreme Court has exclusive jurisdiction of this appeal.

56 L. ed.

Union & Planters' Bank v. Memphis, 189 U. S. 71, 47 L. ed. 712, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 604.

The act of July 24, 1866, has been so thoroughly construed by the Supreme Court of the United States that appellee's claim under it has been determined and is no longer a Federal question.

Richmond v. Southern Bell Teleph. & Teleg. Co. 174 U. S. 761, 777, 778, 43 L. ed. 1162, 1168, 1169, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 778; St. Louis v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 148 U. S. 93, 37 L. ed. 381, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485; St. Louis v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 149 U. S. 465, 37 L. ed. 810, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 990; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 195 U. S. 540, 49 L. ed. 312, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 133, 1 Ann. Cas. 517; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 195 U. S. 594, 49 L. ed. 332, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 150, 1 Ann. Cas. 533; Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Baltimore, 79 Md. 502, 24 L.R.A. 161, 29 Atl. 819, 156 U. S. 210, 39 L. ed. 399, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 356; Toledo v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 52 L.R.A. 730, 46 C. C. A. 111, 107 Fed. 10; Cumberland Teleph. & Teleg. Co. v. Evansville, 127 Fed. 187.

The Federal courts will not recognize a claim for Federal jurisdiction when the same legal points involved have been determined by the Supreme Court.

Hannis Distilling Co. v. Baltimore, 216 U. S. 285, 54 L. ed. 482, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 326; McGilvra v. Ross, 215 U. S. 70, 54 L. ed. 95, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 27; Leonard v. Vicksburg, S. & P. R. Co. 198 U. S. 416, 422, 49 L. ed. 1108, 1111, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 750; Myrtle v. Nevada, C. & O. R. Co. 137 Fed. 193; Pacific Electric R. Co. v. Los Angeles, 194 U. S. 112, 48 L. ed. 896, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 586; Newburyport Water Co. v. Newburyport, 193 U. S. 561, 576, 48 L. ed. 795, 799, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 553.

The obstruction of a public street or highway is a common nuisance.

Lewiston Turnp. Co. v. Shasta & Wagon Road Co. 41 Cal. 562; Siskiyou Lumber & Mercantile Co. v. Rostel, 121 Cal. 511, 53 Pac. 1118; Marini v. Graham, 67 Cal. 130, 7 Pac. 442; Taylor v. Reynolds, 92 Cal. 573, 28 Pac. 688; Vanderhurst v. Tholcke, 113 Cal. 147, 35 L.R.A. 267, 45 Pac. 266; Southern P. Co. v. Pomona, 144 Cal. 339, 77 Pac. 929; Coverdale v. Edwards, 155 Ind. 383, 58 N. E. 495; Valparaiso v. Bozarth, 153 Ind. 536, 47 L.R.A. 487, 55 N. E. 439; Baumgartner v. Hasty, 100 Ind. 575, 50 Am. Rep. 830; Indianapolis v. Miller, 27 Ind. 394; American Rapid Teleg. Co. v. Hess, 125 N. Y. 641, 13 L.R.A. 454, 21 Am. St. Rep. 764, 26 N. E. 919; Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. v. Buffalo, 158 N. Y. 266, 53 N. E. 44:

Daublin v. New Orleans, 1 Mart. (La.) 185.

No user or lapse of time can legalize such a nuisance.

People v. Gold Run Ditch & Min. Co. 66 Cal. 138, 56 Am. Rep. 80, 4 Pac. 1152; Ex parte Taylor, 87 Cal. 91, 25 Pac. 258; Bowen v. Wendt, 103 Cal. 236, 37 Pac. 149; Cloverdale v. Smith, 128 Cal. 230, 60 Pac. 851; Webb v. Demopolis, 95 Ala. 116, 21 L.R.A. 62, 13 So. 289.

It devolves upon the company to justify the use of the streets by its poles and lines.

Sunset Teleph. & Teleg. Co. v. Pasadena, 42 Cal. Dec. 593, 118 Pac. 796; Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. v. Buffalo, 158 N. Y. 266, 53 N. E. 44.

The interstate commerce clause of the Constitution does not in itself confer upon the company the right to appropriate for the maintenance of its system portions of the streets of the city of Pomona. Competent authority from the state, therefore, is necessary.

Sunset Teleph. & Teleg. Co. v. Pasadena, supra; Northwestern Teleph. Exch. Co. v. St. Charles, 154 Fed. 386.

The expenditure of money by the company and the extension of its system, even though with the consent or at the request of the city, furnishes no authority to the company to maintain its lines. The mode whereby the city may contract or grant a privilege being prescribed, that mode constitutes the measure of the city's power in such respect, and any right granted or claimed otherwise is a mere nullity. Estoppel will not lie against the city in such case to deny the existence of the contract or privilege.

People ex rel. Dean v. Contra Costa County, 122 Cal. 422, 55 Pac. 131; Pacific Electric R. Co. v. Los Angeles, 194 U. S. 112, 48 L. ed. 896, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 586; Pelham v. Pelham Teleph. Co. 131 Ga. 325, 62 S. E. 186; Tri-State Teleph. & Teleg. Co. v. Thief River Falls, 183 Fed. 854; Zottman v. San Francisco, 20 Cal. 96, 81 Am. Dec. 96; Times Pub. Co. v. Weatherby, 139 Cal. 618, 73 Pac. 465; Frick v. Los Angeles, 115 Cal. 512, 47 Pac. 250; Wichmann v. Placerville, 147 Cal. 164, 81 Pac. 537; Santa Cruz Rock Pavement Co. v. Broderick, 113 Cal. 628, 45 Pac. 863; McCoy v. Briant, 53 Cal. 247; French v. Teschemaker, 24 Cal. 550; Brady v. New York, 16 How. Pr. 444; Arnott v. Spokane, 6 Wash. 442, 33 Pac. 1063; Chippewa Bridge Co. v. Durand, 122 Wis. 85, 106 Am. St. Rep. 931, 99 N. W. 603; Murphy v. Louisville, 9 Bush, 189; Jersey City Supply Co. v. Jersey City, 71 N. J. L. 631, 60 Atl. 381, 2 Ann. Cas. 507; Providence

v. Providence Electric Light Co. 122 Ky. 237, 91 S. W. 664.

No rights were acquired by the company under § 536 of the Civil Code prior to its repeal and re-enactment in 1905. The word "telegraph," as therein used, does not include "telephone."

Sunset Teleph. & Teleg. Co. v. Pasadena, 42 Cal. Dec. 593, 118 Pac. 796; Richmond v. Southern Bell Teleph. & Teleg. Co. 174 U. S. 761, 773, 775, 43 L. ed. 1163, 1167, 1168, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 778; Cumberland Teleph. & Teleg. Co. v. Evansville, 127 Fed. 187; Toledo v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 52 L.R.A. 730, 46 C. C. A. 111, 107 Fed. 10, Sunset Teleph. & Teleg. Co. v. Pomona, 164 Fed. 573, 97 C. C. A. 251, 172 Fed. 838; Home Teleg. Co. v. Nashville, 118 Tenn. 1, 101 S. W. 770, 11 Ann. Cas. 824; Suburban Light & P. Co. v. Boston, 153 Mass. 200, 10 L.R.A. 497, 26 N. E. 447.

Where two acts are inconsistent, and both are otherwise valid, one previously passed which takes effect sixty days after its passage is impliedly repealed by an inconsistent act passed one day later, which takes effect immediately.

Ex parte Sohnecke, 148 Cal. 262, 2 L.R.A. (N.S.) 813, 113 Am. St. Rep. 236, 82 Pac. 956, 7 Ann. Cas. 475.

When a negative statute is subsequent in time to an affirmative statute, such as § 536 of the Civil Code, the courts will not feel the same reluctance, or experience the same difficulty, in holding that the latter repeals the former, as in the case of two affirmative statutes.

Lewis's Sutherland, Stat. Constr. 2d ed. § 248.

The various decisions of the state supreme court upon Cal. Laws 1905, p. 777, and the franchise acts preceding it, give to this line of legislation a scope and effect entirely inconsistent with the idea that such act is not repugnant to § 536 of the Civil Code.

Horton v. Los Angeles, 119 Cal. 602, 51 Pac. 956; People ex rel. Dean v. Contra Costa County, 122 Cal. 421, 55 Pac. 131; Pereria v. Wallace, 129 Cal. 397, 62 Pac. 61; Los Angeles v. Davidson, 150 Cal. 59, 88 Pac. 42; McGinnis v. San Jose, 153 Cal. 711, 96 Pac. 367.

The lines of the company in Pomona which were destroyed or threatened by the city were not lines doing an interstate business, within the meaning of the exception in Cal. Laws 1905, p. 777.

Lewis's Sutherland, Stat. Constr. 2d ed. § 352; People ex rel. Pierce v. Morrill, 26 Cal. 336; Southern Bell Teleph. & Teleg. Co. v. D'Alemberte, 39 Fla. 25, 21 So. 571; New York ex rel. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Knight, 192 U. S. 21, 48 L. ed. 325, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 202; Sunset Teleph. & Teleg.

Co. v. Pasadena, 42 Cal. Dec. 593, 118 Pac. 796.

The burden was on the company to show that its lines were doing an interstate business.

New York ex rel. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Knight, 192 U. S. 21, 48 L. ed. 325, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 202.

The exception of telegraph or telephone lines doing an interstate business, contained in Cal. Stat. 1905, p. 777, is not in itself a grant of a franchise to construct and maintain such lines. It is not the function of an exception or proviso to confer power or grant a privilege.

Chicago v. Phoenix Ins. Co. 126 Ill. 276, 18 N. E. 668; Com. ex rel. Harper v. Hough, 22 Pa. Co. Ct. 440; Sunset Teleph. & Teleg. Co. v. Pasadena, 42 Cal. Dec. 593, 118 Pac. 796.

Section 19 of art. 11 of the California Constitution, as amended on October 10, 1911, is not to be construed as a blanket grant of a franchise from the state to use the streets of municipalities for the operation of telephone lines and the works of the other utilities mentioned. On the contrary, the section as amended repealed in toto § 536 of the Civil Code as re-enacted in 1905.

Sunset Teleph. & Teleg. Co. v. Pasadena, 42 Cal. Dec. 593, 118 Pac. 796; State ex rel. Spokane & B. C. Teleph. & Teleg. Co. v. Spokane, 24 Wash. 53, 63 Pac. 1116; Blair v. Chicago, 201 U. S. 400, 50 L. ed. 801, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427; Louisville Trust Co. v. Cincinnati, 22 C. C. A. 334, 47 U. S. App. 36, 76 Fed. 296; Chicago General R. Co. v. Chicago, 176 Ill. 253, 66 L.R.A. 959, 68 Am. St. Rep. 188, 52 N. E. 880, Providence v. Union R. Co. 12 R. I. 473; Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. v. Detroit, 26 L.R.A. 667, 12 C. C. A. 365, 22 U. S. App. 570, 64 Fed. 628.

A decree granting an injunction, based upon a law repealed after the entry of such decree, but prior to the determination of the appeal therefrom, will not be affirmed.

Cooley, Const. Lim. 6th ed. 469; 3 Cyc. 407, 408; United States v. The Peggy, 1 Cranch, 103-110, 2 L. ed. 49-51; Yeaton v. United States, 5 Cranch, 281, 3 L. ed. 101; Mills v. Green, 159 U. S. 651, 656, 657, 40 L. ed. 293-295, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 132; Dinsmore v. Southern Exp. Co. 183 U. S. 115-120, 46 L. ed. 111-113, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 45; Linn County v. Hewitt, 55 Iowa, 505, 8 N. W. 340; Vance v. Rankin, 194 Ill. 627, 88 Am. St. Rep. 173, 62 N. E. 807; Wade v. St. Mary's Industrial School, 43 Md. 178; Muskogee Nat. Teleph. Co. v. Hall, 4 Ind. Terr. 18, 64 S. W. 604. New Orleans Flour Inspectors v. Glover, 56 L. ed.

160 U. S. 170, 40 L. ed. 382, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 321.

The repeal of § 536 of the Civil Code as re-enacted in 1905 by the amendment of § 19 of art. 11, of the Constitution adopted on October 10, 1911, neither impairs the obligation of any contract of the company, arising under § 536, nor assails any of its vested rights.

Shields v. Ohio, 95 U. S. 319, 24 L. ed. 357; Hamilton Gaslight & Coke Co. v. Hamilton, 146 U. S. 258, 36 L. ed. 963, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 90; San Antonio Traction Co. v. Altegelt, 200 U. S. 304, 50 L. ed. 491, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 261; Bienville Water Supply Co. v. Mobile, 186 U. S. 212, 46 L. ed. 1132, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 820.

Mr. Alfred Sutro argued the cause, and, with Mr. E. S. Pillsbury, filed a brief for appellee:

The circuit court of appeals had jurisdiction to hear and determine the appeal from the circuit court.

Chicago Junction R. Co. v. King, 222 U. S. 222, ante, 173, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 79; Spreckels Sugar Ref. Co. v. McClain, 192 U. S. 397, 407, 48 L. ed. 496, 499, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 376; Carter v. Roberts, 177 U. S. 496, 500, 44 L. ed. 861, 863, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 713; Robinson v. Caldwell, 165 U. S. 359, 361, 41 L. ed. 745, 746, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 343; Re Can Pon, 93 C. C. A. 635, 168 Fed. 479; Hooper v. Remmel, 91 C. C. A. 322, 165 Fed. 336; Campbell v. Golden Cycle Min. Co. 73 C. C. A. 260, 141 Fed. 612; Mills v. Provident Life & Trust Co. 40 C. C. A. 394, 100 Fed. 348.

Section 536 of the Civil Code is a grant of right by the state to telephone and telegraph corporations to use the highways of the state for their lines.

Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Hopkins, 160 Cal. 106, 116 Pac. 560; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Los Angeles County, 160 Cal. 124, 116 Pac. 564; Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Los Angeles County, 160 Cal. 129, 116 Pac. 566; Sunset Teleph. & Teleg. Co. v. Pasadena, — Cal. —, 118 Pac. 796; New Union Teleph. Co. v. Marsh, 96 App. Div. 122, 89 N. Y. Supp. 81; State ex rel. Wisconsin Teleph. Co. v. Sheboygan, 111 Wis. 23, 86 N. W. 660, 114 Wis. 505, 90 N. W. 441; Abbott v. Duluth, 104 Fed. 833, 55 C. C. A. 153, 117 Fed. 137; Duluth v. Duluth Teleph. Co. 84 Minn. 486, 87 N. W. 1127; Northwestern Teleph. Exch. Co. v. Minneapolis, 81 Minn. 140, 53 L.R.A. 175, 83 N. W. 527, 86 N. W. 69; Wichita v. Old Colony Trust Co. 66 C. C. A. 19, 132 Fed. 641; Wichita v. Missouri & K. Teleph. Co. 70 Kan. 441, 78 Pac. 886; State ex rel. Rocky Mountain Bell Teleph. Co. v. Red Lodge, 30 Mont. 338, 76 Pac. 758; Chamberlain v

Iowa Teleph. Co. 119 Iowa, 619, 93 N. W. 596; State v. Nebraska Teleph. Co. 127 Iowa, 194, 103 N. W. 120; Michigan Teleph. Co. v. Benton Harbor, 121 Mich. 512, 47 L.R.A. 104, 80 N. W. 386; Farmer v. Columbiana County Teleph. Co. 72 Ohio St. 526, 74 N. E. 1078; Carthage v. Central New York Teleph. & Teleg. Co. 185 N. Y. 448, 78 N. E. 165; Gannett v. Independent Teleph. Co. 55 Misc. 555, 106 N. Y. Supp. 3; Texarkana v. Southwestern Teleg. & Teleph. Co. 48 Tex. Civ. App. 16, 106 S. W. 915; Missouri River Teleph. Co. v. Mitchell, 22 S. D. 191, 116 N. W. 67; Hodges v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 72 Miss. 910, 29 L.R.A. 770, 18 So. 84.

The word "highways" in § 536 includes the streets of cities and towns in California.

Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Hopkins, 160 Cal. 106, 116 Pac. 562; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Visalia, 149 Cal. 746, 87 Pac. 1023; Niles v. Los Angeles, 125 Cal. 576, 58 Pac. 190; Smith v. San Luis Obispo, 95 Cal. 469, 30 Pac. 591.

The provisions of the franchise act of 1905 are not inconsistent with those of § 536 of the Civil Code as re-enacted in 1905, because § 536 is a grant of franchise, and the franchise act of 1905 only provides the method by which franchises must be granted; it contains no delegation of power to grant franchises.

Sunset Teleph. & Teleg. Co. v. Pasadena, — Cal. —, 118 Pac. 799.

The power to grant franchises for the use of the highways in a city inheres, of course, in the state.

Re Johnston, 137 Cal. 122, 69 Pac. 973; Thomason v. Ruggles, 69 Cal. 465, 11 Pac. 20; South Pasadena v. Los Angeles Terminal R. Co. 109 Cal. 315, 41 Pac. 1093.

The delegation to a municipal corporation of the power to grant franchises must clearly appear before the right to exercise the power may be asserted. Any reasonable doubt concerning the existence of the power is to be resolved against the municipal corporation.

Von Schmidt v. Widber, 105 Cal. 151, 38 Pac. 693; Glass v. Ashbury, 49 Cal. 571; State ex rel. Wisconsin Teleph. Co. v. Sheboygan, 111 Wis. 23, 86 N. W. 661; Los Angeles City Water Co. v. Los Angeles, 88 Fed. 720.

It is true that a rule of construction is to be found to the effect that a qualifying clause is ordinarily to be confined in its operation to its immediate antecedent. But this rule does not apply where a consideration of the subject-matter requires a different construction.

Greenough v. Phoenix Ins. Co. 206 Mass.

247, 138 Am. St. Rep. 383, 92 N. E. 449.

And the rule is that a qualifying clause following several clauses may be applied to all of them, if applicable, or to the last one, as best accords with the purpose and spirit of the act.

State v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 97 Miss. 35, 51 So. 918, 53 So. 455.

The phrase "hereafter proposed to be granted" qualifies every franchise or privilege mentioned in the first section of the act.

Los Angeles v. Davidson, 150 Cal. 59, 88 Pac. 42.

The legislature of California, by providing in the franchise act that all acts or parts of acts "in conflict herewith" are hereby repealed, has thereby implied very strongly that there may be acts on the same subject which are not thereby repealed.

Hess v. Reynolds, 113 U. S. 73, 79, 28 L. ed. 927, 929, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 377.

By so providing the legislature, in passing the later act, had the question of repeal under consideration, and gave expression to the extent of its intention in that regard in § 11 of the act, which shows the repeal of the former acts to be only in so far as they are inconsistent with the provisions of the later act.

Bank of British N. A. v. Cahn, 79 Cal. 465, 21 Pac. 863.

The implication of repeal cannot arise when the revisory statute itself prescribes its operation upon the previous act; when that is done no other effect can be given to the revisory act.

Patterson v. Tatum, 3 Sawy. 164, Fed. Cas. No. 10,830.

Any repeal of § 536 of the Civil Code by the franchise act of 1905 could have been only by implication. Such repeals are not favored, and occur only in cases of clear and irreconcilable conflict.

United States v. Morgan, 222 U. S. 274, ante, 198, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 82; Wood County v. Lackawana Iron & Coal Co. 93 U. S. 619, 624, 23 L. ed. 989, 991; Wood v. United States, 16 Pet. 342, 362, 10 L. ed. 987, 995; Distilled Spirits, 11 Wall. 356, 365, 20 L. ed. 167, 170; Henderson's Tobacco (United States v. Henderson) 11 Wall. 652, 20 L. ed. 235; Arthur v. Homer, 96 U. S. 137, 140, 24 L. ed. 811, 812; Chew Heong v. United States, 112 U. S. 536, 549, 28 L. ed. 770, 773, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Frost v. Wienie, 157 U. S. 46, 58, 39 L. ed. 614, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 532; United States v. Greathouse, 166 U. S. 601, 605, 41 L. ed. 1130, 1131, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 701; Cope v. Cope, 137 U. S. 682, 686, 34 L. ed. 832, 833, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 222; Wetzell v. Paducah, 117 Fed. 647; Merrill v. Gorham, 6 Cal. 41; Soher v. Calaveras County, 39 Cal. 134; Malone v. Bosch, 104 Cal. 683, 38 Pac. 516; Banks v. Yolo County, 104 Cal. 258, 37 Pac. 900; Hilton v. Curry, 124 Cal. 84, 56 Pac. 784; Thompson v. Alameda County, 111 Cal. 556, 44 Pac. 230; Rowe v. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. 134 Cal. 406, 66 Pac. 569.

Section 536 of the Civil Code was re-enacted at the same session of the legislature and at about the same time that the franchise act of 1905 was passed. This circumstance is a strong argument against the repeal by implication of the former by the latter.

State ex rel. Hendricks County v. Marion County, — Ind. —, 85 N. E. 513; State ex rel. Hay v. Hindson, 40 Mont. 353, 106 Pac. 364; State ex rel. Scholl v. Duncan, 162 Ala. 196, 50 So. 265; Stubblefield v. Menzies, 8 Sawy. 41, 11 Fed. 276.

Pomona is a part of the interstate telephone system of the appellee, extending throughout the state of California and into many parts of the states of Nevada, Oregon, and Washington.

United States v. Southern R. Co. 164 Fed. 349; United States v. Pittsburgh, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. 143 Fed. 360; United States v. Northern P. Terminal Co. 144 Fed. 861; United States v. Great Northern R. Co. 145 Fed. 438.

Without excluding interstate telephone lines from its operation, the act of March 22, 1905, would be unconstitutional.

Muscogee Nat. Teleph. Co. v. Hall, 55 C. C. A. 208, 118 Fed. 382; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Pendleton, 122 U. S. 347, 30 L. ed. 1187, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 306, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1126; Re Pennsylvania Teleph. Co. — N. J. Eq. —, 20 Atl. 846; South Pasadena v. Los Angeles Terminal R. Co. 109 Cal. 315, 41 Pac. 1093; People ex rel. San Francisco & S. J. R. Co. v. Craycroft, 111 Cal. 544, 44 Pac. 463.

The appellee has the right, under § 19 of the Constitution of the state of California, as amended October 10, 1911, to use the streets of the city of Pomona for its telephone system without a special franchise therefor from the city.

People v. Stephens, 62 Cal. 235; Re Johnston, 137 Cal. 119, 69 Pac. 973; Denninger v. Recorder's Ct. 145 Cal. 638, 79 Pac. 364; Stockton Gas & Electric Co. v. San Joaquin County, 148 Cal. 318, 5 L.R.A. (N.S.) 174, 83 Pac. 54, 7 Ann. Cas. 511; San Francisco v. Oakland Water Co. 148 Cal. 333, 83 Pac. 61; People ex rel. Los Angeles v. Los Angeles Independent Gas Co. 150 Cal. 557, 89 Pac. 108.

Any repeal of § 536, as re-enacted in 1905, by subdivision 19 of art. 11 of the Constitution, as amended October 10, 1911, 56 L. ed.

would necessarily be without prejudice to the rights of the appellee under § 536. Those rights constitute a contract between the appellee and the state which is not subject to impairment by the state, either through its legislature, or by the people in their Constitution.

Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Hopkins, 160 Cal. 106, 116 Pac. 563.

Subdivisions 4 and 13 of § 764 of the municipal corporation act did not, nor does subdivision 58 of § 54 of its charter, confer upon the city of Pomona the power to grant or refuse a franchise to telegraph or telephone companies.

Wichita v. Missouri & K. Teleph. Co. 70 Kan. 441, 78 Pac. 888; State ex rel. Rocky Mountain Bell Teleph. Co. v. Red Lodge, 30 Mont. 338, 76 Pac. 760; Re Johnston, 137 Cal. 115, 69 Pac. 973; Abbott v. Duluth, 104 Fed. 833; Wichita v. Old Colony Trust Co. 66 C. C. A. 19, 132 Fed. 641; Chamberlain v. Iowa Teleph. Co. 119 Iowa, 619, 93 N. W. 599; State ex rel. Wisconsin Teleph. Co. v. Sheboygan, 111 Wis. 23, 86 N. W. 657; Michigan Teleph. Co. v. Benton Harbor, 121 Mich. 512, 47 L.R.A. 104, 80 N. W. 386; Carthage v. Central New York Teleph. & Teleg. Co. 185 N. Y. 448, 113 Am. St. Rep. 932, 78 N. E. 165; Texarkana v. Southwestern Teleg. & Teleph. Co. 48 Tex. Civ. App. 16, 106 N. W. 915; Bishop v. Riddle, 51 Tex. Civ. App. 317, 113 S. W. 153.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a bill brought by the appellee, a California corporation, to restrain the city of Pomona from removing the appellee's poles and wires from the streets of the city, and from preventing the appellee's placing further poles and wires in the streets. The circuit court dismissed the bill (164 Fed. 561), but the decree was reversed and an injunction granted by the circuit court of appeals. 97 C. C. A. 251, 172 Fed. 829. Two of the grounds originally relied upon were that the appellee, being a telegraph as well as a telephone company, had rights under the act of Congress of July 24, 1866, chap. 230, 14 Stat. at L. 221 (Rev. Stat. §§ 5263 et seq. U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3579), that were infringed, and that the conduct of the city had given rise to a contract. These are no longer pressed, but they warranted taking the case to the circuit court of appeals. Spreckels Sugar Ref. Co. v. McClain, 192 U. S. 397, 407, 48 L. ed. 496, 499, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 376. The remaining ground is that the Constitution of California, as amended in 1911, or the statutes of the state, contained a grant with which the Constitution of the United States does not permit the city to interfere. This is the only argument pressed here. Unless the appellee got a grant from one of these two sources, it has no right to occupy the streets.

The claim based upon the amendment to article 11, § 19, of the Constitution of the state, October 10, 1911, does not impress us. Before that date the article provided that in cities having no public works for artificial light, etc. individuals or corporations of the state, duly authorized, should have the privilege of using the streets, etc., for the purpose, upon the condition that 343] *the municipal government should have the right to regulate the charges. By the amendment "any municipal corporation may establish and operate public works for . . . telephone service," either by construction or by purchase. It then goes on: "Persons or corporations may establish and operate works for supplying the inhabitants with such service upon such conditions and under such regulations as the municipality may prescribe under its organic law, on condition that the municipal government shall have the right to regulate the charges therefore." We agree with the appellants that the amendment seems intended as a step in the direction of municipal ownership or control. The words, "upon such conditions," etc., are not to be confined to police powers, which are conferred by § 11 of the same article, but are of general import. If the municipal corporation does not see fit to establish the public works itself, it may let others do it; but its power to impose conditions excludes the notion that the Constitution alone is a grant to others of a right to occupy the streets without its consent.

The claim founded upon the statutes seems to us stronger. By § 536 of the Civil Code, "Telegraph . . . corporations may construct lines of telegraph . . . along and upon any public road or highway . . . and may erect poles . . . in such manner and at such points as not to interfere with the public use of the road." This is treated by the supreme court of California as a grant when acted upon. Western U. Teleph. Co. v. Hopkins, — Cal. —, 116 Pac. 557. But as the words "telegraph corporations" have been construed not to include telephone corporations (Sunset Teleph. & Teleg. Co. v. Pasadena, — Cal. —, 118 Pac. 796),—a construction that we know no sufficient reason for not following (Yazoo & M. Valley R. Co. v. Adams, 181 U. S. 580, 45 L. ed. 1011, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 729; Richmond v. Southern Bell Teleph. & Teleg. Co. 344]174 *U. S. 761, 43 L. ed. 1162, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 778),—the section until amended did the appellee no good. On March 20, 1905, however, the section was amended so as to include telephone corporations, so that, if that were all, the case of the appellee would be clear, the city of Pomona not having been organized under provisions of the Constitution that withdrew certain cities from the operation of general laws. See Ex parte Helm, 143 Cal. 553, 77 Pac. 453; Sunset Teleph. & Teleg. Co. v. Pasadena, — Cal. —, 118 Pac. 796, 803.

But the amendment did not go into effect for sixty days; and two days later, on March 22, a franchise act was passed, to take effect immediately, providing that "every franchise or privilege to erect or lay telegraph or telephone wires, to construct or operate street or interurban railroads, . . . or to exercise any other privilege whatever hereafter proposed to be granted" by the legislative body of any county, city and county, city or town, except telegraph or telephone lines doing an interstate business, should be granted upon the conditions specified in the act, and not otherwise. "Any applicant for any franchise or privilege above mentioned" was required to file an application, there was to be an advertisement for bids, etc., with other particulars that need not be specified, as the appellee does not claim under this statute. It contends that this act establishes conditions only for counties, cities, and towns, and does not qualify the grant from the state in the amended § 536. The appellant, on the other hand, argues that the franchise act repealed § 536, so far as it affects this case, except as to telephones doing an interstate business. In view of the frame of the act as a whole, of a general repealing clause at the end, naming certain exceptions of which § 536 is not one, and of the fact that the grant of such franchises seems generally to have been left to the local subdivisions concerned (Sunset Teleph. & Teleg. Co. v. Pasadena, supra), we construe the words quoted as *of general application, and are of [345] opinion that they cannot be supposed to have had the narrow operation that would be left to them if there were in force a grant from the state of almost universal scope. Until the state court shall decide otherwise we must take § 536 to have been repealed, subject to the exception contained in the later act, before any grant or right under it had accrued to the appellee.

We come, then, to consider the extent of the exception. This is not a question whether all telephones having the usual connections might not be instruments of commerce among the states; it is not a question whether the state could interfere with the local business of lines engaged in such commerce. It is a question of how far the offer of a grant that had not yet taken effect should be understood to have been left on foot by the repealing act,—a question as to the meaning of words. In construing them it may be assumed that the exception was made unwillingly. No policy can be discovered that would be likely to induce the making of it, and it is most easily explained by the uncertainty then prevailing as to the power of the state over telegraphs; etc., running into other States in view of the commerce clause of the Constitution and the act of July 24, 1866,—an uncertainty then lately and since largely dispelled. Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 195 U. S. 540, 49 L. ed. 312, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 133, 1 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 517; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Richmond, April 1, 1912 [224 U. S. 160, ante, 710, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 449]. The words to be interpreted are “except telegraph or telephone lines doing an interstate business.” The qualification “doing an interstate business” shows that not all telephones were expected to benefit by the grant in § 536, and the limitation is presumably substantial. The legislature probably supposed by mistake that it was bound to grant a right to direct through lines, but evidently meant to grant no more than it must. It was understood so by the city. The order and threat of the city were confined to poles 346] and wires *doing a state and local business. This appears by the bill and the finding of the circuit court, not disturbed above, as to what actually was done. We are of opinion that the city’s interpretation was correct.

The result is that the appellee must be taken to have a grant of the right to keep its main through lines in the streets of Pomona, but not to maintain the posts and wires by which it connects with subscribers. So far as appears the city attacks only the latter, and therefore no present ground is shown for the bill. But as the line of distinction may be delicate and questions may arise, the bill will be dismissed without prejudice.

Decree reversed.

Bill to be dismissed without prejudice.

TITLE GUARANTY & SURETY COMPANY, Plff. in Err., v.

WILLIAM FRANCIS NICHOLS.

(See S. C. Reporter’s ed. 346-353.)

Evidence — burden of proof — action on cashier’s bond — condition.

1. The burden is upon the surety, in an action on a cashier’s bond, to plead and prove a breach of the bank’s agreement that monthly examinations of the cashier’s books should be made, since such requirement, if a condition at all, was a condition subsequent rather than precedent.
56 L. ed.

[For other cases, see Bonds, 119-126d; Evidence, 668-672, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Trial — question for jury — diligence.

2. The question whether reasonably proper monthly examinations of the cashier’s books were made is for the jury in an action on his bond, where there is evidence that such cashier made monthly reports which were regularly inspected once a month by the bank’s officers; that the embezzlements which were not detected by such inspection were concealed by false entries relating to remittances to the bank’s correspondents, whereby the balances in such correspondent banks were made to appear much larger than they actually were, and that the officers were misled by the bookkeeper’s innocent use, as the basis for ledger entries, of the cashier’s falsified slips, purporting to show the cash used to buy exchange for remittances.

[For other cases, see Trial, 178-184, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Bonds — of employee — renewal — warranty.

3. An official certificate, made in contemplation of the renewal of a bank cashier’s bond, that, just prior thereto, his books and accounts “were examined and found correct in every respect, and all moneys accounted for,” is not a warranty of the correctness of such accounts, and the existence of discrepancies covered up by false entries or other bookkeeping devices will not avoid the new bond if due diligence was used in making the examination.

[For other cases, see Bonds, III, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Trial — question for jury — good faith.

4. The good faith of the bank in certifying, in contemplation of a renewal of the cashier’s bond, that just prior thereto his books and accounts “were examined and found correct in every respect, and all moneys accounted for,” is a question for the jury in an action on the new bond, where there is evidence that due diligence was used in making the examination, although

NOTE.—What constitutes a verification of accounts as required by fidelity bond or contract.

Whether regarded as a promissory representation or a warranty, the employer’s obligation assumed in a fidelity contract to examine or verify the accounts of the bonded employee is ordinarily satisfied by such an examination as is due and customary with the insured in his business, if made in good faith. This was said to be the case in Guarantee Co. of N. A. v. Mechanics’ Sav. Bank & T. Co. 26 C. C. A. 146, 47 U. S. App. 91, 80 Fed. 766, affirming 68 Fed. 459, where the “guaranty proposal” signed by the bank’s president stipulated that the acts of the principal—a it failed to disclose discrepancies covered up by false entries or other bookkeeping devices.

[For other cases, see Trial, 248-253, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 102.]

Argued December 13, 1911. Decided April 8, 1912.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the Territory of Arizona to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the District Court of Maricopa County, in that territory, in favor of plaintiff in an action on the bond of a bank cashier. Affirmed.

See same case below, 12 Ariz. 405, 100 Pac. 825.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Philip Walker argued the cause, and, with Mr. C. F. Ainsworth, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The agreement for the monthly examination of the employer's books was in the nature of a warranty and a condition precedent.

teller—should be verified by the finance committee, and the bond itself was conditioned upon the regular inspection of his accounts.

So, in Southern Surety Co. v. Tyler & S. Co. — Okla. —, 120 Pac. 936, statements in the application for a bond to indemnify the insured against the fraud or dishonesty of a bookkeeper, that the insured would verify his accounts by taking monthly balances and watching him, though held to be warranties, were said not to mean such a thorough and consistent examination or audit as would necessarily discover the slightest irregularity, however cunningly concealed, and were therefore satisfied by a monthly examination by the officers of the insured, which, from the statements, books, and reports, showed his accounts to be correct, and by such supervision as was exercised over the other employees, and such as was usual and customary.

So, in United States Fidelity & G. Co. v. Foster Deposit Bank, — Ky. —, 147 S. W. 406, the court held that the sufficiency of the compliance of a bank with its promissory representations in an application for a cashier's bond, that a careful examination of his books should be made monthly by three or more directors, was to be tested by the degree of care which ordinarily prudent directors of a bank similarly situated would exercise under like or similar circumstances; and that, where the bank is a country one, the directors should not be held to the same degree of care as directors in city banks, who are more experienced in such matters.

A warranty in the application of a bank for a bond for its cashier, that his books would be examined monthly by the auditing committee, is satisfied by an examination

Rice v. Fidelity & D. Co. 43 C. C. A. 270, 103 Fed. 427; Willoughby v. Fidelity & D. Co. 16 Okla. 546, 7 L.R.A.(N.S.) 548, 85 Pac. 713, 8 Ann. Cas. 603, affirmed in 205 U. S. 537, 51 L. ed. 920, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 790.

Whether or not the monthly accounts and audits were made was peculiarly within the knowledge of the bank.

Selma, R. & D. R. Co. v. United States, 139 U. S. 560, 35 L. ed. 266, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 638; Best, Ev. § 274.

While not expressly so stating, the court practically held that the renewal statement was a representation, whereas, in law, it was a warranty, and if it were false, whether with or without knowledge, the bond was void as to subsequent defalcations.

American Bonding & T. Co. v. Burke, 36 Colo. 58, 85 Pac. 692; Livingston v. Fidelity & D. Co. 76 Ohio St. 253, 81 N. E. 330; Max J. Winkler Brokerage Co. v. Fidelity & D. Co. 119 La. 735, 44 So. 449; Guarantee Co. of N. A. v. First Nat. Bank, 95 Va. 480, 28 S. E. 909; Glidden v. United States

by such committee, composed of certain directors of the bank, if made in good faith, with the purpose of fulfilling their duty to the bank, though they were not expert accountants. American Bonding Co. v. Morrow, 80 Ark. 49, 117 Am. St. Rep. 72, 96 S. W. 613.

But a warranty in a bank's application for a bond for its time-check buyer to have him account monthly, and to check up his remittances about three times a month, is not satisfied by charging to his account money delivered to him for the purpose of buying time checks, and crediting his account with the amount of time checks or expense accounts sent in by him, and striking a balance, without making any effort to ascertain if the money was actually on hand, or to ascertain in whose possession it was. United States Fidelity & G. Co. v. Bank of Batesville, 87 Ark. 348, 112 S. W. 957.

And the verification of the accounts of the treasurer of an association, required by his fidelity bond, is insufficient where the examining officials accept as true the amount which the treasurer has in the bank as shown by his pass book, without taking any steps to ascertain from the bank whether or not it represents the true state of the account. United States Fidelity & G. Co. v. Downey, 38 Colo. 414, 10 L.R.A.(N.S.) 323, 120 Am. St. Rep. 128, 88 Pac. 451.

A provision that the obligee in such contract is to make monthly comparison and verification of the cash in the hands of its agent, an insurance agent, with his accounts and vouchers, is not satisfied by making the comparison with the accounts and vouchers filed by him two months before. Hunt v. Fidelity & C. Co. 39 C. C. A. 496, 99 Fed. 242.

Fidelity & G. Co. 198 Mass. 109, 84 N. E. 143; Willoughby v. Fidelity & D. Co. 16 Okla. 546, 7 L.R.A.(N.S.) 548, 85 Pac. 713, 8 Ann. Cas. 603, affirmed in 205 U. S. 537, 51 L. ed. 920, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 790; Frost, Guaranty Ins. 241; Walker, Fidelity Bonds, 49.

Mr. Frank B. Kellogg argued the cause, and, with Messrs. C. A. Severance, Robert E. Olds, Thomas Armstrong, Jr., and Ernest W. Lewis, filed a brief for defendant in error:

The contract must be construed, if possible, in favor of the insured, rather than in favor of the insurer.

First Nat. Bank v. Hartford F. Ins. Co. 95 U. S. 673, 24 L. ed. 563; Thompson v. Phenix Ins. Co. 136 U. S. 287, 297, 34 L. ed. 408, 413, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1019; Imperial F. Ins. Co. v. Coös County, 151 U. S. 452, 462, 38 L. ed. 231, 235, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 379; Moulton v. American L. Ins. Co. 111 U. S. 342, 343, 28 L. ed. 449, 450, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 466; American Surety Co. v. Pauly, 170 U. S. 133, 144, 160, 42 L. ed. 977, 981, 987, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 552; Aetna Indemnity Co. v. J. R. Crowe Coal & Min. Co. 83 C. C. A. 431, 154 Fed. 555.

The burden of proving the allegations of the answer with respect to the falsity of specific declarations rested with the surety company.

Piedmont & A. L. Ins. Co. v. Ewing, 92 U. S. 377, 23 L. ed. 610.

The expression "promissory warranty" is nothing more nor less than another expression for "condition subsequent."

Redman v. Aetna Ins. Co. 49 Wis. 431, 4 N. W. 591.

The performance of conditions subsequent need not be alleged and proved by the parties suing upon a contract.

Chambers v. Northwestern Mut. L. Ins. Co. 64 Minn. 495, 58 Am. St. Rep. 549, 67 N. W. 367; Badenfeld v. Massachusetts Mut. Acci. Asso. 13 L.R.A. 263, note; Jones, Ev. § 179.

On the subject of the burden of proof, a distinction has been taken between express warranties contained in a policy of insurance and declarations made in an application, even where such declarations are stipulated to be warranties.

American Credit Indemnity Co. v. Wood, 19 C. C. A. 264, 38 U. S. App. 583, 73 Fed. 81.

An employer would need no insurance against that close and relentless vigilance which makes stealing impossible.

Guarantee Co. of N. A. v. Mechanics' Sav. Bank & T. Co. 26 C. C. A. 146, 47 U. S. App. 91, 80 Fed. 774.

The declarations in the employer's statement need not be literally true, provided good faith was observed in making them, and this would be so, even if language of warranty had been used.

Moulton v. American L. Ins. Co. 111 U. S. 342, 343, 28 L. ed. 449, 450, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 466.

The bank's duty under the contract was confined to the observance of good faith and fair dealing; and the evidence shows that this obligation was fully met.

Guarantee Co. of N. A. v. Mechanics' Sav. Bank & T. Co. 26 C. C. A. 146, 47 U. S. App. 91, 80 Fed. 766; American Surety Co. v. Pauly, 170 U. S. 133, 42 L. ed. 977, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 552.

The statements of accounts with correspondent banks were admissible.

Burton v. Driggs, 20 Wall. 125, 22 L. ed. 299; Ritter v. State, 70 Ark. 477, 68 S. W. 262; Wright v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. 118 Mo. App. 392, 94 S. W. 555; Strand v. Great Northern R. Co. 101 Minn. 85, 111 N. W. 961; Hauenstein v. Gillespie, 73 Miss. 742, 55 Am. St. Rep. 569, 19 So. 673; Jones, Ev. § 699.

Where facts are of a voluminous character and the examination of many books and papers is involved, a summary statement may be given by the person who made the examination.

Burton v. Driggs, 20 Wall. 125, 22 L. ed. 299; Schumacher v. Pima County, 7 Ariz. 269, 64 Pac. 490; Brown v. United States, 73 C. C. A. 187, 142 Fed. 1.

Mr. Justice Lurton delivered the opinion of the court:

Action upon a bond executed by the plaintiff in error to protect the Union Bank & Trust Company, of Phoenix, Arizona, against the dishonesty of its cashier. There were two or more renewals. Embezzlements by the cashier occurred during the currency of the bond. After a right of action had accrued, the bond was assigned to the defendant in error, who brought this action thereon.

The principal defense was that the loss was due to the neglect of the employer to supervise the conduct of the employee by making such monthly examinations of his accounts as it agreed to make or have made. There was a jury and verdict for the plaintiff, and a judgment against the surety company, which was affirmed by the supreme court.

A number of errors have been assigned which relate to this defense, but the argument has turned upon those which, in different ways, raise the question as to whether, after the defendant in error had made out a prima facie case by proving the bond and its breach by a refusal to indemnify him for losses sustained during its currency through the dishonesty of the 350]employee guaranteed, the *onus devolved upon the surety company to plead and prove that the loss had occurred through the fault of the employer in not making the monthly examinations which it had agreed to make. The trial judge ruled that the onus was upon the defendant, and this ruling has been affirmed by the supreme court.

Whether this ruling was right or wrong must depend upon whether the requirement of the bond, that monthly examinations of the books of the employee should be made, constituted a condition precedent or a condition subsequent. The bond on its face requires the employer "to take and use all reasonable steps and precautions to detect and prevent any act upon the part of the employee which would tend to render the company liable for any loss." It also provides that if the statements by the employer in the application "shall be untrue, the bond shall be void." The obligation in respect to examinations of the employee's accounts is found in the application. The questions propounded by the surety company and the employer's answers, so far as relevant, were these:

"To whom and how frequently will he account for his handlings of funds and securities? Monthly; to board of directors.

"What means will you use to ascertain whether his accounts are correct? Examination of books and count of money and securities. How frequently will they be examined? Monthly or oftener. By whom will they be examined? Our auditor.

"When were his accounts last examined? February 8th, 1905.

"Were they reported correct? Yes.

"Is there now or has there been any shortage due you by applicant? No."

There was never any question but that liability under the bond would be defeated if it appeared that the loss attributable to the 351]dishonesty of the employee was due *to the neglect of the bank to make the monthly examinations required. And so the jury were instructed. The question was whether this requirement was a condition precedent to liability, which the bank was required to aver and prove, or whether it was a defense to be made out by the defendant. But a construction which makes the bond inoperative until the employer shows that it had made such examinations is not a fair and reasonable interpretation. The distinction between conditions precedent and subsequent is plain enough. The condition here involved, if properly a condition at all, is of the latter class.

The coming into effect of a contract may be made to depend upon the happening or performance of a condition. But a condition subsequent presupposes a contract in effect which may be defeated by the happening or performance of a condition. Where, therefore, an action is upon a contract subject to a condition precedent, the performance of that condition must be averred and proved; but if the contract sued upon is subject to a condition subsequent, there is no occasion for any averment in respect to the condition. It is a matter of defense, which must come from the other side. 1 Chitty, Pl. pp. 246, 255.

The plaintiff was plainly entitled to recover upon proving the bond, an embezzlement, and a breach by a refusal to indemnify. It was not obliged to aver that it had made the examinations which it agreed should be made. If it had failed in that duty, it was for the surety company to so plead and prove. Such, indeed, was the course of the pleading in this case, and a breach of the agreement to make such examinations was set up as a defense. There was no error in the ruling of the court that the onus was upon the surety company to prove a breach of the obligation to make examinations. Piedmont & A. L. Ins. Co. v. Ewing, 98 U. S. 377, 23 L. ed. 610; American Credit Indemnity Co. v. Wood, 19 C. C. A. 264, 38 U. S. App. 583, 73 Fed. 81; Redman v. Aetna Ins. Co. 49 Wis. 431, 4 N. W. 591; Murray v. New York L. Ins.* [352 Co. 85 N. Y. 236; Freeman v. Travelers' Ins. Co. 144 Mass. 572, 12 N. E. 372.

It has been argued that there was no evidence upon which the case could go to the jury upon the question of whether reasonably proper monthly examinations were in fact made. This insistence has no foundation. The plaintiff in error brought out upon its own cross-examination of McDowell, the defaulting cashier, that he made monthly reports and that these reports were gone over by the officers of the bank regularly, once a month. He testified that his cash and securities were counted and examined and his report verified from the book entries made by the bank's bookkeeper. Indeed, he testified, "that there never was a set of directors in any bank that tried to watch things closer than that set of directors." The cashier's embezzlements of money were covered by false entries relating to remittances to the bank's correspondents, whereby the balances in such banks were made to appear much larger than they actually were. The defendant's expert evidence tended to show that if the returned vouchers or the reconciliation reports of such banks had been compared with the ledger accounts, the discrepancy would have appeared. But the cashier was cunning, and he testified to the difficulties which he threw in the way of any effort to verify the books in these particulars. He supported his report by his cash and his bills receivable and a showing of the books kept by another officer, who made the entries from "slips" made by himself (the cashier), purporting to show cash used to buy exchange for remittances. These "slips," being falsified memoranda, were innocently used by the bookkeeper as the basis for the ledger entries which misled the officers in their examinations. On this evidence the question as to whether reasonable diligence had been used in making such examinations was one for the jury. It was so submitted under a fair charge, and they 353] found for the *plaintiff below. Finally, it is said that the greater part of the loss occurred during the currency of renewal bonds, and that each such renewal was made upon a certificate by the employer which stated that just prior thereto the books and accounts of the employee "were examined and found correct in every respect and all moneys accounted for." It is said that this statement was untrue, inasmuch as, at the date of such renewals, the books and accounts were not correct and the cashier was short in his cash. But the certificate is not to be taken as a warranty of the correctness of the accounts. The statement is that his books and accounts had been examined and found correct. The mere fact that the examination, if made by a reasonably competent person, failed to discover discrepancies covered up by false entries, or other bookkeeping devices, would not defeat the renewal. The case upon this point went to the jury upon the fact of reasonable examinations and the good faith of the bank in making the representation. The question of the weight or credibility of the evidence is not one for our consideration. There was some evidence which the trial judge thought sufficient to carry the case to the jury. The supreme court of Arizona agreed with the trial court, and with both courts we concur.

The assignments of error relating to admission of evidence have been examined so far as the state of the record admits. The court below thought most of them insufficiently saved, and none of them so material as to require a reversal for new trial. In this we concur.

Judgment affirmed.

Mr. Justice McKenna dissents.

56 L. ed.

*ST. LOUIS, IRON MOUNTAIN, & [354
SOUTHERN RAILWAY COMPANY,
Plff. in Err.,

v.
T. J. WYNNE.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 354-361.)

Constitutional law — due process of law — penalizing refusal to pay claim.

Exacting double liability and an attorneys' fee under the authority of Ark. Laws 1907, No. 61, from a railway company refusing to pay within thirty days an excessive demand for the killing of live stock by one of its trains, takes the company's property without due process of law.

[For other cases, see Constitutional Law, IV. b, 4, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 103.]

Submitted December 14, 1911. Decided April 15, 1912.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Arkansas to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Circuit Court of Desha, in that state, exacting double liability and an attorneys' fee from a railroad company refusing to pay within thirty days a demand for the killing of live stock by one of its trains. Reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

See same case below, 90 Ark. 538, 119 S. W. 1127, 17 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 631.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. W. E. Hemingway and E. B. Kinsworthy submitted the cause for plaintiff in error:

The statute and judgment deprive the railway company of its property without due process of law and are unconstitutional and void, since they require the payment of double damages and an attorneys' fee merely because the company failed to pay an unliquidated demand, with respect to which there were bona fide and substantial doubts as to the extent of the damage and as to its liability.

Pacific Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Carter, 92 Ark. 387, 123 S. W. 384, 124 S. W. 764; Industrial Mut. Indemnity Co. v. Armstrong, 93 Ark. 84, 124 S. W. 236; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150, 41 L. ed. 666, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Matthews, 174

NOTE.—As to what constitutes due process of law—see notes to People v. O'Brien, 2 L.R.A. 255; Kuntz v. Sumption, 2 L.R.A. 655; Re Gannon, 5 L.R.A. 359; Ulman v. Baltimore, 11 L.R.A. 224; Gilman v. Tucker, 13 L.R.A. 304; Pearson v. Yewdall, 24 L. ed. U. S. 436; and Wilson v. North Carolina, 42 L. ed. U. S. 865.

U. S. 96, 43 L. ed. 909, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609.

The statute is invalid for the further reason that it was designed and is calculated, by its heavy penalties, to deter railroads from contesting any claim fairly involved in doubt, either with respect to liability or the amount of damage, and to coerce the payment of all such claims; in this respect, it denies to railroads the equal protection of the law, contrary to the equal-protection guaranties of the 14th Amendment.

Ex parte Young, 209 U. S. 123, 145, 52 L. ed. 714, 723, 13 L.R.A.(N.S.) 932, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 441, 14 Ann. Cas. 764.

Mr. Robert E. Wiley submitted the cause for defendant in error. Mr. Powell Clayton was on the brief:

The statute, when properly construed, is not in conflict with the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

Seaboard Air Line R. Co. v. Seegers, 207 U. S. 73, 52 L. ed. 108, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 28; Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Beckwith, 129 U. S. 26, 32 L. ed. 585, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 207; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Matthews, 174 U. S. 96, 43 L. ed. 909, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609; Fidelity Mut. Life Assn. v. Mettler, 185 U. S. 308, 46 L. ed. 922, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 662.

The penalty provided in the statute in question is not so heavy as to deter the railroad company from contesting a claim, thus denying to it the equal protection of the law.

Missouri P. R. Co. v. Humes, 115 U. S. 512, 29 L. ed. 463, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110; Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Beckwith, 129 U. S. 26, 32 L. ed. 585, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 207; Seaboard Air Line Co. v. Seegers, 207 U. S. 73, 52 L. ed. 108, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 28.

The railroads are proper subjects of classification with respect to the matters contained in the statute attacked in this case.

Missouri P. R. Co. v. Humes, 115 U. S. 512, 29 L. ed. 463, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Mackey, 127 U. S. 205, 32 L. ed. 107, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1161; St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Paul, 173 U. S. 404, 43 L. ed. 746, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 419; Farmers' & M. Ins. Co. v. Dobney, 189 U. S. 301, 47 L. ed. 821, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 565; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. May, 194 U. S. 267, 48 L. ed. 971, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 638.

Mr. Justice Van Devanter delivered the opinion of the court:

A statute of the state of Arkansas (Laws of 1907, act 61), relating to the liability of carriers by railroad for live stock killed, wounded, or injured by their trains, contains this provision:

"And said railroad shall pay the owner of such stock within thirty days after notice is served on such railroad by such owner. Failure to do so shall entitle said owner to double the amount of damages awarded him by any jury trying such cause, and a reasonable attorneys' fee. And provided further, That if the owner of such stock killed or wounded shall bring suit against such railroad after the thirty days have expired, and the jury trying such cause shall give such owner a less amount of damage than he sues for, then such owner shall recover only the amount given him by said jury, and not be entitled to recover any attorneys' fees."

*The owner of two horses which were[359 killed within the state by a train of a railway company served upon the company a written notice demanding damages in the sum of $500. The company refused to pay the demand, and after the expiration of thirty days the owner brought suit in a court of the state to recover his damages, alleged in the complaint to be $400. A trial to a jury resulted in a verdict for the owner, assessing his damages at the amount sued for, and the court, deeming the statute applicable, gave judgment for double that amount and for an attorneys' fee of $50. The company objected that the statute, as thus applied, was repugnant to the due process of law clause of the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, but the objection was overruled, and on appeal to the supreme court of the state the judgment was affirmed. 90 Ark. 538, 119 S. W. 1127, 17 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 631. The case is here on a writ of error to that court.

It will be perceived that, while before the suit the owner demanded $500 as damages, which the company refused to pay, he did not in his suit either claim or establish that he was entitled to that amount. On the contrary, by the allegations in his complaint he confessed, and by the verdict of the jury it was found, that his damages were but $400. Evidently, therefore, the prior demand was excessive and the company rightfully refused to pay it. And yet, the statute was construed as penalizing that refusal and requiring a judgment for double damages and an attorneys' fee. In other words, the application made of the statute was such that the company was subjected to this extraordinary liability for refusing to pay the excessive demand made before the suit.

We think the conclusion is unavoidable that the statute, as so construed and applied, is an arbitrary exercise of the powers of government and violative of the fundamental rights embraced within the conception of due process of law. It does not 360]merely provide a reasonable *incentive for the prompt settlement, without suit, of just demands of a class admitting of special treatment by the legislature, as was the case with the statute considered in Seaboard Air Line R. Co. v. Seegers, 207 U. S. 73, 52 L. ed. 108, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 28, but attaches onerous penalties to the nonpayment of extravagant demands, thereby making submission to them the preferable alternative. Thus, it takes property from one and gives it to another, not because of a breach by the former of a duty to the latter or to the public, but because of a lawful exercise of an undoubted right. Plainly this cannot be done consistently with due process of law. And, in principle, the supreme court of the state has so held since its decision in this case. In Pacific Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Carter, 92 Ark. 378, 123 S. W. 384, 124 S. W. 764, that court had occasion to consider a statute of the state providing that if a loss under a policy of insurance was not paid within the time specified, "after demand made therefor," the company should be liable, in addition to the amount of the loss, to 12 per cent damages and a reasonable attorneys' fee. An insured demanded in payment of a loss under such a policy the sum of $1,666.66, which the insurance company refused to pay, and in a suit on the policy, wherein it was found that the loss was but $1,444.44, the insured was awarded the statutory damages and an attorneys' fee. That part of the judgment was reversed, and it was said:

"But the act makes the company liable for failure to pay the loss 'after demand made therefor.' The statute thus contemplates that there shall be a demand. A recovery for penalty and attorneys' fee cannot be had when complainant makes demand for more than he is entitled to recover. It could never have been the purpose of the legislature to make the insurance companies pay a penalty and attorneys' fee for contesting a claim that they did not owe. Such an act would be unconstitutional. The companies have the right 361]to resist the payment of a *demand that they do not owe. When the plaintiff demands an excessive amount, he is in the wrong. The penalty and attorneys' fee is for the benefit of the one who is only seeking to recover after demand what is due him under the terms of his contract, and who is compelled to resort to the courts to obtain it."

In the brief for the railway company the contention is advanced that the statute 56 L. ed.

would still be wanting in due process of law were it construed as imposing double liability, with an attorneys' fee, only where the prior demand is fully established in the suit following the refusal to pay; but that question does not necessarily arise upon the facts of this case, and we purposely refrain from considering it.

Confining ourselves to what is necessary for the decision of the case in hand, we hold that the statute, as construed and applied by the state courts, is wanting in due process of law, and repugnant to the 14th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States.

The judgment is accordingly reversed, and the case is remanded for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion.

Reversed.

*SAMUEL D. GROMER, Treasurer of [362 Porto Rico, Appt.,
v.

STANDARD DREDGING COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 362-383.)

Taxes — jurisdiction of Porto Rico — harbor areas and navigable waters.

1. Jurisdiction for taxing purposes of the harbor areas and navigable waters within the defined limits of Porto Rico was not denied the insular government by the reservations of such areas and waters in favor of the United States, made by the act of April 12, 1900 (31 Stat. at L. 77, 80, chap. 191), § 13, and the act of July 1, 1902 (32 Stat. at L. 731, chap. 1383), which must be construed as proprietary reservations only, and not as limitations upon the exercise of government.

Taxes — Federal agencies.

2. The use of machinery and boats in the harbor of San Juan, Porto Rico, in the performance of a dredging contract with the United States, does not exempt them from local taxation.

[For other cases, see Taxes, 139-164, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 174.]

Submitted February 28, 1911. Decided April 22, 1912.

APPEAL from the District Court of the United States for Porto Rico to review a decree enjoining the enforcement of a local tax upon machinery and boats in use in the harbor of San Juan in the performance of a dredging contract with the United States. Reversed, with directions to sustain the demurrer and dismiss the bill.

NOTE.—On the limitations of taxing power from mutual independence of Federal and state governments—see note to Grether v. Wright, 23 C. C. A. 515.

See same case below on demurrer, 5 Porto Rico Fed. Rep. 142.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Foster V. Brown, Attorney General of Porto Rico, and Mr. Paul Charlton, submitted the cause for appellant:

The fact that the appellee is engaged in the prosecution of a work under a contract with the United States government has no bearing whatever on the right of the insular government to levy a tax on its property. Being engaged in such work does not make appellee a Federal agency in the sense that a taxation of its property would be an interference with the instrumentalities and operations of the Federal government.

Union P. R. Co. v. Peniston, 18 Wall. 36, 21 L. ed. 793; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Richmond, 26 Gratt. 1; Judson, Taxn. §§ 1-38.

Until the Congress of the United States has acted in the premises the legislative assembly of Porto Rico is empowered and has full authority to legislate in reference to all matters pertaining to the harbors of Porto Rico.

1 Ops. Atty. Gen. of Porto Rico, 44; Valdesy Cobian v. Grahame, 3 Porto Rico Fed. Rep. 417; 23 Ops. Atty. Gen. 566; 26 Ops. Atty. Gen. 91; Shively v. Bowlby, 152 U. S. 30, 38 L. ed. 342, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 548; National Dredging Co. v. State, 99 Ala. 462, 12 So. 720; Northwestern Lumber Co. v. Chehalis County, 25 Wash. 95, 54 L.R.A. 212, 87 Am. St. Rep. 747, 64 Pac. 909; 1 Farnham, Waters, pp. 82, 83; United States v. Bevans, 3 Wheat. 336, 4 L. ed. 404; United States v. Bateman, 34 Fed. 86; United States v. Davis, 2 N. Y. Leg. Obs. 35, Fed. Cas. No. 14,931; The Panama, 1 Or. 418, Fed. Cas. No. 10,702.

A territorial statute is operative upon a military reservation within the territory so long as it does not conflict with the laws of the United States or with the military administration and legitimate operations of the government.

Reynolds v. People, 1 Colo. 181; Territory v. Burgess, 8 Mont. 57, 1 L.R.A. 808, 19 Pac. 558; Scott v. United States, 1 Wyo. 40.

The right of a state or territory to tax private property on reservations has been affirmed in numerous cases.

Thomas v. Gray, 169 U. S. 275, 42 L. ed. 744, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 340; Wagoner v. Evans, 170 U. S. 588, 42 L. ed. 1154, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 730.

Messrs. Charles Hartzell and Manuel Rodriguez-Serra submitted the cause for appellee:

The basic and underlying principle which must control the determination of this cause is as to the extent of the control of jurisdiction of the insular government over the harbor of San Juan; and in this connection as to whether or not property situated entirely within the harbor area, engaged in operations connected with the lands underlying such harbor area, could receive any benefit from the expenditure of moneys raised by the Insular government by taxation.

Union Refrigerator Transit Co. v. Kentucky, 199 U. S. 195, 50 L. ed. 150, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 36, 4 Ann. Cas. 493; Kaysville v. Ellison, 18 Utah, 163, 43 L.R.A. 81, 72 Am. St. Rep. 772, 55 Pac. 386; People v. Daniels, 6 Utah, 288, 5 L.R.A. 444, 22 Pac. 159; People ex rel. Griffin v. Brooklyn, 4 N. Y. 420, 55 Am. Dec. 266; Cooley, Taxn. pp. 159, 160.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

The question in the case is the power of Porto Rico to tax certain machinery and boats which, at the time of the levy of the taxes, were in the harbor of San Juan, engaged in dredging work, in pursuance of a contract of the Standard Dredging Company with the United States government.

The dredging company filed a bill to enjoin the appellant, treasurer of Porto Rico, from enforcing the tax. Appellant demurred to the bill for insufficiency and want of equity, which was overruled. He declined to answer, and the injunction which had been granted was made perpetual. This appeal was then taken.

The material allegations of the bill are as follows:

The dredging company is a Delaware corporation, with its principal office and place of business at the city of Wilmington, state of Delaware. Gromer is treasurer of Porto Rico.

That theretofore and prior to April 1, 1908, the dredging company entered into a contract with the United States government to dredge certain portions of the harbor of San Juan and the channel leading from the ocean to the harbor area. Prior to that date, for use in connection with its operations under the contract, it brought to the harbor one dredge, one tugboat, two scows for dumping material to be removed, one coal scow, and one launch. The boats and machinery are its property and have been constantly used by it in the performance of its contract, and were not used in connection with any other business or operations, and were at all times within the harbor where the operations under the contract were carried on. The dredging company has neither conducted nor carried on any other business in Porto Rico or the waters adjacent thereto except its operations under the contract.

Gromer, as treasurer of Porto Rico, pretending to act under the revenue laws of Porto Rico, assumed to assess and levy on the said property as of the value of $75,000 a tax of $1,200, for the fiscal year 1908-09, and he and his agents "have levied an embargo on part of said property . . . and are threatening to foreclose the same and to sell the property for the purpose of enforcing the collection of the said alleged tax."

The tax is illegal and its enforcement will be illegal by virtue of the laws of the United States and of Porto Rico, and especially by virtue of the acts and proclamations of Congress and of the President of the United States, creating reservations in and about the island of Porto Rico. The insular government of Porto Rico is not authorized to levy or collect any tax in connection with property the situs of which is within the reservation or within any navigable waters of harbor areas of the island of Porto Rico. The property of the company has not been brought within the jurisdiction of the insular government, nor is it subject to taxation while being employed in the performance *of the contract with the United States and within the harbor area.

It is alleged that the company is without any remedy at law, and an injunction is therefore prayed.

In support of his demurrer appellant contends that the dredging company had an adequate remedy at law, and that § 12 of the act of the legislative assembly of Porto Rico, approved March 8, 1906, which provides that an "injunction may be issued to prevent the illegal levying of any tax, duty, or toll, or for the illegal collection thereof, or against any proceeding to enforce such collection . . . " does not apply to the district court of the United States for Porto Rico. We, however, pass the contention, as we prefer to rest our decision on the merits.

The bill of the dredging company, and its contentions here, are based on two propositions: (1) the property was not within the jurisdiction of Porto Rico, but was within the harbor area reserved by the United States; (2) the property was being used "within the harbor area" in the performance of a contract with the United States, and therefore not subject to taxation for insular purposes.

To sustain the first proposition, § 13 of the Foraker act [31 Stat. at L. 80, chap. 191] is relied on and the act of Congress of July 1, 1902 [32 Stat. at L. 731, chap. 1383].

Section 13 reads as follows:

"That all property which may have been acquired in Porto Rico by the United States under the cession of Spain, in said treaty of peace in any public bridges, road houses, water powers, highways, unnavigable streams and the beds thereof, subterranean waters, mines or minerals under the surface of private lands, and all property which, at the time of the cession, belonged under the laws of Spain then in force to the various harbor works boards of Porto Rico, and of the harbor shores, docks, slips, and reclaimed lands, *but not including harbor areas or navigable waters, is hereby placed under the control of the government established by this act, to be administered for the benefit of the people of Porto Rico, and the legislative assembly hereby created shall have authority, subject to the limitations imposed upon all its acts, to legislate with respect to all such matters, as it may deem advisable." [Italics ours.]

Under the act of Congress of July 1, 1902, a division of the public properties of Porto Rico was made under which the President of the United States was authorized to reserve certain public properties for the use of the Federal government. The properties not reserved were granted to the government of Porto Rico, to be held or disposed of for the use and benefit of the people of the island. The reservations included lands and buildings for army and navy and other Federal governmental purposes. The exception of harbors and navigable streams was as follows:

"And all the public lands and buildings, not including harbor areas and navigable streams and bodies of water, and the submerged lands underlying the same, owned by the United States in said island, and not so reserved," etc.

Considering these provisions alone it is, we think, manifest that they only provide for proprietary reservations and dispositions, and not for limitations upon the exercise of government. This conclusion is confirmed by § 1 of the Foraker act, which provides that the provisions of the act "shall apply to the island of Porto Rico and to the adjacent islands and waters of the islands lying east of the seventy-fourth meridian of longitude west of Greenwich, which were ceded to the United States by the government of Spain by treaty entered into on the tenth day of December, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight [30 Stat at L. 1754]; and the name Porto Rico, as used in this act, shall be held to include not only the island of that name, but all the adjacent islands, as aforesaid."

As early as 1901 the control by the gov- 367]ernment of the *United States over Porto Rican waters came up for consideration and was referred by the Secretary of War to the Attorney General for determination. The elements in the question were the river and harbor act of 1899 [30 Stat. at L. 1121, chap. 425] and the act of April 12, 1900, "temporarily to provide revenues and a civil government for Porto Rico, and for other purposes." 31 Stat. at L. 77, 80, chap. 191. Section 14 of the latter act provided, with certain exceptions, that the statutory laws of the United States not locally inapplicable should have the same force and effect in Porto Rico as in the United States. Section 13 provided that certain harbor property which, at the time of the cession, belonged, under the laws of Spain, to the various harbor works boards of Porto Rico, "but not including harbor areas or navigable waters," should be "placed under the control of the government established by this act, and to be administered for the benefit of the people of Porto Rico." The legislative assembly created by the act was given authority "to legislate with respect to all such matters" as it might deem advisable, and this authority was extended to all matters of a legislative character not locally inapplicable. It was further provided that all laws should be referred to Congress, which reserved the power to annul the same.

The river and harbor act of 1899 (30 Stat. at L. 1151, chap. 425, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3540), prohibited unauthorized obstructions to navigation in any of the waters of the United States, and provided for control by the Secretary of War of wharves and similar structures in ports and other waters of the United States.

The Attorney General expressed the opinion that under these statutes the coastal waters, harbors, and other navigable waters of the island, were water of the United States, and that a license granted by the Secretary of War to build a wharf in the harbor, given before the ratification of the treaty with Spain, was valid, and 368]that the *power under the license to rebuild the wharf, which had been destroyed by fire, continued as against the control of the executive council of Porto Rico. Commenting on the provisions of the river and harbor act and the acts in regard to Porto Rico, it was said that Congress, since the ratification of the treaty with Spain, has nowhere indicated that Porto Rican waters are not to be regarded as waters of the United States, nor directed that the authority of the Secretary of War, under the river and harbor act of 1899, shall not extend to the Porto Rican waters. "On the contrary, Congress has used language in the Porto Rican act, as, for instance, in § 13, which clearly contemplates national jurisdiction over those waters as waters of the United States." 23 Ops. Atty. Gen. 551. In other words, the jurisdiction of the United States over those waters was the jurisdiction that the United States had over all other navigable waters, an exercise of which the river and harbor act was an example.

This is made clear by a subsequent opinion, in which it was declared "that Congress committed to local control, subject to the expressed limitation upon the local legislative power, the administration of certain public property and utilities, including 'harbor shores, docks, slips, and reclaimed lands,' but excluding 'harbor areas or navigable waters.'" And, speaking of §§ 12 and 13 of the Porto Rican act of April 12, 1900, it was said that the "obvious implication" from them is "that the general government retains title to, possession of, and control over certain other public property, of which fortifications and their appurtenances are specified, and also reserves for its own administration the usual national powers over lights, buoys, and other matters affecting navigation or 'works undertaken by the United States.'" And it was said, further: "From all this it is certain that the ordinary national control of the marine belt affects the coastal *waters of Porto Rico as[369 well as those of any state or any other territory of the United States." But as to the "harbor margins" it was said that "the government of the United States, by reason of these grants . . . to . . . Porto Rico, is now in the same position with reference to the island government, as well as to private owners, as it would be in a similar case affecting a state of the United States." 23 Ops. Atty. Gen. 564.

From this principle it was concluded that the United States could not appropriate the islands of Culebra for a naval base, they being within the limits described in § 1 of the act of April 12, 1900. And § 1 of that act is identical with § 1 of the Foraker act, and its provisions for "harbor areas and navigable waters" are the same as in the Foraker act. The views of the Attorney General, therefore, are expressly applicable, for the language of the act of April 12, 1900, which determined them, was repeated in the Foraker act, which we are now called upon to consider.

The distinction made between local control of property and the exercise of government is a substantial one and is illustrated in cases. Shively v. Bowlby, 152 U. S. 30, 38 L. ed. 342, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 548; Thomas v. Gay, 169 U. S. 264, 42 L. ed. 740, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 340; Ft. Leavenworth R. Co. v. Lowe, 114 U. S. 525, 542, 29 L. ed. 264, 270, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 995; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Chiles, 214 U. S. 278, 53 L. ed. 997, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 613; Reynolds v. People, 1 Colo. 181; Scott v. United States, 1 Wyo. 40; Territory v. Burgess, 8 Mont. 57, 1 L.R.A. 808, 19 Pac. 558.

We have seen that by § 1 of the Foraker act all of its provisions are made applicable to a certain defined area, and that the name Porto Rico "shall be held to include not only the island of that name, but all adjacent islands and waters of the islands." The governmental powers conferred upon Porto Rico must be coextensive with that area, subject to the reservation that all laws passed shall not be in conflict with the laws of the United States, and the power of enacting such laws is conferred upon the legislative assembly. There is precaution against abuse. 370]*They must be reported to Congress, which has the power to annul them.

The purpose of the act is to give local self-government, conferring an autonomy similar to that of the states and territories, reserving to the United States rights to the harbor areas and navigable waters for the purpose of exercising the usual national control and jurisdiction over commerce and navigation.

The United States could have reserved government control and exercised it as it does in instances, by the consent of the states, over certain places in the states devoted to the governmental service of the United States. We do not think, as we have said, that the United States has done so, and that it has not is the view of the executive department of the government, as expressed through the Attorney General. The War Department entertained the same view as to military reservations in Porto Rico, and also as to such reservations in the Philippine Islands.

Section 12 of the Philippine act placed all property rights acquired from Spain under the control of the island government for the benefit of its inhabitants, except "such land or other property as shall be designated by the President of the United States for military and other reservations of the government of the United States." [32 Stat. at L. 695, chap. 1369.] The extent of the power thus reserved was referred for consideration by the Secretary of War to the Attorney General, and in an opinion written by Solicitor General Hoyt, and approved by Attorney General Moody, it was held that the provisions granted and reserved property, but did not confer governmental jurisdiction. It was said in the course of the opinion, after referring to the provisions of the Philippine act which directed that all laws passed by the Philippine government should be reported to Congress, and the reservation by Congress of the power to annul the same (a similar provision is in the Porto Rico act), that "the relation of Congress to all territorial legislation is similar [certain organic acts of the States being cited], and thus it may be said that the exercise of local jurisdiction for ordinary municipal purposes over a reservation in a territory is valid until and unless disapproved by Congress." 26 Ops. Atty. Gen. 91, 97.

There is an allegation in the bill that the property was not "subject to any lien or burden of taxation while being employed in the performance of its said contract with the United States of America and within the said harbor area." It is not clear what is meant by the allegation. So far as it means that the property is an instrument of the national government, and not subject, therefore, to local taxation, the contention cannot prevail. Baltimore Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co. v. Baltimore, 195 U. S. 375, 382, 49 L. ed. 242, 244, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 50. Indeed, the contention is a very broad one, and would seem to be independent of the situation of the property, and, if true at all, would apply to property employed in the service of the United States, wherever situated, and no matter to what extent employed. Appellant discusses it somewhat. We shall consider it in the aspect presented by appellee. Counsel say that "the basic and underlying principle which must control in the determination of the case is as to the extent of the control or jurisdiction of the insular government over the harbor of San Juan; and in this connection, as to whether or not property situated entirely within the harbor area, engaged in operations connected with the lands underlying such harbor area, could receive any benefit from the expenditure from moneys raised by the insular government from taxation."

There is a confusing mixture of elements. If Porto Rico had jurisdiction over the harbor area, it had jurisdiction to tax property which was situated in the harbor, no matter how engaged; and, being so situated, the validity of the tax upon it cannot be determined by an inquiry of 372]the extent it may be benefited. Thomas v. Gay, 162 U. S. 264, 42 L. ed. 740, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 340; Wagoner v. Evans, 170 U. S. 588, 42 L. ed. 1154, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 730.

It, however, may be said that the property was only temporarily in the waters of Porto Rico, and that its situs was at the domicil of the dredging company.

The fact is not alleged, and no other fact which removed the property from the application of the rule that tangible personal property is subject to taxation by the state in which it is, no matter where the domicil of the owner may be. Old Dominion S. S. Co. v. Virginia, 198 U. S. 299, 305, 49 L. ed. 1059, 1062, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 686, 3 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1100.

The allegation is that prior to the 1st of April, 1908, the property was brought to and within the harbor of San Juan. The date is that of the assessment and levy of the tax, but whence the property had been brought, or how long it had been in the harbor before the levy of the tax, is not averred, nor was it necessary for the purpose of the cause of action alleged. There is not an intimation that the property had its situs for taxation elsewhere. The claims of exemption from the tax, and the only claims of exemption, were: (1) That Porto Rico, by virtue of the laws of the United States and of Porto Rico, and especially by virtue of those acts and proclamations of Congress and of the President of the United States creating reservations in and about the island of Porto Rico, was "not authorized to levy or collect any tax in connection with property the [situs?] of which" was "within such reservation, or within any navigable waters or harbor areas of the said island of Porto Rico." (2) That the property was not subject to taxation "while being employed in the performance of" the dredging company's "contract with the United States of America and within the said harbor area."

These allegations are, as we have already seen, the basis of the contentions made and argued by the company. It is true that after discussing them counsel "invite 373]the attention of the court" to "certain other considerations" expressed in the opinion of the court below. To analyze or summarize the opinion would extend our discussion unduly. Elements that are really independent are mingled somewhat, making it difficult to assign the exact strength given to them respectively, but we think the basis of the decision was, as it is of the contentions discussed by counsel for the company, that the property was not subject to the taxing power of Porto Rico because of its situation within the harbor area and because the title to such area had been reserved to the national government,—an untenable position, as we have seen.

Decree reversed, with directions to sustain the demurrer and dismiss the bill.

Mr. Justice Day, with whom concurred Mr. Justice Hughes and Mr. Justice Lamar, dissenting:

We are unable to concur in the judgment just pronounced. The reversal of the judgment below is, in our view, inconsistent with decisions heretofore made in this court concerning the power of taxation.

We agree with the decision of the court that the territory of Porto Rico has jurisdiction for taxing purposes over the harbor and waters in question, and that the use of the property for government purposes does not exempt it from taxation, and therefore do not dissent from anything that is said in the opinion of the court upon those subjects. Our objection to the judgment of reversal is that, as we see it, there is a ground of decision in the court below, ample to sustain its decree, which does not turn upon the determination of the controversy as to the political jurisdiction over these waters. In our opinion, the property of the dredging company had not acquired a taxable situs within the jurisdiction of the territory of Porto Rico.

*The case was heard upon demurrer, [374] and we must therefore take the allegations of the bill, well pleaded, to be true. From them it appears that prior to the 1st day of April, 1908, complainant company, a corporation of the state of Delaware, having its principal office and place of business at Wilmington, in that state, entered into a contract with the United States to perform certain services in connection with the dredging of portions of the harbor of San Juan, Porto Rico, and the channel leading from the ocean to the harbor. The bill alleges:

"That by virtue of the requirements of the said contract your orator did, prior to the said 1st day of April, 1908, bring to and within the said harbor area of the said harbor of San Juan certain boats and machinery, to be used by it in connection with its operations under the said contract, to wit, one dredge, one tugboat, two scows for dumping material to be removed, one coal scow, and one launch. That the said machinery and boats so brought by the said complainant and used in connection with its operations under said contract in the said harbor area of the harbor of San Juan were and are the property of the said complainant company, and since the same were so brought to the said harbor area the same have been constantly used by the said complainant, and engaged in its operations in carrying out its said contract with the said the United States; and the same have not been used in connection with any other business or operations whatsoever, and the same have at all times been entirely within the said harbor areas where the said operations under said contract were so being carried on. And your orator further states that it has not conducted or carried on any business in Porto Rico or in the waters adjacent thereto, except the said operations under the said contract with the United States aforesaid."

It is further alleged that on the 1st day of April, 1908, the taxing officer of Porto Rico undertook to levy a tax *of $1,-200 upon a valuation of the property at $75,000, under the laws of the territory, as of that date.

The case was submitted upon briefs without argument. In the brief of the attorney general, as well as that of the appellee, the question principally argued concerns the jurisdiction of the territory of Porto Rico over the harbor and waters of the bay. In the brief of the attorney general argument is made and cases are cited to sustain the claim that the situs of the property for the purposes of taxation was within the jurisdiction of the territory. In the brief submitted by the appellee reference is made to the opinion of the court for additional reasons for supporting the decree, which reasons are not adverted to at length in the brief. In the opinion of the court the allegations of the bill are treated, as might rightly be done, as raising the question of taxable situs of this property, and, among other things, the judge says:

"It has, we think, been settled by numerous recent decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States that the old rule of personal property following the domicile of the owner has been so varied and departed from as that it does not mean very much at the present time; the real question to be decided in every such case being whether the personal property—be the same rolling stock, machinery, merchandise, or even floating property, such as steamships, boats, or dredges—has been brought within the taxing jurisdiction of the government attempting to levy the tax. In other words, it must always be determined that the situs of the property is within the taxing jurisdiction. See Old Dominion S. S. Co. v. Virginia, 198 U. S. 299, 49 L. ed. 1059, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 686, 3 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1100, and the many cases cited. Also Ayer & L. Tie Co. v. Kentucky, 202 U. S. 409, 50 L. ed. 1082, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 679, 6 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 205, and cases cited, and Metropolitan L. Ins. Co. v. New Orleans, 205 U. S. 395, 51 L. ed. 853, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499, and citations."
56 L. ed.

After consideration of the subject the court reached the conclusion, not only that the local government of Porto Rico had no jurisdiction over the harbor and waters where this work was done, but that the property had no taxable situs in Porto Rico. See pp. 154 and 155, vol. 5, Porto Rico Fed. Rep.

It is well settled that property outside of the jurisdiction of a state cannot be taxed within the due-process clause of the 14th Amendment. Louisville & J. Ferry Co. v. Kentucky, 188 U. S. 385, 47 L. ed. 513, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 463; Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 198 U. S. 341, 49 L. ed. 1077, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 669; Union Refrigerator Transit Co. v. Kentucky, 199 U. S. 194, 50 L. ed. 150, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 36, 4 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 493.

As a general rule, in the absence of a situs elsewhere, the domicile, of the owner is the place where personalty is taxable. As was said in Tappan v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 19 Wall. 490, 22 L. ed. 189, by Mr. Chief Justice Waite, speaking for the court:

"Personal property, in the absence of any law to the contrary, follows the person of the owner, and has its situs at his domicile. But, for the purposes of taxation, it may be separated from him, and he may be taxed on its account at the place where it is actually located. These are familiar principles, and have been often acted upon in this court."

To the same effect, see St. Louis v. Wiggins Ferry Co. 11 Wall. 423, 20 L. ed. 192; Bristol v. Washington County, 177 U. S. 133, 44 L. ed. 701, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585; Ayer & L. Tie Co. v. Kentucky, 202 U. S. 409, 50 L. ed. 1082, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 679, 6 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 205.

In Buck v. Beach, 206 U. S. 392, 51 L. ed. 1106, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 712, 11 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 732, this court, while recognizing the rule of taxable situs of personal property as distinguished from the domicile of the owner, held that notes temporarily within a state, although in the possession of an agent of the owner, and there held for collection, were not within the taxing power, where the owner lived elsewhere.

It requires a showing that the property sought to be taxed is incorporated in or commingled with the property of the taxing authority, before it can become liable to taxation in any other jurisdiction than 377]that of the domicile *of the owner. Com. v. American Dredging Co. 122 Pa. 386, 1 L.R.A. 237, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 221, 9 Am. St. Rep. 116, 15 Atl. 443 (see infra).

The decisions in this court indicate that personal property of a tangible character, to become taxable, must have acquired a situs of a permanent nature within the jurisdiction of the authority seeking to levy the tax. The use of the term "permanent" in this connection may not mean the continued and unchangeable location of the property at a given place, but certainly does intend to include the idea of location which is not of a temporary or fleeting character.

As was said by this court in Morgan v. Parham, 16 Wall. 471, 21 L. ed. 303, in declaring that a vessel engaged in interstate commerce was not subject to taxation in the city of Mobile, Alabama, although it was physically within the limits of the city in the course of navigation:

"It is the opinion of the court that the state of Alabama had no jurisdiction over this vessel for the purpose of taxation, for the reason that it had not become incorporated into the personal property of that state, but was there temporarily only."

In Old Dominion S. S. Co. v. Virginia, 198 U. S. 299, 49 L. ed. 1059, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 686, 3 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 1100, it was held that certain vessels engaged in interstate commerce and registered outside of the state of Virginia were taxable in that state, it appearing that they were continuously used in navigating the waters of that state. Of that case this court said in Southern P. Co. v. Kentucky, 222 U. S. 63, 72, ante, 96, 100, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 13, 16:

"The case of Old Dominion S. S. Co. v. Virginia affords an instance of where the domicile of the owner as a taxing situs was held to have been lost and a new taxing situs acquired by reason of a permanent location within another jurisdiction. But in that case the judgment was rested upon the fact that the vessels had for years been continuously and exclusively engaged in the navigation of the Virginia waters, 378]which state had *thereby acquired jurisdiction for imposing a tax as upon property which had become incorporated into the tangible property within her territory."

In Ayer & L. Tie Co. v. Kentucky, supra, this court had occasion to consider the taxation of vessels plying between the ports of different states, and it was held that where a vessel has acquired an actual situs in a state other than that which is the domicile of the owner, it may be taxed, because it is within the jurisdiction of the taxing authority; and, after reviewing the previous cases in this court, Mr. Justice White, speaking for the court, said (p. 423):

"But, if enrolment at that place was within the statutes, it is wholly immaterial, since the previous decisions to which we have referred decisively establish that enrolment is irrelevant to the question of taxation, because the power of taxation of vessels depends either upon the actual domicile of the owner or the permanent situs of the property within the taxing jurisdiction."

As was said in one of the latest of this court's deliverances upon the subject (Metropolitan L. Ins. Co. v. New Orleans, 205 U. S. 395, 51 L. ed. 853, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499), "but personal property may be taxed in its permanent abiding place, although the domicile of the owner is elsewhere."

And in the latest deliverance of this court upon the subject (Southern P. Co. v. Kentucky, supra), decided at this term, the principle is again stated and applied, that tangible personal property, unless it has acquired an actual situs elsewhere, is taxable at the domicile of the owner.

In all the cases to which our attention has been called, decided in this court, the idea of permanency in the abiding place is emphasized as essential to taxable situs,—that is, the property sought to be taxed must become "commingled" with the property of the state (Old Dominion S. S. Co. v. Virginia, supra), or "intermingled" with *the general property of the state[379 (Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, supra), or "permanently located" there (Union Refrigerator Transit Co. v. Kentucky, 199 U. S. 194, 50 L. ed. 150, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 36, 4 A. & E. Ann. Cas. 493), or "incorporated in" the local property (Southern P. Co. v. Kentucky, supra). All these expressions indicate the idea of a permanent situs of the property.

The question then comes to this: When the Porto Rico authorities, on the 1st of April, 1908, undertook to levy this tax upon the dredging outfit, had it acquired a situs in that jurisdiction for the purpose of taxation? Answering this question, we must bear in mind that there is no showing that the property was permanently located in San Juan harbor, in the sense we have indicated, but that, on the contrary, it appears it was brought into Porto Rico for the purpose of carrying out a government contract upon which the owner of the property had entered at the time of the attempted taxation; that it was not used in connection with any other business or operation whatsoever, but had been continuously and entirely engaged in carrying out the contract for which it was taken to Porto Rico, and that the owner of the property had not engaged in any operations in Porto Rico or the waters thereof, except only those under the contract with the United States.

Tangible personal property is taxable at the owner's domicil, except where it is shown to have an actual situs elsewhere, and, as we have seen, actual situs is not gained when the property comes only temporarily within the taxing jurisdiction. Applying this test, we are of the opinion that this dredging outfit had not become incorporated into the personal property of the territory of Porto Rico, as manifestly it was there temporarily only. In our judgment this situation falls far short of a location in Porto Rico sufficient to subject it to the taxing power of that territory.

The cases relied upon and cited in the 380]brief of the attorney *general of Porto Rico (National Dredging Co. v. State, 99 Ala. 462, 12 So. 720, and North Western Lumber Co. v. Chehalis County, 25 Wash. 95, 54 L.R.A. 212, 87 Am. St. Rep. 747, 64 Pac. 909), are entirely different in their facts.

In the Alabama case the dredging outfit was held presumably to be in Mobile bay for the purpose of carrying out a series of contracts in the line of the dredging company's business. The court says:

"Indeed, as appears from this record, other property of the same kind which had previously been used by residents of Alabama in the prosecution of this work was purchased by the appellant company, and, being incorporated with that involved here, has all along been used like it in dredging the channel of Mobile bay, and one scow so used was built in the city of Mobile, and has never been, we assume, outside of the State."

And the court further says:

"In other words, taking into consideration the business of the corporation, the amount and continuing character of the work to be done in Mobile bay, the preparations made by the company for doing so much thereof as is authorized under one annual appropriation, it may be that this property will be for years engaged upon this work, as a part of that now being used by the company of like kind with this had been used thereon for a year or years prior to 1891. On this state of the case,—or even leaving out of view the considerations last adverted to,—it is clear, we think, that this property is not merely temporarily within Alabama, but that, to the contrary, its presence here is for such an indefinite period as involves the idea of permanency, in the sense in which that term is used with respect to the situs of property for the purposes of taxation."

In the Washington case, the property sought to be taxed was certain tugboats, which were claimed to be exempt from taxation because they were registered at a *port in another state. The evidence[381 disclosed that these tugs had been in use in the state of Washington from four to seven years, and not elsewhere, and that the only absence of the tugs from the harbors of that state was for the temporary purpose of repairs; and further, that they were used for all those years appurtenant to and as a part of the lumber plant and business of the lumber company in the county and state where taxed. Under such circumstances the supreme court of Washington held that the tugs were permanently in Washington, transacting a local business, and had acquired a taxable situs within that state.

A statement of these cases readily distinguishes them from the one at bar. In the case now before us it was sought to tax the dredging property upon its removal from the domicil of its owner for the performance of a single contract and for the transaction of no other business whatsoever, and presumably, as the court below said, not to remain in the jurisdiction beyond the term of the contract for which it was used. To tax property in this situation, it seems to us, would be extending the doctrine of taxable situs elsewhere than at the owner's domicil beyond any authority shown, and certainly beyond the reason of the rule. If property thus located could be taxed, the same principle would permit the taxing of a dredging outfit upon the Great Lakes of the country, frequently moving from port to port, in the performance of dredging contracts, in every jurisdiction where it might temporarily be, as well as at the domicil of the owner, where such property could unquestionably be reached.

In Com. v. American Dredging Co. supra, where a dredging outfit was specifically involved, the supreme court of Pennsylvania held that so much of the capital stock of the corporation as was invested in the state of New Jersey in a dredging outfit, namely $92,000 in four dredges which were built outside of the state of er been within the limits of that state, and the fourth of which had never been within its limits until after the end of the year; $6,000 in a tug which was built outside of the state of Pennsylvania, and was not within its limits during the year, and $38,500 in eleven scows, built outside of the state of Pennsylvania, and never within its limits, the property all being employed for corporate purposes in the states of New Jersey, Maryland, and Virginia, was nevertheless subject to taxation in the state of Pennsylvania, which was the domicile of the American Dredging Company, the owner of the property. In reaching that conclusion, Mr. Justice Paxson, who spoke for the court, said:

*Pennsylvania, three of which had nev-[382

"It must be conceded that the property in question must be liable to taxation in some jurisdiction. If it were permanently located in another state, it would be liable to taxation there. But the facts show that it is not permanently located out of the state. From the nature of the business it is in one place to-day and in another to-morrow, and hence not taxable in the jurisdiction where temporarily employed. It follows that if not taxable here, it escapes altogether. The rule as to vessels engaged in foreign or interstate commerce is that their situs, for the purpose of taxation, is their home port of registry, or the residence of their owner, if unregistered. Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Twombly, 29 Fed. 658; Hays v. Pacific Mail S. S. Co. 17 How. 596, 15 L. ed. 254.

"These vessels, if they may be so called, were not registered. Hence their situs for taxation is the domicile of the owners. This rule must prevail in the absence of anything to show that they are so permanently located in another state as to be liable to taxation under the laws of that state."

That case was commented on in the opinion of this court in Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 198 U. S. 341, 49 L. ed. 1077, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 669, in which it was held that the capital stock of a corporation *represented by property in stocks of coal which had been sent out of the state, and were deposited in other states for sale, could not be taxed.

Of the Dredging Company Case, Mr. Justice Peckham, speaking for this court, said:

"Such property is entirely unlike the property involved in Com. v. American Dredging Co. 122 Pa. 386, 1 L.R.A. 237, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 221, 9 Am. St. Rep. 116, 15 Atl. 443. That property consisted of vessels, or scows, or tugs, only temporarily out of the state of Pennsylvania, for the purpose of engaging in business, and liable to return to the state at any time, and was without any actual situs beyond the jurisdiction of the state itself."

We think, therefore, that the property in question was taxable in Delaware at the domicile of the owner, and we agree with the district court in its conclusion that it had not acquired a taxable situs in Porto Rico.

For this reason we dissent from the judgment of the court.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, Appt.,
v.

TERMINAL RAILROAD ASSOCIATION
OF ST. LOUIS et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 383-413.)

Monopoly — combination of terminal systems.

1. The mere combining of several independent railway terminal systems into one does not necessarily operate as a forbidden restraint, under the Sherman anti-trust act of July 2, 1890 (26 Stat. at L. 209, chap. 647, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3200), upon the interstate commerce which must use them.

[For other cases, see Monopoly, II. c, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Monopoly — combination of terminal systems.

2. The combination and unification of the terminal facilities at St. Louis under the exclusive ownership and control of less than all the railway companies under compulsion to use them—the inherent conditions being such as to prohibit any other reasonable means of railway access to that city—violates the provisions of the Sherman anti-trust act of July 2, 1890, §§ 1 and 2, in that it constitutes a contract or combination in restraint of commerce among the states, and an attempt to monopolize such commerce which must pass through the gateway at St. Louis.

[For other cases, see Monopoly, II. c, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Monopoly — combination of terminal systems — extent of relief.

3. Adequate relief from a combination of terminal facilities which offends against the provisions of the Sherman anti-trust act of July 2, 1890, §§ 1, 2, because it places such facilities under the exclusive ownership and control of less than all the railroad companies under compulsion, from the peculiar local topographical conditions, to use them, will be afforded by a decree requiring the reorganization of the combination so that it will act as the impartial agent of every railway line which must use the terminal instrumentalities.

NOTE.—On illegal trusts under modern anti-trust laws—see note to Whitwell v. Continental Tobacco Co. 64 L.R.A. 689.

[For other cases, see Monopoly, II. c, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 386.]

Argued October 20 and 23, 1911. Decided April 22, 1912.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Missouri to review a decree dismissing a bill to enforce the provisions of the Sherman anti-trust act against a combination of the railway terminal facilities at St. Louis. Reversed and remanded for the entry of a decree under which the combination shall be reorganized so as to act as the impartial agent of every railroad line which uses its facilities.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Edward C. Crow, Special Assistant to the Attorney General, argued the cause, and, with Mr. Charles A. Houts, United States Attorney, and Attorney General Wickersham, filed a brief for appellant:

The Sherman anti-trust act is aimed at restrictions upon interstate commerce. Given a reasonable construction, as it must receive, its purpose is to permit commerce between the states and with foreign nations to flow in their natural channels, unrestricted by any combinations, contracts, conspiracies, or monopolies whatsoever.

Hopkins v. United States, 171 U. S. 586, 43 L. ed. 293, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 40; Loewe v. Lawlor, 208 U. S. 274, 52 L. ed. 488, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 301, 13 Ann. Cas. 815.

Combinations between competing railroads engaged in interstate commerce unduly to restrain commerce, and combinations between media, or instruments, of interstate commerce, fall within the prohibition of the act.

United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Asso. 166 U. S. 319, 41 L. ed. 1020, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 548; United States v. Joint Traffic Asso. 171 U. S. 505, 43 L. ed. 259, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 25; Addyston Pipe & Steel Co. v. United States, 175 U. S. 244, 44 L. ed. 148, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 96; Northern Securities Co. v. United States, 193 U. S. 197, 48 L. ed. 679, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436; Anderson v. United States, 171 U. S. 604, 43 L. ed. 300, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 50; Standard Oil Co. v. United States, 221 U. S. 1, 55 L. ed. 619, 34 L.R.A.(N.S.) 834, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 502.

To monopolize interstate commerce or the media, or instruments, of interstate commerce, is to secure or adopt measures which may bring about an exclusive control of such commerce or of such instruments of commerce so as to prevent others from engaging therein, or using such instruments of commerce.
56 L. ed.

Re Greene, 52 Fed. 115; Northern Securities Co. v. United States, 193 U. S. 197, 402, 48 L. ed. 679, 726, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436; United States v. American Tobacco Co. 164 Fed. 700; United States v. E. C. Knight Co. 156 U. S. 1, 39 L. ed. 325, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 249.

It is not necessary, to bring a combination within the act, that the result of its operation shall be complete restraint or monopoly, or that it shall have resulted in actual injury to the public. It is sufficient if it really tends to that end, and to deprive the public of the advantages which flow from free competition.

Chesapeake & O. Fuel Co. v. United States, 53 C. C. A. 256, 115 Fed. 610; United States v. E. C. Knight Co. 156 U. S. 16, 39 L. ed. 330, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 249; Northern Securities Co. v. United States, 193 U. S. 197, 48 L. ed. 679, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436; Chattanooga Foundry & Pipe Works v. Atlanta, 203 U. S. 390, 51 L. ed. 241, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 65.

The terminal association is necessarily engaged in interstate commerce.

United States v. Union Stock Yards, 161 Fed. 919; United States v. Colorado & N. W. R. Co. 15 L.R.A.(N.S.) 167, 85 C. C. A. 27, 157 Fed. 321, 13 Ann. Cas. 873; United States v. Northern Pacific Terminal Co. 144 Fed. 861.

Mr. H. S. Priest argued the cause, and, with Mr. T. M. Pierce, filed a brief for appellees:

Union terminals have been frequently before the courts for consideration, and have always been recognized and approved as legitimate agencies in the work of railroad transportation.

State ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Terminal R. Asso. 182 Mo. 284, 81 S. W. 395; People ex rel. Bernard v. Cheeseman, 7 Colo. 376, 3 Pac. 716; Central R. & Bkg. Co. v. Perry, 58 Ga. 461; Bridwell v. Gate City Terminal Co. 127 Ga. 520, 10 L.R.A.(N.S.) 909, 56 S. E. 624; Indianapolis Union R. Co. v. Cooper, 6 Ind. App. 202, 33 N. E. 219; Reisner v. Strong, 24 Kan. 410; State ex rel. Little v. Martin, 51 Kan. 462, 33 Pac. 9; Worcester v. Norwich & W. R. Co. 109 Mass. 103; Worcester v. Railroad Comrs. 113 Mass. 161; Fort-street Union Depot Co. v. Morton, 83 Mich. 265, 47 N. W. 228; Detroit Union R. Depot & Station Co. v. Detroit, 88 Mich. 347, 50 N. W. 302; State v. St. Paul Union Depot Co. 42 Minn. 142, 6 L.R.A. 234, 43 N. W. 840; St. Paul Union Depot Co. v. Minnesota & N. W. R. Co. 47

Minn. 154, 13 L.R.A. 415, 49 N. W. 646; Chicago, St. P. & K. C. R. Co. v. St. Paul Union Depot R. Co. 54 Minn. 411, 56 N. W. 129; Dewey v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. 142 N. C. 392, 55 S. E. 292; Riley v. Charleston Union Station Co. 71 S. C. 457, 110 Am. St. Rep. 579, 51 S. E. 485; Ryan v. Louisville & N. Terminal Co. 102 Tenn. 124, 45 L.R.A. 303, 50 S. W. 744; Collier v. Union R. Co. 113 Tenn. 96, 83 S. W. 155; Joy v. St. Louis, 138 U. S. 1, 34 L. ed. 843, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 243; Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Union P. R. Co. 47 Fed. 15, 2 C. C. A. 174, 10 U. S. App. 98, 51 Fed. 309, 163 U. S. 564, 41 L. ed. 265, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1173.

Mr. John C. Higdon filed a brief as amicus curiæ.

Mr. Justice Lurton delivered the opinion of the court:

The United States filed this bill to enforce the provisions of the Sherman act of July 2, 1890, chap. 647, 26 Stat. at L. 209, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3200, against thirty-eight corporate and individual defendants named in the margin,† as 391] a combination in restraint *of interstate commerce and as a monopoly forbidden by that law. The cause was heard by the four circuit judges, who, being equally divided in judgment, dismissed the bill, without filing an opinion. From this decree the United States has appealed.

The principal defendant is the Terminal Railroad Association of St. Louis, hereinafter designated as the terminal company. It is a corporation of the state of Missouri, and was organized under an agreement made in 1889 between Mr. Jay Gould and a number of the defendant railroad companies for the express purpose of acquiring the properties of several independent terminal companies at St. Louis, with a view to combining and operating them as a unitary system.

The terminal properties first acquired and combined into one system by the terminal company comprised the following: The Union Railway & Transit Company of St. Louis and East St. Louis; the Terminal Railroad of St. Louis and East St. Louis; the Union Depot Company of St. Louis; the St. Louis Bridge Company; and the Tunnel Railroad of St. Louis. These properties included the great union station, the only existing railroad bridge,—the Eads or St. Louis bridge,—and every connecting or terminal company by means of which that bridge could be used by railroads terminating on either side of the river. For a time this combination was operated in competition *with the term-[392 in]al system of the Wiggins Ferry Company, and upon the completion of the Merchants' bridge, in competition with it, and a system of terminals which were organized in connection with it. The Wiggins Ferry Company had for many years operated car transfer boats by means of which cars were transferred between St. Louis and East St. Louis.

Upon each side of the river it owned extensive railway terminal facilities, with which connection was maintained with the many railroads terminating on the west and east sides of the rivers, which gave such roads connection with each other, as well as access to many of the industrial and business districts on each side. In 1890 a third terminal system was opened up by the completion of a second railroad bridge over the Mississippi river at St. Louis, known as the Merchants' bridge. This was a railroad toll bridge, open to every railroad upon equal terms. That it might forever maintain the potentiality of competition as a railroad bridge, the act of Congress authorizing its construction provided that no stockholders in any other railway bridge company should become a stockholder therein. But as this was a mere bridge company, it was essential that railroad companies desiring to use it should have railway connections with it on each side of the river. For this purpose two or more railway companies were organized and lines of railway were constructed connecting each end of the Merchants' bridge with various railroad systems terminating

†The Terminal Railroad Association of St. Louis; the St. Louis Merchants' Bridge Terminal Railway Company; the Wiggins Ferry Company; the St. Louis Bridge Company; the St. Louis Merchants' Bridge Company; the Missouri, Kansas, & Texas Railway Company; the St. Louis & San Francisco Railway Company; the Chicago & Alton Railway Company; the Baltimore & Ohio Southwestern Railroad Company; the Illinois Central Railroad Company; the St. Louis, Iron Mountain, & Southern Railway Company; the Chicago, Burlington, & Quincy Railway Company; the St. Louis, Vandalia, & Terre Haute Railroad Company; the Wabash Railroad Company; the Cleveland Cincinnati, Chicago, & St. Louis Railway Company; the Louisville & Nashville Railroad Company; the Southern Railway Company; the Chicago, Rock Island, & Pacific Railway Company; the Missouri Pacific Railway Company; the Central Trust Company of New York; A. A. Allen, S. M. Felton, A. J. Davidson, W. M. Green, J. T. Harahan, C. S. Clarke, H. Miller, Benjamin McKean, Joseph Ramsey, George E. Evans, C. E. Schaff, T. C. Powell, J. F. Stevens, A. G. Cochran, W. S. McChesney, Julius Walsh, V. W. Fisher and S. D. Webster.

on either side of the river. The Merchants' bridge and its allied terminals were thereby able to afford many, if not all, of the railroads coming into St. Louis, access to the business districts on both sides of the river, and connection with each other.

Thus, for a time, there existed three independent methods by which connection was maintained between railroads terminating on either side of the river at St. Louis: First, the original Wiggins Ferry 393]Company, and *its railway terminal connections; second, the Eads Railroad bridge and the several terminal companies by means of which railroads terminating at St. Louis were able to use that bridge and connect with one another, constituting the system controlled by the terminal company; and, third, the Merchants' bridge and terminal facilities owned and operated by companies in connection therewith.

This resulted in some cases in an unnecessary duplication of facilities, but it at least gave to carriers and shippers some choice, a condition which, if it does not lead to competition in charges, does insure competition in service. Important as were the considerations mentioned, their independence of one another served to keep open the means for the entrance of new lines to the city, and was an obstacle to united opposition from existing lines. The importance of this will be more clearly seen when we come to consider the topographical conditions of the situation.

That the promoters of the terminal company designed to obtain the control of every feasible means of railroad access to St. Louis, or means of connecting the lines of railway entering on opposite sides of the river, is manifested by the declarations of the original agreement, as well as by the successive steps which followed. Thus, the proviso in the act of Congress authorizing the construction of the Merchants' bridge, which forbade the ownership of its stock by any other bridge company or stockholder in any such company, was eliminated by an act of Congress, and shortly thereafter the terminal company obtained stock control of the Merchants' Bridge Company, and of its related terminal companies, and likewise a lease.

The Wiggins Ferry Company owned the river front on the Illinois shore opposite St. Louis for a distance of several miles. It had on that side and on its own property, switching yards and other terminal facilities. From these yards extended lines of rails which connected with its car transfer boats and with the termini of rail- 394]roads on the Illinois side. *On the St. Louis side of the river it had like facilities ties by which it was in connection with railway lines terminating on that side. That company was consequently able to interchange traffic between the systems on opposite sides of the river, and to serve many industries. In 1892 the Rock Island Railroad Company endeavored to obtain an independent entrance to the city. For this purpose it sought to acquire the facilities owned by the Wiggins Ferry Company by securing a control of its capital stock. This was not deemed desirable by the railroad companies which jointly owned the terminal company's facilities, and to prevent this acquisition effort was made to secure control of the stock. The competition was fierce and the market price of the shares pushed to an abnormal price. The final result being in doubt, an agreement was reached by which the Rock Island Company was admitted to joint ownership with the other proprietary companies in all of the terminal properties which were operated by the terminal company, or which should be acquired by it. The shares in the ferry company bought by the Rock Island were transferred to the terminal company at cost, and were paid for by that company. These shares, united with those which had been acquired by the terminal company, enabled the latter to absorb the properties of the ferry company, and thus the three independent terminal systems were combined into a single system.

We come, then, to the question upon which the case must turn: Has the unification of substantially every terminal facility by which the traffic of St. Louis is served resulted in a combination which is in restraint of trade within the meaning and purpose of the anti-trust act?

It is not contended that the unification of the terminal facilities of a great city where many railroad systems center is, under all circumstances and conditions, a combination in restraint of trade or commerce. Whether it is a facility in aid of interstate commerce or an unreasonable *restraint, forbidden by the act of Con- 395]gress, as construed and applied by this court in the cases of Standard Oil Co. v. United States, 221 U. S. 1, 55 L. ed. 619, 34 L.R.A. (N.S.) 834, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 502, and United States v. American Tobacco Co. 221 U. S. 106, 55 L. ed. 663, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 632, will depend upon the intent to be inferred from the extent of the control thereby secured over instrumentalities which such commerce is under compulsion to use, the method by which such control has been brought about, and the manner in which that control has been exerted.

The consequences to interstate commerce of this combination cannot be appreciated without a consideration of natural conditions greatly affecting the railroad situation at St. Louis. Though twenty-four lines of railway converge at St. Louis, not one of them passes through. About one half of these lines have their termini on the Illinois side of the river. The others, coming from the west and north, have their termini either in the city or on its northern edge. To the river the city owes its origin, and for a century and more its river commerce was predominant. It is now the great obstacle to connection between the termini of lines on opposite sides of the river and any entry into the city by eastern lines. The cost of construction and maintenance of railroad bridges over so great a river makes it impracticable for every road desiring to enter or pass through the city to have its own bridge. The obvious solution is the maintenance of toll bridges open to the use of any and all lines, upon identical terms. And so the commercial interests of St. Louis sought to solve the question, the system of car ferry transfer being inadequate to the growing demands of an ever-increasing population. The first bridge, called the Eads bridge, was, and is, a toll bridge. Any carrier may use it on equal terms. But to use it there must be access over rails connecting the bridge and the railway. On the St. Louis side the bridge terminates at the foot of the great hills upon which the city is built; on the Illinois side it 396] *ends in the low and wide valley of the Mississippi. This condition resulted in the organization of independent companies which undertook to connect the bridge on each side with the various railroad termini. On the Missouri side it was necessary to tunnel the hills, that the valley of Mill creek might be reached, where the roads from the west had their termini. Thus, though the bridge might be used by all upon equal terms, it was accessible only by means of the several terminal companies operating lines connecting it with the railroad termini.

This brought about a condition which led to the construction of the second bridge, the Merchants' bridge. This, too, was, and is, a toll bridge, and may be used by all upon equal terms. To prevent its control by the Eads Bridge Company, it was carefully provided that no stockholder in any other bridge company should own its shares. But this Merchants' bridge, like the Eads bridge, had no rail connections with any of the existing railroad systems, and these facilities, as in the case of the Eads bridge, were supplied by a number of independent railway companies who undertook to fill in the gaps between the bridge ends and the termini of railroads on both sides of the river. It must be also observed that these terminal companies were in many instances so supplied with switch connections as not only to connect with the bridge, but also served to connect such roads with each other and with the industries along their lines. Now, it is evident that these lines connecting railroad termini with the railroad bridges dominated the situation. They stood, as it were, just outside the gateway, and none could enter, though the gate stood open, who did not comply with their terms. The topographical situation making access to the city difficult does not end with the river. The city lies upon a group of great hills which hug the river closely and rapidly recede to the west. These hills are penetrated on the west by the narrow valley of Mill creek, which crosses the city about *its center. Railways coming from the 397 west use this valley, but its facilities are very restricted and now quite occupied. North of the city the hills drop back from the river gradually, and there exists a valley formed by the Mississippi and Missouri rivers. Railroads coming from the north on the west side of the river come by this valley. As we have stated before, the valley of the Mississippi at St. Louis is on the Illinois side of the river. Railroads coming from the east, northeast, and southeast have their termini in that valley. As a consequence, there have grown up numerous cities and towns of some consequence as manufacturing places, the chief of which is East St. Louis.

The result of the geographical and topographical situation is that it is, as a practical matter, impossible for any railroad company to pass through, or even enter St. Louis, so as to be within reach of its industries or commerce, without using the facilities entirely controlled by the terminal company. The averment of the bill that the railroad companies, here defendants, being the sole stockholders of the terminal company, as we shall later see, compel all other railroad companies converging at St. Louis to use the facilities owned and operated by the terminal company, is therefore borne out by the facts of the situation. Nor is this effect denied; for the learned counsel representing the proprietary companies, as well as the terminal company, say in their filed brief: "There indeed is compulsion, but it is inherent in the situation. The other companies use the terminal properties because it is not possible to acquire adequate facilities for themselves. The cost to any one company is prohibitive." Obviously, this was not true before the consolidation of the systems of the Wiggins Ferry Company and the Merchants' Bridge Company with the system theretofore controlled by the terminal company. That the nonproprietary companies might have been compelled to use the instrumentalities of one or the other of the three systems then available, 398]and *that the advantages secured might not have been so great as those offered by the unified system now operated by the terminal company, must be admitted. But that there existed before the three terminal systems were combined a considerable measure of competition for the business of the other companies, and a larger power of competition, is undeniable. That the fourteen proprietary companies did not then have the power they now have to exclude either existing roads not in the combination, or new companies, from acquiring an independent entrance into the city, is also indisputable. The independent existence of these three terminal systems was therefore a menace to complete domination, as keeping open the way for greater competition. Only by their absorption or some equivalent arrangement was it possible to exclude from independent entrance the Rock Island Company, or any other company which might desire its own terminals. To close the door to competition, large sums were expended to acquire stock control. For this purpose the obligations of the absorbed companies were assumed and new funds obtained by mortgages upon the unified system.

The physical conditions which compel the use of the combined system by every road which desires to cross the river, either to serve the commerce of the city or to connect with lines separated by the river, is the factor which gives greatest color to the unlawfulness of the combination as now controlled and operated. If the terminal company was in law and fact the agent of all, the mere unification which has occurred would take on quite a different aspect. It becomes, therefore, of the utmost importance to know the character and purpose of the corporation which has combined all of the terminal instrumentalities upon which the commerce of a great city and gateway between the East and West must depend. The fact that the terminal company is not an independent corporation at all is of the utmost significance. There 399]*are twenty-four railroads converging at St. Louis. The relation of the terminal company is not one of impartiality to each of them. It was organized in 1889, at the instance of six of these railroad companies, for the purpose of acquiring all existing terminal instrumentalities for the benefit of the combination, and such other companies as they might thereafter admit to joint ownership by unanimous consent, and upon a consideration to be agreed upon. From time to time other companies came to an agreement with the original proprietors until, at the time this bill was filed, the properties unified were held for the joint use of the fourteen companies made defendants. In the contract of 1889, above referred to, the purpose of acquiring the first terminals combined is declared to be, "that said properties may be held in perpetuity as a unit, and developed and improved in the interest of the proprietary companies, for the purpose of furnishing adequate terminal facilities in St. Louis and East St. Louis." This purpose was carried out by the conveyance to "each of the proprietary companies . . . forever, a right of joint use with each other and such other companies as may be admitted as proprietary lines to joint use thereof, of all said terminal properties . . . now held or that may be hereafter acquired in St. Louis and East St. Louis, . . . it being understood that the right herein granted to each proprietary company is not transferable to any extent whatever, but is to remain as an appurtenant to the railroad now owned by each proprietary company."

That these facilities were not to be acquired for the benefit of any railroad company which might desire a joint use thereof was made plain by a provision in the contract referred to, which stipulated that other railroad companies not named therein as proprietary companies might only be admitted "to joint use of said terminal system on unanimous consent, but not otherwise, of the *directors of the first par-[400 ty, and on payment of such a consideration as they may determine, and on signing this agreement," etc. Inasmuch as the directors of the terminal company consisted of one representative of each of the proprietary companies, selected by itself, it is plain that each of said companies had and still has a veto upon any joint use or control of terminals by any nonproprietary company.

By that and the supplemental agreement of December, 1902, the ferry company and the Merchants' Bridge Company having then been absorbed, the proprietary companies prescribe that the charges of the company shall be so adjusted as to produce no more revenue than shall equal the fixed charges, operating and maintenance expenses. Deficiencies for those purposes the proprietary companies guarantee to make good, though such payments are to be reimbursed by an increase in charges, if necessary.

We fail to find in either of the contracts referred to any provision abrogating the requirement of unanimous consent to the admission of other companies to the ownership of the terminal company, though counsel say that no such company will now find itself excluded from joint use or ownership upon application. That other companies are permitted to use the facilities of the terminal company upon paying the same charges paid by the proprietary companies seems to be conceded. But there is no provision by which any such privilege is accorded.

By still another clause in the agreement the proprietary companies obligate themselves to forever use the facilities of the terminal company for all business destined to cross the river. This would seem to guarantee against any competitive system, since the companies to the agreement now control about one third of the railroad mileage of the United States.

In acquiring these properties the terminal company has assumed mortgage and 401]stock dividend obligations of *the constituent companies aggregating about twenty-five million dollars. It has executed its own mortgage upon all of its property to secure an issue of fifty million dollars of bonds, of which twenty million dollars worth have been sold, and the proceeds used in construction or in paying for the properties acquired. It has thus about forty-five million dollars of mortgage or fixed charges or liabilities. The company has an authorized capital stock of fifty million dollars. Of this about twenty-eight million dollars have been issued in equal proportions to the several owning railroad companies. No dividends have ever been paid, and the company disclaims any purpose to pay dividends. We fail to find any obligation by which they may be prevented from paying dividends upon the stock held by the proprietary companies, or that in its treasury, if ever issued. Undoubtedly, the major part of this revenue arises from the business done by the proprietary companies through the terminal company, but that coming from other companies is, however, a large contribution. That no direct profit is derived by the owning companies from the operation of the terminals may be true. But it is not clear that the proprietary companies do not make an indirect profit through ownership of obligations of the absorbed companies.

That through their ownership and exclusive control they are in possession of advantages in respect to the enormous traffic which must use the St. Louis gateway is undeniable. That the proprietary companies have not availed themselves of the full measure of their power to impede free competition of outside companies may be true. Aside from their power under all of the conditions to exclude independent entrance to the city by any outside company, their control has resulted in certain methods which are not consistent with freedom of competition. To these acts we shall refer later.

We are not unmindful of the essential difference between *terminal systems[402 properly so described and railroad transportation companies. The first are but instrumentalities which assist the latter in the transfer of traffic between different lines, and in the collection and distribution of traffic. They are a modern evolution in the doing of railroad business, and are of the greatest public utility. They, under proper conditions, do not restrain, but promote, commerce.

The argument that the combination of the instrumentalities operated by the terminal company with those of the Merchants' Bridge Company was a combination of two competing lines of railroad, such as was condemned in Northern Securities Co. v. United States, 193 U. S. 197, 48 L. ed. 679, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436, is not well founded. This combination, if properly regarded as of parallel and competing lines, would have been obnoxious to the 17th section of the Constitution of Missouri. For the purpose of enforcing this Missouri prohibition, the state instituted a proceeding to dissolve the combination of the properties of the Merchants' Bridge Terminal Railroad Company with the Terminal Railroad Association of St. Louis, upon the ground that the railroads operated by those companies were parallel and competing lines of railroad. Relief was denied. The Missouri court held that the merger of mere railway terminals used to facilitate the public convenience by the transfer of cars from one line of railway to another, and instrumentalities for the distribution or gathering of traffic, freight or passenger, among scattered industries, or to different business centers of a great city, were not properly railroad companies within the reasonable meaning of the statutes forbidding combinations between competing or parallel lines of railroad. Referring to the legitimate use of terminal companies, the Missouri court said:

"A more effectual means of keeping competition up to the highest point between parallel or competing lines could not be devised. The destruction of the system would result *in compelling the ship-[403 per to employ the railroad with which he has switch connection, or else cart his product to a distant part of the city, at a cost possibly as great as the railroad tariff.

"St. Louis is a city of great magnitude in the extent of its area, its population, and its manufacturing and other business. A very large number of trunk-line railroads converge in this city. In the brief of one of the well-informed counsel in this case it is said that St. Louis is one of the largest railroad centers in the world. Suppose it were required of every railroad company to effect its entrance to the city as best it could and establish its own terminal facilities, we would have a large number of passenger stations, freight depots and switch yards scattered all over the vast area, and innumerable vehicles employed in hauling passengers and freight to and from those stations and depots. Or suppose it became necessary in the exigency of commerce that all in-coming trains should reach a common focus, but every railroad company provide its own track; then not only would the expense of obtaining the necessary rights of way be so enormous as to amount to the exclusion of all but a few of the strongest roads, but, if it could be accomplished, the city would be cut to pieces with the many lines of railroad intersecting it in every direction, and thus the greatest agency of commerce would become the greatest burden." 182 Mo. 284, 299, 81 S. W. 395.

Among the cases in which the public utility of such companies has been recognized are: Bridwell v. Gate City Terminal Co. 127 Ga. 520, 10 L.R.A. (N.S.) 909, 56 S. E. 624; Indianapolis Union R. Co. v. Cooper, 6 Ind. App. 202, 33 N. E. 219; State ex rel. Little v. Martin, 51 Kan. 462, 33 Pac. 9; Worcester v. Norwich & W. R. Co. 109 Mass. 103; Fort-street Union Depot Co. v. Morton, 83 Mich. 265, 47 N. W. 228; State v. St. Paul Union Depot Co. 42 Minn. 142, 6 L.R.A. 234, 43 N. W. 840; Ryan v. Louisville & N. Terminal Co. 102 Tenn. 124, 45 L.R.A. 303, 50 S. W. 744.

404] *While, therefore, the mere combining of several independent terminal systems into one may not operate as a restraint upon the interstate commerce which must use them, yet there may be conditions which will bring such a combination under the prohibition of the Sherman act. The one in question, counsel say, is not antagonistic to, but in harmony with, the anti-trust act, "because it expands competition by extending equal conveniences and advantages to all shippers located upon each of the three systems for all traffic to and from St. Louis; expedites and economizes the service." It is justified, they argue, by: "(1) The physical or topographical conditions peculiar to the locality; by (2) its commercial, industrial, and railroad development and history; by (3) public opinion expressed legislatively and judicially; and (4) by the judgment of experienced railroad engineers and managers." From which consideration the same counsel say that the issue presented by this record is, "whether the common control or ownership of all the terminal facilities (mechanical devices for the exchange, receipt, and distribution of traffic) of a large commercial and manufacturing center by all of the railroad companies, and for the benefit of all upon equal terms and facilities, without discrimination, is condemned by the Sherman act."

Let us analyze the proposition included in the issue, as stated by counsel, quoted above: Counsel assume that the combined terminals have come under a "common control or ownership." But this is not the case. That the instrumentalities so combined are not jointly owned or managed by all of the companies compelled to use them is a significant fact which must be taken into account for the purpose of determining whether there has been a violation of the anti-trust act. The control and ownership is that of the fourteen roads which are defendants. The railroad systems and the coal roads converging at St. Louis, which are not associated with the proprietary companies, are "under compulsion" 405 to use the terminal system, and yet have no voice in its control.

It cannot be controverted that, in ordinary circumstances, a number of independent companies might combine for the purpose of controlling or acquiring terminals for their common but exclusive use. In such cases other companies might be admitted upon terms or excluded altogether. If such terms were too onerous, there would ordinarily remain the right and power to construct their own terminals. But the situation at St. Louis is most extraordinary, and we base our conclusion in this case, in a large measure, upon that fact. The "physical or topographical condition peculiar to the locality," which is advanced as a prime justification for a unified system of terminals, constitutes a most obvious reason why such a unified system is an obstacle, a hindrance, and a restriction upon interstate commerce, unless it is the impartial agent of all who, owing to conditions, are under such compulsion, as here exists, to use its facilities. The witness upon whom the defendants chiefly rely to uphold the advantages of the unified system which has been constructed, Mr. Albert L. Perkins, gives this as his unqualified judgment. He was and is an experienced railroad engineer and manager and is the railway expert of the municipal bridge and terminal board, a commission appointed under a city ordinance, headed by the mayor, to study and report legislation needed to relieve the terminal conditions of St. Louis. From his study of the local situation he expresses the opinion that the terminals of railway lines in any large city should be unified as far as possible, and that such unification may be of the greatest public utility and of immeasurable advantage to commerce, state and interstate. Neither does he find in the conditions at St. Louis any insurmountable objection to such unification. The witness, however, points out that such a terminal company should be the agent of every 406]*company, and, furthermore, that its service should not be for profit or gain. In short, that every railroad using the service should be a joint owner and equally interested in the control and management. This, he thinks, will serve the greatest possible economy, and will give the most efficient service without discrimination. When thus jointly owned and controlled, whether through the medium of a mere holding or operating company, such as the terminal company is, or by other means, the facilities would belong to each relatively to its own business, and delivery would be made by each company over its own tracks to connecting lines or places of destination in the city. The charge for the haul thus lengthened would then be properly absorbed by the through rate, leaving nothing to be added to that to be charged the shipper or consignee but switching and storage charges proper.

The terminal properties in question are not so controlled and managed, in view of the inherent local conditions, as to escape condemnation as a restraint upon commerce. They are not under a common control and ownership. Nor can this be brought about unless the prohibition against the admission of other companies to such control is stricken out and provision made for the admission of any company to an equal control and management upon an equal basis with the present proprietary companies.

There are certain practices of this terminal company which operate to the disadvantage of the commerce which must cross the river at St. Louis, and of non-proprietary railroad lines compelled to use its facilities. One of them grows out of the fact that the terminal company is a terminal company and something more. It does not confine itself to supplying and operating mere facilities for the interchange of traffic between railroads, and to assistance in the collecting and distributing of traffic for the carrier companies. It, as well as several of the absorbed *term-[407]inal companies, was organized under ordinary railroad charters. If the combination which has occurred is to escape condemnation as a combination of parallel and competing railroad companies, it is because of the essential difference between railroad and terminal companies proper,—differences pointed out by the Missouri supreme court in the case heretofore referred to. Indeed, the defense to this proceeding is based upon the insistence that the terminal company is solely engaged in operating terminal facilities, defined in the briefs “as mechanical devices for the exchange, receipt, and distribution of traffic.” This terminal company, in addition to its schedule for terminal charges proper, such as switching, warehousing, etc., files its rate-sheets for the transportation of every class of merchandise from the termini of the railroads on the Illinois side of the river to destinations across the river, over its lines. These rates are applied to all traffic destined to cross the river, with certain exceptions to which we shall later refer, which originates within an irregular area of which St. Louis is the center, and having a diameter of from 1 to 200 miles. This arbitrary operates to cast a burden upon short hauls, which has led to much complaint, as being both discriminatory and extortionate. An exception is made as to traffic originating within so much of this area as constitutes what is called “Green Line territory,” or which is destined to points within “Green Line territory.” This seems to be based upon competitive conditions caused by the great toll railway bridge at Memphis, Tennessee, the bridge toll being treated by lines using the bridge as a part of the through rate.

Another exception to the rule imposing this arbitrary is that it does not apply to traffic which originates in East St. Louis, whether it is destined to cross the river or not. The reason for this exemption, where such traffic does cross the river, is not apparent. Possibly, it may be said *that[408] it is because the traffic of St. Louis and East St. Louis should be treated as arising in the same commercial area. But this reason does not seem to apply to the traffic originating in St. Louis, which is bound east, though that of East St. Louis is altogether free from this arbitrary charge. The effect of this arbitrary discrimination is obviously injurious to the commerce and manufacturers of St. Louis, and is among the chief causes of complaint against the terminal company. Mr. Perkins, to whom we have before referred as a capable and impartial expert, says of the consequences of this curious exception out of the 100-mile area rule, that "the effect of these charges was, of course, to put the man doing business in St. Louis at a disadvantage to that extent with the man doing business at East St. Louis on his eastern business." Again he says, that the practical operation was to give East St. Louis a distinct advantage in the manufacturing lines. Another practice which marks this terminal company as a transportation company which interposed itself between railroads having their termini on opposite sides of the river, and between the city itself and the roads terminating on the east side of the river, is that all traffic destined to cross the river at St. Louis, whether bound east or west, or destined for the city if coming from the east, is billed only to East St. Louis, and there rebilled to destination.

The practice of rebilling and of making a distinct hauling charge is an evident survival of the methods which existed when the eastern lines had no termini in St. Louis. They then billed to East St. Louis, and there turned the traffic over to one of the existing terminal companies, who made their own specific charges for the haul to places of delivery within the city. The practice has been continued after the reason for it has disappeared. The effect of this practice of rebilling at East St. Louis and of imposing this arbitrary upon traffic originating within 100 miles of the city, destined to cross the river, seems to have been also applied to the large coal traffic between the Illinois coal mines, upon which the city is largely dependent.

We come now to the remedy. In determining what this should be, we, as said by this court in Standard Oil Co. v. United States, 221 U. S. 1, 78, 55 L. ed. 619, 34 L.R.A. (N.S.) 834, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 502, must not overlook the fact that in applying a remedy "injury to the public by the prevention of an undue restraint on or the monopolization of trade or commerce is the foundation upon which the prohibitions of the statute rest; and, moreover, that one of the fundamental purposes of the statute is to protect, not to destroy, rights of property." If, as we have already said, the combination of two or more mere terminal companies into a single system does not violate the prohibition of the statute against contracts and combinations in restraint of interstate commerce, it is because such a combination may be of the greatest public utility. But when, as here, the inherent conditions are such as to prohibit any other reasonable means of entering the city, the combination of every such facility under the exclusive ownership and control of less than all of the companies under compulsion to use them violates both the first and second sections of the act, in that it constitutes a contract or combination in restraint of commerce among the states, and an attempt to monopolize commerce among the states which must pass through the gateway at St. Louis.

The government has urged a dissolution of the combination between the terminal company, the Merchants' Bridge Terminal Company, and the Wiggins Ferry Company. That remedy may be necessary unless one equally adequate can be applied.

But the illegal restraint upon commerce among the states which we here find to exist consists in the possession acquired by the proprietary companies through the *means and with the object we have[410 stated, of dominating commerce among the states, carried on by other railroads entering or seeking to enter the city of St. Louis, and by which such railroads are compelled either to desist from carrying on interstate commerce, or to do so upon the terms imposed by the proprietary companies. This control and possession constitute such a grip upon the commerce of St. Louis and commerce which must cross the river there, whether coming from the east or west, as to be both an illegal restraint and an attempt to monopolize.

The power resulting from the combination, even before completed by the acquisition of the Wiggins Ferry Company and its related terminals, was exhibited when the Rock Island sought an independent entrance.

Some of its abuses are shown by the imposition of the arbitrary hauling charge imposed upon the artificially limited trade districts described. It is shown also by the maintenance of the system of billing traffic destined to cross the river at St. Louis, either east or west, or to St. Louis, if from points on the east side of the river,—a practice so galling and universal as to practically "eliminate St. Louis from the railroad map," to quote the graphic, if extravagant, language of counsel for the United States, as respects the great traffic subject to the regulation.

Plainly the combination which has occurred would not be an illegal restraint under the terms of the statute if it were what is claimed for it, a proper terminal association acting as the impartial agent of every line which is under compulsion to use its instrumentalities. If, as we have pointed out, the violation of the statute, in view of the inherent physical conditions, grows out of administrative conditions which may be eliminated and the obvious advantages of unification preserved, such a modification of the agreement between the terminal company and the proprietary companies as shall constitute the former the bona fide agent and servant of every railroad line which *shall use its facilities, and an inhibition of certain methods of administration to which we have referred, will amply vindicate the wise purpose of the statute, and will preserve to the public a system of great public advantage.

These considerations lead to a reversal of the decree dismissing the bill. This is accordingly adjudged, and the case is remanded to the district court, with directions that a decree be there entered directing the parties to submit to the court, within ninety days after receipt of mandate, a plan for the reorganization of the contract between the fourteen defendant railroad companies and the terminal company, which we have pointed out as bringing the combination within the inhibition of the statute.

First. By providing for the admission of any existing or future railroad to joint ownership and control of the combined terminal properties, upon such just and reasonable terms as shall place such applying company upon a plane of equality in respect of benefits and burdens with the present proprietary companies.

Second. Such plan of reorganization must also provide definitely for the use of the terminal facilities by any other railroad not electing to become a joint owner, upon such just and reasonable terms and regulations as will, in respect of use, character, and cost of service, place every such company upon as nearly an equal plane as may be with respect to expenses and charges as that occupied by the proprietary companies.

Third. By eliminating from the present agreement between the terminal company and the proprietary companies any provision which restricts any such company to the use of the facilities of the terminal company.

Fourth. By providing for the complete abolition of the existing practice of billing to East St. Louis, or other junction points, and then rebilling traffic destined to St. Louis, or to points beyond.

Fifth. By providing for the abolition of any special or *so-called arbitrary charge for the use of the terminal facilities in respect of traffic originating within the so-called 100-mile area, that is not equally and in like manner applied in respect of all other traffic of a like character originating outside of that area.

Sixth. By providing that any disagreement between any company applying to become a joint owner or user, as herein provided for, and the terminal or proprietary companies, which shall arise after a final decree in this cause, may be submitted to the district court, upon a petition filed in this cause, subject to review by appeal in the usual manner.

Seventh. To avoid any possible misapprehension, the decree should also contain a provision that nothing therein shall be taken to affect in any wise or at any time the power of the Interstate Commerce Commission over the rates to be charged by the terminal company, or the mode of billing traffic passing over its lines, or the establishing of joint through rates or routes over its lines, or any other power conferred by law upon such Commission.

Upon failure of the parties to come to an agreement which is in substantial accord with this opinion and decree, the court will, after hearing the parties upon a plan for the dissolution of the combination between the terminal company, the Wiggins Ferry Company, the Merchants' Bridge Company, and the several terminal companies related to the Ferry and Merchants' Bridge Company, make such order and decree for the complete disjoinder of the three systems, and their future operation as independent systems, as may be necessary, enjoining the defendants, singly and collectively, from any exercise of control or dominion over either of the said terminal systems, or their related constituent companies, through lease, purchase, or stock control, and enjoining the defendants from voting any share in any of said companies or receiving dividends, directly or indirectly, or from any future *combination of the said systems, in evasion of such decree or any part thereof.

Mr. Justice Holmes took no part in the hearing or determination of this case.

P. E. HECKMAN and Robert L. Owen, Appts.,
v.

UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 413-448.)

Indians — restriction on alienation — extension.

1. Congress could lawfully enact the provisions of the act of April 26, 1906 (34 Stat. at L. 137, chap. 1876), § 19, extending the period of inalienability fixed by the act of July 1, 1902 (32 Stat. at L. 716, chap. 1375), §§ 11-15, with respect to lands allotted to the Cherokee Indians of the full blood.

NOTE.—On the power of Congress over the Indians—see note to Worcester v. Georgia, 8 L. ed. U. S. 484.

On multifariousness in bill—see note to Gains v. Chew, 11 L. ed. 402.

[For other cases, see Indians, VIII., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

United States — right to sue — Indian allotments — restrictions on alienation.

2. The United States must be deemed to have the right to invoke the equity jurisdiction of its courts to cancel conveyances of allotted lands by members of the Cherokee Nation, upon the ground that they were in violation of existing restrictions upon the power of alienation, in view of the peculiar relationship of the United States to the Indians, and of the explicit recognition by Congress in the act of May 27, 1908 (35 Stat. at L. 312, chap. 199), of the right of the government to enforce these restrictions by suit, and of the appropriation made in that and later acts for the maintenance of such suits.

[For other cases, see United States, 137-147, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Necessary parties — representative suit — Indian grantors.

3. The Indian grantors are not necessary parties to a suit by the United States to cancel conveyances of allotted lands by members of the Cherokee Nation, upon the ground that they were in violation of existing restrictions upon the power of alienation.

[For other cases, see Parties, I. a, 5; II. a, 2, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Judgment — conclusiveness — representative suit.

4. The decree in a suit by the United States to cancel conveyances by Indian allottees, upon the ground that they were in violation of existing restrictions on alienation, will necessarily preclude the prosecution by such allottees of any other suit for a similar purpose, relating to the same property.

[For other cases, see Judgment, 806-810, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Pleading — multifariousness — misjoinder.

5. A bill filed by the United States to cancel conveyances by Indian allottees on the ground that they were in violation of existing restrictions upon the power of alienation is not open to the objection of multifariousness or misjoinder because the suit involves a large number of separate conveyances by individual Indian allottees to distinct grantees made parties defendant. [For other cases, see Pleading, I. t, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 496.]

Argued October 12 and 13, 1911. Decided April 1, 1912.

APPEAL from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit to review a decree which reversed a decree of the Circuit Court for the Eastern District of Oklahoma, sustaining a demurrer to, and dismissing, a bill filed by the United States to cancel certain conveyances of allotted lands, made by members of the Cherokee Nation. Affirmed.

See same case below, 103 C. C. A. 1, 179 Fed. 13.

Statement by Mr. Justice Hughes:

The United States, by its Attorney General, upon the recommendation of the Secretary of the Interior, brought this suit in the circuit court of the United States for the eastern district of Oklahoma to cancel certain conveyances of allotted lands, made by members of the Cherokee Nation. Demurrer to the bill was sustained by the circuit court and the bill was dismissed. United States v. Allen, and similar cases, 171 Fed. 907. The judgment was reversed by the circuit court of appeals, and the trial court was directed to proceed with the suits in accordance with the views expressed in its opinion. 103 C. C. A. 1, 179 Fed. 13.

The government states in its brief that between July 14, 1908, and October 12, 1909, the United States brought 301 bills in equity against some 16,000 defendants, to cancel some 30,000 conveyances of allotted lands, made by as many or more grantors, members of the Five Civilized Tribes, upon the ground that the conveyances were in violation of existing restrictions upon the power of alienation. It is said that the selection and grouping of defendants in each case was determined by the substantial identity of the facts and propositions of law upon which the question of alienability of the lands depended.

Forty-six bills were filed to cancel 3,715 conveyances of lands of Cherokee Indians.

This particular suit deals with conveyances by Cherokee allottees of the full blood of lands allotted subsequent to the act of April 26, 1906, 34 Stat. at L. 137, chap. 1876. The grantors were not made parties. There are involved a number of separate conveyances to distinct grantees, parties defendant, two of whom prosecute this appeal from the judgment of the circuit court of appeals.

The bill alleges that under the treaties between the United States and the Cherokee tribe of Indians and its members, the United States granted to the Cherokee tribe certain lands in the Indian territory, now the eastern district of Oklahoma, and obligated itself by the terms of these treaties and of its laws to protect the Cherokee tribe in the enjoyment of the lands granted; that, according to the terms of said treaties and laws, and of the patent to the lands, the Cherokee tribe and every member thereof have at all times been and now are without power to dispose of any interest in the lands without the authority of the United States, or otherwise than in the manner it prescribed; that the government of the United States, by reason of the helpless and dependent character of the Indian tribes, and of their several members, is the guardian and has exclusive control of their property, by virtue of which there is imposed upon the United States the duty to do whatever may be necessary for their guidance, welfare, and protection; that the Cherokee tribe has always been and is now treated as a tribe of Indians by the government of the United States and its several branches; that this tribe is now under the care of an Indian agent duly appointed under the laws of Congress, and large sums are still appropriated by Congress for the benefit and protection of the tribe and of its individual members, and for the maintenance of schools; and that under the laws of Congress the government of the United States still has a large sum of money in its possession belonging to the tribe, and there still remains unallotted a large area of tribal lands, the common property of the tribe.

It is further alleged that in the exercise 417]of its powers to *regulate and govern the affairs of the Cherokee tribe of Indians and its members, having in view their welfare and the carrying out of its treaty obligations, Congress, by the act approved July 1, 1902 (32 Stat. at L. 716, chap. 1375), provided that the lands belonging to the Cherokee tribe in the present state of Oklahoma should be allotted in severalty among its members, but deeming the Indians to be untutored and improvident, and still requiring the protection and supervision of the general government, it was provided by this act that the portion of the lands so allotted as homesteads should be inalienable; and further, that the allotted lands other than homesteads should be alienable only in five years after the issuance of patent to the allottee, and that, in accordance with its provisions, the act of Congress was duly ratified by the Cherokee people on the 7th day of August, 1902.

The bill describes certain conveyances of lands situated in the eastern district of Oklahoma, made by Cherokee Indians to the defendants, respectively, with particulars as to the lands embraced in the conveyances, the consideration, the dates of execution, acknowledgment, and recording, and also the dates of the allotment certificates and of the recording of allotment deeds. The dates of the conveyances were between November 19, 1904, and May 7, 1908, and of the allotment certificates between April 30, 1906, and May 4, 1908. It is alleged that each of the tracts of land described was land of the Cherokee tribe which had been allotted to full-blood Indians of that tribe; that is, to those mentioned as grantors in the conveyances specified; that they were so allotted as to be subject to restrictions upon their alienation and encumbrance, and were so subject at the date of the execution and recording of the deeds described, which restrictions have never been removed; that the facts concerning the allotments and restrictions were matters of public record and notorious, and that the restrictions were imposed *by pub-418 lic laws of the United States of which the defendants had knowledge, and by which they were put upon inquiry and notice as to all matters concerning the condition of the particular tracts of land mentioned in the bill; that the deeds had been secured by the defendants in wilful violation of law and of the duty which rested upon this Nation and every member thereof, and for the purpose of unlawfully encumbering the allotted lands; and that by causing the deeds to be recorded the defendants had unlawfully obtained an apparent title or interest of record in the lands described in defiance of said agency supervision, and in open violation and contempt of the laws of the United States, to the irreparable injury of the Indians, and in direct interference with the supervision and control, policy, and duty of the government of the United States in that behalf.

It is also averred on information and belief that the defendants have unlawfully secured from members of the Cherokee tribe other deeds, conveyances, mortgages, powers of attorney, and contracts for and about their allotments, which the Indians and freedmen were without authority to make; that as these have not been recorded, the complainant is unable to give a minute and correct description without the discovery prayed for; that the defendants are continuing to induce the members of the Cherokee tribe named in the bill, and other members of said tribe, to execute deeds and instruments for and about their allotments, and threaten that they will continue such unlawful acts; that this unlawful conduct will greatly harass the United States in the discharge of its duties and in the administration of its policy in relation to these Indians, and compel it to bring many suits in order to annul the deeds and instruments which the defendants have taken and are taking, as alleged; that in addition to the instruments specified in the bill, upward of four thousand instruments of a similar nature, purporting to convey *or to-419 encumber the title to lands located within the eastern district of Oklahoma, and duly allotted to members of the Five Civilized Tribes, or belonging to said tribes, have been executed and placed on record by the defendants herein and other persons and corporations, in contravention of the treaties entered into between the United States and the several Indian tribes, and the laws of the United States; and that unless the United States shall be permitted to join in its bills numerous defendants, against each of whom it has a like cause of action, and against each of whom it seeks the same relief, and whose pretended claims are based upon similar facts, and involve precisely the same questions of law, it will be driven to the necessity of bringing a great number of distinct and separate suits, and that it will be practically impossible for the United States to prosecute, and for the courts to adjudicate and dispose of, so large a number of separate and distinct suits within any reasonable length of time.

The bill prays that the specified conveyances be declared void, and that the title to the lands described be decreed to be in the allottees or their heirs, subject to the terms, conditions, and limitations contained in the treaties, agreements, and laws of the United States. Discovery of all claims to lands allotted to any of the Cherokee tribe, or to unallotted lands of the tribe, and the surrender of instruments for cancelation, are sought; and it is also prayed that all defendants in possession, or claiming possession, be ordered to vacate or to cease making such claims, and that the United States have such other and further relief as may be proper.

The objections to the sufficiency of the bill as set forth in the demurrers are thus summarized in the appellants' brief:

(1) That the United States has no capacity to maintain the suit.

(2) That the bill is wholly without equity.

420] *(3) That there is a defect of parties.

(4) That there is a misjoinder of alleged causes of action.

(5) That the bill is multifarious.

The appeal from the judgment of the circuit court of appeals, which reversed the judgment of the circuit court, sustaining the demurrers, is taken under § 3 of the act of June 25, 1910, chap. 408 (36 Stat. at L. 837).

Messrs. Joseph C. Stone, Robert J. Boone, and S. T. Bledsoe argued the cause and filed a brief for appellants:

When the members of each of the Five Civilized Tribes select the lands they desire to take in allotment, and that selection is approved, nothing further remains to be done by such members in order to perfect their title to the lands so selected. The 56 L. ed.

issuance of the allotment certificate and patent which follows are mere ministerial acts. It requires neither allotment certificate nor patent to pass title to the allottee. The provision that "there shall be allotted, etc.," contained in the various agreements, is sufficient, when the land is selected and designated, to pass title to the allottee without the necessity of certificate or patent.

Wallace v. Adams, 74 C. C. A. 540, 143 Fed. 716; Jones v. Mechan, 175 U. S. 1, 16, 44 L. ed. 49, 55, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; Doe ex dem. Mann v. Wilson, 23 How. 457, 16 L. ed. 584; Quinney v. Denney, 18 Wis. 486; Crews v. Burcham, 1 Black, 352, 17 L. ed. 91; French v. Spencer, 21 How. 228, 16 L. ed. 97; Stark v. Starr, 6 Wall. 402, 18 L. ed. 925; Lamb v. Davenport, 18 Wall. 307, 21 L. ed. 759; Ryan v. Carter, 93 U. S. 78, 23 L. ed. 807; Best v. Polk (Best v. Doe) 18 Wall. 112, 21 L. ed. 805; Oliver v. Forbes, 17 Kan. 113; Clark v. Lord, 20 Kan. 390; Francis v. Francis, 136 Mich. 288, 99 N. W. 14, 203 U. S. 233, 51 L. ed. 165, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 129; United States v. Torrey Cedar Co. 154 Fed. 263; United States v. Moore, 154 Fed. 712; New York Indians v. United States, 170 U. S. 1, 42 L. ed. 927, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 531.

Restrictions upon alienation do not vest an interest in the United States or limit a fee-simple title.

Libby v. Clark, 118 U. S. 250, 255, 30 L. ed. 133, 134, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1045; Schrimpscher v. Stockton, 183 U. S. 290, 299, 46 L. ed. 203, 207, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 107.

The United States owns no property interest upon which to maintain this action, nor may the same be maintained for the protection of citizens generally against violations of law.

Oklahoma v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 220 U. S. 277, 55 L. ed. 465, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 437; Oklahoma ex rel. West v. Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. 220 U. S. 290, 55 L. ed. 469, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 441; Libby v. Clark, 118 U. S. 250-255, 30 L. ed. 133, 134, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1045; Schrimpscher v. Stockton, 183 U. S. 290-299, 46 L. ed. 203-207, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 107; United States v. Paine Lumber Co. 206 U. S. 467, 51 L. ed. 1139, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 697.

The former members of the Five Civilized Tribes are citizens of the United States and the state of Oklahoma, and not wards of either state or national governments.

Re Heff, 197 U. S. 488, 49 L. ed. 848, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 506; Boyd v. Nebraska, 143 U. S. 175, 36 L. ed. 114, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 375; Bolln v. Nebraska, 176 U. S. 38, 44 L. ed. 384, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 287; United States v. Allen, 171 Fed. 913; United States v. Saunders, 96 Fed. 268; United States v. Kopp, 110 Fed. 161; Ex parte Viles, 139 Fed. 68; United States v. Dooley, 151 Fed. 697; United States v. Auger, 153 Fed. 671; Ex parte Savage, 158 Fed. 205; United States v. Hall, 171 Fed. 214; United States v. Boss, 160 Fed. 132.

No such public policy exists as that upon which the jurisdiction of the trial court was sustained by the majority of the circuit court of appeals.

Hadden v. The Collector (Hadden v. Barney) 5 Wall. 107-111, 18 L. ed. 518, 519; Bate Refrigerating Co. v. Sulzberger, 157 U. S. 1-36, 39 L. ed. 601-611, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 508; Dewey v. United States, 178 U. S. 510-521, 44 L. ed. 1170-1174, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 981; Oklahoma v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 220 U. S. 277, 55 L. ed. 465, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 437; Re Wolfe, 122 Fed. 133; Southern R. Co. v. Machinists' Local Union No. 14, 111 Fed. 57; Shellenberger v. Ransom, 41 Neb. 631, 25 L.R.A. 564, 59 N. W. 935; United States v. Chong Sam, 47 Fed. 884; Opinion of Justices, 66 N. H. 665, 33 Atl. 1095.

The authorization, even if attempted, to bring a suit in the name of the United States, for and on behalf of a citizen of the state of Oklahoma, over his protest and objection, or without his consent, is not a regulation of commerce with an Indian tribe.

And an agreement between the United States and the state of Oklahoma, that such might be done, would be violative of the Federal Constitution and void.

Coyle v. Smith, 221 U. S. 559, 55 L. ed. 853, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 688; Pollard v. Hagan, 3 How. 212-235, 11 L. ed. 565-576; Escanaba & L. M. Transp. Co. v. Chicago, 107 U. S. 678, 27 L. ed. 442, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 185; Bolln v. Nebraska, 176 U. S. 83, 44 L. ed. 382, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 287; Dick v. United States, 208 U. S. 340, 52 L. ed. 520, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 399.

There is a defect of parties.

Barney v. Baltimore, 6 Wall. 280, 18 L. ed. 826; Williams v. Bankhead, 19 Wall. 563, 22 L. ed. 187; Ribon v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 16 Wall. 446, 21 L. ed. 367; Mallow v. Hinde, 12 Wheat. 198, 6 L. ed. 599; Chadbourn v. Coe, 2 C. C. A. 327, 10 U. S. App. 78, 51 Fed. 479; Bates, Fed. Eq. Proc. § 40; Shields v. Barrow, 17 How. 130, 15 L. ed. 158; Coiron v. Millaudon, 19 How. 113, 15 L. ed. 575; Gaylord v. Kelshaw, 1 Wall. 81, 17 L. ed. 612; Joy v. Wirtz, 1 Wash. C. C. 417, Fed. Cas. No. 7,553; Tobin v. Walkinshaw, 1 McAll. 26, Fed. Cas. No. 14,068; Bell v. Donohoe, 8 Sawy. 435, 17 Fed. 710; Florence Sewing-Mach. Co. v. Singer Mfg. Co. 4 Fisher. Pat. Cas. 329, 8 Blatchf. 113, Fed. Cas. No.

4,884; Empire Coal & Transp. Co. v. Empire Coal & Min. Co. 150 U. S. 159, 37 L. ed. 1037, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 66; New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. New Orleans, 164 U. S. 471, 41 L. ed. 518, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 161; Chadbourn v. Coe, 45 Fed. 822, 2 C. C. A. 327, 10 U. S. App. 78, 51 Fed. 479; Clark v. Great Northern R. Co. 81 Fed. 282.

But see French v. Shoemaker, 14 Wall. 314, 20 L. ed. 852; West v. Duncan, 42 Fed. 430; Smith v. Lee, 77 Fed. 779.

In every case where the parties acted in good faith the court ought to decree a personal judgment against the allottees for the amount of the consideration, for it was paid by mistake and the consideration for the payment has failed. If the contracts were void, but in good faith, equity will impute a promise to repay.

Wrought Iron Bridge Co. v. Utica, 17 Fed. 316; Louisiana v. Wood, 102 U. S. 294, 26 L. ed. 153; Marsh v. Fulton County, 10 Wall. 676, 19 L. ed. 1040; Tate v. Gaines, 25 Olla. 141, 26 L.R.A.(N.S.) 106, 105 Pac. 193.

Where the lands had no rental value, and, on account of the improvements so made in good faith, now have a great rental value, it should be decreed that the rentals or a part thereof be set aside each year until compensation shall have been made for the same.

Muskogee Development Co. v. Green, 22 Okla. 237, 97 Pac. 619; White v. Brown, 1 Ind. Terr. 98, 38 S. W. 335; Poplin v. Clausen, 1 Ind. Terr. 157, 38 S. W. 974; Shumate v. Harbin, 35 S. C. 521, 15 S. E. 270; Brockway v. Thomas, 36 Ark. 518; Beard v. Dansby, 48 Ark. 183, 2 S. W. 701; Potts v. Cullum, 68 Ill. 217.

The bill is devoid of equity.

Frost v. Spitley, 121 U. S. 552, 556, 30 L. ed. 1010, 1012, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1129; Orton v. Smith, 18 How. 263, 15 L. ed. 393; Dick v. Foraker, 155 U. S. 404, 414, 39 L. ed. 201, 205, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 124; United States v. Wilson, 118 U. S. 86, 30 L. ed. 110, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 991; United States v. Saunders, 96 Fed. 268; Peirsoll v. Elliott, 6 Pet. 96, 101, 8 L. ed. 332, 334; Rich v. Braxton, 158 U. S. 375, 407, 39 L. ed. 1022, 1033, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1006; Kennedy v. Hazelton, 128 U. S. 667, 672, 32 L. ed. 576, 578, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 202; Venice v. Woodruff, 62 N. Y. 462, 20 Am. Rep. 495; Marsh v. Brooklyn, 59 N. Y. 280.

The bill of complaint is multifarious.

Story, Eq. Pl. § 280; Cooper, Eq. Pl. 183; Hale v. Allinsson, 188 U. S. 56, 47 L. ed. 380, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 244, 102 Fed. 790; 1 Pom. Eq. Jur. 3d ed. p. 371, §§ 251½, 251¾; Best v. Drake, 11 Hare, 371; Barcus

v. Gates, 32 C. C. A. 337, 61 U. S. App. 596, 89 Fed. 783; Gaines v. Chew, 2 How. 619, 11 L. ed. 402; Brown v. Guarantee Trust & S. D. Co. 128 U. S. 403, 410, 32 L. ed. 468, 470, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 127; Tribbette v. Illinois C. R. Co. 70 Miss. 182, 19 L.R.A. 660, 35 Am. St. Rep. 642, 12 So. 32; Turner v. Mobile, 135 Ala. 73, 33 So. 132; Van Auken v. Dammeier, 27 Or. 150, 40 Pac. 89; Tompkins v. Craig, 93 Fed. 885.

See also brief of these counsel in Mullen v. United States, post, 834, and Deming Invest. Co. v. United States, post, 847.

Solicitor General Lehmann and Messrs. A. N. Frost and Harlow A. Leekley, Special Assistants to the Attorney General, argued the cause and filed a brief for appellee:

The United States may by suit in equity enforce the restrictions imposed by it upon the alienation of allotted tribal lands by members of the Indian tribes.

Tiger v. Western Invest. Co. 221 U. S. 286, 55 L. ed. 738, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 578; United States v. Allen, 103 C. C. A. 1, 179 Fed. 13; Conley v. Ballinger, 216 U. S. 84, 54 L. ed. 393, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224; United States v. Kagama, 118 U. S. 375, 30 L. ed. 228, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1109; Worcester v. Georgia, 6 Pet. 515, 8 L. ed. 483; Re Debs, 158 U. S. 564, 39 L. ed. 1092, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 900; United States v. American Bell Teleph. Co. 128 U. S. 315, 32 L. ed. 450, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 90; United States v. San Jacinto Tin Co. 125 U. S. 273, 31 L. ed. 747, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 850; United States v. Rickert, 188 U. S. 432, 47 L. ed. 532, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 478; Re Heff, 197 U. S. 488, 49 L. ed. 848, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 506; Beck v. Flournoy Live-Stock & Real Estate Co. 12 C. C. A. 497, 27 U. S. App. 618, 65 Fed. 30; United States v. Flournoy Live-Stock & Real Estate Co. 69 Fed. 886; Pilgrim v. Beck, 69 Fed. 895; United States v. Flournoy Live-Stock & Real Estate Co. 71 Fed. 576; Rainbow v. Young, 88 C. C. A. 653, 161 Fed. 835.

The Indian allottees are not necessary parties to such a suit, as the United States has rights and interests of its own to conserve, and is, moreover, under obligation to protect the Indians in those restrictions.

United States v. Allen, 103 C. C. A. 1, 179 Fed. 13; United States v. American Bell Teleph. Co. 128 U. S. 315, 32 L. ed. 450, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 90; United States v. San Jacinto Tin Co. 125 U. S. 273, 31 L. ed. 747, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 850; United States v. Hammers, 221 U. S. 220, 55 L. ed. 710, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 593; Tiger v. Western Invest. Co. 221 U. S. 286, 55 L. ed. 56 L. ed.

738, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 578; United States v. Trinidad Coal & Coking Co. 137 U. S. 160, 34 L. ed. 640, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 57; Pilgrim v. Beck, 69 Fed. 895.

The bill is not multifarious, for it joins only such transactions as depend for their validity or invalidity upon the same state of facts and the same propositions of law.

Story, Eq. Pl. 14th ed. § 539; Jennison, Ch. Pr. 26; Hale v. Allinson, 188 U. S. 56, 47 L. ed. 380, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 244; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Caffrey, 128 Fed. 770; Bitterman v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 207 U. S. 205, 52 L. ed. 171, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 91, 12 Ann. Cas. 693.

Messrs. A. N. Frost and Harlow A. Leekley filed a separate brief for appellee:

There can be no question of the invalidity of all the conveyances complained of, included in this appeal.

Tiger v. Western Invest. Co. 221 U. S. 286, 55 L. ed. 738, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 578.

Mr. Justice Hughes, after making the above statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

The conveyances which this suit was brought to cancel were executed by members of the Cherokee tribe of Indians, of the full-blood, of lands allotted to them in severalty. The statute under which the allotments were made (act of July 1, 1902, chap. 1375, 32 Stat. at L. 716, accepted by the Cherokee nation on August 7, 1902), provided that the lands should be inalienable for a period specified. Secs. 11-15 (id. p. 717). The lands in question were "surplus" lands; that is, those other than homesteads. While the restrictions applicable to lands of this character were still in force, Congress extended the period of inalienability by the act of April 26, 1906. 34 Stat. at L. 137, chap. 1876. Section 19 of this act (id. p. 144) is as follows:

"Sec. 19. That no full-blood Indian of the Choctaw, *Chickasaw, Cherokee, Creek, [427 or Seminole tribes shall have power to alienate, sell, dispose of, or encumber in any manner any of the lands allotted to him for a period of twenty-five years from and after the passage and approval of this act, unless such restriction shall, prior to the expiration of said period, be removed by act of Congress; and for all purposes the quantum of Indian blood possessed by any member of said tribes shall be determined by the rolls of citizens of said tribes approved by the Secretary of the Interior: Provided, however, That such full-blood Indians of any of said tribes may lease any lands other than homesteads for more than one year under such rules and regulations as may be prescribed by the Secretary of the Interior; and in case of the inability of any full-blood owner of a homestead, on account of infirmity or age, to work or farm his homestead, the Secretary of the Interior, upon proof of such inability, may authorize the leasing of such homestead under such rules and regulations: Provided further, That conveyances heretofore made by members of any of the Five Civilized Tribes subsequent to the selection of allotment, and subsequent to removal of restriction, where patents thereafter issue, shall not be deemed or held invalid solely because said conveyances were made prior to issuance and recording or delivery of patent or deed; but this shall not be held or construed as affecting the validity or invalidity of any such conveyance, except as hereinabove provided; and every deed executed before, or for the making of which a contract or agreement was entered into before, the removal of restrictions, be and the same is hereby declared void: Provided further, That all lands upon which restrictions are removed shall be subject to taxation, and the other lands shall be exempt from taxation as long as the title remains in the original allottee."

The power of Congress thus to extend the restriction upon alienation was sustained 428]by this court in Tiger v. Western Invest. Co. 221 U. S. 286, 55 L. ed. 738, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 578. There the question related to a conveyance of inherited lands, made by a Creek Indian of the full blood, without the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, as required by § 22 of the act of 1906. The conveyance had been executed after the expiration of the five-year limitation upon alienation, prescribed by the supplemental agreement with the Creek Nation (act of June 30, 1902, chap. 1323, § 16, 32 Stat. at L. 503); but meanwhile, and during the continuance of the original restriction, the act of 1906 had been enacted. It was held that the restriction of the later statute was valid.

The reasoning of this decision is conclusive as to the validity of the extension by § 19 of the act of 1906 of the period of inalienability of lands allotted, as in this case, to full-blood Cherokees. And the same principle governs the restrictions provided by the act of May 27, 1908, chap. 199, 35 Stat. at L. 312.

It is not open to dispute that, upon the facts alleged, all the conveyances specified in the bill in this suit were executed in violation of restrictions lawfully imposed.

The principal question now presented is with respect to the capacity of the United States to sue in its own courts to enforce these restrictions.

The relations of the United States to the Cherokees have repeatedly been described in the decisions of this court. Cherokee Nation v. Georgia, 5 Pet. 1, 8 L. ed. 25; Worcester v. Georgia, 6 Pet. 515, 8 L. ed. 483; United States v. Rogers, 4 How. 567, 11 L. ed. 1105; United States use of Mackey v. Coxe, 18 How. 100, 15 L. ed. 299; Cherokee Trust Funds, 117 U. S. 288, 29 L. ed. 880, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 718; Cherokee Nation v. Southern Kansas R. Co. 135 U. S. 641, 34 L. ed. 295, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 965; United States v. Old Settlers, 148 U. S. 427, 37 L. ed. 509, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 650; Cherokee Nation v. Journeycake, 155 U. S. 196, 39 L. ed. 120, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 55; Stephens v. Cherokee Nation, 174 U. S. 445, 43 L. ed. 1041, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 722; Cherokee Nation v. Hitchcock, 187 U. S. 294, 47 L. ed. 183, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 115; United States ex rel. Lowe v. Fisher, 223 U. S. 95, ante, 364, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 196. But in view of the nature of the present controversy, the facts of main importance may be briefly restated.

*The United States made its first 429 treaty with the Cherokees on November 28, 1785 (7 Stat. at L. 18). Constituting one of the most powerful tribes of Indians which then inhabited the country, they claimed the principal part of the territory now comprised within the states of North and South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, and Tennessee. By this treaty, the Cherokees acknowledged that they were under the protection of the United States of America, and of no other sovereign, the boundary of their hunting grounds was fixed, and it was provided that "for the benefit and comfort of the Indians, and for the prevention of injuries or oppressions on the part of the citizens or Indians, the United States, in Congress assembled, shall have the sole and exclusive right of regulating the trade with the Indians, and managing all their affairs in such manner as they think proper." Another treaty, with similar objects, was made on July 2, 1791 (7 Stat. at L. 39). In 1817, following a migration of a portion of the tribe to lands of the United States on the Arkansas and White rivers, the Cherokee Nation ceded to the United States certain tracts which they formerly held, and in exchange the United States bound themselves to give to that branch of the Nation on the Arkansas as much land as they had received, or might thereafter receive, east of the Mississippi. 7 Stat. at L. 156. A further cession of land was made to the United States in 1819. 7 Stat. at L. 195.

By the terms of the treaty of May 6, 1828 (7 Stat. at L. 311, 315), with the representatives of the Cherokee Nation, West, reciting the purpose of securing to them and their friends and brothers from the East who might join them, "a permanent home," which should, "under the most solemn guaranty of the United States, be, and remain, theirs forever,—a home that shall never, in all future time, be embarrassed by having extended around it the lines or placed over it the jurisdiction of a 430] territory or state,"—*the United States agreed to guarantee to the Cherokees forever seven millions of acres of land, as described, situated in what became known as the Indian territory, and, in addition, "a perpetual outlet, west, and a free and unmolested use of all the country lying west of the western boundary of the above-described limits, and as far west as the sovereignty of the United States and their right of soil extend." On May 28, 1830, Congress authorized the President to assure title to the Indians to such exchanged lands, and to execute a patent, if desired, "provided always, that such lands shall revert to the United States if the Indians become extinct or abandon the same." 4 Stat. at L. 412, chap. 148. A supplementary treaty confirming the guaranty of lands, and fixing boundaries, was made on February 14, 1833. 7 Stat. at L. 414.

The continued presence of the Eastern Cherokees gave rise to serious controversies and oppressive legislation in the states where they resided. To terminate these difficulties, and "with a view to reuniting their people in one body," a treaty was signed at New Echota, in the state of Georgia, on December 29, 1835. 7 Stat. at L. 478. The Cherokee Nation ceded to the United States all their land east of the Mississippi river in consideration of the payment of $5,000,000; and in addition to the lands described in the treaties of 1828 and 1833, the United States agreed to convey to the Cherokees 800,000 acres for the sum of $500,000. It was stipulated that the ceded lands should not at any future time, without the consent of the Cherokee Nation, be included "within the territorial limits or jurisdiction of any state or territory," and the United States agreed to secure to the Cherokee Nation "the right by their national councils" to make such laws as might be deemed necessary "for the government and protection of the persons and property within their own country, belonging 431] to their people, or such *persons as have connected themselves with them: provided always that they shall not be inconsistent with the Constitution of the United States and such acts of Congress as have been or may be passed regulating trade and intercourse with the Indians; and also, that they shall not be considered as extending to such citizens and Army of 56 L. ed.

the United States as may travel or reside in the Indian country by permission, according to the laws and regulations established by the government of the same."

The two tracts—the one consisting of the 7,000,000 acres and the "outlet," together aggregating 13,574,135.14 acres, and the other of 800,000 acres—were conveyed to the Cherokee Nation by patent on December 31, 1838, subject to the condition specified in the act of 1830, that the land should revert to the United States if the Cherokee Nation should become extinct or abandon the same. On September 6, 1839, the Cherokees adopted a constitution for the reunited nation. Dissensions having arisen among the members of the tribe, a new treaty was made with the United States on August 6, 1846 (9 Stat. at L. 871), in which it was set forth that the lands occupied by the Cherokee Nation should "be secured to the whole Cherokee people, for their common use and benefit," and provision was made for the settlement of differences. There was a further treaty on July 19, 1866. 14 Stat. at L. 799.

The "Cherokee Outlet" was purchased by the United States in 1893 for the sum of $8,595,736. 27 Stat. at L. 640, chap. 209.

At this time, the conditions in the Indian territory were most unsatisfactory. There had been a large accession of whites who made no claim to Indian citizenship, and were residing in the territory with the approval of the Indian authorities. These greatly outnumbered the Indians. The existing means of government had failed of their purpose, and an exigency had arisen, originally unforeseen, requiring the adoption of new measures. This led to the enactment of legislation which contemplated *the dissolution of the tribal organ-[432] izations and the distribution of the tribal property. By § 15 of the act of March 3, 1893, chap. 209 (27 Stat. at L. 645), it was provided: "The consent of the United States is hereby given to the allotment of lands in severalty, not exceeding one hundred and sixty acres to any one individual, within the limits of the country occupied by the Cherokees, Creeks, Choctaws, Chickasaws, and Seminoles; and upon such allotments, the individuals to whom the same may be allotted shall be deemed in all respects citizens of the United States, . . . and upon the allotment of the lands held by said tribes respectively the reversionary interest of the United States therein shall be relinquished and shall cease." And by § 16 of the same act provision was made for the appointment of commissioners to enter into negotiations with the Five Civilized Tribes, "for the purpose of the extinguishment of the national or tribal title to any lands within that territory now held by any and all of such nations or tribes, either by cession of the same or some part thereof to the United States, or by the allotment and division of the same in severalty among the Indians of such nations or tribes, respectively, as may be entitled to the same, or by such other method as may be agreed upon between the several nations and tribes aforesaid, or each of them, with the United States, with a view to such an adjustment, upon the basis of justice and equity, as may, with the consent of such nations or tribes of Indians, so far as may be necessary, be requisite and suitable to enable the ultimate creation of a state or states of the Union which shall embrace the lands within said Indian territory."

But in executing this policy, Congress was solicitous to conserve the interests of the Indians and to fulfil the national obligation, not simply by assuring an equitable apportionment of the property, but by safeguarding the individual ownership of allottees through suitable restrictions [433]*which were designed to secure them in their possession and to prevent their exploitation.

The necessity for legislative action, and the purposes to be subserved, were fully presented in the report submitted in May, 1894, by the Senate Committee on the Five Civilized Tribes (S. Rept. No. 377, 53d Cong. 2d Sess.), a portion of which is quoted in the statement of facts made by the court in Stephens v. Cherokee Nation, 174 U. S. pp. 447-451, 43 L. ed. 1041-1043, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 722. The committee said: "This section of country was set apart to the Indian with the avowed purpose of maintaining an Indian community beyond and away from the influence of white people. We stipulated that they should have unrestricted self-government and full jurisdiction over persons and property within their respective limits, and that we would protect them against intrusion of white people, and that we would not incorporate them in a political organization without their consent. Every treaty, from 1828 to and including the treaty of 1866, was based on this idea of exclusion of the Indians from the whites, and nonparticipation by the whites in their political and industrial affairs. We made it possible for the Indians of that section of country to maintain their tribal relations and their Indian polity, laws, and civilization if they wished so to do. And if now the isolation and exclusiveness sought to be given to them by our solemn treaties is destroyed, and they are overrun by a population of strangers five times in number to their own, it is not the fault of the government of the United States, but comes from their own acts in admitting whites to citizenship under their laws, and by inviting white people to come within their jurisdiction to become traders, farmers, and to follow professional pursuits."

And, referring to the tribal lands, the report continued: "The theory of the government was, when it made title to the lands in the Indian territory to the Indian tribes as bodies politic, that the title was held for all of the Indians *of such tribe.[434 All were to be the equal participators in the benefits to be derived from such holding. But we find in practice such is not the case. A few enterprising citizens of the tribe, frequently not Indians by blood, but by intermarriage, have in fact become the practical owners of the best and greatest part of these lands, while the title still remains in the tribe,—theoretically for all, yet in fact the great body of the tribe derives no more benefit from their title than the neighbors in Kansas, Arkansas, or Missouri. . . . As we have said, the title to these lands is held by the tribe in trust for the people. We have shown that this trust is not being properly executed, nor will it be if left to the Indians, and the question arises, What is the duty of the government of the United States with reference to this trust? While we have recognized these tribes as dependent nations, the government has likewise recognized its guardianship over the Indians, and its obligations to protect them in their property and personal rights. In the treaty with the Cherokees, made in 1846, we stipulated that they should pass laws for equal protection, and for the security of life, liberty, and property. If the tribe fails to administer its trust properly by securing to all the people of the tribe equitable participation in the common property of the tribe, there appears to be no redress for the Indian so deprived of his rights, unless the government does interfere to administer such trust."

The commission for which provision was made by the act of 1893—known as the Dawes Commission—also made reports to Congress (November 20, 1894, and November 18, 1895), "finding a deplorable state of affairs and the general prevalence of misrule." In the report of November 18, 1895, the commission said: "There is no alternative left to the United States but to assume the responsibility for future conditions in this territory. It has created the forms of government which have brought *about these results, and the[435 continuance rests on its authority. . . . The commission is compelled by the evidence forced upon them during their examination into the administration of the so-called governments in this territory to report that these governments, in all their branches, are wholly corrupt, irresponsible, and unworthy to be longer trusted with the care and control of the money and other property of Indian citizens; much less their lives, which they scarcely pretend to protect." Stephens v. Cherokee Nation, supra, pp. 452, 453.

By the acts of June 10, 1896, chap. 398 (29 Stat. at L. 321, 339), and of June, 7, 1897, chap. 3 (30 Stat. at L. 62, 84), the authority of the Dawes Commission was continued and extended; and provision was made for the hearing and determination of applications for citizenship in the tribes and for the making of rolls of membership. It was further provided by the statute of 1897, that none of the acts, ordinances, and resolutions (with certain stated exceptions) of the council of either of the Five Tribes should take effect if disapproved by the President. Then followed the act of June 28, 1898, chap. 517 (30 Stat. at L. 495), a comprehensive statute embracing provisions as to the enrolment of members of the tribes and for the allotment of "the exclusive use and occupancy of the surface of all the lands of said nation or tribe susceptible of allotment, among the citizens thereof, as shown by said roll, giving to each, so far as possible, his fair and equal share thereof, considering the nature and fertility of the soil, location and value of same." By this legislation "the United States practically assumed the full control over the Cherokees as well as the other nations constituting the Five Civilized Tribes, and took upon itself the determination of membership in the tribes for the purpose of adjusting their rights in the tribal property." Cherokee Nation v. Hitchcock, 187 U. S. p. 306, 47 L. ed. 189, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 115.

Between 1898 and 1902, allotment agreements with *the Five Civilized Tribes were approved by Congress. The allotment act of July 1, 1902, which related to the Cherokees (32 Stat. at L. 716, chap. 1375), provided (§ 63) that the tribal government should not continue longer than March 4, 1906. But, by joint resolution of Congress, passed March 2, 1906, the tribal existence and government of this tribe and of the others were "continued in full force and effect for all purposes under existing laws until all property of such tribes, or the proceeds thereof, shall be distributed among the individual members of said tribes, unless hereafter otherwise provided by law." 34 Stat. at L. 822. A similar provision was contained in the act of April 26, 1906. 56 L. ed.

34 Stat. at L. 148, chap. 1877, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1909, p. 529.

The placing of restrictions upon the right of alienation was an essential part of the plan of individual allotment; and limitations were imposed by each of the allotment agreements. The separate statutes were supplemented by the general acts of 1906 and 1908, already mentioned. These restrictions evinced the continuance, to this extent, at least, of the guardianship which the United States had exercised from the beginning. That the conferring of citizenship was in no wise inconsistent with the retention of control over the disposition of the allotted lands was expressly decided in the case of Tiger v. Western Invest. Co. 221 U. S. 286, 55 L. ed. 738, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 578, in which the conclusions of the court were thus stated:

"Conceding that Marchie Tiger, by the act conferring citizenship, obtained a status which gave him certain civil and political rights, inhering in the privileges and immunities of such citizenship, unnecessary to here discuss, he was still a ward of the nation so far as the alienation of these lands was concerned, and a member of the existing Creek Nation. . . . Upon the matters involved, our conclusions are that Congress has had at all times, and now has, the right to pass legislation in the interest of the Indians as a dependent people; that there is nothing in *citizenship incom- [437] patible with this guardianship over the Indian's lands inherited from allottees, as shown in this case; that, in the present case, when the act of 1906 was passed, the Congress had not released its control over the alienation of lands of full-blood Indians of the Creek Nation; that it was within the power of Congress to continue to restrict alienation by requiring, as to full-blood Indians, the consent of the Secretary of the Interior to a proposed alienation of lands such as are involved in this case; that it rests with Congress to determine when its guardianship shall cease; and while it still continues, it has the right to vary its restrictions upon alienation of Indian lands in the promotion of what it deems the best interest of the Indian."

During the continuance of this guardianship, the right and duty of the nation to enforce by all appropriate means the restrictions designed for the security of the Indians cannot be gainsaid. While relating to the welfare of the Indians, the maintenance of the limitations which Congress has prescribed as a part of its plan of distribution is distinctly an interest of the United States. A review of its dealings with the tribe permits no other conclusion. Out of its peculiar relation to these dependent peoples sprang obligations to the fulfilment of which the national honor has been committed. "From their very weakness and helplessness, so largely due to the course of dealing of the Federal government with them and the treaties in which it has been promised, there arises the duty of protection, and with it the power. This has always been recognized by the Executive and by Congress and by this court, whenever the question has arisen." United States v. Kagama, 118 U. S. 375, 384, 30 L. ed. 228, 231, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1109.

This national interest is not to be expressed in terms of property, or to be limited to the assertion of rights incident to the ownership of a reversion or to the holding of a technical title in trust. When, 438] in 1838, patent was issued *to the Cherokees, providing that it was subject to the condition that the granted lands should revert to the United States if the Cherokee Nation became extinct or abandoned them, neither the rights nor the duties of the United States were confined to the reversionary interest thus secured. And its relinquishment made it no less a matter of national concern that the restrictions designed to protect the Indian allottees should be enforced. But this object could not be accomplished if the enforcement were left to the Indians themselves. It is no answer to say that conveyances obtained in violation of restrictions would be void. That, of course, is true, and yet, by means of the conveyances and the consequent assertion of rights of ownership by the grantees, the Indians might be deprived of the practical benefits of their allotments. It was the intent of Congress that, for their sustenance, and as a fitting aid to their progress, they should be secure in their possession during the period specified, and should actually hold and enjoy the allotted lands. As was well said by the court below: "If they are unable to resist the allurements by which they are enticed into making the conveyances, will they be expected to undertake the difficult and protracted litigation necessary to set aside their own acts? To ask these questions is to answer them. Congress intended that both the Indians and the members of the white race should obey its limitations. A transfer of the allotments is not simply a violation of the proprietary rights of the Indian. It violates the governmental rights of the United States. If these Indians may be divested of their lands, they will be thrown back upon the Nation a pauperized, discontented, and, possibly, belligerent people." [103 C. C. A. 4, 179 Fed. 16.] The authority to enforce restrictions of this character is the necessary complement of the power to impose them.

Whether these restrictions upon the alienation of the allotted lands had been violated and the alleged conveyances *were[439 void was a justiciable question; and in order that it might properly discharge its duty, and that it might obtain adequate relief, suited to the nature of the case, in accordance with the principles of equity, the United States was entitled to invoke the equity jurisdiction of its courts. It was not essential that it should have a pecuniary interest in the controversy. In United States v. American Bell Teleph. Co. 128 U. S. 315, 367, 32 L. ed. 450, 461, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 90, where the suit was brought to obtain the cancellation of certain patents, this court, in commenting upon the statements which had been made in the case of United States v. San Jacinto Tin Co. 125 U. S. 273, 31 L. ed. 747, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 850, with respect to the right of the United States to sue, said: "This language is construed by counsel for the appellee in this case to limit the relief granted at the instance of the United States to cases in which it has a direct pecuniary interest. But it is not susceptible of such construction. It was evidently in the mind of the court that the case before it was one where the property right to the land in controversy was the matter of importance, but it was careful to say that the cases in which the instrumentality of the court cannot thus be used are those where the United States has no pecuniary interest in the remedy sought, and is also under no obligation to the party who will be benefited to sustain an action for his use, and also where it does not appear that any obligation existed on the part of the United States to the public or to any individual. The essence of the right of the United States to interfere in the present case is its obligation to protect the public from the monopoly of the patent which was procured by fraud, and it would be difficult to find language more aptly used to include this in the class of cases which are not excluded from the jurisdiction of the court by want of interest in the government of the United States. It is insisted that these decisions have reference exclusively to patents for land, and that they are not applicable to patents for inventions and discoveries. The *argument very[440 largely urged for that view is the one just stated: that in the cases which had reference to patents for land, the pecuniary interest of the United States was the foundation of the jurisdiction. This, however, is repelled by the language just cited, and by the fact that in more than one of the cases, notably in United States v. Hughes, 11 How. 552, 13 L. ed. 809, the right of the government to sustain the suit was based upon its legal or moral obligation to give a good title to another party who had a prior and a better claim to the land, but whose right was obstructed by the patent issued by the United States."

And in Re Debs, 158 U. S. 564, 39 L. ed. 1092, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 900, where the question was as to the jurisdiction of a court of equity at the suit of the government to enjoin interference with the transportation of the mails, the court, while adverting to the fact that the United States had a property in the mails, declined to place its decision upon that ground alone, and rested it also upon governmental duty. The court said (pp. 584, 586): "Every government, intrusted, by the very terms of its being, with powers and duties to be exercised and discharged for the general welfare, has a right to apply to its own courts for any proper assistance in the exercise of the one and the discharge of the other, and it is no sufficient answer to its appeal to one of those courts that it has no pecuniary interest in the matter. . . . The national government, given by the Constitution power to regulate interstate commerce, has by express statute assumed jurisdiction over such commerce when carried upon railroads. It is charged, therefore, with the duty of keeping those highways of interstate commerce free from obstruction, for it has always been recognized as one of the powers and duties of a government to remove obstructions from the highways under its control."

In United States v. Rickert, 188 U. S. 432, 47 L. ed. 532, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 478, the suit was brought to restrain the collection of certain county taxes alleged to be due in respect of permanent improvements 441] on, and personal property used in the cultivation of, lands occupied by Sioux Indians in South Dakota. The lands had been allotted under the general allotment act of February 8, 1887, 24 Stat. at L. 389, chap. 119. One of the questions certified to this court was whether the United States had such an interest in the controversy or in its subjects as entitled it to maintain the suit; and the question was answered in the affirmative. It is true that, in that case, the statute provided that the United States should hold the land allotted for twenty-five years in trust for the sole use and benefit of the Indian allottee. But the decision rested upon a broader foundation than the mere holding of a legal title to land in trust, and embraced the recognition of the interest of the United States in securing immunity to the Indians from taxation conflicting with the measures it had adopted for their protection. The court said (p. 444): "In view of the relation of the United States to the real and personal property in question, as well as to these dependent Indians still under national control, and in view of the injurious effect of the assessment and taxation complained of upon the plans of the government with reference to the Indians, it is clear that the United States is entitled to maintain this suit." By the act of August 15, 1894, chap. 290 (28 Stat. at L. 305), as amended by the act of February 6, 1901, chap. 217 (31 Stat. at L. 760), Congress authorized suits to be brought against the United States, in its circuit courts, "involving the right of any person, in whole or in part of Indian blood or descent" (with certain exceptions), "to any allotment of lands under any law or treaty." Sloan v. United States, 193 U. S. 614, 48 L. ed. 814, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 570. Prior to the amendment of 1901, the United States could not be sued in such a case. But the amendment required that "in said suit the parties thereto shall be the claimant as plaintiff and the United States as party defendant." Commenting upon this, the court said in McKay v. Kalyton, 204 U. S. 458, 469, 51 L. ed. 566, 571, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 346: "Nothing could more clearly *demonstrate than does this requirement, the conception of Congress that the United States continued, as trustee, to have an active interest in the proper disposition of allotted Indian lands, and the necessity of its being made a party to controversies concerning the same, for the purpose of securing a harmonious and uniform operation of the legislation of Congress on the subject." And in Re Heff, 197 U. S. 488, 509, 49 L. ed. 848, 857, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 506, this court said: "In United States v. Rickert, 188 U. S. 432, 47 L. ed. 532, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 478, we sustained the right of the government to protect the lands thus allotted and patented from any encumbrance of state taxation. Undoubtedly an allottee can enforce his right to an interest in the tribal or other property (for that right is expressly granted), and equally clear is it that Congress may enforce and protect any condition which it attaches to any of its grants. This it may do by appropriate proceedings in either a national or a state court."

Not only was the United States entitled to prosecute this suit by virtue of the interest springing from its peculiar relations to the Indians and the course of dealing which had finally led to the plan of separate allotments, accompanied by restrictions for the protection of the allottees, but Congress has explicitly recognized the right of the government thus to enforce these restrictions, and has made appropriations for the maintenance of suits of this description. And, at least, the power of Congress to authorize the government to sue, in view of the relation of the United States to the subject-matter and of the nature of the question to be determined, cannot be doubted. Minnesota v. Hitchcock, 185 U. S. 373, 387, 388, 46 L. ed. 954, 962, 963, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 650.

By the act of May 27, 1908, chap. 199 (35 Stat. at L. 312), which defined restrictions with respect to allotments to members of the Five Civilized Tribes, the representatives of the Secretary of the Interior were authorized to advise all allottees having restricted lands, of their rights, and at the request of any such allottee to bring suit [443] in his name *to cancel any conveyance or encumbrance in violation of the act, and to take all steps necessary to assist the allottees in acquiring and retaining possession. But the following provision was added:

"Nothing in this act shall be construed as a denial of the right of the United States to take such steps as may be necessary, including the bringing of any suit and the prosecution and appeal thereof, to acquire or retain possession of restricted Indian lands, or to remove cloud therefrom, or clear title to the same, in cases where deeds, leases, or contracts of any other kind or character whatsoever have been or shall be made contrary to law with respect to such lands, prior to the removal therefrom of restrictions upon the alienation thereof; such suits to be brought on the recommendation of the Secretary of the Interior, without costs or charges to the allottees, the necessary expenses incurred in so doing to be defrayed from the money appropriated by this act"

It is urged that this clause did not confer authority to sue, but was inserted merely to rebut any possible inference of an intention to deny this right to the United States. This seems to us a strained construction, in view of the obvious purpose of the act. And it fails to give adequate effect to the words, "such suits to be brought on the recommendation of the Secretary of the Interior, without costs or charges to the allottees, the necessary expenses incurred in so doing to be defrayed from the money appropriated by this act." In addition to the appropriation of moneys for expenditure under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, that act appropriated the sum of $50,000, "to be immediately available, and available until expended as the Attorney General may direct," which was "to be used in the payment of necessary expenses incident to any suits brought at the request of the Secretary of the Interior in the eastern judicial district of Oklahoma;" with the proviso that $10,000 of this amount, *or so much as might be necessary, [444] should be expended in the prosecution of cases in the western judicial district of that state. In 1909 (act of March 4, 1909, chap. 299, 35 Stat. at L. 1014), a further appropriation of a like sum for the same purposes was made under the heading, "Suits to set aside conveyances of allotted lands." Another appropriation was made in 1910 (act of June 25, 1910, chap. 384, 36 Stat. at L. 748), under a similar heading, with specific reference to the "Five Civilized Tribes," and also with the provision, "and not to exceed ten thousand dollars of said sum shall be available for the expenses of the United States on appeals to the Supreme Court of the United States;" and still another to the same effect in 1911 (act of March 4, 1911, chap. 285, 36 Stat. at L. 1425).

We conclude that the United States has the capacity to prosecute this suit.

It is further urged that there is a defect of parties, on account of the absence of the Indian grantors. It is said that they are the owners of the lands, and hence sustain such a relation to the controversy that final decree cannot be made without affecting their interest. Shields v. Barrow, 17 How. 130, 139, 15 L. ed. 158, 160; Williams v. Bankhead, 19 Wall. 563, 22 L. ed. 184.

The argument necessarily proceeds upon the assumption that the representation of these Indians by the United States is of an incomplete or inadequate character; that although the United States, by virtue of the guardianship it has retained, is prosecuting this suit for the purpose of enforcing the restrictions Congress has imposed, and of thus securing possession to the Indians, their presence as parties to the suit is essential to their protection. This position is wholly untenable. There can be no more complete representation than that on the part of the United States in acting on behalf of these dependents, whom Congress, with respect to the restricted lands, has not yet released from tutelage. Its efficacy does not *depend upon the Indians' acquiescence. It does not rest upon convention, nor is it circumscribed by rules which govern private relations. It is a representation which traces its source to the plenary control of Congress in legislating for the protection of the Indians under its care, and it recognizes no limitations that are inconsistent with the discharge of the national duty.

When the United States instituted this suit, it undertook to represent, and did represent, the Indian grantors whose conveyances it sought to cancel. It was not necessary to make these grantors parties, for the government was in court on their behalf. Their presence as parties could not add to, or detract from, the effect of the proceedings to determine the violation of the restrictions and the consequent invalidity of the conveyances. As by the act of Congress they were precluded from alienating their lands, they were likewise precluded from taking any position in the legal proceedings instituted by the government to enforce the restrictions which would render such proceedings ineffectual or give support to the prohibited acts. The cause could not be dismissed upon their consent; they could not compromise it; nor could they assume any attitude with respect to their interest which would derogate from its complete representation by the United States. This is involved necessarily in the conclusion that the United States is entitled to sue, and in the nature and purpose of the suit.

These considerations also dispose of the contention that, by reason of the absence of the grantors as parties, the grantees are placed in danger of double litigation; so that if they should succeed here, they would still be exposed to suit by the allottees. It is not pertinent to comment upon the improbability of the contingency, if it exists in legal contemplation. But if the United States, representing the owners of restricted lands, is entitled to bring a suit of this character, it must follow that the 446]*decree will bind not only the United States, but the Indians whom it represents in the litigation. This consequence is involved in the representation. Kerrison v. Stewart, 93 U. S. 155, 160, 23 L. ed. 843, 845; Shaw v. Little Rock & Ft. S. R. Co. 100 U. S. 605, 611, 25 L. ed. 757, 758; Beals v. Illinois M. & T. R. Co. 135 U. S. 290, 295, 33 L. ed. 608, 611, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 314. And it could not, consistently with any principle, be tolerated that, after the United States, on behalf of its wards, had invoked the jurisdiction of its courts to cancel conveyances in violation of the restrictions prescribed by Congress, these wards should themselves be permitted to relitigate the question.

In what cases the United States will undertake to represent Indian owners of restricted lands in suits of this sort is left, under the acts of Congress, to the discretion of the Executive Department. The allottee may be permitted to bring his own action, or, if so brought, the United States may aid him in its conduct, as in the Tiger Case. And, as already noted, the act of May 27, 1908, makes provision for proceedings by the representatives of the Secretary of the Interior in the name of the allottee. But in the opportunities thus afforded there is no room for the vexation of repeated litigation of the same controversy. And when the United States itself undertakes to represent the allottees of lands under restriction, and brings suit to cancel prohibited transfers, such action necessarily precludes the prosecution by the allottees of any other suit for a similar purpose, relating to the same property.

It is said that the allottees have received the consideration, and should be made parties in order that equitable restoration may be enforced. Where, however, conveyance has been made in violation of the restrictions, it is plain that the return of the consideration cannot be regarded as an essential prerequisite to a decree of cancellation. Otherwise, if the Indian grantor had squandered the money, he would lose the land which Congress intended he should hold, and the very incompetence and *thrif[t]-[447] lessness which were the occasion of the measures for his protection would render them of no avail. The effectiveness of the acts of Congress is not thus to be destroyed. The restrictions were set forth in public laws, and were matters of general knowledge. Those who dealt with the Indians contrary to these provisions are not entitled to insist that they should keep the land if the purchase price is not repaid, and thus frustrate the policy of the statute. United States v. Trinidad Coal & Coking Co. 137 U. S. 160, 170, 171, 34 L. ed. 640, 644, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 57.

But it is suggested that there may be instances where the consideration could be restored without interfering with the policy which prohibited the transfer; that is, without in any way impairing the right to the recovery of the land or the assurance to the Indian of his possession free from encumbrance. It is said, for example, that there may have been an exchange of lands, and that the Indian grantor should not, on retaking the restricted lands, be permitted at the same time to retain those which he has received from the grantee. Or there may be other property held by the Indian grantor free from restrictions, so that restoration of the consideration may be enforced without working a deprivation of the restricted lands, contrary to the act of Congress. We need not attempt to surmise what cases of this sort may arise. It is sufficient to say that no such case is here presented. It is not presented by the mere allegation of the bill that the conveyances assailed purport to have been made for pecuniary consideration. It will be competent for the court, on a proper showing as to any of the transactions that provision can be made for a return of the consideration, consistently with the cancelation of the conveyances and with securing to the allottees the possession of the restricted lands in accordance with the statute, to provide for bringing in as a party to the suit any person whose presence for that purpose is found to be necessary.

448] *A further objection is that the bill is multifarious. But in view of the numerous transfers which the government attacks, it was manifestly in the interest of the convenient administration of justice that unnecessary suits should be avoided and that transactions presenting the same question for determination should be grouped in a single proceeding. The objection to the misjoinder of causes of action is likewise without merit.

Our conclusion is that the suit was well brought. The judgment of the court below is affirmed, with the modification that the cause shall proceed in conformity with this opinion.

It is so ordered.

Mr. Justice Lurton dissents on the question of jurisdiction, but not on the merits.

J. S. MULLEN and W. B. Jansen, Appts.,
v.
UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 448-458.)

United States — right to sue — Indian allotments — restrictions on alienation.

1. The United States must be deemed to have the right to invoke the equity jurisdiction of its courts to cancel conveyances of allotted lands made by Choctaw Indians, upon the ground that they were in violation of existing restrictions upon the power of alienation, in view of the peculiar relationship of the United States to the Indians, and of the explicit recognition by Congress in the act of May 27, 1908 (35 Stat. at L. 312, chap. 199), of the right of the government to enforce these restrictions by suit, and of the appropriation made in that and later acts for the maintenance of such suits. [For other cases, see United States, 137-147, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

NOTE.—On the power of Congress over the Indians—see note to Worcester v. Georgia, 8 L. ed. U. S. 484.

On multifariousness in bill—see Gains v. Chew, 11 L. ed. U. S. 402.

Necessary parties — representative suit — Indian grantors.

2. The Indian grantors are not necessary parties to a suit by the United States to cancel conveyances of allotted lands by Choctaw Indians upon the ground that they were in violation of existing restrictions upon the power of alienation.

[For other cases, see Parties, I. a, 5; II. a, 2, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Pleading — multifariousness — misjoinder.

3. A bill filed by the United States to cancel conveyances by heirs of Indian allottees on the ground that they were in violation of existing restrictions upon the power of alienation is not open to the objection of multifariousness or misjoinder because the suit involves a number of separate conveyances by individual Indians to distinct grantees made parties defendant.

[For other cases, see Pleading, I. t, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Indian allotments — homestead.

4. The requirement of ¶ 12 of the supplemental agreement of July 1, 1902 (32 Stat. at L. 641, chap. 1362), with the Choctaws and Chickasaws, that each Indian allottee shall designate a portion of his allotment as a homestead, does not extend to cases where a person, whose name appeared upon the rolls, died after the ratification of the agreement, and before receiving his allotment, in which cases the act specially provides in ¶ 22 for allotment in the name of the deceased person, and for the descent of the land to his heirs.

[For other cases, see Indians, VIII., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Indian allotments — restrictions on alienation.

5. The restrictions upon alienation by the heirs of an Indian allottee of the land allotted in excess of that designated as a homestead, made by ¶ 16 of the supplemental agreement of July 1, 1902, with the Choctaws and Chickasaws, are not applicable where a person whose name appeared upon the rolls died after the ratification of the agreement, and before receiving the allotment, in which case provision was made in ¶ 22 for allotment in the name of the deceased person, and for the descent of the land to his heirs, with no requirement for the selection of any portion of the allotted lands as a homestead.

[For other cases, see Indians, VIII., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Indian allotments — alienation before patent.

6. The heirs of a deceased Indian allottee under the supplemental agreement of July 1, 1902, with the Choctaws and Chickasaws, have a complete equitable interest which, in the absence of restrictions, they may convey before patent.

[For other cases, see Indians, VIII., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Indian allotments — alienation before patent.

7. Conveyances by the heirs of an Indian allottee under the supplemental agreement of July 1, 1902, with the Choctaws and Chickasaws, whose ancestor died after the ratification of the agreement and before receiving his allotment, not being under restriction, cannot be held invalid because made before the issuance of a patent, in view of the provision of the act of April 26, 1906 (34 Stat. at L. 144, chap. 1876), § 19, subsequently enacted, that conveyances theretofore made by members of any of the Five Civilized Tribes subsequent to the selection of allotment and to the removal of restrictions, where patents thereafter issue, shall not be held invalid solely because such conveyances were made prior to the patent.

[For other cases, see Indians, VIII., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 404.]

Argued October 12 and 13, 1911. Decided April 15, 1912.

APPEAL from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit to review a decree which reversed a decree of the Circuit Court for the Eastern District of Oklahoma, sustaining a demurrer to and dismissing a bill filed by the United States to cancel certain conveyances of allotted lands made by Choctaw Indians. Reversed, and decree of Circuit Court affirmed.

See same case below, 103 C. C. A. 1, 179 Fed. 13.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. J. C. Stone, Robert J. Boone, and S. T. Bledsoe argued the cause, and, with Mr. J. R. Cottingham, filed a brief for appellants:

Restrictions upon alienation do not vest an interest in the United States or limit a fee-simple title.

Libby v. Clark, 118 U. S. 250, 255, 30 L. ed. 133, 134, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1045; Schrimscher v. Stockton, 183 U. S. 290, 299, 46 L. ed. 203, 207, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 107; United States v. Paine Lumber Co. 206 U. S. 467, 51 L. ed. 1139, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 697.

The United States owns no property interest upon which to maintain this action, nor may the same be maintained for the protection of citizens generally against violations of law.

United States v. Sayward, 160 U. S. 493, 40 L. ed. 508, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 371; United States v. Paine Lumber Co. 206 U. S. 467, 51 L. ed. 1139, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 697; United States v. Auger, 153 Fed. 671; Louisiana v. Texas, 176 U. S. 1, 44 L. ed. 347, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 251; United States v. Paine Lumber Co. 154 Fed. 263; New Hampshire v. Louisiana, 108 U. S. 76, 27 L. ed. 656, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 176; Kansas v. United States, 204 U. S. 331, 51 L. ed. 56 L. ed.

510, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 388; Oregon v. Hitchcock, 202 U. S. 60, 50 L. ed. 935, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 568; Minnesota v. Hitchcock, 185 U. S. 373, 46 L. ed. 954, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 650; United States v. Texas, 143 U. S. 621, 36 L. ed. 285, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 488; Oklahoma v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 220 U. S. 277, 55 L. ed. 465, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 434; Oklahoma ex rel. West v. Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. 220 U. S. 290, 55 L. ed. 469, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 437.

The former members of the Five Civilized Tribes are citizens of the United States and the state of Oklahoma, and not wards of either state or national governments.

Re Heff, 197 U. S. 488, 49 L. ed. 848, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 506; Minor v. Happersett, 21 Wall. 162-167, 22 L. ed. 627, 628; Boyd v. Nebraska, 143 U. S. 175, 36 L. ed. 114, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 375; Bolln v. Nebraska, 176 U. S. 88, 44 L. ed. 384, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 287; United States v. Saunders, 96 Fed. 268; United States v. Kopp, 110 Fed. 161; Ex parte Viles, 139 Fed. 68; United States v. Dooley, 151 Fed. 697; United States v. Auger, 153 Fed. 671; Ex parte Savage, 158 Fed. 205; United States v. Hall, 171 Fed. 214; United States v. Boss, 160 Fed. 132.

Public policy is not a head of Federal equity jurisdiction.

Hadden v. The Collector (Hadden v. Barney) 5 Wall. 107-111, 18 L. ed. 518, 519; Bate Refrigerating Co. v. Sulzberger, 157 U. S. 1-36, 39 L. ed. 601-611, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 508; Dewey v. United States, 178 U. S. 510-521, 44 L. ed. 1170-1174, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 981; Re Wolf, 122 Fed. 133; Southern R. Co. v. Machinists' Local Union No. 14, 111 Fed. 57; Shellenberger v. Ransom, 41 Neb. 631, 25 L.R.A. 564, 59 N. W. 935; United States v. Chong Sam, 47 Fed. 884; Opinion of Justices, 66 N. H. 665, 33 Atl. 1095.

The authorization, even if attempted, to bring a suit in the name of the United States, for and on behalf of a citizen of the state of Oklahoma, over his protest and objection, or without his consent, is not a regulation of commerce with an Indian tribe; and an agreement between the United States and the state of Oklahoma that such might be done would be violative of the Federal Constitution and void.

Coyle v. Smith, 221 U. S. 559, 55 L. ed. 853, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 688; Bolln v. Nebraska, 176 U. S. 83, 44 L. ed. 382, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 287; Pollard v. Hagan, 3 How. 212-235, 11 L. ed. 565-576; Escanaba & L. M. Transp. Co. v. Chicago, 107 U. S. 678, 27 L. ed. 442, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 185; Dick v. United States, 208 U. S. 340, 52 L. ed. 520, 28 Sup. Ct. Rep. 399.

The allottees are indispensable parties.

Barbey v. Baltimore, 6 Wall. 280, 18 L. ed. 825; Williams v. Bankhead, 19 Wall. 563, 22 L. ed. 184; Ribon v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 16 Wall. 446, 21 L. ed. 367; Mallow v. Hinde, 12 Wheat. 198, 6 L. ed. 600; Chadburne v. Coe, 2 C. C. A. 327, 10 U. S. App. 78, 51 Fed. 479.

If the United States had the right, co-existent with the allottees, to sue, it would nevertheless be necessary to bring them before the court. Bates, Fed. Eq. Proc. § 40.

Every party to a contract of sale except one who has released his interest, or an agent through whom the title has passed, is a necessary party to set it aside.

Shields v. Barrow, 17 How. 130, 15 L. ed. 158; Coiron v. Millaudon, 19 How. 113, 15 L. ed. 575; Gaylord v. Kelshaw, 1 Wall. 81, 17 L. ed. 612; Ribon v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 16 Wall. 446, 21 L. ed. 367; Joy v. Wirtz, 1 Wash. C. C. 417, Fed. Cas. No. 7,553; Tobin v. Walkinshaw, McAll. 26, Fed. Cas. No. 14,068; Bell v. Donohoe, 8 Sawy. 435, 17 Fed. 710; Florence Sewing-Mach. Co. v. Singer Mfg. Co. 4 Fisher, Pat. Cas. 329, 8 Blatchf. 113, Fed. Cas. No. 4,884; Chadburne v. Coe, 45 Fed. 822; Empire Coal & Transp. Co. v. Empire Coal & Min. Co. 150 U. S. 159, 37 L. ed. 1037, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 66; New Orleans Water-Works Co. v. New Orleans, 164 U. S. 471, 41 L. ed. 518, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 161; Chadbourne v. Coe, 2 C. C. A. 327, 10 U. S. App. 78, 51 Fed. 479; Clark v. Great Northern R. Co. 81 Fed. 282; French v. Shoemaker, 14 Wall. 314, 20 L. ed. 852; West v. Duncan, 42 Fed. 430; Smith v. Lee, 77 Fed. 779.

Where the consideration is yet in the hands of the allottees, they should be compelled to return it, and in the same suits in which they seek cancelation of their deeds. And in every case where the parties acted in good faith the court ought to decree a personal judgment against the allottees for the amount of the consideration, for it was paid by mistake and the consideration for the payment has failed. If the contracts were void, but in good faith, equity will impute a promise to repay.

Wrought-Iron Bridge Co. v. Utica, 17 Fed. 316; Louisiana v. Wood, 102 U. S. 294, 26 L. ed. 153; Marsh v. Fulton County, 10 Wall. 676, 19 L. ed. 1040; Tate v. Gaines, 25 Okla. 141, 26 L.R.A.(N.S.) 106, 105 Pac. 193.

Where the lands had no rental value, and, on account of the improvements so made in good faith, now have a great rental value, it should be decreed that the rentals or a part thereof be set aside each year until compensation shall have been made for the same.

Muskogee Development Co. v. Green, 22 Okla. 237, 97 Pac. 619; White v. Brown, 1 Ind. Terr. 98, 38 S. W. 335; Poplin v. Clausen, 1 Ind. Terr. 157, 38 S. W. 974; Shumate v. Harbin, 35 S. C. 521, 15 S. E. 270; Brockway v. Thomas, 36 Ark. 518; Beard v. Dansby, 48 Ark. 183, 2 S. W. 701; Potts v. Cullum, 68 Ill. 217.

The United States cannot maintain this bill because it is wholly devoid of equity.

Frost v. Spitley, 121 U. S. 552, 556, 30 L. ed. 1010, 1012, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1129; Orton v. Smith, 18 How. 263, 15 L. ed. 393; Dick v. Foraker, 155 U. S. 404, 414, 39 L. ed. 201, 205, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 124; United States v. Wilson, 118 U. S. 86, 30 L. ed. 110, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 991.

The bill is multifarious.

Story, Eq. Pl. § 280; Cooper, Eq. Pl. 183; Hale v. Allinson, 188 U. S. 56, 47 L. ed. 380, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 244, 102 Fed. 790; 1 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 251½ p. 371; Best v. Drake, 11 Hare, 371; Barcus v. Gates, 32 C. C. A. 337, 61 U. S. App. 596, 89 Fed. 783; Gaines v. Chew, 2 How. 619, 11 L. ed. 402; Brown v. Guarantee Trust & S. D. Co. 128 U. S. 403, 410, 32 L. ed. 468, 470, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 127; Tribette v. Illinois C. R. Co. 70 Miss. 182, 19 L.R.A. 660, 35 Am. St. Rep. 642, 12 So. 32; Turner v. Mobile, 135 Ala. 73, 33 So. 132; Van Auker v. Dammeier, 27 Or. 150, 40 Pac. 89; Tompkins v. Craig, 93 Fed. 885.

Allotted Indian lands are subject only to such restrictions upon alienation as are imposed by law.

Doe ex dem. Mann v. Wilson, 23 How. 457, 16 L. ed. 584; Jones v. Meehan, 175 U. S. 16, 44 L. ed. 55, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; Quinney v. Denney, 18 Wis. 485; Strother v. Lucas, 12 Pet. 410, 9 L. ed. 1137; Stoddard v. Chambers, 2 How. 284, 11 L. ed. 269; Grignon v. Astor, 2 How. 319, 11 L. ed. 283; Marsh v. Brooks, 8 How. 223, 12 L. ed. 1056; Landes v. Brant, 10 How. 348, 13 L. ed. 449; French v. Spencer, 21 How. 228, 16 L. ed. 97; Berthold v. McDonald, 22 How. 334, 16 L. ed. 318; Crews v. Burcham, 1 Black, 352, 17 L. ed. 91; Challefoux v. Ducharme, 4 Wis. 554; Ruggles v. Marsilliot, 19 Wis. 159; Stark v. Starr, 3 Wall. 402, 18 L. ed. 925; Lamb v. Davenport, 18 Wall. 307, 21 L. ed. 759; Ryan v. Carter, 93 U. S. 78, 23 L. ed. 807; Elwood v. Flannigan, 104 U. S. 562, 26 L. ed. 842; Briggs v. Wash-puk-qua, 37 Fed. 135; United States v. Winona & St. P. R. Co. 67 Fed. 948; James v. Germania Iron Co. 46 C. C. A. 476, 107 Fed. 597; Wallace v. Adams, 74 C. C. A. 540, 143 Fed. 716; Langdeau v. Hanes, 21 Wall. 521, 22 L. ed. 606; Oliver v. Forbes, 17 Kan. 113;

Clark v. Lord, 20 Kan. 390; Best v. Polk (Best v. Doe) 18 Wall. 112, 21 L. ed. 805; United States v. Brooks, 10 How. 442, 13 L. ed. 489; Dole v. Wilson, 20 Minn. 356, Gil. 308; Francis v. Francis, 203 U. S. 233, 51 L. ed. 165, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 129, 136 Mich. 288, 99 N. W. 14.

An allottee, before patent, has full equitable title, and may, in the absence of restrictions upon alienation, make a valid conveyance without awaiting delivery of patent.

Jones v. Green, 41 Ark. 363; Kline v. Ragland, 47 Ark. 117, 14 S. W. 474; Clark v. Hall, 19 Mich. 356; Fisher v. Hallock, 50 Mich. 463, 15 N. W. 552; Douglass v. M'Coy, 5 Ohio, 523; Bernardy v. Colonial & U. S. Mortg. Co. 17 S. D. 637, 98 N. W. 166; Baldwin v. Root, 90 Tex. 546, 40 S. W. 3; Barr v. Gratz, 4 Wheat. 213, 4 L. ed. 553; Bush v. Marshall, 6 How. 284, 12 L. ed. 440; Doe ex dem. Mann v. Wilson, 23 How. 457, 16 L. ed. 584; Massey v. Papin, 24 How. 362, 16 L. ed. 734; Stanway v. Rubio, 51 Cal. 41; Nicodemus v. Young, 90 Iowa, 423, 57 N. W. 906; Johnson v. Newman, 43 Tex. 628; Morrison v. Faulkner, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 21 S. W. 984; Spiess v. Neuberg, 71 Wis. 279, 5 Am. St. Rep. 211, 37 N. W. 417; Dunn v. Barnum, 2 C. C. A. 265, 10 U. S. App. 86, 51 Fed. 355; Jenkins v. Collard, 145 U. S. 546, 36 L. ed. 812, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 868; Godfrey v. Iowa Land & Trust Co. 21 Okla. 293, 95 Pac. 792; McWilliams Invest. Co. v. Livingston, 22 Okla. 884, 98 Pac. 914.

The lands selected in allotment in the name of a deceased allottee under § 22 of the Choctaw-Chickasaw supplemental agreement descend to the heirs free from all restrictions upon alienation, and the conveyances here involved are therefore valid, and the bill cannot, for that reason, be maintained in any event.

Hancock v. Mutual Trust Co. 24 Okla. 391, 103 Pac. 566.

See also briefs of these counsel in Heckman v. United States, ante, 829, and Deming Invest. Co. v. United States, post, 847.

Messrs. A. N. Frost and Harlow A. Leekley, Special Assistants to the Attorney General, argued the cause and filed a brief for appellee:

While the restrictions as to land allotted as a homestead allotment are directed toward it while in the hands of the allottee himself, having once attached, the wording compels the conclusion that future specific legislation is necessary to remove it, even after the death of the allottee.

Goodrum v. Buffalo, 89 C. C. A. 525, 162 Fed. 817.

56 L. ed.

The same is true of lands coming to heirs by virtue of allotments made in the names of deceased allottees.

United States v. Dowden, 194 Fed. 475.

The statute, having provided the way in which these lands could be sold, by necessary implication, prohibited their sale in any other way.

Smith v. Stevens, 10 Wall. 321, 326, 19 L. ed. 933, 935.

When several acts of Congress are passed touching the same subject-matter, subsequent legislation may be considered to assist in the interpretation of prior legislation upon the same subject.

Tiger v. Western Invest. Co. 221 U. S. 286, 309, 55 L. ed. 738, 747, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 578; Cope v. Cope, 137 U. S. 682, 34 L. ed. 832, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 222; United States v. Freeman, 3 How. 556, 11 L. ed. 724.

In cases admitting of doubt, the intention of the lawmaker is to be sought in the entire context of the section—statutes or series of statutes in pari materia.

Atkins v. Fibre Disintegrating Co. 18 Wall. 272, 301, 21 L. ed. 841, 844.

See also brief on behalf of the United States in Heckman v. United States, ante, 820.

Solicitor General Lehmann also argued the cause for appellee.

Mr. Justice Hughes delivered the opinion of the court:

This suit was brought by the United States to cancel certain conveyances of allotted lands, made by Choctaw Indians in alleged violation of restrictions. The circuit court sustained a demurrer to the bill upon the grounds that the United States was not entitled to maintain a suit of this character, that there was a defect of parties, owing to the absence of the Indian grantors, and that the bill was multifarious. This judgment was reversed by the circuit court of appeals, which directed the trial court to proceed with the cause in accordance with its opinion. United States v. Allen, and similar cases, 103 C. C. A. 1, 179 Fed. 13. An appeal to this court is taken by certain defendants under § 3 of the act of June 25, 1910, chap. 408 (36 Stat. at L. 837). The lands conveyed to the appellants are described as those which had been allotted to Choctaws of the full blood, deceased, and the conveyances were made by their heirs (also Choctaws of the full blood) prior to April 26, 1906.

As early as 1786 a treaty was made with the representatives of the Choctaws by which it was acknowledged that these In-

450]dians were under the protection *of the United States, and it was provided that for their "benefit and comfort" and for the "prevention of injuries and oppressions," the United States should have "the sole and exclusive right of regulating the trade with the Indians, and managing all their affairs in such manner as they think proper." 7 Stat. at L. 21. By the treaty of 1820, in order "to promote the civilization of the Choctaw Indians by the establishment of schools amongst them, and to perpetuate them as a nation, by exchanging, for a small part of their land here, a country beyond the Mississippi river, where all who live by hunting and will not work may be collected and settled together," there was ceded to the Choctaws a tract west of the Mississippi, situated between the Arkansas and Red rivers. 7 Stat. at L. 210. In furtherance of this purpose, another treaty was made in 1830 by which it was agreed that the United States should "cause to be conveyed to the Choctaw Nation a tract of country west of the Mississippi river, in fee simple to them and their descendants, to inure to them while they shall exist as a nation and live on it," and the Choctaws ceded to the United States all their lands east of the Mississippi, and promised to remove beyond that river as soon as possible. 7 Stat. at L. 333, 334. In 1837, with the approval of the President and Senate of the United States, an agreement was made between the Choctaws and the Chickasaws that the latter should have the privilege of forming a district within the limits of the Choctaw country, "to be held on the same terms that the Choctaws now hold it, except the right of disposing of it, which is held in common with the Choctaws and Chickasaws, to be called the Chickasaw district of the Choctaw Nation." 11 Stat. at L. 573. Controversies having arisen between these tribes, a treaty was made in 1855 with the representatives of both, defining boundaries and providing for the settlement of differences. This contained the stip-
451]ulation: "And pursuant to an act.*of Congress approved May 28, 1830 [4 Stat. at L. 411, chap. 148], the United States do hereby forever secure and guarantee the lands embraced within the said limits, to the members of the Choctaw and Chickasaw tribes, their heirs and successors, to be held in common; so that each and every member of either tribe shall have an equal, undivided interest in the whole: Provided, however, no part thereof shall ever be sold without the consent of both tribes; and that said land shall revert to the United States if said Indians and their heirs become extinct, or abandon the same." 11

Stat. at L. 612. After the Civil War, a new treaty was entered into, reaffirming the obligations arising out of prior agreements and legislation. April 28, 1866, 14 Stat. at L. 769, 774. While this treaty contemplated allotments in severalty, and made provision to that end, effective action was not taken until the legislation of 1893, and subsequent years, relating to the Five Civilized Tribes, which embodied the policy—of individual allotments and the dissolution of the tribal governments—made necessary by the changed conditions in the Indian country. Acts of March 3, 1893, chap. 209, 27 Stat. at L. 645; June 10, 1896, chap. 398, 29 Stat. at L. 321, 339; June 7, 1897, chap. 3, 30 Stat. at L. 62, 64; June 28, 1898, chap. 517, 30 Stat. at L. 495.

In the case of the Choctaws and Chickasaws, as in that of the other tribes, the scheme of allotments embraced certain restrictions upon the right of alienation which Congress deemed necessary for the suitable protection of the allottees. By virtue of the relation of the United States to these Indians (Choctaw Nation v. United States, 119 U. S. 1, 28, 30 L. ed. 306, 315, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 75; United States v. Choctaw Nation & Chickasaw Nation, 179 U. S. 494, 532, 45 L. ed. 291, 306, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 149), and the obligations it has assumed, it is entitled to invoke the equity jurisdiction of its courts for the purpose of enforcing these restrictions. The Indian grantors, being represented by the government, were not necessary parties, and in the interest of the convenient administration of justice it was competent to *embrace in one suit a class of[452 transactions presenting the same question for determination. Heckman v. United States, decided April 1, 1912. [224 U. S. 413, ante 820, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 424.]

The question remains whether, in the execution of the conveyances to the appellants, the restrictions imposed by Congress have been violated.

The Dawes Commission, constituted by the act of 1893, entered into an agreement with the Choctaws and Chickasaws—known as the Atoka agreement—which was approved by Congress and incorporated in § 29 of the act of June 28, 1898. 30 Stat. at L. 505, chap. 517. There was, however, a supplemental agreement, found in the act of July 1, 1902 (32 Stat. at L. 641, chap. 1362), which contains the restrictions in force at the time of the conveyances described in the bill.

This supplemental agreement provided that there should be allotted to each member of the Choctaw and Chickasaw tribes land equal in value to 320 acres of the average allottable land of these tribes; and to each Choctaw and Chickasaw freedman, land equal in value to 40 acres. The scheme defined two classes of cases, (1) allotments made to members of the tribes, and to freedmen, living at the time of allotment, and (2) allotments made in the case of those whose names appeared upon the tribal rolls, but who had died after the ratification of the agreement, and before the actual allotment had been made.

With respect to allotments to living members, it was provided that the allottee should designate 160 acres of the allotted lands as a homestead, for which separate certificate and patent should issue. And the restrictions upon the right of alienation of the allotted lands are found in paragraphs 12, 13, 15, and 16 of the supplemental agreement, as follows:

"12. Each member of said tribes shall, at the time of the selection of his allotment, designate as a homestead out of said allotment land equal in value to one hundred 453] *and sixty acres of the average allottable land of the Choctaw and Chickasaw nations, as nearly as may be, which shall be inalienable during the lifetime of the allottee, not exceeding twenty-one years from the date of certificate of allotment, and separate certificate and patent shall issue for said homestead.

"13. The allotment of each Choctaw and Chickasaw freedman shall be inalienable during the lifetime of the allottee, not exceeding twenty-one years from the date of certificate of allotment."

"15. Lands allotted to members and freedmen shall not be affected or encumbered by any deed, debt, or obligation of any character contracted prior to the time at which said land may be alienated under this act, nor shall said lands be sold except as herein provided.

"16. All lands allotted to the members of said tribes, except such land as is set aside to each for a homestead, as herein provided, shall be alienable after issuance of patent as follows: One fourth in acreage in one year, one fourth in acreage in three years, and the balance in five years; in each case from date of patent: Provided, That such land shall not be alienable by the allottee or his heirs at any time before the expiration of the Choctaw and Chickasaw tribal governments for less than its appraised value."

It will be observed that the homestead lands are made inalienable "during the lifetime of the allottee, not exceeding twenty-one years from the date of certificate of allotment." The period of restriction is thus definitely limited, and the clear implication is that when the prescribed period expired, the lands were to become alienable; that is, by the heirs of the allottee upon his death, or by the allottee himself at the end of the twenty-one years. Thus, with respect to homestead lands, the supplemental agreement imposed no restriction upon alienation by the heirs of a deceased allottee. And the reason may be found in the fact that each member of the tribes—each minor child *as well as[454 each adult, duly enrolled as required—was to have his or her allotment; so that each member was already provided with a homestead as a part of the allotment, independently of the lands which might be acquired by descent. On the other hand, the proviso of paragraph 16—which relates to the additional portion of the allotment, or the so-called "surplus" lands—contains a restriction upon alienation not only by the allottee, but by his heirs. Whatever may have been the purpose, a distinction was thus made with regard to the disposition by heirs of the homestead and surplus lands respectively.

The question now presented—with regard to the conveyances made to the appellants—arises in the second class of cases; that is, where a person whose name appeared upon the rolls died after the ratification of the agreement and before receiving his allotment. In this event, provision was made for allotment in the name of the deceased person, and for the descent of the lands to his heirs. This is contained in paragraph 22 of the supplemental agreement:

"22. If any person whose name appears upon the rolls, prepared as herein provided, shall have died subsequent to the ratification of this agreement and before receiving his allotment of land, the lands to which such person would have been entitled if living shall be allotted in his name, and shall, together with his proportionate share of other tribal property, descend to his heirs according to the laws of descent and distribution, as provided in chapter forty-nine of Mansfield's Digest of the Statutes of Arkansas: Provided, That the allotment thus to be made shall be selected by a duly appointed administrator or executor. If, however, such administrator or executor be not duly and expeditiously appointed, or fails to act promptly when appointed, or for any other cause such selection be not so made within a reasonable and practicable time, the Commission to the Five Civilized Tribes shall designate the lands thus to be allotted."

*In the cases falling within this[458 paragraph, there is no requirement for the selection of any portion of the allotted lands as a homestead, and there is no ground for supposing that it was the intention of Congress that a provision for such selection should be read into the paragraph, so as to assimilate it to paragraph 12, relating to allotments to living members. While the lands were to be allotted in the name of the deceased allottee, they passed at once to his heirs, and as each heir, if a member of the tribe, was already supplied with his homestead of 160 acres, there was no occasion for a further selection for that purpose from the inherited lands. No distinction is made between the heirs; they might or might not be members of the tribe; and where there were a number of heirs, each would take his undivided share. It is quite evident that there is no basis for implying the requirement that in such case there should be a selection of a portion of the allotment as a homestead, and all the lands allotted under paragraph 22 are plainly upon the same footing. While it appears from the record that, in the present case, separate certificates of allotment were issued for homestead and surplus lands, this was without the sanction of the statute.

In the agreement with the Creek Indians (act of March 1, 1901, 31 Stat. at L. 861, 870, chap. 676), it was provided that in the case of the death of a citizen of the tribe after his name had been placed upon the tribal roll made by the Commission, and before receiving his allotment, the lands and money to which he would have been entitled, if living, should descend to his heirs, "and be allotted and distributed to them accordingly." The question arose whether, in such cases, there should be a designation of a portion of the allotment as a homestead. In an opinion under date of March 16, 1903, the then Assistant Attorney General for the Interior Department (Mr. Van Devanter) advised the Secretary of the Interior that this was not required by the statute. He said: 456] "After a careful consideration *of the provisions of law pertinent to the question presented, and of the views of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs and the Commission to the Five Civilized Tribes, I agree with the latter that in all cases where allotment is made directly to an enrolled citizen, it is necessary that a homestead be selected therefrom and conveyed to him by separate deed; but that where the allotment is made directly to the heirs of a deceased citizen, there is no reason or necessity for designating a homestead out of such lands, or of giving the heirs a separate deed for any portion of the allotment, and therefore advise the adoption of that rule." It is true that under the Creek agreement, in cases where the ancestor died before allotment, the lands were to be allotted directly to the heirs, while under the Choctaw and Chickasaw agreement the allotment was to be made in the name of the deceased member, and "descend to his heirs." This, however, is a merely formal distinction and implies no difference in substance. In both cases the lands were to go immediately to the heirs, and the mere circumstance that, under the language of the statute, the allotment was to be made in the name of the deceased ancestor instead of the names of the heirs furnishes no reason for implying a requirement that there should be a designation of a portion of the lands as homestead.

We have, then, a case where all the allotted lands going to the heirs are of the same character, and there is no restriction upon the right of alienation expressed in the statute. Had the lands been allotted in the lifetime of the ancestor, one half of them, constituting homestead, would have been free from restriction upon his death. The only difficulty springs from the language of paragraph 16, limiting the right of heirs to sell "surplus" lands. But, on examining the context, it appears that this provision is part of the scheme for allotments to living members, where there is a segregation of homestead and surplus lands *respectively. Whatever the policy of 457 such a distinction which gives a greater freedom for the disposition by heirs of homestead lands than of the additional lands, there is no warrant for importing it into paragraph 22, where there is no such segregation. It would be manifestly inappropriate to imply the restriction in such cases, so as to make it applicable to all the lands taken by the heirs, and there is no occasion or authority for creating a division of the lands so as to impose a restriction upon a part of them.

There being no restriction upon the right of alienation, the heirs in the cases involved in this appeal were entitled to make the conveyances. The bill alleged that the tracts embraced in these conveyances were "allotted lands," and certificates of allotment had been issued. These Indian heirs were vested with an interest in the property which, in the absence of any provision to the contrary, was the subject of sale. The fact that they were "full-blood" Indians makes no difference in this case, for, at the time of the conveyances in question, heirs of the full blood, taking under the provisions of paragraph 22 of the supplemental agreement, had the same right of alienation as other heirs.

It does not appear from the allegations of the bill whether patents for the lands had been issued to the Indian grantors before the conveyances were made. But as the lands had been duly allotted, the right to patent was established; and there was no restriction in cases under paragraph 22 upon alienation of the lands prior to the date of patent. There was undoubtedly a complete equitable interest which, in the absence of restriction, the owner could convey. Doe ex dem. Mann v. Wilson, 23 How. 457, 16 L. ed. 584; Crews v. Burcham, 1 Black, 352, 17 L. ed. 91; Jones v. Meehan, 175 U. S. 1, 15-18, 44 L. ed. 49, 55, 57, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1. And any contention that the conveyances were invalid, solely because they were made before the issuance of patent,—the lands not being under restriction,—would be met by the proviso contained in 458]§ 19 of the act of *April 26, 1906 (34 Stat. at L. 144, chap. 1876): "Provided further, That conveyances heretofore made by members of any of the Five Civilized Tribes subsequent to the selection of allotment, and subsequent to removal of restriction, where patents thereafter issue, shall not be deemed or held invalid solely because said conveyances were made prior to issuance and recording or delivery of patent or deed; but this shall not be held or construed as affecting the validity or invalidity of any such conveyance, except as hereinabove provided; and every deed executed before, or for the making of which a contract or agreement was entered into before, the removal of restrictions, be and the same is hereby, declared void."

We are therefore of the opinion that the bill is without equity as against the appellants, for the reason that the conveyances were not executed in violation of any restrictions imposed by Congress, and that the demurrer should have been sustained upon this ground. It follows that, with respect to the appellants, the decree of the Circuit Court of Appeals must be reversed and that of the Circuit Court affirmed.

It is so ordered.

ALFRED F. GOAT et al., Appts.,
v.

UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 458-471.)

Indian allotments — restrictions on alienation — homestead.

1. Conveyances by Seminole freedmen of lands allotted to them in severalty for homesteads under the act of July 1, 1898 (30 Stat. at L. 567, chap. 542), executed before the provisions of the act of May 27, 1908 (35 Stat. at L. 312, chap. 199), removing the restrictions upon the alienation of such lands, became operative, were invalid, and the Federal government is entitled to have them set aside.

[For other cases, see Indians, VIII., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Indian allotments — restrictions on alienation — surplus lands.

2. Conveyances of surplus lands by adult Seminole freedmen allottees under the act of July 1, 1898, executed before patent, and prior to the act of April 21, 1904 (33 Stat. at L. 189, chap. 1402), removing restrictions on alienation, are invalid, as are also conveyances by such allottees being minors, and expressly excepted from the provisions of that act.

[For other cases, see Indians, VIII., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Indian allotments — alienation before patent.

3. The mere authorization by the act of April 26, 1906 (34 Stat. at L. 138, chap. 1876), of the execution of patents to Seminole allottees under the act of July 1, 1898, before the tribal government ceased to exist, when, by virtue of the earlier act, the allottees were to receive their deeds, did not operate as a repeal of the explicit provisions of that act making invalid all contracts for the sale, disposition, or encumbrance of any part of any allotment made prior to the date of patents.

[For other cases, see Indians, VIII., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Indian allotments — alienation before patent — surplus lands.

4. The removal by the act of April 21, 1904, of restrictions upon alienation of lands of all allottees of either of the Five Civilized Tribes not of Indian blood, except minors, and except as to homesteads, left adult Seminole freedmen allottees under the act of July 1, 1898, free thereafter to convey before patent the surplus lands allotted to them in severalty under that act.

[For other cases, see Indians VIII., in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 405.]

Argued October 12 and 13, 1911. Decided
April 29, 1912.

APPEAL from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit to review a decree which reversed a decree of the Circuit Court for the Eastern District of Oklahoma, sustaining a demurrer to and dismissing the bill in a suit by the United States to cancel conveyances by Seminole freedmen, alleged to be in violation of existing restrictions on alienation. Affirmed, with the modification that the cause shall proceed in conformity with the following opinion.

See same case below, 103 C. C. A. 1, 179 Fed. 13.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. J. C. Stone, Robert J. Boone, and S. T. Bledsoe argued the cause, and Messrs. George C. Crump, H. H. Rogers, J. H. Moxey, J. H. Miley, and B. B. Blakeney filed a brief for appellants:

The United States has absolutely no interest in the lands of Seminole allottees.

Best v. Polk (Best v. Doe) 18 Wall. 112, 21 L. ed. 805; Schulenberg v. Harriman, 21 Wall. 44, 22 L. ed. 551; Schow v. Harriman, 154 U. S. 609, 22 L. ed. 556, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1209; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Roberts, 152 U. S. 114, 38 L. ed. 377, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 496; New Mexico v. United States Trust Co. 172 U. S. 182, 43 L. ed. 411, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 128; Jones v. Mechan, 175 U. S. 1, 44 L. ed. 49, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; Mercantile Trust Co. v. Atlantic & P. R. Co. 63 Fed. 911.

Undoubtedly when the Seminole citizen had selected his allotment and received his certificate from the Dawes Commission, the land embraced in the allotment certificate was his property. It had been segregated from the national domain of the Seminole Nation.

Wallace v. Adams, 74 C. C. A. 540, 143 Fed. 721; Garfield v. United States, 30 App. D. C. 165; Jones v. Meehan, 175 U. S. 1, 44 L. ed. 49, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1.

A right to a patent, once vested, is treated by the government, when dealing with the public lands, as equivalent to a patent issued.

Barney v. Dolph, 97 U. S. 652, 24 L. ed. 1063; Wallace v. Adams, 74 C. C. A. 540, 143 Fed. 716; Stark v. Starr, 6 Wall. 402, 18 L. ed. 925.

An Indian may convey his land, unless a conveyance is prohibited, after the communal relation is broken up.

Jones v. Meehan, 175 U. S. 1, 16, 44 L. ed. 49, 55, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; Oliver v. Forbes, 17 Kan. 113; Briggs v. Wash-puk-qua, 37 Fed. 135; New York Indians v. United States, 170 U. S. 1, 42 L. ed. 927, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 531; Doe ex dem. Mann v. Wilson, 23 How. 457, 16 L. ed. 584.

Patent has never been necessary in order to permit the equitable owner to convey his land.

Flanagan v. Forsythe, 6 Okla. 225, 50 Pac. 152; McClung v. Penny, 12 Okla. 303, 70 Pac. 404; Stark v. Duvall, 7 Okla. 213, 54 Pac. 453; Johnson v. Borin, 7 Kan. App. 369, 54 Pac. 804; Black v. Jackson, 177 U. S. 360, 44 L. ed. 805, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 648; Brun v. Mann, 12 L.R.A.(N.S.) 154, 80 C. C. A. 513, 151 Fed. 145; Quinney v. Denney, 18 Wis. 485; Ruggles v. Marsilliott, 19 Wis. 160.

An allottee may convey his land when he has selected an allotment, unless he is prohibited from doing so by positive provisions of law.

Marsh v. Brooks, 8 How. 223, 12 L. ed. 1056; French v. Spencer, 21 How. 228, 16 L. ed. 97; Crews v. Burcham, 1 Black, 352, 17 L. ed. 91; Stark v. Starr, 6 Wall. 402, 18 L. ed. 925; Lamb v. Davenport, 18 Wall. 307, 21 L. ed. 759; Ryan v. Carter, 93 U. S. 78, 23 L. ed. 807; Elwood v. Flannigan, 104 U. S. 562, 26 L. ed. 842; Briggs v. Wash-puk-qua, 37 Fed. 135; United States v. Winona & St. P. R. Co. 15 C. C. A. 96, 32 U. S. App. 272, 67 Fed. 948; James v. Germania Iron Co. 46 C. C. A. 476, 107 Fed. 597; Wallace v. Adams, 74 C. C. A. 540, 143 Fed. 716; Langdeau v. Hanes, 21 Wall. 521, 22 L. ed. 606; Oliver v. Forbes, 17 Kan. 113; Clark v. Lord, 20 Kan. 390; Jones v. Meehan, 175 U. S. 1, 44 L. ed. 49, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; Best v. Polk (Best v. Doe) 18 Wall. 112, 21 L. ed. 805; United States v. Brooks, 10 How. 442, 13 L. ed. 489; Dole v. Wilson, 20 Minn. 356, Gil. 308; Francis v. Francis, 136 Mich. 288, 99 N. W. 14.

An allottee, upon the selection of his allotment, has the full equitable title thereto, and may make a valid conveyance thereof; and when the legal title passes to him, it immediately vests in his grantee.

Mitchel v. United States, 15 Pet. 52, 10 L. ed. 658; Jones v. Green, 41 Ark. 363; Kline v. Ragland, 47 Ark. 117, 14 S. W. 474; Steeple v. Downing, 60 Ind. 478; Clark v. Hall, 19 Mich. 356; Fisher v. Hallock, 50 Mich. 463, 15 N. W. 552; Douglass v. M'Coy, 5 Ohio, 522; Bernardy v. Colonial & U. S. Mortg. Co. 17 S. D. 637, 98 N. W. 166; Baldwin v. Root, 90 Tex. 546, 40 S. W. 3; Barr v. Gratz, 4 Wheat. 553, 4 L. ed. 553; Bush v. Marshall, 6 How. 284, 12 L. ed. 440; French v. Spencer, 21 How. 228, 16 L. ed. 97; Massey v. Papin, 24 How. 362, 16 L. ed. 734; Stanway v. Rubio, 51 Cal. 41; Nicodemus v. Young, 90 Iowa, 423, 57 N. W. 906; Johnson v. Newman, 43 Tex. 628; Morrison v. Faulkner, — Tex. Civ. App. —, 21 S. W. 984; Spiess v. Neuberg, 71 Wis. 279, 5 Am. St. Rep. 211, 37 N. W. 417; Dunn v. Barnum, 2 C. C. A. 265, 10 U. S. App. 86, 51 Fed. 355; Jenkins v. Collard, 145 U. S. 546, 36 L. ed. 812, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 868; Godfrey v. Iowa Land & Trust Co. 21 Okla. 293, 95 Pac. 792; McWilliams Invest. Co. v. Livingston, 22 Okla. 884, 98 Pac. 914.

The act of April 21, 1904, authorized a citizen not of Indian blood to convey his surplus allotment.

Godfrey v. Iowa Land & Trust Co. 21 Okla. 293, 95 Pac. 792.

Messrs. A. N. Frost and Harlow A. Leekley argued the cause and filed a brief for appellee:

All the transactions set out in the bills of complaint were void because had in violation of acts of Congress prohibiting the alienation of the lands included in the attempted conveyances.

A. Because no patent to any of the lands has been delivered.

B. Acts of Congress imposing restrictions generally upon lands allotted to members of the Five Civilized Tribes prohibited the alienation of lands of some of the particular classes of Seminole Indians mentioned in the two classes of cases under consideration, and were, and still are, in full force and effect; and, as to the lands of other particular classes of Seminole Indians, were in full force and effect at the date of the execution of the instruments complained of.

See also brief on behalf of United States in Heckman v. United States, ante, 820.

Solicitor General Lehmann also argued the cause for appellee.

Mr. Justice Hughes delivered the opinion of the court:

The question presented by this appeal is with respect to the right of Seminole freedmen to convey the lands allotted to them in severalty pursuant to the act of July 1, 1898, chap. 542, 30 Stat. at L. 567. The United States sued to cancel conveyances alleged to have been made contrary to the statute. Demurrer to the bill was sustained by the circuit court, and its judgment was reversed by the circuit court of appeals. United States v. Allen, and similar cases, 103 C. C. A. 1, 179 Fed. 13. So far as the demurrer contested the capacity of the United States to bring a suit of this character, the case stands upon the same footing, in all 460] *material respects, as that of Heckman v. United States, decided April 1, 1912 [224 U. S. 413, ante, 820, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 424], and the right of the United States to enforce such restrictions as may have been imposed upon the alienation of the allotted lands is no longer open to dispute.

The inquiry must be, What are the restrictions in the case of allotments to Seminole freedmen, and have they been violated?

As to each of the tracts of land in question, it was alleged:

"And your orator further shows that each of the tracts of land hereinafter, in paragraph numbered six, described, is situated in the eastern district of Oklahoma, and was, at the time of the transactions of sale or encumbrance mentioned in that paragraph, allotted lands of the members of the Seminole tribe of Indians, allotted to freedman members of said tribe, and none were lands which had been patented to individuals at the time of the transactions in question; that they were not lands of heirs of allottees; that all contracts for the sale, disposition of any of said allotments prior to the date of patent, were expressly declared by law to be void; that this law applied to all allotments of Seminole lands not inherited from allottees; that accordingly, defendants had knowledge, and were, by said law, put upon inquiry and notice, as to the inalienability of said unpatented lands, and had notice accordingly that the particular tracts had not been patented, any such patenting being a matter of public record and of public action; that, moreover, the unpatented condition of said allotted lands was notorious and of common knowledge, since none of the Seminole allotted lands have been patented; and that other public laws of Congress and public agreements imposed further restrictions upon the transfer and encumbrance of the particular lands herein, in paragraph six, described, belonging to the particular class of tribal members herein *mentioned, in addition to those arising from the absence of patenting, and these restrictions were known, notified, and notorious in like manner."

While it appears that a large number of conveyances are involved in the suit, only two are specifically described in the printed record on this appeal, the descriptions of the others, as set forth in the bill, having been omitted by stipulation. In the two cases particularly mentioned, the conveyances were made in August, 1906, and March, 1907. It is not stated whether the lands embraced therein were homestead or so-called "surplus" lands, but it is conceded in argument that they were of the latter class. The government says in its brief: "In the printed record it happens that the transactions set out include only lands allotted other than homestead, but other transactions complained of in the bill, omitted from the printed record for the sake of brevity, include lands allotted as homesteads as well." The broad ground is taken by the government that all conveyances of the lands allotted to members of the Seminole tribe are void because made prior to the date of patent.

By the treaty of 1832 (7 Stat. at L. 368) the Seminoles relinquished to the United States their claim to the lands then occupied in the territory of Florida, and agreed to emigrate to the lands assigned to the Creeks, west of the Mississippi, it being understood that an additional extent of territory proportioned to their numbers should "be added to the Creek country," and that they should be received "as a constituent part of the Creek Nation." Provision to this effect was made in the Creek treaty of 1833 (7 Stat. at L. 417, 419), which was satisfactory to the Seminoles, and territory was assigned to them accordingly. 7 Stat. at L. 423. There were further agreements in 1845 (9 Stat. at L. 821) and in 1856 (11 Stat. at L. 699). In 1866 (14 Stat. at L. 755), lands which had been ceded to the Seminoles by the Creeks were conveyed to the United States at a stipulated price; 462] *and the United States, having obtained from the Creeks the westerly half of their lands, granted to the Seminoles a tract of 200,000 acres, which was to constitute the national domain of the latter. Subsequently, the United States purchased for the Seminoles another tract, on the east, consisting of 175,000 acres. Acts of March 3, 1873, 17 Stat. at L. 626, chap. 322, August 5, 1882, 22 Stat. at L. 265, chap. 390. It was provided in the treaty of 1866, inasmuch as there were among the Seminoles "many persons of African descent and blood, who have no interest or property in the soil and no recognized civil rights," that "these persons and their descendants, and such other of the same race as shall be permitted by said nation to settle there, shall have and enjoy all the rights of native citizens, and the laws of said nation shall be equally binding upon all persons of whatever race or color who may be adopted as citizens or members of said tribe."

Pursuant to the policy of allotting tribal lands among the individual members of the Five Civilized Tribes (act of March 3, 1893, chap. 209, 27 Stat. at L. 645), an agreement was made by the Dawes Commission with the Seminoles on December 16, 1897, which was ratified by the act of July 1, 1898. This agreement provided (30 Stat. at L. 567, chap. 542):

"All lands belonging to the Seminole tribe of Indians shall be divided into three classes, designated as first, second, and third class; the first class to be appraised at five dollars, the second class at two dollars and fifty cents, and the third class at one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre, and the same shall be divided among the members of the tribe so that each shall have an equal share thereof in value, so far as may be, the location and fertility of the soil considered; giving to each the right to select his allotment so as to include any improvements thereon, owned by him at the time; and each allottee shall have the sole right of occupancy of the land so allotted to 463]him, *during the existence of the present tribal government, and until the members of said tribe shall have become citizens of the United States. Such allotment shall be made under the direction and supervision of the Commission to the Five Civilized Tribes, in connection with a representative appointed by the tribal government; and the chairman of said commission shall execute and deliver to each allottee a certificate describing therein the land allotted to him.

"All contracts for sale, disposition, or encumbrance of any part of any allotment made prior to date of patent shall be void."

Leases by allottees were permitted upon certain conditions.

The deeds of the allotted lands were to be executed at the termination of the tribal government, and each allottee was to designate 40 acres which, by the terms of the deed, should be inalienable and nontaxable as a homestead in perpetuity. The provision on this subject was as follows:

"When the tribal government shall cease to exist, the principal chief last elected by said tribe shall execute, under his hand and the seal of the Nation, and deliver to each allottee, a deed conveying to him all the right, title, and interest of the said Nation and the members thereof in and to the lands so allotted to him, and the Secretary of the Interior shall approve such deed, and the same shall thereupon operate as relinquishment of the right, title, and interest of the United States in and to the land embraced in said conveyance, and as a guaranty by the United States of the title of said lands to the allottee; and the acceptance of such deed by the allottee shall be a relinquishment of his title to and interest in all other lands belonging to the tribe, except such as may have been excepted from allotment and held in common for other purposes. Each allottee shall designate one tract of *forty acres, which shall, by the terms[464 of the deed, be made inalienable and nontaxable as a homestead in perpetuity."

A supplemental agreement was made with the Seminoles on October 7, 1899, ratified on June 2, 1900 (31 Stat. at L. 250, chap. 610), which provided for the enrolment of children born to Seminole citizens to and including December 31, 1899, and all Seminole citizens then living, and also that if any member of the tribe should die after that date, the lands, money, and other property to which he would be entitled if living, should descend to his heirs.

The act of March 3, 1903, chap. 994, § 8 (32 Stat. at L. 982, 1008), contained the following provisions as to the duration of the tribal government, the execution, delivery, and recording of deeds and the inalienability of homesteads:

"Sec. 8. That the tribal government of the Seminole Nation shall not continue longer than March fourth, nineteen hundred and six: Provided, That the Secretary of the Interior shall at the proper time furnish the principal chief with blank deeds necessary for all conveyances mentioned in the agreement with the Seminole Nation, contained in the act of July first, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight (30 Stat. at L. 567, chap. 542), and said principal chief shall execute and deliver said deeds to the Indian allottees, as required by said act, and the deeds for allotment, when duly executed and approved, shall be recorded in the office of the Dawes Commission prior to delivery, and without expense to the allottee, until further legislation by Congress, and such records shall have like effect as other public records: Provided further, That the homestead referred to in said act shall be inalienable during the lifetime of the allottee, not exceeding twenty-one years from the date of the deed for the allotment. A separate deed shall be issued for said homestead, and during the time the same is held by the allottee it shall not be liable for any debt contracted by the owner thereof."

465] *The restriction upon the alienation of homestead lands applied as well to the freedmen as to the other allottees; but it was removed, with respect to the freedmen, by the act of May 27, 1908, chap. 199 (35 Stat. at L. 312). This statute, in fixing the status—after sixty days from the date of the act—of the lands of allottees of the Five Civilized Tribes, theretofore or thereafter allotted, provided: "All lands, including homesteads, of said allottees enrolled as intermarried whites, as freedmen, and as mixed-blood Indians having less than half Indian blood, including minors, shall be free from all restrictions." The present bill was filed on July 23, 1908, and the conveyances it assails were executed before this provision of the act of 1908 became operative. Previous conveyances were not validated by the statute, but, on the contrary, it declared any attempted alienation or encumbrance of allotted lands, prior to the removal of restrictions, to be void. Section 5, id. 313. It follows that the instruments described in the bill, in so far as they may have purported to convey homestead lands, were executed in violation of law, and the government was entitled to have them set aside.

The "surplus" lands were embraced in the general restriction contained in the agreement of December 16, 1897, ratified by the act of July 1, 1898, that "all contracts for sale, disposition, or encumbrance of any part of any allotment made prior to date of patent shall be void." Apart from the provisions as to leases, this was the only restriction upon the alienation of surplus lands imposed by that agreement, and no further restriction applicable to the freedmen allottees was placed upon such lands by subsequent statute.

The situation with respect to the Seminole allotments may be briefly stated. The commissioners to the Five Civilized Tribes found little difficulty in preparing the rolls of the Seminoles or in making the allotments. The enrolment following the ratification of the agreement of 1897 *was[466 begun in July, 1898, and was finished in August of that year. The rolls containing the additional names, provision for which was made by the supplemental agreement of 1899, were forwarded to the Department in December, 1900, and were approved by the Secretary of the Interior on April 2, 1901. Reports of Commission to Five Civilized Tribes, 1900, p. 12; 1901, p. 30. In June, 1901, the commission undertook the making of allotments, and this was practically completed at an early date. In their report for 1903 (pp. 36, 37), the commissioners said: "The last annual report of the commission showed the completion of allotment in the Seminole Nation, save as to the recording of a small number of allotments, and the issuance of certificates therefor, which was finished early in the past year." Subsequently there were additional allotments to after-born children, in accordance with the act of March 3, 1905. 33 Stat. at L. 1071, chap. 1479. As already noted, the allottees were to receive their deeds on the expiration of the tribal government, which, by the act of 1903, was not to continue longer than March 4, 1906. By joint resolution of March 2, 1906, Congress provided for the continuance of "the tribal existence and present tribal governments" of the Five Civilized Tribes "in full force and effect for all purposes under existing laws," until all the property of the tribes should be distributed (34 Stat. at L. 822); and by the act of April 26, 1906, they were continued "until otherwise provided by law" (§ 28, 34 Stat. at L. 137, 148, chap. 1876). While the duration of the tribal government was thus extended, the last-mentioned statute expressly authorized the principal chief of the Seminoles meanwhile, that is, before its termination, to execute deeds to allottees. Section 6, id. 139. These deeds, however, had not been delivered at the time of the conveyances in question. None of the lands, says the bill, had been patented to individuals, and they were not lands of heirs of allottees.

*It is urged that the time for the is-[467 suance of patents was fixed as the 4th of March, 1906, and that in law they will be deemed to have been delivered on that date or within a reasonable time thereafter; that although provision was made for the continuance of the tribal government, there was likewise authority for the delivery of the deeds prior to its termination. The contention that the restriction was thus removed cannot be sustained. The agreement of 1897 did not fix a definite time for the termination of the tribal government, and while the act of 1903 set a limit to its existence, Congress was competent to extend it. This was done, and the mere authorization of the execution of patents before the tribal government ceased to exist cannot be regarded as a repeal of the explicit provision that contracts for the sale or encumbrance of the allotted lands prior to the date of patent should be void. The one did not override the other; they could stand together.

But, in 1904,—after the allotments to the Seminoles had been made,—the restrictions upon the alienation by adult allottees of the Five Civilized Tribes, who were not of Indian blood, of lands other than homesteads, were removed. The provision was as follows (act of April 21, 1904, chap. 1402, 33 Stat. at L. 189, 204):

"And all the restrictions upon the alienation of lands of all allottees of either of the Five Civilized Tribes of Indians who are not of Indian blood, except minors, are, except as to homesteads, hereby removed, and all restrictions upon the alienation of all other allottees of said tribes, except minors, and except as to homesteads, may, with the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, be removed under such rules and regulations as the Secretary of the Interior may prescribe, upon application to the United States Indian agent at the Union Agency in charge of the Five Civilized Tribes, if said agent is satisfied, upon a full investigation of each individual case, that 468]such *removal of restrictions is for the best interest of said allottee. The finding of the United States Indian agent and the approval of the Secretary of the Interior shall be in writing, and shall be recorded in the same manner as patents for lands are recorded."

This statute undoubtedly applied to allottees of the Seminole Nation, as one of the Five Civilized Tribes, and the enrolled freedmen of that tribe, according to the classification of the commission in making the rolls, fell within the description of allottees "not of Indian blood." The freedmen were persons of African descent,—embracing former slaves and their descendants,—who had been admitted to the rights of native citizens under the treaty of 1866. Report of Dawes Commission, 1898, pp. 11, 13. While the law did not prescribe that a separate roll of freedmen should be made in the case of the Seminoles, the commission in fact made one. As to this they said in their report for 1898 (p. 13), referring to the Seminoles: "Indeed, it is essentially a nation of full bloods, save as to its colored citizens, who, under treaty provision, are on an equal footing with the citizens by blood. About one third of the citizens of the Seminole Nation are freedmen, and while the law does not specifically require a separate roll of each of these classes, the commission's data will enable it to so separate them." Accordingly the freedmen in the rolls of the Seminoles, upon which the allotments were based, appear as a class distinct from the citizens by blood. Final Rolls of Citizens and Freedmen of the Five Civilized Tribes, pp. 615, 627. And the commissioner to the Five Civilized Tribes in his report for 1908 (p. 7), in stating the total number of the enrolled Seminoles, with the degree of blood of each, gives the number of the citizens of full blood and of mixed blood, three fourths or more, one half to three fourths, and less than one-half blood, and then the number of the enrolled freedmen as a separate group. The bill does not allege that the allottees in *ques-[469 tion had any Indian blood, but describes them simply as "freedmen members of said tribe;" and in the specifications of the conveyances which appear in the record the grantors are named as Seminole freedmen whose names are on the freedmen roll. The import of the allegation, then, is that these grantors were not of Indian blood, and, so far as they were adults, they came within the provision of the act of 1904, removing restrictions upon the alienation of surplus lands.

These adult grantors stood in precisely the same position—after the act of 1904—as though they had received their allotments without any restriction upon their right to alienate the interest thus acquired. It is insisted, however, that this interest was not of such a character as to be susceptible of transfer. This is not a tenable proposition. Stress is laid upon the provision in the agreement of 1897 that each allottee should have "the sole right of occupancy of the land so allotted to him." But it is not to be supposed that by this form of words Congress intended in the case of the Seminoles to provide that, by virtue of the allotment, the member of the tribe should receive an interest of a different nature from that received by allottees of other tribes. The lands were allotted to the members of the tribe in severalty, so that each should have his distinct portion. The allotments constituted their respective shares of the tribal property, set apart to them as such, and while the execution of the deeds was deferred, each had meanwhile a complete equitable interest in the land allotted to him. The nature of the allottee's interest is sufficiently shown by other provisions of the agreement of 1897, as ratified by Congress, and by statutes in pari materia. In the agreement it was provided that any allottee might lease his allotment on certain conditions. With respect to the townsite of Wewoka, which was to be controlled and disposed of according to the provisions of the act of the general council 470] of the *Seminole Nation of April 23, 1897, it was provided that, on extinguishment of the tribal government, deeds should issue "to owners of lots," as in the case of allottees. The interests of the allottee was a descendible interest. By the supplemental agreement of 1900, in the case of the death of a member of the tribe after December 31, 1899, the lands "to which he would be entitled if living" were to descend to his heirs. Section 5 of the act of April 26, 1906, relating to "patents or deeds to allottees in any of the Five Civilized Tribes" to be thereafter issued—thus including those to be issued to the Seminole allottees—provided that if any such allottee should die before the deed became effective, the title to the lands described therein should "inure to and vest in his heirs;" and further, that "in case any allottee shall die after restrictions have been removed, his property shall descend to his heirs or his lawful assigns, as if the patent or deed had issued to the allottee during his life" (34 Stat. at L. 138, chap. 1876); and § 19 of that act contained a proviso declaring that conveyances theretofore made "by members of any of the Five Civilized Tribes subsequent to the selection of allotment, and subsequent to removal of restriction, where patents thereafter issue, shall not be deemed or held invalid solely because said conveyances were made prior to issuance and recording or delivery of patent or deed."

The inalienability of the allotted lands was not due to the quality of the interest of the allottee, but to the express restriction imposed. Their equitable interest was one which, in the absence of restriction, they could convey. Doe ex dem. Mann v. Wilson, 23 How. 457, 16 L. ed. 584; Crews v. Burcham, 1 Black, 352, 17 L. ed. 91; Barney v. Dolph, 97 U. S. 652, 656, 24 L. ed. 1063, 1064; Jones v. Meehan, 175 U. S. 1, 15-18, 44 L. ed. 49, 55-57, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; Godfrey v. Iowa Land & Trust Co. 21 Okla. 293, 95 Pac. 792; Mullen v. United States, decided April 15, 1912. [224 U. S. 448, ante, 834, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 494.] And hence, on the removal of the restrictions upon alienation, the adult allottees not of 471] *Indian bloods were entitled to convey their surplus lands. So far as the bill assails such conveyances, it is without equity.

As all the conveyances made to the appellants are not particularly described in the printed record before this court, it is impossible to specify those which were lawful and those which were obnoxious to the statute. We are of opinion (1) that the bill should be sustained so far as it relates to conveyances of homestead lands; (2) that it should also be sustained to the extent that it is directed against conveyances of surplus lands made by freedmen allottees who were minors, and thus excepted from the provision of the act of April 21, 1904, and those made by adult allottees prior to that date; and (3) that so far as the bill relates to conveyances of surplus lands, made by adult freedmen allottees subsequent to April 21, 1904, it should be dismissed.

The judgment of the Circuit Court of Appeals will therefore be affirmed, with the modification that the cause shall proceed in conformity with this opinion.

It is so ordered.

DEMING INVESTMENT COMPANY,
Appt.,
v.
UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 471-473.)

This case is governed by the decision in Goat v. United States, ante, 841.

[No. 434.]

Argued October 12 and 13, 1911. Decided April 29, 1912.

A PPEAL from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit to review a decree which reversed a decree of the Circuit Court for the Eastern District of Oklahoma, sustaining demurrers to and dismissing the bill in a suit by the United States to cancel conveyances by Seminole freedmen, alleged to be in violation of existing restrictions on alienation. Affirmed, with the modification that the cause shall proceed in conformity with the following opinion.

See same case below, 103 C. C. A. 1, 179 Fed. 13.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Robert J. Boone, J. C. Stone, and S. T. Bledsoe argued the cause and filed a brief for appellant:

Although the government alone can purchase lands from an Indian nation, it does not follow that when the rights of the nation are extinguished, an individual of the nation who takes as private owner cannot sell his interest.

Doe ex dem. Mann v. Wilson, 23 How. 457, 16 L. ed. 584; Jones v. Meehan, 175 U. S. 16, 44 L. ed. 55, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1.

The allotment certificate, when issued, like a patent, to lands, is dual in its effect. It is an adjudication of the special tribunal empowered to decide the question that the party to whom it is issued is entitled to the land, and it is a conveyance of the right to this title to the allottee.

United States v. Winona & St. P. R. Co. 15 C. C. A. 96, 32 U. S. App. 272, 67 Fed. 948.

The same rules apply in Indian matters of this kind as to the acts of the Interior Department in public land matters.

Wallace v. Adams, 74 C. C. A. 540, 143 Fed. 716.

The right to a patent once vested is treated by the government when dealing with the public lands, as equivalent to a patent issued.

Francis v. Francis, 203 U. S. 238, 51 L. ed. 166, 27 Sup. Ct. Rep. 129; Stark v. Starr, 6 Wall. 418, 18 L. ed. 929.

An act giving an Indian allottee a right to a patent was a sufficient authority for a sale by him, and when the patent subsequently issued to him, it inured to the benefit of the grantee.

Quinney v. Denney, 18 Wis. 486.

The right to a patent was absolute and complete, and the duty of the Secretary of the Interior to issue the patent was imperative.

Briggs v. Wash-puk-qua, 37 Fed. 135; Jones v. Meehan, 175 U. S. 1, 44 L. ed. 49, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1.

The certificate of allotment of an Indian citizen, delivered, is a conveyance of the land to the allottee.

Carter v. Ruddy, 6 C. C. A. 3, 15 U. S. App. 129, 56 Fed. 542; Wisconsin C. R. Co. v. Price County, 133 U. S. 496, 33 L. ed. 687, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341; Porter v. Parker, 68 Neb. 338, 94 N. W. 123; Flanagan v. Forsythe, 6 Okla. 225, 50 Pac. 152; Godfrey v. Iowa Land & Trust Co. 21 Okla. 293, 95 Pac. 792; DeGraffenreid v. Iowa Land & Trust Co. 20 Okla. 687, 95 Pac. 624; McWilliams Invest. Co. v. Livingston, 22 Okla. 884, 98 Pac. 914.

In the progress of proceedings to acquire, under the laws of the United States, a title to public lands, the power of the Land Department over them ceases when the last official act necessary to transfer the title to the successful claimant has been performed, and it cannot withhold delivery of the patents.

United States v. Schurz, 102 U. S. 378, 26 L. ed. 167.

The failure of the officers to issue the patent at the time it ought to be issued does not affect the right of any person.

Leonard v. Ross, 23 Kan. 292.

The courts, both Federal and state, have declared that the restrictions on this class of Seminole allottees were removed after April 21, 1904.

Godfrey v. Iowa Land & Trust Co. 21 Okla. 293, 95 Pac. 792; United States v. Crouch, C. C. E. D. Okla. No. 1112.

Where rules of property in a state are fully settled by a series of adjudications, this court adopts the decisions of the state court.

Chicago v. Robbins, 2 Black, 418, 17 L. ed. 298; Burgess v. Seligman, 107 U. S. 20, 27 L. ed. 359, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 10; Bacon v. Northwestern Mut. L. Ins. Co. 131 U. S. 258, 33 L. ed. 128, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 787.

If the lands involved in this action are not restricted, then the government has no right to maintain this suit under the act of May 27, 1908, or otherwise, and it becomes very essential to determine the question of restriction in order to determine the jurisdiction of the court.

United States v. Rundell, 181 Fed. 887.

See also briefs of these counsel in Heckman v. United States, ante, 820, and in Mullen v. United States, ante, 834.

Messrs. A. N. Frost and Harlow A. Leekley argued the cause and filed a brief for appellee.

For contentions of counsel, see their brief as reported in Goat v. United States, ante, 841.

Solicitor General Lehmann also argued the cause for appellee.

Mr. Justice Hughes delivered the opinion of the court:

The United States sought by this suit to cancel certain deeds and mortgages of lands allotted to members of the Seminole tribe of Indians. The judgment of the circuit court, sustaining demurrers to the bill, was reversed by the circuit court of appeals. United States v. Allen, and similar cases, 103 C. C. A. 1, 179 Fed. 13.

The suit was brought on July 22, 1908, and embraced several conveyances to distinct grantees. This appeal is prosecuted—under § 3 of the act of June 25, 1910, chap. 408, 36 Stat. at L. 837—by only one of the defendants, the Deming Investment Company, of Oklahoma City.

The bill attacks mortgages made to this appellant, by others than the allottees, during the months of August, October, and December, 1906. It is alleged that they were attempted encumbrances of allotted lands of members of the Seminole tribe; that none of these lands had been patented to individuals at the time of the transactions; and that all contracts for the sale, disposition, and encumbrance of the lands prior to the date of patent were expressly declared by law to be void. Agreement of December 16, 1897, ratified by the act of July 1, 1898, chap. 542, 30 Stat. at L. 567.

In its brief the appellant states that "each conveyance only involves the surplus 473] allotment, and not the homestead, *of the particular allottee,"—a statement which we do not understand the government to challenge so far as the mortgages to the appellant are concerned. The bill does not allege that these mortgages, or any of them, embraced homestead lands.

Nor is it alleged in the bill that any of the allottees whose allotments had been mortgaged to the appellant were of Indian blood, but the lands are described as those which had been allotted to Seminole freedmen whose names appear upon the freedmen rolls of that tribe. Upon the allegations of the bill, these allottees, so far as they were adults, must be held to come within the provision of the act of April 21, 1904, chap. 1402 (33 Stat. at L. 189, 204), which removed all restrictions upon alienation by adult allottees not of Indian blood, with respect to their surplus lands; and, by virtue of the allotment, they had an interest in the allotted lands which, on the removal of the restriction, they were entitled to convey. Goat v. United States, decided this day [224 U. S. 458, ante, 841, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 544].

Minors were excepted from this enabling provision of the act of 1904; and in one instance the mortgage is described as covering a portion of the allotment of a minor freedman allottee, Ellen Sango, age seventeen. In this, as in other cases, the age of the allottees is given apparently as of the time when the mortgage was executed. The dates of the conveyances made by the allottees are not set forth.

Upon the authority of Goat v. United States, supra, the bill, with respect to the appellant, should be sustained so far as it relates to mortgages covering lands which had been conveyed by minor allottees, or by adult allottees before April 21, 1904; and it should be dismissed as to the surplus lands conveyed by adult freedmen allottees subsequent to that date. The judgment of the Circuit Court of Appeals is affirmed, with the modification that the cause shall proceed in conformity with this opinion.

It is so ordered.

*INTERSTATE COMMERCE COM-[474
MISSION, Plff. in Err.,
v.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA EX REL.
HUMBOLDT STEAMSHIP COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 474-485.)

Territories — Alaska — interstate commerce act.

1. Alaska is a territory of the United States within the meaning of the act of June 29, 1906 (34 Stat. at L. 584, chap. 3591, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1909, p. 1150), extending the provisions of the interstate commerce act to carriers engaged in the transportation of passengers or property from one state or territory of the United States to any other state or territory, or from one place in a territory to another place in the same territory.

[Matters as to territories, see Territories, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Interstate Commerce Commission — powers — railway rates in Alaska.

2. The authority of the Secretary of the Interior to review and modify railway rates in Alaska, conferred upon him by the act of May 14, 1898 (30 Stat. at L. 409, chap. 299, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1576), § 2, was superseded by the amendment of June 29, 1906, to the interstate commerce act, which gave to the Interstate Commerce Commission the power to prescribe rates, and extended the provisions of the act to intraterritorial commerce.

[Matters as to Interstate Commerce Commission, see Interstate Commerce Commission, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

Appeal — to commerce court.

3. An appeal will not lie to the commerce court to review the action of the Interstate Commerce Commission in refusing to entertain a petition, on the ground that the subject-matter was not within the scope of the Commission's powers.

Mandamus — to Interstate Commerce Commission.

4. Mandamus lies to compel the Interstate Commerce Commission to take jurisdiction of a petition alleging violations of the interstate commerce act by a railway company operating in Alaska, where the Commission refused to entertain the petition, upon the ground that Alaska was not a territory of the United States, and that the subject-matter of the petition was therefore not within the scope of the Commission's powers.

[For other cases, see Mandamus, II. d, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. 859.]

NOTE.—As to when mandamus is the proper remedy—see notes to United States ex rel. International Contracting Co. v. Lamont, 39 L. ed. U. S. 160; McCluny v. Silliman, 4 L. ed. U. S. 263; Fleming v. Guthrie, 3 L.R.A. 54; Burnsville Turnp. Co. v. State, 3 L.R.A. 265; State ex rel. Charleston, C. & C. R. Co. v. Whitesides, 3 L.R.A. 777; and Ex parte Hurn, 13 L.R.A. 120.

Argued April 16, 1912. Decided April 29, 1912.

IN ERROR to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia to review a judgment which reversed a judgment of the Supreme Court of the District, dismissing a mandamus proceeding directed to the Interstate Commerce Commission, and remanded the cause with directions to issue the writ. Affirmed.

See same case below, 37 App. D. C. 266. The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. P. J. Farrell argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

This court will consider itself bound by the interpretation of the Commission, which is the tribunal primarily charged with the enforcement of the provisions of the act to regulate commerce.

New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 200 U. S. 361, 50 L. ed. 515, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 272.

Mandamus is not a proper proceeding in which to correct an error of law like that alleged in the petition.

Commissioner of Patents v. Whiteley (Holloway v. Whiteley) 4 Wall. 522, 18 L. ed. 335; United States ex rel. West v. Hitchcock, 19 App. D. C. 342; Decatur v. Paulding, 14 Pet. 497, 514, 516, 10 L. ed. 559, 567, 568; United States ex rel. Dunlap v. Black, 128 U. S. 40, 48, 32 L. ed. 354, 357, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 12; United States ex rel. Goodrich v. Guthrie, 17 How. 284, 15 L. ed. 102; Georgia v. Stanton, 6 Wall. 50, 18 L. ed. 721; Gaines v. Thompson, 7 Wall. 347, 19 L. ed. 62; United States ex rel. Redfield v. Windom, 137 U. S. 636, 644, 34 L. ed. 811, 814, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 197; United States ex rel. Boynton v. Blaine, 139 U. S. 306, 319, 35 L. ed. 183, 187, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 607; United States ex rel. International Contracting Co. v. Lamont, 155 U. S. 303, 308, 39 L. ed. 160, 163, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 97; Kimberlin v. Commission, 44 C. C. A. 109, 104 Fed. 655.

Mr. Charles D. Drayton argued the cause, and, with Messrs. John B. Daish and James Wickersham, filed a brief for defendant in error:

Alaska is a territory of the United States.

Grigsby v. United States, 43 Ct. Cl. 426; The Coquitlam v. United States, 163 U. S. 346, 41 L. ed. 184, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1117; Binns v. United States, 194 U. S. 486, 48 L. ed. 1087, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 816; Rassmussen v. United States, 197 U. S. 516, 49 L. ed. 862, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 514; Nagle v. United States, 111 C. C. A. 621, 191 Fed. 141.

Where the intention of Congress is manifest, it is settled beyond any question that even a later general act will repeal a prior special act in conflict therewith.

Louisville Water Co. v. Clark, 143 U. S. 1, 11, 36 L. ed. 55, 57, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 346; Union P. R. Co. v. Cheyenne (Union P. R. Co. v. Ryan) 113 U. S. 523, 28 L. ed. 1101, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 601; Cass v. Dillon, 2 Ohio St. 610; Henrietta Min. & Mill. Co. v. Gardner, 173 U. S. 128, 43 L. ed. 639, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 327.

Mandamus lies if there be no other specific legal remedy.

Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cranch, 163, 2 L. ed. 69; Knox County v. Aspinwall, 24 How. 376, 16 L. ed. 735; United States v. Boutwell, 17 Wall. 604, 21 L. ed. 721; Taxing Dist. v. Loague, 129 U. S. 493, 32 L. ed. 780, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 327; Re Pennsylvania Co. 137 U. S. 451, 34 L. ed. 738, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 141; Seymour v. United States, 10 App. D. C. 567.

This is a proper case for the issuance of the writ.

Noble v. Union River Logging R. Co. 147 U. S. 165, 37 L. ed. 123, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 271; Garfield v. United States, 211 U. S. 249, 261, 262, 53 L. ed. 168, 174, 175, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 62.

The question of jurisdiction in a particular case, where the facts are admitted or found, is a pure question of law; and although the deciding body may have exercised a discretion, if there has been an abuse thereof, mandamus will lie to correct the error.

Virginia v. Rives, 100 U. S. 313, 25 L. ed. 667; Virginia v. Paul, 148 U. S. 107, 37 L. ed. 386, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 536; Re Christensen Engineering Co. 194 U. S. 458, 48 L. ed. 1072, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 729; Ex parte Harding, 219 U. S. 363, 55 L. ed. 252, 37 L.R.A. (N.S.) 392, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 324; Ex parte Brown, 116 U. S. 401, 29 L. ed. 676, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 587; United States v. Fossatt, 21 How. 445, 16 L. ed. 186; Ex parte Russell, 13 Wall. 664, 20 L. ed. 632; Re Parker, 131 U. S. 221, 33 L. ed. 123, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 708; Re Hohorst, 150 U. S. 653, 37 L. ed. 1211, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 221; Ex parte Newman, 14 Wall. 152, 20 L. ed. 877; Roberts v. United States, 176 U. S. 221, 231, 44 L. ed. 443, 447, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 376; United States ex rel. Boynton v. Blaine, 139 U. S. 306, 35 L. ed. 183, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 607.

The paramount and essential duty conspicuously enjoined upon the Commission is found in the mandatory language of § 12; "The Commission is hereby authorized and required to execute and enforce the provisions of this act."

The power given is the power to execute and enforce, not to legislate. The power given is partly judicial, partly executive and administrative, but not legislative.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. 167 U. S. 479, 501, 42 L. ed. 243, 253, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 896.

Any act in connection with a judicial or quasi-judicial proceeding for which there is no legal excuse is subject to the control of the courts by mandamus.

United States ex rel. West v. Hitchcock, 19 App. D. C. 333.

The relief now sought by relator, therefore, is that the Commission be required to perform two duties:

(1) Judicial, by assuming jurisdiction of relator's complaint and deciding the same upon its merits; the Commission heretofore having erred as a matter of law in refusing to entertain jurisdiction and decide.

(2) A duty which is administrative or ministerial, by requiring certain carriers to comply with the act by filing schedules of rates, fares, and charges.

Virginia v. Rives, 100 U. S. 313, 25 L. ed. 667; Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cranch, 163, 2 L. ed. 69; Kendall v. United States, 12 Pet. 524, 9 L. ed. 1181; Ex parte Parker, 120 U. S. 737, 30 L. ed. 818, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 767; Craig v. Leitensdorfer (Downs v. Hubbard) 123 U. S. 189, 31 L. ed. 114, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 85.

Under the decision of the lower courts, relator's right to have his case entertained by the Commission and determined upon the merits was guaranteed to him under the act, and, as observed by Mr. Justice Field, delivering the opinion of this court in Re Parker, 131 U. S. 221, 33 L. ed. 123, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 708: "Rights under our system of law and procedure do not rest in the discretionary authority of any officer, judicial or otherwise."

The Commission is not an arm of the "judicial system." It is neither a Federal court under the Constitution, nor does it exercise judicial powers, nor do its conclusions possess the efficacy of judicial proceedings. Kentucky & I. Bridge Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 2 L.R.A. 289, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 351, 37 Fed. 567. Hence, when the Commission has erred in a matter of statutory construction, it is for the courts to correct the error.

Upon the adoption by the court of the view that the act to regulate commerce applies in Alaska, the duty of the Commission thereupon immediately became "ministerial," is to be considered as having been such ab initio, and never to have been in any degree "discretionary."

Decatur v. Paulding, 14 Pet. 497, 10 L. ed. 559.

Power to make the order, and not the 56 L. ed.

mere expediency or wisdom of having made it, is the question.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Illinois C. R. Co. 215 U. S. 452, 54 L. ed. 280, 30 Sup. Ct. Rep. 155.

Congress has not attempted to delegate authority to the Commission "to make the law" for Alaska.

Marshall, Field & Co. v. Clark, 143 U. S. 649, 692, 36 L. ed. 294, 309, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 495.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

The ultimate question in the case is whether Alaska is a territory of the United States within the meaning of the interstate commerce act as amended.

The Interstate Commerce Commission resolved the question in the negative and dismissed the petition of the Humboldt Steamship Company, the relator, which alleged violations of the act by the White Pass & Yukon Railway Company, operating in Alaska, applying its decision in Re Jurisdiction Over Rail & Water Carriers Operating in Alaska, 19 Inters. Com. Rep. 81.

The steamship company instituted an action in the supreme court of the District of Columbia, praying for a mandamus against the Commission to require it to take jurisdiction and proceed as required by the act and grant the relief for which the steamship company had petitioned, *herein-[478 after specifically mentioned. The proceeding was dismissed. The court expressed the view that the Commission had "ample authority to assume jurisdiction over common carriers in Alaska, the same as in any other territory, and over those carriers operating between the state of Washington and Alaska, and between Alaska and Canada, and if they took jurisdiction no one could successfully question their right to do so." The court, however, held that it had no power "to require the Interstate Commerce Commission to act contrary to its own judgment in a matter wherein, after investigation, it had reached a conclusion, honestly and fairly, which might be contrary to the conclusion which the court would reach."

The court of appeals, to which court the case was taken by the steamship company, entertained the same view of the interstate commerce act as that expressed by the supreme court, but took a different view of the power of the courts to compel action upon the part of the Commission, and reversed the judgment of the supreme court and remanded the cause, "with directions to issue a peremptory writ of mandamus directed to the Interstate Commerce Commission, requiring it to take jurisdiction of said cause and proceed therein as by law required."

To this ruling the Interstate Commerce Commission prosecutes this writ of error.

The proceedings before the Commission were instituted by the steamship company filing a petition (No. 2,578) against the White Pass & Yukon Route, consisting of the Pacific & Arctic Railway & Navigation Company, British Columbia-Yukon Railway Company, British-Yukon Railway Company, and British-Yukon Navigation Company, to require said companies to file with the Commission, in the form prescribed by the act to regulate commerce, and to print and keep open for public inspection, schedules showing their rates and charges for transportation of passengers and property between 479]points in Alaska and *points in the Dominion of Canada and other places; to establish through routes and joint rates in conjunction with the petitioner between certain named places in Alaska and Seattle, in the state of Washington; to afford all reasonable, proper, and equal facilities for the interchange of traffic between their respective lines; and to cease and desist from preventing by sundry devices the carriage of freights from being continuous from place of shipment to place of destination when such freight is originated or in any wise handled by the Humboldt Steamship Company.

The companies proceeded against filed answers. There were intervening companies on both sides of the controversy.

A hearing was assigned and had in October, 1909, and subsequently, July 6, 1910, the Commission decided that it was "without jurisdiction" to make the order sought by complainant," resting its ruling upon the authority of its decision in Re Jurisdiction over Rail & Water Carriers Operating in Alaska, supra.

Section 1 of the interstate commerce act provides that the provisions of the act "shall apply to any . . . common carrier or carriers engaged in the transportation of passengers or property wholly by railroad (or partly by railroad and partly by water, when both are used under a common control, management, or arrangement for a continuous carriage or shipment), from one state or territory of the United States or the District of Columbia to any other state or territory of the United States or the District of Columbia, or from one place in a territory to another place in the same territory, . . . or from any place in the United States through a foreign country to any other place in the United States. . . ." 34 Stat. at L. 584, chap. 3591, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1909, p. 1150.

The pivotal words are: "From one state or territory of the United States . . . 480]to any other state or *territory, . . .

or from one place in a territory to another place in the same territory," "territory" being the especially significant word.

If we may venture to reduce to a single proposition an elaborate discussion of elements and considerations, we may say that the Commission gave to the word "territory" the signification of "organized territory," the chief and determining feature of which is a local legislature, as distinguished from a territory having a more rudimentary and less autonomous form of government which it considered Alaska possessed.

To this signification and distinction the arguments of counsel are addressed, and much of the reasoning of the lower courts. That field, however, has been traversed by cases in this court, and it need not again be passed over. We may accept and apply the conclusions which have been reached and expressed.

In the case of The Coquitlam v. United States, 163 U. S. 346, 41 L. ed. 184, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1117, the relation of the courts of Alaska to the Federal judicial system, and the applicability of certain statutes concerning the same, were decided, after a review of those statutes and those defining the status of Alaska.

By the 15th section of the act of March 3, 1891, creating the circuit court of appeals, it is provided that the circuit court of appeals, in cases in which the judgments of the circuit courts of appeal are made final by this act, shall have "the same appellate jurisdiction, by writ of error or appeal, to review the judgments, orders, and decrees of the supreme courts of the several territories, as by this act they may have to review the judgments, orders, and decrees of the district court and circuit courts; and for that purpose the several territories shall, by orders of the Supreme Court, to be made from time to time, be assigned to particular circuits." 26 Stat. at L. 826, 830, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 488, 554.

In execution of the duty imposed by that section, this *court, by an order promulgated May 11, 1891, assigned Alaska to the ninth judicial circuit.

Subsequent to this order, the United States brought a suit in admiralty in the district court of Alaska for the forfeiture of the steamer Coquitlam because of an alleged violation of the revenue laws. A decree was rendered for the United States, and an appeal was prosecuted to the circuit court of appeals for the ninth circuit. The United States disputed the jurisdiction of the court on the grounds: (1) that the district court of Alaska was not a district court within the meaning of the 6th section of the circuit court of appeals act; and (2) that the district court of Alaska was not a supreme court of a territory, within the meaning of that act and the order of this court assigning Alaska to the ninth circuit.

The court certified the question to this court. We answered the first in the negative and the second in the affirmative. We said, through Mr. Justice Harlan, that the circuit court of appeals act was necessarily interpreted by this court as conferring appellate jurisdiction upon the circuit court of appeals when, by the "order of May 11 (139 U. S. 707, 34 L. ed. 1128b, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. IV.), Alaska was assigned to the ninth circuit." And it was further said: "Alaska is one of the territories of the United States. It was so designated in that order and has always been so regarded. And the court established by the act of 1884 [providing for a civil government for Alaska (23 Stat. at L. 24, chap. 53)] is the court of last resort within the limits of that territory. . . . No reason can be suggested why a territory of the United States, in which the court of last resort is called a supreme court, should be assigned to some circuit established by Congress, that does not apply with full force to the territory of Alaska, in which the court of last resort is designated as the district court of Alaska. The title of the territorial court is not so material as its character."

The case needs no comment. It clearly defines the *relation of Alaska to the rest of the United States. It was not a description of a definite area of land or "landed possession," but of a political unit, governing and being governed as such.

This view is reinforced by other cases. In Binns v. United States, 194 U. S. 486, 490, 48 L. ed. 1087, 1088, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 816, we said, through Mr. Justice Brewer, that we had held in The Coquitlam v. United States that "Alaska is one of the territories of the United States." And also: "Nor can it be doubted that it is an organized territory, for the act of May 17, 1884 (23 Stat. at L. 24, chap. 53), entitled, 'An Act Providing a Civil Government for Alaska,' provided 'that the territory ceded to the United States by Russia by the treaty of March thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven [15 Stat. at L. 539], and known as Alaska, shall constitute a civil and judicial district, the government of which shall be organized and administered as hereinafter provided.'"

In Binns v. United States the fact of a local legislature, or indeed any special form of government, was not considered as necessarily a feature of an organized territory. "It must be remembered," it was said, "that Congress, in the government of the territories as well as of the District of Columbia, has plenary power, save as controlled by the provisions of the Constitution; that the form of government it shall establish is not prescribed, and may not necessarily be the same in all the territories." There is much more in that case which might be quoted as establishing that the status of Alaska is that of an organized territory. See also Rasmussen v. United States, 197 U. S. 516, 49 L. ed. 862, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 514.

It is contended further by the Commission that railways were first authorized to be constructed in Alaska by the act passed May 14, 1898 [30 Stat. at L. 409, chap. 299, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1576], and that § 2 of the act provided as follows:

"That all charges for the transportation of freight and passengers on railroads in the district of Alaska shall be *printed[483 and posted as required by § 6 of an act to regulate commerce, as amended on March 2, 1889 [25 Stat. at L. 855, chap. 382, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3158], and such rates shall be subject to revision and modification by the Secretary of the Interior."

The argument is that this provision brings into force § 6 of the interstate commerce act, and that, it is said, "under familiar rules of construction, excludes the application of every other section in that act," and that, besides, the provision that the rates on the Alaskan railroads should be subject to revision and modification by the Secretary of the Interior "negated the jurisdiction of the Interstate Commerce Commission, even if Alaska was apprehended to be within § 1 of the interstate commerce act."

These contentions do not seem to have been made in either the supreme court of the District or in the court of appeals. It was referred to very briefly as a circumstance to be considered in a majority report of the Interstate Commerce Commission in the ruling case, and more at length in the minority report. In the latter report important circumstances were pointed out. The interstate commerce law preceded that which gave authority to the Secretary of the Interior to revise and modify railroad rates, and the authority was confined to that special exercise; and, so far, it may be said to have amended the interstate commerce act. At that time it had been held in the Maximum Rate Cases (162 U. S. 184, 40 L. ed. 935, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 391, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 700; 167 U. S. 479, 42 L. ed. 243, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 896, and 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. ed. 414, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 45), that Congress had not conferred upon the Interstate Commerce Commission the legislative power to prescribe rates, either maximum, minimum, or absolute. The power to prescribe a rate was conferred by the amendment of June 29, 1906, and that amendment extended the provisions of the act for the first time to intraterritorial commerce. The amendment made the act completely comprehensive of the whole subject, and 484] *entirely superseded the minor authority which had been conferred upon the Secretary of the Interior. As said by the minority of the Commission: "There is no suggestion of doubt that the ends of justice require as much the application of the same principle and regulation in Alaska as in New Mexico or Arizona." The two latter at the time this was said were territories.

It is next contended by the Commission that "mandamus is not a proper proceeding to correct an error of law like that alleged in the petition."

The general principle which controls the issue of a writ of mandamus is familiar. It can be issued to direct the performance of a ministerial act, but not to control discretion. It may be directed against a tribunal or one who acts in a judicial capacity, to require it or him to proceed, the manner of doing so being left to his or its discretion. It is true there may be a jurisdiction to determine the possession of jurisdiction. Ex parte Harding, 219 U. S. 363, 55 L. ed. 252, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 324. But the full doctrine of that case cannot be extended to administrative officers. The Interstate Commerce Commission is purely an administrative body. It is true it may exercise and must exercise quasi judicial duties, but its functions are defined, and, in the main, explicitly directed, by the act creating it. It may act of its own motion in certain instances,—it may be petitioned to move by those having rights under the act. It may exercise judgment and discretion, and, it may be, cannot be controlled in either. But if it absolutely refuse to act, deny its power, from a misunderstanding of the law, it cannot be said to exercise discretion. Give it that latitude and yet give it the power to nullify its most essential duties, and how would its nonaction be reviewed? The answer of the Commission is, by "a reversal by the tribunal of appeal." And such a tribunal, it is intimated, is the United States commerce court.

But the proposition is plainly without 485] merit, even although *it be conceded, for the sake of argument, that the commerce court is by law vested with the exclusive power to review any and every act of the Commission taken in the exertion of the authority conferred upon it by statute; that is, to exclusively review, not only affirmative orders of the Commission granting relief, but also the action of that body in refusing to award relief on the ground that an application was not entitled to relief. This is so because the action of the Commission refusing to entertain a petition on the ground that its subject-matter was not within the scope of the powers conferred upon it would not be embraced within the hypothetical concessions thus made. A like view disposes of the cases relied upon in which it was decided that certain departmental orders were not susceptible of being reviewed by mandamus. We do not propose to review the cases, as we consider them to be plainly inapposite to the subject in hand.

In the case at bar the Commission refused to proceed at all, though the law required it to do so; and to do so as required—that is, to take jurisdiction, not in what manner to exercise it—is the effect of the decree of the court of appeals, the order of the court being that a peremptory writ of mandamus be issued directing the Commission "to take jurisdiction of said cause and proceed therein as by law required." In other words, to proceed to the merits of the controversy, at which point the Commission stopped because it was "constrained to hold," as it said, "upon authority of the decision recently announced in Re Jurisdiction over Rail & Water Carriers operating in Alaska, 19 Inters. Com. Rep. 81, that the Commission is without jurisdiction to make the order sought by complainant," the steamship company.

Judgment affirmed.

*WASHINGTON HOME FOR IN-CURABLES

v.

AMERICAN SECURITY & TRUST COMPANY, Garfield Memorial Hospital, Children's Hospital of the District of Columbia, and Lotta L. Frank.

BENJAMIN L. VERMILLION

v.

BALTIMORE & OHIO RAILROAD COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 486-490.)

Appeal — from District of Columbia courts — pending causes.

The right to a review in the Federal Supreme Court by writ of error or appeal of a judgment or decree of the court of appeals of the District of Columbia in a case in which the matter in dispute exceeds $5,000 was not saved as to a cause pending in the court of appeals on January 1, 1912, when the Federal Judicial Code of March 3, 1911 (36 Stat. at L. 1087, chap. 231) took effect, by § 299 of that Code, providing that its repealing provisions "shall not affect any act done, or any right accruing or accrued, or any suit or proceeding, including those pending on writ of error, appeal, certificate, or writ of certiorari, in any appellate court referred to or included within the provisions of this act, pending at the time of the taking effect of this act, but all such suits and proceedings, and suits and proceedings for causes arising or acts done prior to such date, may be commenced and prosecuted within the same time, and with the same effect, as if said repeal or amendments had not been made."

NOTE.—On the appellate jurisdiction of the Federal Supreme Court over the District of Columbia courts—see note to United States ex rel. Taylor v. Taft, 51 L. ed. U. S. 269.

[For other cases, see Appeal and Error, III. d, 6, in Digest Sup. Ct. 1908.]

[No. —.]

Submitted April 15, 1912. Decided April 29, 1912.

APPPLICATIONS for the allowance of an appeal from the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia, and for a Writ of Error to that court, to review respectively a decree and a judgment in causes in which the matter in dispute exceeds $5,000. Denied.

See same case below, 38 App. D. C. 421. The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Henry B. F. Macfarland, Charles Cowles Tucker, and J. Miller Kenyon submitted the cause for the Home for Incurables.

Messrs. John A. Kratz, Jr., and Joseph W. Cox submitted the cause for Vermilion.

Where the words of a statute are plain, there is no room for construction.

Dewey v. United States, 178 U. S. 510, 44 L. ed. 1170, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 981; United States v. Union P. R. Co. 91 U. S. 72, 23 L. ed. 224.

Where Congress in a subsequent act adopts the provisions of a former act, and in the main its language, it must be presumed that Congress intended the provisions of the subsequent law to accomplish the same thing and to have the same force and effect as the earlier law. Especially is this so where the courts have construed the earlier law, before the enactment of the subsequent law, to be in harmony with the plain meaning of the words employed.

Bechtel v. United States, 101 U. S. 597, 25 L. ed. 1019; May v. Logan County, 30 Fed. 250.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

These are applications for the allowance of an appeal and writ of error, respectively. The cases come before the court under the 56 L. ed.

same circumstances as the application for a writ of error, just decided. American Secur. & T. Co. v. District of Columbia [224 U. S. 491, post, 856, 32 Sup. Ct. Rep. 553.]

The first named is a bill in equity that was pending in the court of appeals on January 1, 1912, and decided on March 4, 1912. The matter in dispute in both, exclusive of costs, exceeds the sum of $5,000. The law before the enactment of the Judicial Code of March 3, 1911, chap. 231, 36 Stat. at L. 1087, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 128, allowed a writ of error or appeal in such cases (act of February 9, 1893, chap. 74, § 8, 27 Stat. at L. 436, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 573), and the applicants contend that the appeal and writ of error are rights saved by § 299 of the Code. That section is as follows: "The repeal of existing laws, or the amendments thereof, embraced in this act, shall not affect any act done, or any right accruing or accrued, or any suit or proceeding, including those pending on writ of error, appeal, certificate, or writ of certiorari, in any appellate court referred to or included within the provisions of this act, pending at the time of the taking effect of this act, but all such suits and proceedings, and suits and proceedings for causes arising or acts done prior to such date, may be commenced and prosecuted within *the same time, [490 and with the same effect, as if said repeal or amendments had not been made." This act took effect when this suit was pending in the court of appeals, on January 1, 1912.

